Currently on display at the Cloud Hall gallery are two different projects arranged there by Smith in cooperation with the college's photography students.

It shows original photographs of early 18th century California as well as originals and reproductions of the first photographic processes invented and used simultaneously in France and England in 1839, and known as the Daguerreotype and Calotype process. It also includes some reproductions of the famous Matthew Brady Civil War photographs.

The other display, entitled City College Professional Photographers, presents the work of students related to the fields of professional advertising. College students-models are used for these "shots" and they consist of record cover albums, fashions and products.

Used Textbooks Bought In June

Students interested in selling their textbooks should do so during the first two weeks of June, Ramporium manager Dick Main announced last week.

Books used during this semester will not be re-purchased by the Ramporium at the beginning of the Fall term because of the inconvenience caused, Main added.

"This," he explained, "is because after re-buying books from students at the end of this semester, orders for new books required during the following semester are submitted.

"Also, some of the books used in courses this semester may possibly not be re-purchased by the Ramporium because of the scheduled re-shuffle in the college's educational program," he added, "but there will be a man from a downtown used book store to buy those books."

Used textbooks, bought either at the Ramporium or the California Book Store, will be redeemed at half their original prices unless they are in exceptionally poor condition, Main said. "Badly defaced books may not be accepted."

The dates for re-purchasing books during the final two weeks of this semester (June 1 to June 13) will not be limited, Main said, because students will probably require them for review for final examinations.

4 Scholarships Awarded At Prep Day Luncheon

Four scholarships were presented at the Prep Day luncheon held last Wednesday, May 7, Mary Golding, dean of women, said yesterday.

Scholarships presented were two Denman Scholarships of $125 each, awarded to June Ulan and Marilyn Jean Kotkas, outstanding women students here; a Real Estate Scholarship of $50 won by Marilyn McKay, woman student from Mission High School, and the $50 Chinese Students' Club Scholarship awarded to Jack Hom from Galileo.

May 28 Set As Date For Council Dinner

The semi-annual Student Council awards dinner will be held in Smith Hall, Wednesday, May 28, at 6:30 p.m., Darlene Enfield, Associated Student vice-president, announced last week.

The dinner is an AS function and all interested students may attend.

The semester's Student Council and Cabinet members will be awarded service keys in appreciation for their work, Miss Enfield declared, and newly elected student officers will be installed during the dinner.

Drama Students Direct Wayward Saint Production

The college's little theater group presented The Wayward Saint last weekend despite the absence of the director, Michael Griffin, who was ill.

The play will be presented again this Friday and Saturday nights, and will close the following weekend, May 23-24. Admission is by Associated Student card to all performances or $1 for general admission. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Griffin was not present for the final week of rehearsal and could not attend the two dress rehearsals or the opening. In his place, John Rose handled the direction and John Combs acted as overall manager.

"Everyone in the cast and crew pitched in and worked hard," Combs said, "and last minute problems were ironed out smoothly and everyone worked together to get the job done. We are especially grateful to the members of the faculty for their splendid cooperation and assistance."

Rose added the comment that though this was his first opportunity to direct a college production, he still felt that the real credit belonged to Griffin. "Mr. Griffin had already laid down the basic staging and answered the many questions and solved the problems. It was only our job to do the work," Rose stated.

Several special effects utilized in the show gave the audience several unusual impressions. One was that the law of gravity could be suspended at will, which occurred when the Baron raised the Canon in his chair to attempt to cast him into hell. Other scenes were bathed in black light.

Among the many sound effects were rolls of thunder, bird choruses, and excerpts from classical music selected by Rose. A talking lion and two daneing nymphs aiso held the stage briefly.

Playing the leading role in Paul Vincent Carroll's satirical comedy are Fred Fisher who appears as the Canon, Virginia Rae in the part of Killikat, an inflexible housekeeper; Dave Tipton as the Baron de Balbus, and Leah Pashoian as Maura Monihan, "a pretty lass fearful of becoming an old maid."

Vet Federation Of California Formed

Seven schools in Northern California recently joined together to form a new state-wide organization, the "Veteran's Federation of California," according to Don French, Veterans Association president here.

This new organization has branches from Santa Clara to Oregon, and its purpose is primarily to share ideas and promote friendly relations with other college veterans groups.

This college's Veterans Club will meet with the other six at Santa Rosa Junior College sometime this May, French said. It was started in the spring of 1957, but ceased activities until it was revived last fall. Since then the club has sponsored two affairs for underprivileged children, the fall toy drive, Operation Toy Lift, and an Easter egg hunt.

The organization was awarded the Blood Drive trophy last March as the Club Activities Board's largest contributor. The club is sponsoring two of its members for entry in the Associated Students elections to be held next week.

Only one out of every six agriculture students goes back to the farm after graduation, according to a survey by the Northwestern Life Insurance Company.

Future Employers Will Interview Business Students

June and February graduates in business education courses will be welcomed tomorrow at the Third Annual Business Graduate Recruitment Day beginning at 9 a.m. in Cloud Hall for personal 20-minute interviews with prospective employers in the Bay Area.

Top needs in "help wanted" for industry, business and government start with accounting, Joseph A. Amori, director of the college's personnel placement service, stated.

Next in line in popular demand is the general business graduate, followed by secretarial, punched card accounting, sales (general and retail merchandising), IBM, business machines, transportation and commercial art trainees.

Other business fields covered are business administration, graphic arts, insurance, liberal arts and photography.

"In spite of the dip in the employment market, the response from employers has been very gratifying, which speaks well for the college," Amori said.

The day's program opens at 8 a.m. in the faculty dining room with breakfast for the visiting dignitaries, faculty and administrators of the college. President Louis G. Conlan will welcome the guests and Amori will preside. Louis Batmale, dean of Semiprofessional Courses, will describe that division. Glenn Mercer, official representative from the college business department, will introduce the instructional staff, who participate in the pre-interviewing repast.

Today Is Final Day To File For Absence Leaves

Today is the last day to file petitions for a leave of absence, according to Howard Schoon, counselor.

He stated that a student who plans to take a leave must first make out a petition with his counselor and then file it in the registrar's office. Students who take a leave and intend to enroll in the fall will be admitted on the basis of their previous grades. He added that petitions may be granted if a student has no excess absences and obtains all necessary signatures to complete the process.

Schoon once again reminded all students who are unable to keep their assigned pre-registration appointments with their counselor either to come in person to S-160 or telephone the college at JU 7-7272, extension 8, prior to their appointment, and arrange counseling for a future date. He urged students to follow these regulations in order to avoid losing their early registration numbers.

"The students have shown fairly good response and to date only 125 have lost their original numbers," he commented.

Schoon also recommended that any student who wishes to attend summer session 1958 to sign up with his counselor now. Pre-registration started last Monday, May 12, and will continue until June 6.

Fitzgerald Holds Lead In Shooting

Competition for top shooter has reached an all time high, and going into the final week of the matches, the individual standings find Fred Fitzgerald in first place with 2,448 aggregate points, only 10 points ahead of second man Charles Terry with 2,438. Marion Timm fired a superb 284 to move within one point of the third place Lou Paglierani, with aggregate scores of 2,428 and 2,429, respectively.

Terry forced Paglierani to relinquish his hold on second place in the individual shooter competition of last week's intramural pistol match.

After nine weekly matches, the Deadeyes are still riding high in the team race, even though they were beaten by the second place Dreamers in last week's match by a score of 1,039 to 1,071. Geraldine Rush's Alibiers are holding down the third slot, followed by the J. C. Six, who are in the cellar position.

As the matches near the finish line, tension is mounting as to who will capture the title of top individual shooter. Strongest contender to knock Fitzgerald off the first place pedestal is Terry, and a good day for the member of the Alibiers team in next week's match could mean the individual competition award for him.

Dad's Night Smoker Set For Men's Gym

The Associated Men Students will present their Dad's Night Smoker next Wednesday night, May 21, in the men's gymnasium. Freddie Hicks, AMS president, announced yesterday.

All men students here have been sent invitations encouraging them to come and bring their fathers. The event, including entertainment, will be from 7:45 to 10 p.m.

Main feature of the smoker will be the boxing matches, which are the finals for the physical education boxing classes. About 10 bouts will be fought, each one scheduled for eight minutes. A novel event for the evening will be a Siamese boxing match.

Another highlight will be the selection of the CCSF Dad of the Year for 1958. Any dad has a chance to win this title because the selection is done by name drawing.

"Remember—every male student is invited," Hicks added, "and it promises to be a great affair."

There are more than one million people with the name of Smith in the United States. Of that number, 39 attend City College of San Francisco.

Absences Under Fire In Council

Absenteeism in the Student Council came under scrutiny last Thursday by gavel wielder Associated Women Student President Linda McArdle, presiding in AS President Jack Patterson's place while he attended the State Conference of two-year colleges in Pasadena.

The question was whether or not expulsion is imminent if valid reasons cannot be given for three unexcused absences.

As discussion got underway, one council member continued to bob his head up to gain recognition to move that the topic be tabled. Miss McArdle called him "out of order" repeatedly but finally acquiesced to his restated desire to call for a three-minute caucus.

This resulted in the arrival of the following alternatives: Council members exhausting their quota of missed meetings without valid excuses may hand in resignations or come before council to explain their absences, and/or the chair may assign a committee to investigate erring legislators and register complaints.

A motion to commit the problem to the Constitutional Revision Committee won with a 7-2 vote.

At Tuesday's meeting Ralph Prior was named to replace Kevin Mullen, who could not attend the Pasadena conference as the State Information Service chairman.

Campus Activities Board President Adolph Hersvick gained approval in appointing Roxanne Chervin as corresponding secretary for that organization to replace Jackie Ruggeri, who has left the college.

AS General Elections Start Tomorrow

Griffin Praises Wayward Saint Handling By Rose; Student Will Direct Play's Last Performance

With Student Director John Rose still in charge, The Wayward Saint will be presented by the Little Theater group for the last two performances this Friday and Saturday night.

Rose took over the direction of the production when Michael Griffin, drama instructor, became ill a week before the show. Although Griffin has returned, he feels that "since it was started by Rose, it should remain in his hands.

"Rose has done an excellent job and the audience response to the show has been terrific. John Combs has also worked hard as general manager, and the entire cast has pitched in to make the show jell." Griffin further stated. "The troupe has met the difficulty of losing its director and learned how to handle the problems of producing a show in his absence."

This is the first show that Griffin has missed in his eight years as drama director here. That includes a total of more than 40 shows.

With a variation of the Faust theme, the play concerns the trials of an Irish cleric with an emissary of the devil who wishes to obtain his soul. The Canon, played by Fred Fisher, is already being called a saint due to some strange occurrences in his former parish, chief of which was the raising of a dead child.

His bishop, played by David Terry, is alarmed at the possibilities of having a saint in his diocese and transfers the Canon to a distant parish and places him under the care of a formidable housekeeper named Killikat, played by Virginia Rae. Seemingly doomed to a life of knitting socks, the Canon is aided by Maura Monigan, played by Leah Pashoian, who helps him fool Killikat.

Then the Baron de Balbus, played by Dave Tipton, enters the scene and strange things begin to happen. Using flattery and magic, he transforms Killikat to a beautiful woman, returns a dead lover to Maura, and tries to persuade the Canon that he really is a saint since vanity is a sin.

Admission to the last two performances is by Associated Student card while general admission is $1. The curtain rises at 8 p.m.

Sixth Army Band Highlights Concert At College Hour

Combining the efforts of the Sixth Army Band with those of the A Cappella Choir and Men's Glee Club, the music department here will present a mixed concert during a double college hour Friday, Robert Morton, choir director, announced recently.

The double college hour cancels 10 o'clock classes, administration officials said.

The band will be under the direction of Chief Warrant Officer Louis Farraro, Morton stated, except for the final number. "This will be a rendition of the Festival Finale with full band and choir. The theme is that of God Of Our Fathers, but the band interjects parts of the Marine's Hymn, the Battle Cry Of Freedom, and several other pieces in the accompaniment," Morton added, "and I have the honor of conducting the number."

Also a highlight of the program will be the second performance of the Second Symphony for Band, which Morton composed but which Farraro will conduct.

The Men's Glee Club will sing the First and Fourth movements of Randall Thompson's Testament Of Freedom, which will be a preview for the college of the complete work due to be sung in the Presidio Club on the first of June.

"With words taken from the writings of Thomas Jefferson," Morton remarked, "the work is a stirring affirmation of faith in our nation and our way of life."

Starlight Fantasia Theme Of Ball

Soph King, Queen To Be Announced Saturday Night

Starlight Fantasia will be the theme of the semi-annual Sophomore Ball to be held this Saturday night, May 24, at The Village, Jerry Redford, Soph Class president, announced last week.

Daneing will be from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. to the musie of Steven Paul and his orchestra. Paul's band has been featured at many of the college's dances and has been a big hit, Redford added. Dress for the ball will be formal, with dark suits acceptable for the men.

Couples with an Associated Student card will be admitted free, while non-AS card holders will pay $2.50. Bob Howard, a professional photographer, will be on hand to take pictures, which will cost $3 per couple. The pictures will come in folders and it will not take long for them to be delivered, Howard promised.

Highlight of the evening will be the crowning of the Sophomore King and Queen, Redford said. Voting for the couple began last Monday and will continue until Friday. The contestants were submitted by the clubs around campus and any AS card holder may vote in the cafeteria this week. Individual trophies will be awarded to the winners and Theta Tau Sorority will donate a perpetual trophy.

In addition to the crowning, Redford will introduce the new Associated Student President, for whom students are voting this week.

The Village, located at 901 Lombard Street, has recently been remodeled, and will hold more than 1,000 people. "It is a beautiful spot for the dance," Redford said, "and there is a large balcony and cake bar."

Candidates To Make Bids For 20 Available Public Offices As Hicks, Smith Vie For Top Spot; Two Tickets Form Body Of Contenders

Freddie Hicks

A CANDIDATE for the highest office of the Associated Students must stop for a moment and meditate on the importance of this position. To serve best in this capacity a candidate must have experience and definite aims for his term of office.

I could offer as one of my aims more parking, but a solution for this problem is coming in the near future.

I can, however, promise that if I am elected a detailed study of the possibilities of a Student Union Building will be made. A building of this type is a necessity for any campus our size. A Student Union Building would provide a central meeting place for our students, a place to lounge, and study and to hold dances.

I would also attempt to obtain more useful discounts and benefits for the Associated Student card. If I am elected I will serve 100 per cent of the students to the best of my ability. FREDDIE HICKS

Low Turnout For Positions Leaves Many Unopposed

With campaigning going into its last hours the fewest number of candidates since 1952 will make bids for the 20 available public offices at the Associated Student elections tomorrow and Friday.

As the running now stands, many candidates will be unopposed, and the council offices will be automatically filled. Election Commissioner Steve Seitz said that the main reason for this is the lack of petitions filled and the dropping out of the third running group, the Inter-Fraternity - Inter-Sorority party.

The removal of the third party leaves two tickets formed by individuals in the running, the Independent Party ticket and the Individual ticket. Competing for office of AS President are Freddie Hicks from the Independents, and Don Smith for the Individuals.

Voting by AS card will commence at 8 a.m. tomorrow and end at 2 p.m. Friday afternoon. Ballots will be filled out by the individual at the silver pole in the Science Building, the fountain in Smith Hall and at the library entrance to Cloud Hall, Seitz added.

A total vote of about 20 to 25 per cent of the 1,940 AS members is expected. Last semester's vote turnout was only 23 per cent of the AS students. Seitz said that he hopes for a better turnout this time. He emphasized, "It only takes a few minutes for students to stop and mark the ballot, and if they vote they'll be sure to help get their favorite candidate in office."

Don Smith

AS A PRESIDENTIAL candidate for Associated Student office, I will not go out on the limb with any definite promises. Instead, I will do my best to see that you, the student, get aid in acquiring the things you want and need.

At the present, student government is working for better parking facilities and reduced student car tickets for the Muni bus. Most important of all, officers are working for a student lounge, which the students greatly need because of the congestion in the cafeteria.

If you bestow upon me the honor of the AS Presidency, I shall work sincerely and relentlessly to obtain these things for you, the student.

I feel that my past record vouches for my ability to maintain the office of President in a manner which will be a credit to the college and mostly to the Associated Students.

These things I pledge to do to the best of my ability.

DON SMITH

Summer Signup Deadline June 5

Any student who wishes to attend summer session of 1958 (June 23 to August ... at the college a... who has planned his program with his counselor must pre-register sometime before June 5 and later confirm his registration on June 19, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

Since the registrar's office in the Science Building has finally been remodeled as of yesterday, all further pre-registration will be done there.

During pre-registration, students will make out registration booklets and receive confirmation cards, she stated. On Thursday, June 19, the student must then bring his card to Room 117 in order to receive a certificate of registration.

Pre-Graduation Meeting Tuesday In Cloud Library

A pre-commencement assembly will be held in the library in Cloud Hall next Tuesday, May 27, at 10 a.m., for all graduating students here, Mary Golding, dean of women, said yesterday.

Scholarships to be presented, Miss Golding said, are the Cloud Scholarship, presented by Thomas Gabbert, Spanish instructor; the Graduating Class of 1957 Scholarship, by Ralph Hillon, ... Student Activities; the Margaret Dougherty and a Square and Circle Scholarship, by Dean Golding.

Two Chinese Student Club Scholarships will be presented by Dean Hillsman; the Alice Eastwood Floriculture Scholarship, by Dr. Louis Batmale, dean of Semiprofessional Courses; two University of California scholarships, by Dr. Lloyd Luckmann, coordinator of Instruction; the Paul Mohr Scholarship, by Dr. Oscar Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management, and the Alph Phi Omega Scholarship, by Jack Patterson, Associated Student president.

SINCE tomorrow is the first day of the Associated Student elections, it seems advisable to dedicate this editorial to arousing student interest and to the support of our "rights" as individuals. On the other hand, if students of college level don't realize why they should vote, and if by this time they haven't discovered that they have rights, then it seems like a lost cause to blow the "get out and vote" horn. Here then, instead of telling students why he should vote it is our plan to review some of the ingenious techniques that not only make a sham of the "right to vote" but also offer a challenge to those who are sincere in the exercising of that right.

First, there seems to be the age old contributor to confusion—two candidates! This makes for further confusion when both of them are equally cute, or equally ugly, and when both are good Joes. Qualifications have nothing to do with it, and no one ever pays attention to campaign promises anyhow. Solution . . . vote twice, once for each candidate.

Second on the list of problems encountered is the fact that more than one member of the student's organization may be running for the same office. One really seems like a good head, but her brother dated somebody or other's cousin who was going with Mary's roommate so that lets her out. Other problems of the same kind can be as easily reasoned out.

Another problem faced by the voter is that of "red hots." Most students can't stand red hots. The answer is easy here, for a student must be sure to vote for someone who will be absent from at least every other meeting and who knows the meaning of the word abstention and knows how to use it frequently. By doing this and getting this person into office, student government will accomplish nothing and then all the students will be confused at the same time.

Fourth on our problem list is getting around to voting at all. After all there are only two days to vote and most students are busy studying. The solution to this problem is drastic for the voter has a choice of two solutions. He can vote in the cafeteria or he can take the easy way out and stay home in bed for a couple of days.

There is really no end to the ingenious techniques employed by the student who makes a sham of the right to vote. His only cure is to realize that if citizens of San Francisco use his techniques in the June 3 election and ignore Proposition A, he will not continue to have the advantages he now enjoys at this college to the degree that they exist today.

Police Lab Gets Top Rating Among Two-Year Colleges

By Kathie Burns

Pounding a beat, giving tickets and directing traffic are all small parts of police work, but another aspect, seldom given a second thought by most people, is the training laboratory of the criminologists.

Here, located in Cloud Hall, is what experts describe as one of the finest crimtnology labs in any two-year college. Science, including chemistry, physics and biology, is applied to most of the work and studying done in the lab.

Physics is applied in glass fractures and identification, dynamics, soil comparisons and ballistics, while blood types and hair and fiber comparison are parts of biology.

According to Morris Godsky, in charge of the college lab, nature never repeats itself twice and every piece of hair or drop of blood must be checked and rechecked to catch the guilty as well as clear the innocent. A scientific approach enables the criminologist to know what results mean when he gets them.

Television has done a little toward bringing out the importance of the laboratory in police work. The word ballistics is not such a strange word to most people since Sgt. Friday came on the scene.

Ballistics, reconstructing the flight of a bullet, is done in the lab located in C-121. Instruction in use of pistols and revolvers is also taught. The Deadeyes, pistol team champs, are a good example of performance in this department.

Awards for first place team and top individual shooter of the intramural matches will be presented at the annual Campus Police dinner, which is to be held Thursday, May 29, at Pucini's Restaurant.

People are beginning to realize that through this specialized work hit and run drivers can be apprehended just by a small piece of glass from their windshield or headlight. The smallest piece of hair, a fiber or a button can convict a criminal.

High powered microscopes, fingerprint files and special instruments, including a vacuum cleaner, used to pick up fibers and hair from people and furniture, are all used in the criminology lab.

The law enforcement students have 16 units available to them in laboratory work. Nine units of this work are required for a law enforcement major, because basic lab work is considered essential for any student going into the field.

Sports Sharks Put Boxing On Oblivion Road

By Don Seratti

MOST sports enthusiasts in the country will readily admit that while such sports as basketball and football are constantly on the upswing in popularity and prosperity, the sport of boxing is heading downward.

There is plenty wrong with boxing, and it is both fighters and managers who earn their livings from the sport, who are contributing to its decline.

First of all, fighters simply aren't "hungry" enough, as they were only two decades ago. At one time one could attend a boxing show and almost be assured of seeing two fighters in a toe-to-toe slugfest for ten rounds. Today's fighters seem to lack the desire the old timers possessed, resulting in an increasing number of dull bouts that don't enhance the boxers' standings and certainly don't please the crowds.

A recent example of this was the highly publicized heavyweight scrap between Zora Folley and San Francisco's Eddie Machen. With a possible heavyweight title bout in store for the victor, fans turned out by the thousands—this is one city where boxing apparently isn't on the decline—expecting to see a heated slugfest, only to watch two inept gladiators merely go through the motions for 12 rounds, drawing catcalls from the paying customers. With a high-ranking position at stake, both fighters were content to cover their precious chins and throw a few jabs to protect themselves, while both possessed enough punching power to have made the fight a thriller. They appeared to be afraid of hurting each other.

Unfair decisions rank alongside dull bouts in dragging the boxing game downward. All boxing fans know about "hometown decisions" where a home town fighter almost invariably gets the benefit of the doubt on the officials' scorecards.

Even many decisions that are not of the "hometown" variety irk fans and dim their enthusiasm for boxing. Many times a fighter will appear to win convincingly, but the decision will be awarded to his opponent, in contrast to the cards of most expert observers in attendance. Often a fighter will be awarded an 8-2 decision by one judge only to find that another official has scored it 8-2 in favor of his foe.

Managers certainly aren't doing much to keep the sport from dying out. Many of them have outwardly honest motives, but when a fighter wins a title his manager becomes a veritable dictator and regulates his man's title defenses. Take Cus D'Amato, manager of heavyweight titleholder Floyd Patterson. D'Amato, simply because he owns Patterson's contract, is able to dictate his terms to all boxing commissions before Patterson will agree to defend his title. Ring ratings mean absolutely nothing to this unscrupulous man, who completely ignores the deserving fighters and lets Patterson defend his crown against the likes of unproven amateur Pete Rademacher.

Imagine the New York Yankees refusing to meet the National League pennant winner in the World Series and choosing to play a second division team instead!

These evils clearly show the need for a powerful—and equitable—boxing commission to create and enforce regulations to correct these ills, lest they drive all boxing fans into their living rooms for good.

Under such a central organization, the following changes from the present system could be made:

Decisions that are obviously unfair would be disallowed and the officials questioned.

Admittedly, as long as the possibility exists of watching two men punching one another into submission, a few people will turn out to watch them.

It will, however, require nothing less than a strong central commission to obliterate the boxing game's many blemishes and help the sport regain some of the popularity it enjoyed in the past.

Foresight

By Ray Hackett

LAST WEEK Phil Silvers did live television a la Victor Borge. It was a nice show, very funny, but also very warmed over. It's not that Silvers isn't funny, but he could use some new material.

First, that camp skit; if memory serves this writer correctly, it was done on the Bilko show. Seems on Bilko, everyone except Ernie and the gang was going to be on bivouac for a few weeks, so Bilko decided to turn Fort Baxter into a boys' camp.

Number 2, that skit about the fellow with sticky hands, was ancient. One of the stage hands had a hand that, when touched, acted like gum on the shoes; and this, of course, resulted in all sorts of acrobatics by Silvers to free himself. Phil did this before in a movie with Doris Day and Bob Cummings titled Call Me Lucky. It wasn't funny then either.

But enough of this brick-throwing. Let's look at the comedy in the show. The opening about Potnac was terrific, and the routine about Showboat had this party on the floor with laughter. When Bilko and the boys got together, it was refreshing. But again, it wasn't new.

Phil will probably do live TV again soon, but let's hope with new, or at least newer, material.

Cleverest anecdote of the week: An announcing instructor told his students to keep marbles in their mouths when they spoke. As they improved, they were allowed to remove a marble. Sorta of Demosthenes fashion, the moral being that when they lost all their marbles they would be good announcers.

Worthy Accomplishments

Talented Drama Majors Assigned Lead Roles In City-Wide Production

The Little Theater group of the college lays no claim to star-making. However, students who are looking for praise-worthy accomplishments to raise college spirit might point to the many examples of success and near-success demonstrated by the talent in the basement of the Science Building.

It is a proven fact that drama students from the college are consistently found in almost every production in the city.

Examples are far too numerous to be listed here except for a few of the highlights. The former Lee Meriwether, now Mrs. Frank Aletter, of the 1955 group is perhaps the brightest of these luminaries. Not only winning the Miss America title, but going on to become a highly capable and successful radio and television actress, Mrs. Aletter has pointed the way for many others in the department.

Mike Stefani, who starred in Dean Goodman's production of Bus Stop at the Alameda Playhouse, is well-remembered for his work in the Little Theater. Also in the same production were Bill Henderson and Stan Weston, both of whom appeared in several of the college plays.

Stan Church, seen as the fiery Danforth in the college production of The Crucible, has appeared recently in the lead of All My Songs at Alameda, while Dawn Roberts of Death Takes A Holiday fame was in the Interplayers' production of Major Barbara.

Stephanie Koppe, who was last seen here in The Taming Of The Shrew, recently played the lead in the University of California production of Detective Story and then won the lead in Cyrano de Bergerac at the same institution.

Joanne Jaklovich, a graduate of the college who was last seen in Death Takes A Holiday, has the feminine lead in the annual Mountain Play while William Forshay has the principal male lead in the same production.

Night clubs and television are also recipients of City College talent. Jules Farmer of The Wayward Saint cast recently appeared on the Don Sherwood show and has auditioned for Fack's Downtown.

The May production of The Wayward Saint opened May 9. The new show, which is making its West Coast premiere at the college, will be shown again this weekend. Curtain time is at 8 p.m., and admission is by Associated Student card or $1.

Galloping Gallopers Gallivant To Cellar

By Tom Tatera

TAKE five Guardsman writers with athletic aspirations, mold them as one into a basketball team known as the Galloping Greeks, and bet on the other side whenever they have a game. This is a winning combination. Anyone who doubts it can check the past records of the dribbling "G.G.'s" They haven't won all semester!

Of course, the other teams had an advantage. They knew how to play!

THERE are two ways of operating a 35 mm camera, with its abundance of mystifying knobs and readings. Either take a post graduate course in photography and learn what it is all about, or follow the example of the amateur flicker-fiend. Twirl the shutter speed and lens opening dials a few times for good measure, focus in, and snap away!

In the case of the latter procedure, there is no guarantee of any pictures coming out. But usually, by sheer luck and aforehand prayer, at least three slides are developed that bear some resemblance to the original subject.

ONE OF THE ELITE downtown bookstores boasts of convenience plus. They have erected a small apple stand in the middle of their store, to be used by the man who likes to munch as he browses.

MARILYN JEAN KOTKAS, winner of a Denman scholarship here, had an unfortunate experience last week. While riding the K car through the Twin Peaks Tunnel, some sneaky culprit stole her wallet and ran out the back door.

Marilyn pointed, and yelled, "Stop that man. He's got my wallet." But the gentlemen present were of the strong, silent type. They just looked at her—and smiled!

Second Annual Hall Of Fame Voting Session Slated Soon; 5 New Athletes To Be Selected

By Nick Peters

Voting for the college's second annual athletic Hall of Fame selections will be conducted during the latter part of this month with the names of five new members to be disclosed in the las spring issue of The Guardsman on June 4.

In last year's inaugural session, 13 members were chosen to the athletic honor society, an idea created by former Guardsman sports editor Lou Lucia in 1957.

The 13 who were selected last June were Dean of Student Activities Ralph Hillsman, ex-cage great and coach at the college; grid standouts Ollie Matson, Burl Toler, Willie Hudson, Stan Keith, Jim Cromm, Al Wycoff and Don Stillwell; cage ace Art Psaltis; tracksters Van Parish, Clint Redus and Jack Egan; and the lone woman in the society, Helen Crienkovich, who was a top flight aquatic star in 1939 and 1940.

This year's voting committee consists of the physical education department's Jack Gaddy, Grover Klemmer, Alex Schwarz, Roy Diederichsen, Lou Vasquez, Sid Phalen and Lee Elsan; college President Louis Conlan, Dean Hillsman and former Coaches Bill Fischer, Roy Burkhead and Tom Wilson.

In the initial voting anyone who received a majority of the committee's votes was allowed a berth in the Hall of Fame; therefore, as many as 13 athletes were allotted a place in the coveted organization. This year and in every successive year, however, a maximum of five athletes will be selected per annum.

To be eligible for the society as a coach one must have been retired from the ranks at least five years, while an athlete is considered eligible if he has been out of the college for one year.

A permanent site for the housing of the elected candidates' names on a plaque and a register where brief biographical sketches of the members will be kept has not yet been decided, but there's a good possibility that the plaque and register will find a home in the new Arts Building being constructed on the old Hurley Village site.

OLLIE MATSON, former Ram grid great, who was unanimously elected to college's athletic Hall of Fame last year.

Ram Tennis Squad Grabs Sectional Tourney Title

Led by Jim Watson and Nick Scharf the college netmen completely overwhelmed all opposition in the Northern California sectional tennis tournament held May 10 at Modesto.

Watson defeated Scharf in the finals of the singles matches, 2-6, 6-1, 6-3; and then teamed with Scharf to win the doubles by defeating the college's Fred Watters and Vic Saschin, 6-1, 6-1.

Grid Confab Monday

A brief football meeting will be conducted next Monday, May 26, at 12 noon for students who are interested in managing or playing football for the Rams next fall.

Coaches Grover Klemmer and Alex Schwarz will provide some important information for the grid aspirants and a signup sheet will be made available. Those who cannot attend should see the coaches at the men's gymnasium.

Annual Athletic Awards Banquet Slated June 2

John Henry, Block SF president, announced last week that the organization will hold the annual Athletic Awards Banquet at Smith Hall Monday, June 2. Awards will be given to the baseball, basketball, track, tennis and golf teams. These awards winners will be announced at the banquet.

Ramblings

Are Present Baseball Box Scores Adequate?

By Nick Peters

REALLY big rhubarb in existence today questioning the merit of the new box scores being used in newspapers this baseball season.

Included in the new system are columns for At Bats (AB), Runs (R), Hits (H), and Runs Batted In (RBI) in that same order, whereas the old rule employed running AB, H, Putouts (PO), and Assists (A), in the main content of the box. The original system gave the defensive players some recognition by inserting the fielding statistics, PO and A. The new style was designed for the offense filbert, who considers a player's bat prowess more signifieant than his play afield.

The main controversy stemming from this new change is that the so-called baseball experts are raising a stink that the fielders mustn't be overlooked and are practically all en masse climbing on the bandwagon to bring back the old type box score.

It surprises us to see such veteran diamond scribes express alarm over something new. Baseball has been the same for years and by merely revising the box score no one would be harmed. As a matter of fact, there is a trend indicating that baseball is becoming more of an offensive game; so why not emphasize batting feats in the tabulations?

We feel that the new system is great in that it informs the fan at a glance just what he wants to know about the player. How many runs did he score? How many men did he drive in? Actually, it takes very little skill, in most cases, to make a putout; but look how hard it is to score and drive in runs.

The Army - Air Force Recruitment Service out on Mission Street is graciously supplying the public address system for Friday's Soph-Prof tilt during college hour. This kind gesture is really appreciated by all, and the best way to show one's gratitude is to drop in at the office and talk things over with the brass. Who knows what it could lead to? . . . Heh, heh.

Recent college grads Diek Erier and Carl Mitchell, first-string guards on the '57 Ram grid squad, both fared well in San Jose State's spring cleat drills and should see lots of action come fall varsity competition. Another '57 grad, baseballer Bob Bandettini, is making his mark on the 1958 University of California hill staff. Bandettini was a very effective hurler for the Rams in 1956 and '57 and apparently has lost none of his stuff in some impressive appearances for the Bears this year.

Sigmas Finish Season With 6-0 Won-Lost Record

By Dave Smith

Sigma Tau Sigma finished its league play in the Club Activities Board by stopping the Filipino Club 39-30, May 7 in the men's gymnasium.

The Sigmas ended up with a 6-0 record to sweep the CAB league. This gives them the chance to play Gamma Phi Ypsilon of the fraternity circuit. The winner of this game will be crowned the champion of the college intramurals.

The International Relations Club downed The Guardsman 62-36. This win upped the IRC record to 3-3. The Recreation Association beat Alpha Phi Omega 21-13 for its third win of the season.

The Hotel & Restaurant department ended up in second place with a 4-2 record. Third place was shared by three teams all with a 3-3 record. The teams were the Filipino Club, the IRC, and the RA. In sixth came Alpha Phi Omega with a 2-4 record. The Guardsman stayed in the cellar the entire season and finished with an 0-6 record.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon won the fraternity league with a 8-0 record. Alpha Phi Epsilon, who led the league until meeting the Gammas, took second, winding up with 7-1. The Phi Beta Deltas' 5-2 record placed a close third. Zeta Phi Sigma rounded out the first division in fourth place with a 5-3 record, losing to the Phi Delts.

In the second division Alpha Kappa Rho finished fifth with a 4-4. Beta Tau took sixth with a 2-5. In the cellar was Alpha Sigma Delta with no wins to seven defeats.

Two fraternities in the league were "kicked off" campus, which explains why some teams played more games than others.

Profs Beat LOL's, Sophs Defeat Cubs As Prelude To Big Game This Friday

By John Henry

Now that the S. F. Giants are away from home and on the road, the big attraction for ball fans will be the annual Soph - Prof softball tilt which will get underway this Friday morning at 10 o'clock on the football field below the parking lots.

The Profs are again tabbed as the team to beat, but this year's student contingency feels it might have a few surprises in store for the hard-hitting faculty athletes who rang up a 16 to 1 score last year.

The Profs showed their power and rough and tough type of play when they easily downed a team from the San Bruno Old Ladies Home, 12 to 1, last Saturday on the Old Ladies home field. "Ma" Perkins, the L.O.L.'s 84-year-old pitcher, held the Profs hitless until the second inning, when "Jumbo" John Brady's hard grounder hit her in the shins and as she doubled over in pain, "Muscles" Mead and "Mauser" Maury Power, who both had walked, came across the plate with the first two runs of the day.

Another example of the rough brand of ball displayed by the profs was when "Terrible" Tom Nesbitt slid into second base trying to break up a double play. Nesbitt upended the Old Ladies' second sacker and she went flying about 10 feet in the air; instead of helping his foe up, "Terrible Tom" stepped on her glasses, crushing them.

On Sunday the Sophs got in a little practice by competing in the Cub Scout league. Age and experience were in the favor of the Sophs as they romped over an undermanned Cub Pack 731 team by a 14 to 6 score.

Pacing the students at the plate were Jerry "Redface" Redford, who collected one measly infield hit and a walk his two times at bat. Bud "Leatherneck" Foley got on base by running into the Cub first baseman with such force that the 4-11, 87-pounder dropped the ball.

Will Gasper's 24 Points Lead Track Team To Overwhelming Win In All Conference Meet

By George Grasso

Will Gasper won the high point trophy and led the college's tracksters to an overwhelming victory in the Big Eight Conference track and field meet as they rolled up 139⅔ points at Modesto last Saturday.

Gasper set a new college record and a new conference meet record as he tied Tim Helm of Sacramento for first place at 13-8½.

He then moved over to the broad-jump pit where he took third with a leap of 22-11. With that event over, he hurried to the high jump pit and cleared 6-4 to tie his teammate Ed Costa for first place. He won the high point trophy with a total of 24.

The order of finishing for the colleges was San Francisco 139⅔, Sacramento 81½, Modesto 59½, West Contra Costa 56, Oakland 44, Santa Rosa 26, San Mateo 19½, and Stockton 5.

New conference records were set by Rene Rodgers of Oakland in the mile with a 4:22.9; Rudy Jackson of WCC in the hundred at 9.7; Jackson in the 220 at 20.8; Tom Brown of Modesto in the 880 at 1:55.2; Mike Matravers of Modesto in the two-mile at 9:34.5; Dave Maggard of Modesto in the vault at 13-8½, and Gasper and Helm in the pole vault at 13-8½.

One of the high spots of the day was the mile relay. James Austin started it off with a blistering 49.8. Myron Zimmerman and James Thomas maintained Austin's lead, and an inspired anchor man, Don Nasser, fought off Sacramento's great Don Ramos to win in 3:22.5.

Points came by way of the mile run as Paul Patton took second place, and Rich Blaetler and Bill Thomas grabbed fifth and sixth. Patton also took a second in the two mile, as Blake Westman came in fifth.

Bouncing Ed Costa tied Gasper for first place in the high jump, while Marion Page and Ed Bridges tied for fourth. In the broad jump, Mack Burtoon won with a weak hop of 23 feet. Gasper and Claude McWilliams took third and fifth, respectively.

James Thomas placed second in the high hurdles, while Jerry Bell and Russ Nichols took fourth and fifth. Thomas also took second in the 220 low hurdles.

Ken Dawdy took a third in the 880 and Tom Skinner got a fifth in the 220. Lionel Sims beat out Don Nasser in the 440 for a fifth and sixth in that event.

The first four men in all events will travel to Santa Rosa this Saturday for the Northern California meet.

Varsity Golfers Wind Up Season In Fourth Place

Winding up a season of tough competition, the college's varsity golfers concluded their last play at the Big Eight Conference Top Medalist meet in Santa Rosa. The matches' sole purpose was to determine who the season's top medalists were in the league.

The college, however, did not do so well as was expected and did not place among the top six. Gordon Gruber, in the turning point of the match, lost out to West Contra Costa's Gary Olsen who shot 75-66 in the two rounds. Gruber was shooting 81-82 and was edged out by Roy Lortz, who shot 80-79. Tony Agriolo made a good showing; he shot 82-79.

"The team took off to a good start and continued as well as could be expected for a team of this sort," Coach Grover Klemmer said; "the boys on this squad had all been shooting the same and were still inexperienced in and fairly strong conference.

Placing fourth in the Big Eight Conference, the college can give credit to Elden Davis, Tony Agriolo, Gordon Gruber, Charles Pierce and Gene Krome, San Mateo took first in the league standings, followed by Oakland and Stockton.

10 Bouts On Tap For AMS Tonight

Tonight's Associated Men Students' semi-annual smoker will feature the finals of the college's extensive intramural boxing program. There will be approximately 10 championship bouts of eight minutes each, plus an added attraction Siamese boxing match. The activities will begin at 7:45 p.m. and all men students and their dads are invited to attend.

Students who will be participating in the bouts and their weight division are as follows: Frank Matlin vs. David Ceballos (hvywt.), Ed Saffdie or Mike Buteher vs. Larry Murphy (175), George Petty vs. Dennis Mosgofian (167), Alex Schumacher vs. Larry Piott (160), Richard Tenaza vs. Charles Fox (153), Eddie Chavez vs. Pedro Chang (146), Art McGlothin vs. Manuel Chang (139), Oscar Gutierrez vs. Orlando Reginos (132), Frank Mondero vs. Chaiphorn Kamolnetr (125), and Epifanio Coloma vs. Leon Pagealinagan (119).

RA Will Elect New Officers This Week

All Recreation Association members are expected to take part in the election of RA officers this week in the women's gymnasium.

The candidates running for the five offices are President, Sandy Simonian; Vice-President, Linda Ryan and Florence Lynch; Treasurer, Faye Fountain; Secretary, Carol Greenblat; Historian, Joe Saporita.

On May 17, a sports day was held with San Jose Junior College at San Jose, and on May 8 the college's RA fencing team was knocked off course by San Mateo at Stanford, 5-4.

AWS To Present Feminine Fling

Through The Looking Glass Named Theme; Outstanding Sorority To Receive Award

Closing this semester's activities, the Associated Women Students will present their traditional Feminine Fling next Wednesday, May 28, at 6:30 p.m. in the cafeteria at Smith Hall, Linda McArdle, AWS president, announced today.

Through The Looking Glass was the theme chosen for the affair The stage will be decorated with old-fashioned mirrors, and tags and table decorations will follow the theme.

The purpose of the affair is to install the new President of the Recreation Association, Inter-Sorority Council and AWS. Highlight of the program will be the presentation of the Margaret Dougherty trophy to the sorority with the highest grade point average by Audrey Fones, ISC president.

Entertainment will be presented by Helen Kvarme, leading stylist of the Patricia Stevens House of Charm School. Miss Kvarme will demonstrate what makes a woman glamorous by styling hair and doing make-up on women chosen from the audience. A door prize consisting of a short modeling course in the summer will be offered by the Patricia Stevens House of Charm. Also scheduled in the program is a surprise entertainment by Gigi Galon.

LINDA McARDLE, AWS president.

AUDREY FONES, ISC president.

Refreshments will consist of a fruit bar from which the assistants will be able to make their own tropical salad. This will be followed by rolls, dessert and coffee.

Chairmen for the event include Sandy Simonian, clean-up; Diane Christofferson, entertainment; Bev Jones, decorations; Natalie Hoogasian, food; Margie Erhart, hospitality; Gloria Cloke, invitations; Mary Gilmartin, posters; Esmeralda Aguilar, publicity; Eunice Hall, registration; Kitty Stein, serving, and Miss Fones, in charge of set-up.

This activity, Miss McArdle said, is open to all women students here, and 25 cents will be charged to cover food expenses.

The occasion will be informal, and pedal pushers will be the appropriate attire, Miss McArdle added.

SANDY SIMONIAN, RA president.

Smoker Tonight In Men's Gym

The Dad's Night Smoker, presented by the Associated Men Students, will be held tonight from 7:45 to 10 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, Freddie Hicks, AMS president, announced last week.

All men students and their fathers are invited to the event, which will cost 50 cents for non-AS card holders and free admission for those with AS cards. "No women will be allowed," Hicks definitely stated, "but we want a lot of fathers to come."

Entertainment for the smoker will feature the physical education department's boxing class finals, about 10 bouts, each about eight minutes long. Another boxing event will be Siamese boxing, where the boxers use their feet as well as their gloves.

Highlighting the evening for the fathers will be the pair "sought-for" CCSF Dad of the Year for '58. This part of the program is being initiated this semester and is Hicks' idea. Names will be drawn out of a hat to select the dad, so each father stands an equal chance of winning.

"It is a good excuse for both father and son to have a fun-filled evening out," Hicks said, "and the AMS officers and committees have been working hard to make it a success."

Al Browning is in charge of entertainment and Alpha Phi Omega fraternity will provide the refreshments.

Council Engages In Buck Passing Of CAB Attendance

By Lois Cosden

Ceremonial passing of responsibilities went around the Student Council table last week, when Club Activities Board President Adolph Hersvick asked for a definition of action to be taken against organizations violating CAB attendance regulations as stated in their charter.

Reaching an impasse, Hersvick pulled out of the dilemma by suggesting that a new charter be drawn up to free members from their obligation to appear at meetings.

A case cited was that of the Drama Club. Its officers change each time a new production goes into rehearsal, confusing the naming of representation.

The Inter-Fraternity and Inter-Sorority Councils broke away last year over the issue.

Another bone of contention was the matter of renewing individual charters every semester. Some members desired that a longer term of good standing exist between renewals.

Six campus groups have offended the master charter to date by not appearing at meetings.

Chairman Jaek Patterson called a halt to further discussion by commissioning Hersvick to draw up a resolution to clarify the situation.

The other main business of the week was the passage, 12-4, of Audrey Bell's resolution revising Blood Drive rules.

The major change proposed concerns withdrawals. A donor may make one withdrawal from the blood bank during the year of donation and has a choice of an unlimited amount for himself or his immediate family—

The alternative is a maximum of eight pints for any person the donor chooses.

Columbia Sociologist Will Speak On Friday

Dr. Charles Glock, sociology professor at Columbia University now on leave, will address students and faculty here this Friday, Irving M. Witt, sociology instructor at the college, announced this week.

Dr. Glock is director of the Bureau of Applied Social Research and a member of the Committee for Advanced Studies in Behavioral Sciences at Stanford University.

The lecture will be held in S-100 during college hour and completes the current student-faculty lecture series, student lecture committee chairman Billie Needham said.

Fraternities, Sororities Busy With Pledge Dinners, Elections To End Semester's Activities

By Jerry Redford

FRATERNITIES and sororities of the college are busy in the initiation of new members into their organizations presently, along with their semi-annual dinners and banquets. Also taking place are elections of new officers for next semester.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity pinned nine pledges at their pledge dinner held last Saturday at Fior d'Italia Restaurant. New brothers are Kennie Cooke, Jr., Lenny Slater, Hasko Hofmeister, Roger Moreno, David Ervin, Jerrie Wilson, Bob Klutz, Dick Allen and Fred Marwedel. At the dinner, Marwedel was presented the Outstanding Pledge trophy, while the pledges presented the Outstanding Brother trophy to Dick Berger, Ass-of-Hell-Week trophy to Dennis Kalos, and the I Tried trophy to Khrosrow Khan Sarrafzadeh. Elections will be held next week at the home of Jerry Redford.

New officers of Gamma Kappa Beta sorority are Marge Erhert, president; Marilyn Assmussen, vice-president; Sandy Courtemanche, pledge mistress; Carol Soffer, treasurer; Mary Brady, recording secretay; Eve Weiss, corresponding secretary; Mary Kelly, historian, and Rita Ramos, sergeant-at-arms. The installation of new officers will be held along with the pinning ceremony on Thursday, May 29, with a dinner to follow.

Delta Psi sorority held elections May 13 at the home of Gloria Cloke, but results haven't been released as yet. Fourteen pledges received pins at the home of President Audrey Fones on Friday evening. Sisters are planning for their Mother-Daugher installation luncheon Sunday, May 25.

Gamma Sigma Sigma held elections May 16, but results were not available at press time. Actives are planning for their initiation ceremony Sunday, May 25, at Betty Cook's home.

Members of Alpha Phi Omega fraternity conducted their formal pledge initiation and retreat at Camp Lilienthal. They spent the weekend relaxing and taking part in outdoor recreation. Those initiated were David Rynearson, Paul Perigo, Frank Neumann, Scott Saddoris, Tom Maguire, George Carlin, Freddie Hicks and Jerry Redford. The formal installation banquet will be held at a major San Francisco restaurant.

Zeta Chi sorority recently held their pinning dinner at the home of Roberta Kennedy. The sisters are now planning for a joint picnic to be held with Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity, May 30, at Russian River.

Eight Resolutions Passed At CJCSGA Conference; Football Game Limitation Extended

By Dave Smith

Eight resolutions and one recommendation were passed by delegates representing 60 California two-year colleges at the bi-annual conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association at the Huntington-Sheraton Hotel in Pasadena, May 8.

Five delegates represented the college, headed by Associated Student President Jack Patterson. Patterson handled the student government workshop, which was one of the five workshops held during the conference. The other workshops were attended by Darlene Enfield, activities and organizations; Freddie Hicks, athletics; Liz Thrush, finance under $35,000, and Don Smith, publications and public relations.

The sixth person to attend was Ralph Prior, who filled in for Kevin Mullen as State Information Chairman. Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, accompanied the group.

The athletic eligibility resolution was considered most important to this college. At the present time a student here may participate on a college team if he has passing grades in 10½ units. It was resolved at the CJCSGA that athletic eligibility requirements of all two-year colleges be set at a 2.0 on a 4-point system in at least 10½ units.

Two other issues pertaining to athletics concern the college, It was resolved that the 28-game baseball limitation be dropped in favor of an unlimited number of games; also that the nine-game football limitation be dropped in favor of a 10-game limitation or a playoff game.

Another resolution passed, which does not affect this college, pertained to athletes buying student organization cards. Since all athletes benefit from Associated Student funds (uniforms, insurance, etc.), the resolution was adopted requiring them to purchase AS cards. The college athletes and intramural champions here already work on this basis.

The publicity and public relations workshop carried one resolution and one recommendation. The resolution stated that each conference host appoint and instruct a conference publicity committee to contact all newspapers in the immediate vicinity of the conference location, and urge that the conference be publicized.

The recommendation was that college publicity departments make up a priority list of school-sponsored events and devote most of their energy to publicizing the event with the highest priority.

The student government workshop resolved that a copy of each resolution passed by the workshops at the CJCSGA be made available to each delegate at least one hour before the general assembly when the voting takes place. The next resolution was to stop taking tape-recordings of the conference because the process is too long and involved to be useful. The last resolution extended the length of the workshop from three and one-half hour to at least five.

"I wish that all the students attending the college could have the chance to go to a CJCSGA conference," Patterson said, "for if they did, all would be interested in student government.

"After returning from the conference I have many new ideas about college organization. It is a place where a person can help other schools with their problems and receive ideas in turn," he added.

Four State Coeds Sweep Finals In Miss SF Contest

By Pastor Valley-Garay

Somewhere in the city on the morning of last Friday, May 16, a 20-year-old hazel-eyed blonde must have awakened thinking she was still dreaming of queens and princesses.

She is Judy Wilson and she wasn't dreaming for, next to her bedside, as if to prove a dream come true, stood what for her was a most magnificent sight, the trophy she had won the night before at the Marines' Memorial theater and the tiara with which she had been crowned Miss San Francisco of 1958.

The San Francisco State College liberal arts student will now attend the Miss California pageant at Santa Cruz, the second step in the stairway to the Miss America title, last won by a San Franciscan in 1955 in the person of Lee Ann Meriwether, former student here.

Sandra Hedger, a Delta Psi sorority sister of Miss Meriwether and a drama major here was the college's only finalist in the group of nine from which Miss Wilson was chosen Miss San Francisco.

As things were, the pageant, a wonderfully casual and somewhat messy affair sponsored by the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce and emceed by KCBS's disc jockey Guy Cherney, consisted of a field day, or is it night? for the State college contestants.

Five of them were among the last group of nine finalists, and they took almost everything there was to be taken as far as prizes were concerned.

Sherry Wayne, an 18-year-old drama major there, was the contest's first runner-up. State coed Bonnie Morgan was the second runner-up and the winner of the Miss Swim Suit competition.

Carolyn Smith, another San Francisco State College student and the first Negro woman to reach the Miss San Francisco finals, won the Grand Talent Award and was voted by the 16 finalists as the pageant's Miss Congeniality, a prize for the one the contestants felt was the "most charming and cooperative" of the entrants.

The selection of Miss San Francisco was based on intellect, personality, poise, wholesomeness, charm, talent and beauty, and the pageant is an official preliminary to the Miss America Pageant.

Deadeyes On Top In Pistol Shoots

Taking the lead from the beginning, the Deadeyes, through consistent sharpshooting, maintained their first place hold and emerged victorious in the Campus Police intramural pistol matches with a high aggregate score of 10,352.

Although never a serious threat to overcome the Deadeyes, the Dreamers, with a fine display of marksmanship, took second place, chalking up an aggregate score of 10,195. The third position went to the Alibiers, captained by Geraldine Rush, with 9,736, followed by the last place J. C. Six with 9,676.

In the individual competition, Fred Fitzgerald racked up an aggregate score of 2,716, to become top shooter of the matches. Being chairman of the criminology department, Fitzgerald sportingly bowed out of the race, thereby relinquishing the title of top individual shooter to Charles Terry of the Alibiers.

Terry, who came from far behind, nosed out Marion Timm for second place in the final match, with their final scores being 2,694 and 2,703, respectively.

Runners-up in the individual competition were Frank Williams with 2,547 and Larry Plott with 2,545.

Hicks And Bell Take Top Positions

32% Of AS Card Holders Vote In General Elections

Taking 317 of the total 594 votes cast, Freddie Hicks emerged victorious over Don Smith (268) in the recent election to become Associated Student President for the Fall semester, according to official election results released by Steve Seitz, Election Commissioner.

The turnout for this election was better than predicted, according to Seitz. Thirty-two percent of the 1,940 Associated Students voted; a great improvement over the 23 percent of last semester.

In a close race for the AS Vice-Presidency, Audrey Bell (297) won over Liz Thrush (291) by only six votes, Two of the four remaining offices went to the Independents.

The other member of the Individual ticket to get an office was George Morf (275) over Jerry Hoffman (270). Morf's office will be that of Sophomore Class President. Ken Cook, Independent, with 373 took the office of Freshman Class President over Adolph Hersvick with 213.

Ten of the 14 available council seats were automatically filled becnuse candidates ran unopposed. Sophomore members of the new council are George Carlino, Dick Portillo, Dick Apphun, Gene Craft, Roberta Kennedy, Sandy Simonian and Bill Forshay.

AUDREY BELL, AS Vice-President.

The two amendments that were placed on the ballot won by overwhelming majorities. Both had to do with men's athletic awards to first and second year winners, and to championship teams and their members.

All in all, Seitz said, he was very pleased with the election and the fine turnout on the part of the students.

Friday Marks Last Holiday Of Semester

College students here will have their last holiday of the semester this Friday with the national commemoration of Memorial Day, according to the college's official calendar.

Because of this holiday and the approach of final examinations, no more college hour meetings will be held for the remainder of the semester.

Hicks' Victory Message

At this time words do not easily come. I can only say that as I promised in my campaign message there will be a detailed study of the possibilities of constructing a student union building on campus. We, your student officers, shall also attempt to obtain more useful discounts and benefits for your AS cards. I thank you for your confidence and I will serve you to the best of my ability.

San Francisco Citizens To Vote On Proposition 'A' At Polls Tuesday; Approval Of Measure To Aid College

By Robert Liu

Assurance of sound financial support for San Francisco public schools, in the form of Proposition A, will be voted by the electorate of San Francisco next Tuesday.

The measure, if passed, will pave the way for a 50-cent increase in the local permissive school tax limit and provides a much-needed financial boost for the San Francisco public schools fund. Presently in effect is a $2 tax limit, established in 1937 but never modified despite rises in costs and salaries during the last two decades.

Passage of the proposition will indirectly provide additional funds necessary to staff and equip facilities in the college's proposed Arts Building. Construction of the building, to house an auditorium, music and ceramics rooms, was approved two years ago by voters of San Francisco in a college building expenditures bond. This was done in the face of expected student increase during coming years.

"Passage of the proposition," a faculty member stressed, "will affect not only students of today. It will affect relatives, friends and even sons and daughters of today's college student."

Faculty members have also formed a Faculty Association phone campaign for Proposition A, requesting members to phone as many friends in San Francisco as possible urging them to vote for the measure.

Chairman of the school department's Vote Yes on A Committee is President Louis G. Conlan.

The situation as it stands now, is that in the school year of 1957-58, the Superintendent of Schools found it necessary to approve a budget that came within two cents of the present tax limit. In the school year of 1958-59, to maintain the quality of educational facilities and to provide for the expected increases in student population, it is necessary to have a budget to exceed the present tax limit by five cents.

If these funds are not made available by the voters on June 3, it could threaten the kindergarten program of the school system, and closer to home,

Plans Completed For 23rd Annual Commencement

Plans for the 23rd annual commencement exercises have been completed and are being put into effect, according to John J. Brndy, commencement committee chairman.

Joseph A. Moore, president of the Board of Education, will present the greetings and Dr. Harold Spears, Superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools, will give the awards. Introduction of faculty and presentation of candidates for degrees will be handled by Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction, and Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will confer the degrees.

Music will be furnished by the college concert band, under the direction of Meyer Cahn, and the A Cappella Choir, under the leadership of Robert Morton.

If a student does not wish to participate, it will be necessary for him to pick up his degree at the college. "Under no circumstances will degrees be mailed to graduating students," Brady said. Graduating students will receive a postcard announcing the program.

The commencement is scheduled for 8 p.m., Friday, June 13, and there will be a rehearsal earlier in the day, Brady said.

AWS To Hold Feminine Fling Today At Smith Hall; Sorority To Receive Dougherty Trophy

Feminine Fling, the Associated Women Students' awards and installation party, will be held today at 6:30 p.m. in the cafeteria at Smith Hall, according to Linda McArdle, AWS president.

Through The Looking Glass was voted as the theme by the AWS board members. Decorations both on the stage and on the tables will follow the theme.

The affair is sponsored jointly by the Inter-Sorority Council, Recreation Association and the AWS. Installation of the new presidents of the three groups will take place, Miss McArdle said.

Presentation of the Margaret Dougherty trophy to the sorority with the highest grade point average will be one of the highlights of the evening.

The entertainment will be presented by the Patricia Stevens House of Charm School through one of their leading stylists, Helen Kvnrme. Miss Kvarme will demonstrate what makes a woman glamorous by styling hair and doing make-up on women from the audience.

Refreshments will consist of tropical fruit salad, rolls, dessert and coffee.

Chairmen for the event include Sandy Simonian, clean-up; Diane Christofferson, entertainment; Bev Jones, decorations; Natalie Hoogasian, food; Margie Erhart, hospitality; Gloria Cloke, invitations; Mary Gilmartin, posters; Esmeralda Aguilar, publicity; Eunice Hall, registration; Kitty Stein, serving, and Audrey Fones, set-up.

All women students are invited to attend and there will be a 25 cents admission charge. Dress for the occasion will be pedal pushers, Miss McArdle stated.

Third Semester Dental Students To Receive Caps

Eight City College women students will receive their Dental Assistant's caps in a capping ceremony in Cloud Hall at 8 p.m. next Wednesday, June 4.

According to Ruth Inskipp, dental assisting instructor, this ceremony is something new. It has only been in the Fall '57 semester and this one in which students have been presented with their caps before completing their four semesters of work.

Mrs. Inskipp and Louis Batmale, dean of Semiprofessional Courses, expressed the opinion that by enabling the students to receive their caps on the completion of the third semester's work they are given more prestige in their final semester's work here and at the University of California Dental College and College of Physicians and Surgeons.

The guest speaker will be Dr. Sidney Epstein, president of the San Francisco Dental Society, whose topic will be, There Are Many Thresholds.

Margaret Grave, educational chairman of the Northern California Dental Assistant Association, will conduct the capping ceremony and present the students with their caps.

The students will be escorted during the ceremony by those who will be graduated this spring and received their caps last semester.

Soloist for the program will be Susanne Bellinger, and her accompanist, William Richardson. A reception will follow the ceremony, and refreshments will be served. The eight women graduates are Sharon Abrahams, Mareia Bernstein, Anne Bruno, Sonya Cohn, Linda Farrell, Diana Frediani, Carolee Locke and Lillian Robinson.

Forum Magazine To Be Distributed On Monday

Forum, the college's annual literary magazine, will be distributed beginning next Monday, June 2, Alger Doane, editor of Forum, announced this week.

Forum will be distributed by staff members at strategic points on the campus. The cover for this year will be of contemporary design replacing the somewhat traditional Ram's head.

Free to Associated Student members and 50 cents to non-members, the magazine will contain poems, short stories and essays which were submitted to the Forum staff. Catherine Connolly is the Forum faculty adviser.

Korman Donates $1,000 A Year To H&R Department

Stanley Korman, chairman of the board of an Australian hotel chain, recently donated $1,000 a year for a three-year period to the college Hotel and Restaurant department, to provide an opportunity for an H&R student to study and work in Australia under supervision of his organization.

Members of the Pacific Area Travel Association agree the scholarship will provide the incentive necessary to begin to compensate for the lack of trained American hotel personnel overseas.

Representntives from as far away as the Fiji Islands and Japan were among the 32 hotel owners and managers who for the first time opened their annual seminar at a college in the United States.

So impressed were the delegates with the practical nature of the training program conducted by the Hotel and Restaurant staff that they are seriously contemplating a return visit to San Francisco for a portion of their seminar next year.

Scholarships Go To 25 In Assembly For June 13 Grads

By Katharyne Malloy

Winners of the $50 Cloud scholarships were Willene Payton and John Warren; presenting the award was Dr. Thomas Gabbert, Spanish instructor.

Patricia Owen and Hugh Aanonsen were each awarded a $50 Graduating Class of 1958 scholarship by Dean Golding and Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities.

Irene Owyang and Harvey Tom each received a $50 Chinese Students' Club scholarship which was presented by Harold Friedman, business instructor.

Joan Lee, Joan Kwock and Katherine Fong each received an $80 Square and Circle scholarship presented by Mrs. S. W. Wong.

The two Alice Eastwood scholarships were awarded by Mrs. W. Abbot to Elizabeth Story and Frank Salet.

Hotel and Restaurant scholarships were presented by Lawrence Wong, H&R instructor, who awarded the Duncan Hines scholarship to Carl Cnstro and the Harvey Toy scholarship to Shoren Fenton and John Delmnn.

John Becker presented the Bank of America Junior College Business Awards to William Pappas and Alice Fong. Winner of the $100 American Society of Tool Engineers scholarship was Robert Menzies, who was given the award by Wilbur D. Russell, engineering instructor.

Four winners of the $300 University of California scholarships were Newton Chin, Arlene Lebhers, Leslye Hink and Kenneth Kitch, who were awarded the scholarships by Dr. Lloyd Luckmann, coordinator of Instruction.

The program included a greeting to prospective graduates by Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, and a talk about the importance of commencement by Don Snepp, English instructor.

Unity Can Be Non-Existent If Students Here Vegetate

PERFECTION is something that doesn't exist. An ideal, a goal, a wish, a dream but not a reality, perfection is something toward which all of us reach but never quite grasp—it is the reaching and not the grasping that is important in this case. This constant reaching by humanity is seen in the mere task of survival as men push, kill, destroy and break in order to get what they want.

Again it is the reaching and not the actual getting that is important, for when men or organizations cease to reach they cease to exist. It would seem then that in order to create, to contribute, to receive, and just to live, a striving of a type is necessary. Reaching by the above methods is better than vegetating. It was observed, however, by a student at the college that many here are little more than vegetables in a fertile soil gathering in and smothering the elements.

A great number of students here have the typical feeling of what can college do for me? What will I get out of these two years? True, we are all here to learn and broaden our outlook on life and current problems, but is there any such thing as all take and no give? It doesn't seem that life is that one-sided. Give, and thou shall receive.

Everyone here is an individual, but as a group of students all sharing the same facilities and opportunities we should share a common unity. We do not. Most every club and organization on campus is working for itself and its membership rather than the entire college. It is not to be implied that these groups do not contribute an essential part of campus life, but many of them form a separate working part of the machine rather than an essential part of the whole.

One of the most current examples of this is the recent election. Petitions for candidacy were so few that deadlines had to be extended twice and yet seats on the councils were automatically filled. This is democracy? Another example of student apathy is the number of Associated Student cards that are bought as compared to the total enrollment.

Still another example of this lack of unity can be seen in the groups of people who actually accomplish things. These people are to be commended and recommended. As one student said, there is always someone to take the "dirty jobs" and get them done. These people seem to be members of the same school of thought . . . the student leader school. Not all of them are actually in student government as such, but most of them have faces familiar to faculty and students alike.

With the end of the semester in sight, it is not too late for the vegetables to redeem themselves. There are those who will return next semester. For these students a new outlook on what they can contribute to the college is the answer. For others, the students who are of voting age, there is an election on June 3. Aiding the passage of Proposition A in this election will be a great contribution to the college, San Francisco, and possibly to their future children. This can be but the first steps of a reunification.

As a parting comment, there comes to mind the incident of the student who came to a member of a leading group and sincerely stated that I find myself burdened with a debt that I don't know how to repay. I am sincerely thankful and hope that others realize how much they have."

1960 Brings Smaller Children?

Renovated Broom Closets, Halls, Rooftops To Be Used For Solving Problem Of Overcrowded Schools

The schools seem to be very unhappy over the coming crowding. Long about 1960 they figure there will be just enough room left to fit in smaller students. The trend will be for all parents is to have physically smaller children. The slogan will no doubt be, "Will Your Child Fit Into Things?"

Several suggestions have been offered by students interested in this problem. Robert Auwbrey insists swing shifts are the only answer. "Together with putting students in the halls, the swing shift will solve the problem for years to come," Auwbrey explained, "and all the wasted space in halls and broom closets should be utilized and even possibly classes on the roofs of the schools."

Another contribution (anonymous) is to disqualify everybody in the schools at present and just start all over again with the "new crop."

Ridiculous answers to a very serious problem, but as yet they seem to be the only answers coming through. The people who should be concerned and have the authority to do something about the impending problem are keeping mum.

There is an answer somewhere and somehow it must be found to enable the generations following to enjoy the present standards.

It must be admitted at present the most likely solution lies with the passing of Proposition A by the people of San Francisco. The proposition, in effect, would allow for more and better equipment for the use of these students about to converge upon schools.

Beauty Is Only Skin Deep

Two Hundred Student Nurses Start Career Here, Reside At San Francisco Hospitals

If there are any injuries, fractures, or bullet wounds conceived around campus, the injured party can always turn for "aid" to one of the many nursing students here.

Approximately 200 women students from various hospitals, including St. Francis, Mary's Help, French, Mt. Zion and St. Luke's, come to the college for some science courses. Bacteriology, anatomy, nutrition and physiology are a few of the classes that these students are required to take. Others are sociology, psychology, humanities and English or communications.

These students live in the hospital where they are taking their nursing. Mary's Help students enroll in nine hours of study here. The Mary's Help students are now taking nutrition and physiology. During the first semester they studied micro-biology and anatomy. These women come to the college for just one year, their first in the hospital, always beginning in the Fall semester.

According to Colleen Silliman and Sharon Chapman, first year students at Mary's Help, most of the college work is done in the first year of the four-year course.

"The college is a nice change from the hospital, but it sometimes is a little troublesome to get over here for the courses and then back to the hospital," Miss Chapman said.

The student nurses have a hard curriculum, and their City College work is only a small part of it. In their first year they are permitted only four weeks of vacation and week-ends off. So next time there is a beef about homework, remember the nurses.

LOCAL SCENE—I oughta be in pictures department.

If some of his fans could have seen their favorite DJ at the Miss San Francisco Pageant they would have been surprised to say the least. This particular DJ is known, air wise at least, for his nice clean cut spirit a la Jack Armstrong the All-American Boy.

Our boy MCed the affair and when Miss San Francisco, Judy Wilson of San Francisco State, was announced, he wanted his picture taken with the pretty miss. But for some reason the photographers weren't interested and then our boy stomped off the stage shouting "dirty words" at the lads with the cameras.

In case you're wondering, it wasn't Sherwood.

TV or not TV; that's the question. With summer just around the antenne sponsors have to decide whether or not to renew shows for next season. Many shows will undoubtedly get the boot but this probably won't include many westerns, which maintain good ratings but offer little entertainment wise. Boot-western: too much, much too much.

Some shows which should remain on the air will lose their sponsor because sponsors seem to subscribe to the belief that the American public doesn't want good TV. How would the public know if they wanted it or not; they've been exposed to so little.

DICK STANFORD, who also attends the famous Stanford University, recently ran for cheer-leader there. He won, all right. But only by a slight margin over his evangelistic competitor, Billy Graham, who picked up an alarming write-in total of 415 votes.

The whole thing was a gag, naturally. After all, Billy's business is making grandstand plays, not directing them.

Lately, for example, they are in the modern age, trying to figure out what Picasso meant in some of his more unintelligible works. One thing they all agree on is that this cubist cut-up, in trying to express the sub-conscious on canvas, has entered an ethereal Eden all his own.

And most of them feel that he is welcome to it!

NOTHING IRRITATES a bus-driver more than to have 15 pennies tossed, with a cheerful abandon, into his already overflowing coin-box. For some strange reason, he seems to take offense at this act. Especially when it occurs during a rush hour, and anxious car drivers in back are prodding him forward via shrill horn blasts and censorable screams of anguish.

It is during times like these that, unless he has remarkable self-restraint, the bus-jockey's chances for a Muni courtesy award go out the window.

Liberal Arts Open Road To Free Thinking

By Don Seratti

IN THE FACE of recent requests for more mathematics and science in our schools, there is a danger that the social sciences will be neglected in favor of other courses.

But in terms of this nation's survival as a free enterprise society, the social sciences assume an importance which cannot be overstated.

The value of liberal arts was dramatically underscored recently by Aldous Huxley as he appeared on one of television's few genuinely worthwhile presentations.

Huxley, brilliant British novelist and essayist who is deeply concerned with the free world's survival, didn't mention the words "social science" or "liberal arts" once. But his implication of what can happen to an unaware, unthinking people—very probably those who haven't benefited from an ample study of social science—was crystal clear.

HUXLEY HAD FORESIGHT

In his book, Brave New World, written in 1932, Huxley demonstrated remarkable foresight in picturing a society in which individual freedoms were at a minimum and the people were ruthlessly exploited and were made to love their servitude by the authorities' dissemination of drugs and propaganda.

And now, says Huxley, the United States is in danger of some day becoming a "Brave New World."

The devices for converting this country into a state we'd dread to live in are in the open now, and could easily be used to undermine our freedoms.

Television and subliminal projection, though neither is dangerous now, are nevertheless potential instruments of propaganda. Subliminal projection on a motion picture screen can be employed to influence people's thoughts by reaching their subconscious. If this device can subtly persuade theatergoers to buy more popcorn, it could do more in the hands of the wrong people.

The "soma" in Brave New World finds a counterpart in the "wonder drugs" and tranquilizers of today, lending credence to the belief of some observers that Huxley wasn't looking quite so far into the future as we think.

PEOPLE ARE OWN THREAT

Following mass media and drugs on the list of potential threats to our freedom are the people themselves. Although inadvertently, many people in America are, by virtue of their complacency, indifference and lack of open-mindedness, practically tempting some unscrupulous agencies to surreptitiously but systematically seize control of the country and of people's minds.

Huxley stresses the importance of people being able to analyze what they hear.

As a result of advertising and of television and other means of entertainment that require virtually no thinking, no investigation by the audience, too many people have become inclined to believe almost everything they are told.

When a power-hungry agency possessing instruments of propaganda can get this type of reaction from the citizens, this is all they need to turn our society into one in which we'll be happy when we actually have no reason to be.

While math and science courses inspire thinking on the part of students, the social sciences—history, sociology, humanities—teach students to think clearly and sensibly about the important events of past and present, thus making them less susceptible to harmful ideas which could some day deprive them of their freedoms.

An intensified study of liberal arts is one way for people to foresee the uses which the aforementioned insidious devices can be put to, and to forestall them.

The pledge to the flag was drawn up in August, 1892, in the office of the Youth's Companion, a popular magazine for young people, in Boston, Massachusetts. It was first used at exercises on Columbus Day, October 12, 1892.

National Safety Council Gives Mike Lewis Award For Heroic Santa Cruz Beach Sea Rescue

By Mike Gibbons

Before reaching his 19th birthday, "Iron Mike" Lewis, holder of the National Interscholastic discus record (160 ft.) and San Francisco's '57 co-athlete of the year, has achieved more honors and broken more athletic records than the average athlete even dreams of duplicating in twice the number of years.

On May 6 of this year the San Francisco Chapter of the National Safety Council bestowed an award upon Lewis for rescuing two 17-year-old youths who were stranded in the ocean in the wake of a riptide off the Santa Cruz beach.

He had hoped to spend a leisurely day at the beach with his date. How was he to know that the lives of two strangers, besides his own, might depend on his swimming prowess that very day.

Looking back, Lewis recalls how it happened: "I saw these two kids on the air mattress. They looked like they were caught in a riptide. They were quite a ways away but I decided to go down to the shore and look."

At the edge of the beach he found out from among the large group of onlookers assembled at the shore that boats had been dispatched earlier from the Santa Cruz and Capitola wharves.

Without thought of personal safety and ignoring the advice of the cautious bystanders, Lewis plunged into the sea and stroked swiftly through the ten-foot high waves toward the mattress that was being swept out by the tide.

"I tried to go around the rip," he said. "But it caught me, too. I finally managed to get to them. Calming them down was half the battle. Then I began to tow them to shore.

"I was pretty exhausted and I think they were too. I didn't realize I was so tired until I got out of the water."

He attributes his endurance to the many hours spent swimming in the ocean off the San Francisco beach. He can also thank his lucky stars that his mother once held the Women's National 100-yard backstroke record, for she was mostly responsible for his learning how to swim.

Physical fitness has been part of Lewis' life for as long as he can remember. He has continually added to his basement every muscle building contraption imaginable. While attending Lincoln High School he has reputedly engaged in this "aggressive homework" twelve hours a week.

Since he has been enrolled at this college his routine in the basement has slacked off a bit, thanks to a rugged practice session almost every day with the shot and the discus as well as those things they call "textbooks."

71 Awards To Be Presented By Block Society This Week

Seventy-one of the college's athletes will be given awards, and Stanford track coach Payton Jordan will appear as guest speaker at the semi-annual Block SF awards banquet in Smith Hall Monday at 7 p.m., according to John Henry, president of the society.

Awards will be given to the Basketball, Baseball, Tennis, Golf and Track Teams. Slated to receive Block SF awards this semester for golf are Tony Aglolo, Elden Davis, Gordon Gruber, Gene Krome and Charles Pierce. Players on the tennis squad scheduled to receive awards are Jim Watson, Nick Scharf, Vic Saschin, Fred Watters and Jim Howard.

Baseball awards go to Fred Glosser, Earl Fauss, John May, Frank Williams, Allan LeMire, Roy Tripaldi, Richard De Marco, Joseph Herbert, Gene Craft, Victor Williams, James Willie, George Mix, Lewis Marks, William Stamos, Donald Arrighi, George Molakides and Michael Warnock. Larry Beidon, manager and assistant coach, will also receive a Block SF award.

Seventh Place Rams Finish Season With 5-4 Loss To Bulldogs

The Rams' seventh place ball club closed out its 1958 season May 14 against San Mateo on the peninsula and were edged 5 to 4 by their southern rivals.

Pitcher Earl Fauss went the full distance for the locals and was handed his third loss of the year against two victories.

With a little help in the ninth inning, the Rams would have pulled the contest out of the fire, but failed to do so when they had the bags full and managed to put across only a single run.

The action in the Ram half of the last frame started when Freddie Glosser doubled to left field, third sacker Rich DeMarco drew a walk and then Lew Marks, batting for Al LeMire, got life when his hard hit grounder was bobbled by the Bulldog shortstop.

The Bulldog chucker then fanned Bud Williams, Glosser scored on Craft's grounder, which forced Marks at second for the second out, and finally Roy Tripaldi was thrown out third to first for the Rams' final out of the year.

Tom Zachary, of the Washington Nationals, cannot be denied his claim to fame as being one of the most instrumental figures in George Herman Ruth's major league record of 60 home runs. He threw the pitch.

Rams Enter State Relays

The California State Relays will be held at Modesto Junior College this Saturday, May 31.

The Rams, Big Eight dual meet champions, Big Eight All-Conference meet champions, and Northern California champions, will be well represented at this important state meet.

The Rams will be led by Will Gasper (pole vault 13-8½, high jump 6-6½, and broad jump 22-11), Mack Burton (broad jump 24-8), Mike Lewis (shot put 53-10), and Paul Patton (mile 4:24.5, and two mile 9:41.8).

Mural Pugilists Stage Successful Show At Smoker

Intramural boxing championships were held before a large and enthusiastic crowd last Wednesday night in the men's gymnasium.

Besides the 10 championship bouts, there was an exhibition of Siamese boxing by Richard Tseng and Chaiphorn Kamolnetr.

Manuel Chang annexed the 139-pound title by soundly beating Art McGlothin, Ed Chavez overwhelmed Pedro Chang for the 146-pound title, and Charles Fox boxed his way to the 153-pound title by beating Richard Tenaza.

The 160-pound title was won by Alex Schumacher, who showed a lot of power while defeating Larry Plott. George Petty, with a height and reach advantage, defeated gutty Dennis Mosgofian for the 167-pound championship.

Ed Safdie, a left-hander with a confusing style, baffled Larry Murphy throughout the fight and won the 175-pound title. In the heavyweight division David Ceballos and Frank Matlin fought to draw in the last fight of the very successful program.

RAMBLINGS

PAMELA KURRELL, star woman athlete attending the college, recently made news by winning three events in the 1958 Pacific Association women's track and field championships at Kezar Stadium on May 18.

Miss Kurrell, who already has an illustrious cinder career behind her and is destined to reach track greatness, swept to victories in the discus, her specialty, with a heave of 120-11;

The close of the intramural basketball season saw the CAB's Sigma Tau Sigma five, Doc Zarchin's honor society, technically cop the mural laurels by defeating the fraternity loop's Gamma Phi Ypsilon by a default. The Sigmas, however, agreed to give the fraternity champs another chance; so the two teams staged a replay of the litle fray in the men's gymnasium last Monday.

Incidentally, every game played in the intramural league featured some exciting basketball, with the addition of many ex-high school cage stars on some teams making the entire schedule a tough and interesting one. The enthusiasm shown in this program will more than likely prompt a similar arrangement in the fall.

Unsung Heroes Of Cinder Team Shine Brightly In Shadows Of Stars Burton, Gasper, Lewis

With the Big Eight dual meet track championship safely wrapped up, the Big Eight finals easily won, and the Northern California Relays ended yesterday, a closer look should be given this title-winning '58 squad.

The dual meet championship was won by the field event men! There are a number of good runners on the team, but no one can deny that it was the overwhelming strength in the field events which cinched the title. Topping the field event men were the "Big Three," Mack Burton, Will Gasper, and Mike Lewis.

Unfortunately, when you have great athletes like this on one team, many other top competitors are hardly heard from. For example, Mack Burton shone so brightly in the broad-jump (24-8), that he eclipsed four other trackmen.

Gasper was so good in the high jump (6-6½) that little was heard from another top jumper, Ed Costa. Costa has a 6-5 to his credit, which would make him number one in most other two-year colleges.

Leroy Shields is another fine track star who must perform in the shadows. And in this case, the shadow is thrown by Mike Lewis, the national prep discus record holder. At the beginning of the year, Shields unofficially set the shot put record at 46'3". But competing against Lewis, who recently set a new record of 53-11, Shields was forced to take seconds and thirds throughout the season.

Of course, no matter how good the field event men were, they could not have won the title alone. The hard working runners were in there to round off the team. And the most outstanding runner for the college was Paul Patton. Patton set the record in the mile (4.24.5) and the two-mile (9.41.8). Here again, he was so good that he overshadowed other fine distance runners like Blake Westman, Rich Blaetler and Bill Thomas.

Tom Skinner turned out to be one of the college's top sprinters. Unfortunately, he ran a "lousy" hundred-yard dash because he needed 90 yards to get moving. But in the 220, and the 220 low hurdles, he proved valuable.

In the high hurdles, Jerry Bell, the former AAA champion, usually had to take a back seat to the old veteran, James Ray Thomas. And by hard work alone, Don Nasser developed himself into a 49-second quarter miler and led a whole host of fine 440 men which included James Austin, Lionel Sims, and Myron Zimmerman.

Profs Claim Field Unsafe; Call Game

The Prof softball win streak is still intact this year thanks to the rain storm which hit the city on the eve of the annual Soph-Prof game scheduled for Balboa Field last Friday morning during college hour.

President Jerry Redford and his soph delegation stated that the field was playable but were overruled by the "high pressure" methods of the faculty, who stated that the game would not be played because of the soggy condition of the basepaths. In this writer's opinion the field was in good enough shape to handle the game, but because the Profs were without their ace hurler Roy Diederichsen they used the rain for an excuse.

Athletes' Grades Under Fire With Scholastic Rule

A resolution adopted at the California Junior College Student Government Association conference providing that athletic eligibility requirements of all two-year colleges be set at a 2.0 (C average) on a 4-point system in at least 10½ units, created considerable controversy here this week.

The athletic eligibility resolution is considered most important to this college, because at the present time, a student here may participate on a college team if he has passing grades (D average) in 10½ units.

Before this resolution to the student association constitution goes into effect, the California Junior College Association must pass the resolution. The board is composed of administrators from all the two-year colleges in the state.

"I don't really know how resolutions are lobbied before the administrative conference, so I can't say whether the athletic resolution will go through or not," Jack Patterson, Associated Student president here, commented.

Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, expressed his feelings of the issue by saying, "The resolution was passed too hastily without looking into the matter more. One group should not have regulations placed on it without putting regulations on every group whether it be an athletic organization or not."

GPY, STS Win Trophies For Mural Cage Wins

A very successful dinner paying tribute to the players of the 1958 intramural basketball leagues was held last Wednesday night in Smith Hall as a prelude to that night's highly enjoyable AMS smoker.

Trophies were awarded to Doc Zarchin's Sigma Tau Sigma honor fraternity, winners of the CAB league, and to Gamma Phi Ypsilon, titlists in the Greek letter fraternity loop.

As a result of their usage of an ineligible player, GPY's 39-33 victory over STS for the entire intramural crown was declared a forfeit. The two teams agreed to replay for the title, but results weren't available at press time.

Dean Ralph Hillsman, speaking at the dinner, stated that, due to the great interest shown by the fraternity and CAB organizations, similar leagues will be conducted during the fall with instructors as supervisors, contrary to the system used this spring, whereby all details were handled by the students themselves.

All-Conference Backstop Berth Could Go To Heavy Hitting Ram Johnny May

Local baseball fans, and even people who aren't fans, know the name of Willie Mays, the Giant centerfilder. Well, the college has an outstanding ballplayer with almost the same last name. Just drop the "s" in Mays and you have Johnny May, the hard-hitting Ram catcher.

The Big Eight Conference had a number of top catchers this year; but without a doubt one of the best is May, who not only handles his job like an experienced veteran, but has proved himself a tough man at the plate.

There have been only two home runs by the Rams this season, and both have come from the bat of the slugging May, who rapped out four-baggers against Santa Rosa and West Contra Costa. Both balls traveled about 385 feet and looked as though they were shot from cannons.

The 18-year-old May stands only 5'8", but is a robust 190 and to look at him one is reminded of another catcher, Yogi Berra of the Yankees.

Like most ballplayers, May started playing baseball when he was in grade school. He was born in New Orleans, Louisiana, but moved to California with his parents when he was quite young. He attended the East Bay's Berkeley High, where he won All-Alameda County honors in his senior year.

Catching is about the only position May has really handled so he naturally likes that spot best. Although official averages for Big Eight games have not been released as yet, May batted at a .380 mark.

May expected two-year college ball to be a little tougher than he has found it. Many players don't make the transition as May has. His batting average proves that he hasn't had much trouble in getting base hits.

The stocky backstop plans on playing for the Rams again next year before continuing his education at either San Jose or San Francisco State.

Pinning Dinners, Elections Keeping Organizations Busy, Watchful Of Coming Finals

By Jerry Redford

AS THE FINAL midterm period begins to draw into focus, the campus has become engrossed in the election of new officers for their groups, and the installation of these officers.

Elected to hold office next semester were Ron Vierra, president; Dick Sarouhan, vice-president; Len Slater, treasurer; Dennis Kalos, pledge master; Jerry Wilson, recording secretary; Ron Funke, corresponding secretary; Ferd Marwedel, custodian; Don Gifford, historian, and Kip Wixson, sergeant-at-arms.

Beta Tau brothers attended an informal dinner at the home of their president, Chuck Young. An enjoyable time was had by all of the old and new brothers.

Members of the Engineering Society recently took a tour of the Matson Steamship Company facilities, Last Friday, they conducted their semi-annual dinner at the El Portal Cafe.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority is presently making plans to attend the Feminine Fling tonight, and for their pledge pinning and dinner to be held tomorrow. Ipstaliation of new officers will also take place during the evening.

Associated Student card holders are invited to attend any performance of the film, Bridge On The River Kwai, at the St. Francis, at a special reduced rate of 90 cents, rather than the usual $1.50 admission price.

(Editor's Note: The Guardsman regrets that mention was made to the effect that two organizations were "kicked off campus." It has come to view that they were just put on probation for the remaining portion of the semester.)

Education Majors Make 1st Visit To Primary School

Education majors at the college seeking elementary teaching credentials spent May 15 observing classes at John McLaren elementary school, instructor Bev J. Pasqualetti announced this week.

Twenty members of the two Education-30 courses met with McLaren principal Roy Minkler in the morning for a discussion of primary-elementary teaching problems and short visits to many of the school's 26 classes.

During the remainder of the morning and afternoon, the prospective teachers were permitted to sit in on classes of their choosing from kindergarten through sixth grades.

As part of their Education-30 assignment, student-observers conducted an analytical study of classroom behavior, methods of handling gifted and exceptional (slow-learning) children, and outstanding, average and poor qualities of the teacher.

The observation group was the first sent out from the college, and was the result of concerted effort on the part of Pasqualetti, who obtained approval of the idea from the San Francisco Board of Education.

This week 15 members of the Education-30 courses interested in secondary and junior college credentials will visit Balboa, Polytechnic and Mission High Schools and observe classes and methods of teaching at these schools.

Entrance Options Called To A Halt

Former students, with the exception of Alpha Gamma Sigma members, will not be granted special preferences when re-registering at the college during future semesters, Coordinator Lloyd D. Luckmann announced.

Even then, he said, members of the honor society will only receive special privileges if they volunteer to aid in the registration of other students.

As to students who plan to repeat a course because of low grades (D or F), Luckmann said, they will be admitted only after registration of other students has been completed.

These moves, he explained, are being undertaken in the hope of aiding new students who in previous semesters have had difficulties in obtaining admission to specific courses because of the "first come, first serve" enrollment policy.

Pre-Registration For Summer Ends June 5

Final date for summer session preregistration is Thursday, June 5, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, announced today.

She reminded any student who still wishes to attend summer session and who has not yet planned his program with his counselor or pre-registered, to do so as soon as possible before the deadline.

Miss Learnard stated that during pre-registration in the registrar's office in the Science Building, students will make out registration booklets and receive confirmation cards. On Thursday, June 19, the student must then bring the card to Room 117 in order to receive a certificate of registration.

"Eight hundred and twenty-five have pre-registered to date and this puts us 200 ahead of last year's total at this time," she commented.

More About School Tax Limit Increase Vote

it will mean more crowded classrooms and less educational equipment.

Backers of the measure emphasize that while educational facilities are now available or in the planning stages, to complete the picture a higher school tax limit is necessary, not to add new school services, but to maintain the present standard of education in San Francisco.

Airlines representatives met with Louis F. Batmale, dean of Semiprofessional Courses here, recently to formulate a two-year curriculum of training for airlines stewardesses.

The proposed program will provide a background of knowledge essential for the development of skills expected by the industry in hiring air-minded young women. It includes the study of fundamentals of air transportation, transportation geography, personality development and psychology.

Need by the airlines for persons of such training led to meetings between executives from PSA (Pacific Southwest Airways), Pacific Airlines, Pan American Airways, TWA, United Airlines and Western Airlines, and department heads working with Batmale. The college staff includes Margaret Flournoy, director of business education, and Joseph A. Amori, director of placement.

"The program would start on a limited, exploratory basis with meetings called periodically to discuss course outlines," Batmale stated.

"Problems of age limitations, temporary lack of openings and other reasons could be solved by equipping stewardess trainees with clerical courses to occupy the time of waiting for acceptance for airlines training," he explained.

Requirements for employment of stewardesses vary, according to Batmale. Some airlines hold weight ideals to 100-135 pounds; height, 60 to 68 inches; age, 20-28 years, and vision, 20-40 or 20-50 uncorrected, although one company permits the wearing of glasses. Additional requirements are two years of college, a good complexion and attractiveness.

Incorporation of the newly planned curriculum into the college program is not expected to reach fulfillment until Fall 1959.

Sixty Units Limit Set For Veterans

Veterans who have 60 units, including the six received for basic training, will normally be ineligible to return to the college under the G.I. Bill, according to Robin L. Dunn, veteran administrator here.

If the veteran has over 60 units, but has not completed the required two-year courses, he must file the necessary forms to meet specifications set up by the Veterans Administration. This must be done before the close of this semester, Dunn stated.

Immediate action should be taken by the veteran in making the application for transfering to another college, Dunn warned, in order to keep confusion and possible error in the transfer of records to a minimum. If this requirement is not met before the close of this semester, the veteran automatically forfeits his G.I. Rights.

To receive full allowance for the months of May and June, Dunn added, the veteran must sign the report form respectively during the week of June 2, and during final examination week.

Dean Set For 'Vacation'

Golding To Take Sabbatical Leave

Mary Golding (left), who during her five years as dean of women has been like a third parent to many students, will take a year's sabbatical leave starting July 1 this year.

Her successor has as yet not been named by President Louis G. Conlan.

This will be Dean Golding's first Sabbatical leave since she joined the college nine years ago as a member of the counseling department before being promoted to her present post.

She explained that her plans have as yet not been finalized, but she'll probably tour Ottawa, the East Coast, and Europe, visiting universities and discussing educational matters with college deans. She is scheduled to write a report on her tour when she returns.

Men's Glee Club To Take Part In Memorial Fete

In observance of Memorial Day, the college's Men's Glee Club will join in a program with the Sixth Army Band this Sunday at the Presidio Service Club in the Presidio, Robert Morton, Men's Glee Club director, announced today. "The general public is invited to the performance," Morton said.

A preview of the performance was given at the college last week when the band, the A Cappella Choir and Glee Club united to present a double college hour program in Cloud Hall library. During this performance, the Men's Glee Club sang the First and Fourth movements of Randall Thompson's Testament Of Freedom. The whole of the 24-minute work will be presented at the Sunday performance.

The band, under the direction of Chief Warrant Officer Louis Ferraro, will open the program with the King Korn March by Julius Thiele, and follow it with the overture to Die Fledermaus by Johann Strauss. After the Men's Glee Club performs, the band will continue the program with Theme For Tomorrow by Sid Felier, and the Second Symphony for Band by Morton.

Morton, who has also written a one-act opera, is the author of many chamber ensembles and songs. His Second Symphony For Band is dedicated to the Sixth Army band, which he has helped train for a period of more than six years. This is only the second performance of the piece.

History repeats itself: Women of ancient Pompeii, destroyed by a volcanic eruption in 79 A.D., not only painted their cheeks but bound their hair in a manner much like the "pony tail" of today.

Shooters Place 1st In Marksman Class At Daly City Match

At the Daly City Police Match, held on May 18, the college pistol team walked off with the first place trophy in the marksman class, chalking up a high score of 1,081 aggregate points.

During the past semesters, the college's team has entered a large number of local and statewide matches, and despite the superior competition encountered, the Ram shooters have brought home the bacon every time.

Among past accomplishments in shooting matches that have merited recognition for the team are a first place in the marksman class for five consecutive monthly meets at the Oakland Pistol Matches, and the first place trophy for the 1957 Aggregate Matches, with second place being taken by the college's second team.

Because of past performances, the college shooters have been invited to compete at the annual 2700 Aggregate Matches, which will take place June 7 and 8 at Oakland. For the first time in the college's history, .22 caliber and .45 caliber teams will be entered, along with the two award winning .38 caliber teams.

Rosso Wins Council Service Award Key

These awards are given each semester to a student who does not hold an office but has served the college.

After the dinner, which was prepared and served by the Hotel and Restaurant department, Mary Golding, dean of women, talked to the student government and their parents. Also after the dinner, Jack Patterson, AS president, swore in the new president, and he in turn swore in his officers.

The brain capacity of Cro-Magnon women of the Stone Age surpasses that of the average man of today, a survey revealed. At least the caveman had a smart wife!

New Butt Catchers Aid Clean-Up Program

Within the next week, observant students on campus will notice a brand new cigarette urn, Adolph Hersvick, president of the Club Activities Board, announced today. (Hersvick is pictured at left presenting urn to Associated Student President Jack Patterson.)

Tired of seeing the constant litter of cigarette ends at each main entrance, and in an effort to acquaint students with the Campus Clean-Up Program, the board has, during the course of the semester, collected sufficient funds to purchase this first receptacle.

"Another reason for the urn, apart from its obvious utility purpose," Hersvick said, "is to arouse the interest of all clubs to follow the example of CAB."

Such interest was noted in Student Council last week when a resolution was passed to purchase 12 more urns.

23rd Commencement June 13

Six Faculty Members, Representing 177 Years Of Teaching, To Retire

Six faculty members, totalling 177 years of college or university teaching, are scheduled to retire at the end of this semester.

Four of them—Ruth J. Somers, Drs. Thomas A. Gabbert, Nelson H. Wells and Michael M. Zarchin—have been with the college since it was first established in 1935 as an integral part of the San Francisco Unified School District and housed at both the University of California and Galileo High School.

The other two are Virginia Gohn and Luther H. Lyon, both of the business education department.

Presently, Mrs. Somers is connected with the English department, Gabbert with the foreign language department, Wells with the life science department, and Zarchin with the social science department.

All expressed no regret at having chosen teaching as a career and Zarchin volunteered the comment that if faced with a similar decision today, he would again take teaching as a career.

Asked for a comparison between students of their days and those of today, several of the members avoided an answer.

Gabbert, on the other hand, stated that today's college student "on the whole" is receiving a better rounded education than that gained by today's university students.

"In colleges," he explained, "instructors are more time-experienced, but in universities recent graduates are often employed."

Both summarizing and leaving a word of advice, Mrs. Somers said: "I have enjoyed my 38 teaching years of helping the young discover themselves. Since the things the young must discover for themselves is the same since time immemorial, I do not find any difference between the students of today and the past.

"There are still wonderful things awaiting students to discover for themselves," she stressed.

As for plans after their retirement, all had a common thought: Rest—for a while, anyhow.

Scholastic Ability, Business World Potential Win Annual Wall Street Journal Award For Elizabeth L. Cook

Elizabeth L. Cook, graduating business major, is this year's winner of the Wall Street Journal Award, Edward Larson, business instructor, announced today.

Outstanding for her scholastic ability and potentiality in the business field, Miss Cook "is indeed a worthy recipient of the award," Larson said.

The award, consisting of a silver medal and a year's subscription to the Wall Street Journal, is presented annually to a graduating student who shows the most promise in the field of investment and finance.

"That she is the first woman student from the college in ten years to be awarded this honor makes us especially proud," Larson added, and went on to say, Miss Cook will ably represent the college in whatever field she pursues."

Patterson, Hicks Stress Necessity Of Student Union

By Dave Smith

Accomplishments by this semester's Associated Student officers are highlighted by the plans for cigarette urns at all entrance ways to the buildings.

The Student Council voted Thursday, May 22, to buy 12 urns for the entrance ways. This is considered a major step to aid the present clean-up campaign on the college campus.

Another major step to better the college campus was that this student administration started the ball rolling for a Student Union. A union would aid the campus social life and student government functions, the officers believe. At the recent California Junior College Student Government Association conference in Pasadena, Jack Patterson, Associated Student president, found that 75 per cent of the 62 two-year colleges have student unions and the others are looking into the matter.

"One of the prime faults of our student government is the lack of time spent in office. When all members finally realize what is expected of them they are out of office," Patterson said.

The outgoing president expressed his final views by saying, "I feel that participation in student government is beneficial and educational. The state conference is an invaluable experience and one that I wish all students could attend. This conference would give them a definite insight into student government and some of the worthwhile potential it holds."

Deadline For Sale Of Used Books Announced

All books used during the current semester should be submitted by the end of finals to the Ramporium if students wish and expect to receive a refund for them, Dick Main, manager of the bookstore, announced today. Although the store will be open until August 1 for the benefit of the students enrolled for the summer session, now until Friday, June 13, is the time designated for book sales.

On Wednesday and Thursday, June 11 and 12, discontinued books and those used in previous semesters will also be bought at the Ramporium.

Rauscher Named Commencement Student Speaker

Phillipp Johann Rauscher, Hotel and Restaurant major, has been chosen by a faculty committee of ten to present the student speech at the 23rd annual commencement, according to William E. Culver, English instructor and head of the committee.

Rauscher, selected from five competing speakers, was born in Landau, Germany, and has served two years in the United States Army. Rauscher believes in the "learn while you earn" policy. He works nights at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, where he holds a position of captain of the dining room.

Commenting upon the committee's choice, Rauscher said, "I was as surprised as anyone to learn I had been chosen as the speaker."

He stated that it was an honor to be singled out to speak at the commencement exercises, and he hopes to justify the faith of the faculty members in him. A faculty member will be assigned to aid Rauscher and to answer any questions he may have concerning the writing and delivery of the speech to be presented.

Rauscher's future plans include more study in the administrative end of the hotel and restaurant business. He will, however, continue to work for the Sheraton-Palace Hotel.

Twenty students out of a total of 802 graduates are graduating with honors this year as compared with 35 honor students out of 835 graduates last year, according to William Richardson, faculty sponsor of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society.

Hillsman Slates Dead Week To Begin Monday

With last Monday set as the beginning of dead week, all student activities will cease completely until next semester, according to Raiph O. Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here.

Dead week is held every semester one week before the final examinations start. It was established in the Spring semester of 1955 because prefinals activities held by clubs, fraternities and other on-campus organizations left students without the time that was to be, supposedly, spent in studying.

Graduates To Receive Degrees, Awards From Conlan, Spears In Ceremony At Riordan High

President Louis G. Conlan and Superintendent of Public Schools Harold Spears, will respectively confer 802 Associate in Arts degrees and present awards at the college's 23rd annual commencement exercises, to be held in Riordan High School auditorium, Friday, June 13, at 8 p.m.

Student speaker at the ceremony will be Phillipp Johann Rauscher, chosen over five other students for the role by a faculty committee. Rauscher, a Hotel and Restaurant graduate, was selected for his fluency of style and speaking ability, committee members said.

A major event of the program, which is expected to last about two hours, will be the presentation of the President's Award Plaque to one man and one woman graduating student, who during their enrollment have contributed most to the college. Names of the winners will be withheld until commencement night.

Should either of the winners be absent, the plaque will go to the student next listed on the award list.

Another major award will be the Scholastic Cup, to be awarded to the student gaining the highest grade point average during his enrollment here.

President of the Board of Education, Joseph A. Moore, will extend the greetings, and Coordinator Lloyd D. Luckmann will introduce faculty members and candidates for the degrees.

Music on the program will be provided by the college concert band under the baton of Director Meyer Cahn, and the A Cappella Choir to be led by Robert Morton.

Rehearsal for the exercises is scheduled to take place for candidates, the choir and band early on the afternoon of June 13.

Following the conclusion of the exercise, a reception will be held in the Smith Hall cafeteria for graduates, parents and friends.

A Cappella Choir To Lead Grads In Alma Mater

With only one more performance scheduled for the A Cappella Choir and none for the Men's Glee Club, the music groups are busily preparing for next semester and for commencement. Robert Morton, choir director, said today.

In preparation for the commencement ceremony, the A Cappella Choir will sing some of the same numbers recently heard in a concert here. Also in preparation are some new numbers and practice with the Alma Mater of the college, which is to be sung with the assistance of the graduating class. The other numbers include Greek and Latin hymns as well as Romberg melodies such as Serenade from The Student Prince, and Stouthearted Men.

Officers have already been elected in the Men's Glee Club for next semester and include Ronald Puckett as president, William Forshay as librarian, Terry Jackson as secretary and Bob Tychinin as custodian.

"I have hopes of a larger group next Fall," Morton said, "but the quality of the music offered must not be lowered just so the group can be larger."

Law Scholarships Available To Grads

Law scholarships have been offered to June graduates with high scholastic standing, according to Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction.

Incorporated several years ago as a permanent part of the San Francisco Law School program, the scholarships are designed to help the working individual obtain a profession in law. The school has evening classes only.

Job Office To Be Open In Summer Vacation Period

The college placement center will keep its doors open to graduates, summer session and former students throughout the summer vacation period, Joseph A. Amori, placement director, announced yesterday.

Evidence points to a more activated labor market in July and early August, Amori said. "But no guarantees of employment, even in a relaxed market, exist locally or out-of-town," he added.

Several hundred students will be hired in July for store-wide department store sales weeks. Sales and stock clerks will be needed on a part-time or full-time basis.

Students with typing and/or short-hand skills are sought by San Francisco's expanding government agencies to man their growing activities.

Amori urged persons experiencing difficulties obtaining summer employment to take advantage of the opportunity of benefitting from the college placement service and its high standing in the appraisal of Bay Area business, industry and government departments.

Typing and shorthand tests are given daily in S-187 for the selection of the most apt applicants.

Nick Peters Chosen As 36th Guardsman Editor

Heading an all male editorial staff, Nick Peters, who was Guardsman sports editor in Fall '57 and Spring '58, has been named Editor-in-Chief of The Guardsman for the Fall 1958 semester by the editorial board, according to Pat Metsack, this semester's editor. Peters will be The Guardsman's 36th editor.

Next in line on the journalistic totem pole will be Don Seratti in the position of Managing Editor. Seratti is presently News Editor.

Other members of the new editorial board will include Kevin Mullen, News Editor; George Grasso, Sports Editor; Bob Liu, Feature Editor; and Alberto Salamanca, Staff Editor. Salamanca is presently a cub reporter. William Forshay will occupy the position of Staff Writer.

Summer Class Pre-Reg Takes Place Tomorrow

Any student who still wishes to attend summer session at the college and has not yet pre-registered must do so by tomorrow, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, announced today.

During pre-registration in the registrar's office in the Science Building, students will make out registration booklets and receive confirmation cards, she stated. On Thursday, June 19, students must bring the cards to S-117 in order to receive a certificate of registration. Telephone confirmations will not be accepted, she said.

Students who are enrolling for fall semester, 1958, will register on September 8, 10 and 11, she added. Tuesday, September 9 (Admission Day), will be a holiday and instruction begins on Friday, September 12.

Can De Gaulle Give France Real Stability?

By Don Seratti

TWO political controversies are currently on the front pages of local newspapers and make excellent topics of conversation, but to the person who endeavors to interpret them, they are highly perplexing.

First, we have the question that is on every Frenchman's lips—can Gen. Charles de Gaulle bring political and social stability to France?

Some Americans fear de Gaulle's proposed resurrection on the grounds that he would be difficult to deal with. He is on record as being opposed to the NATO alliance, among other things to which this country is lending its support. Opposition to the General among his fellow countrymen comes primarily from the large number of Communists in France, and from politicians who might have to forfeit their jobs if he takes over.

Despite all this and any other possible opposition, this writer casts an emphatic vote for Gen. de Gaulle and feels that the World War II hero holds in his hand the key to future French political stability.

The salient fact is that regardless of the possible dangers of changing political reins in mid-stream, de Gaulle offers more prospects of a quick and lasting solution than anyone or anything else. He certainly can't be any worse than the present chaotic condition which has seen 24 premiers come and go since the end of the war.

He spurned a high political office when he retired after the war, and although he now virtually controls the nation's armed forces, he has announced that he will assume power only by legal means, thus silencing those who were apprehensive of his imposing a military dictatorship by means of a coup d'etat.

De Gaulle can help France retain the friendship of Algeria and other vital countries through the sheer magic his name holds for both Frenchmen and Moslems in France's embattled colonies.

De Gaulle, with moderate dictatorial powers at his disposal and a constitutional revision effected to insure him unrevested movement, is the man who can, by force of his dynamic energy, bring France out of the turmoil and confusion in which it is now wallowing.

• • •

The second controversy, on a more local level, is the "right to work" law Senator William Knowland is backing in his bid for the governorship of California.

In this Knowland-vs.-Labor issue which affects thousands of workers, this writer is inclined to lean slightly toward labor, with a few qualifications.

If a "right to work" law is passed, workers will no longer be compelled to join a union in order to be employed. This sounds good, but if it comes about, management will be in a position to lay off union members—who can't bargain collectively—and hire non-union men who are not organized in their own behalf.

Management would thus be able to some day hire all non-union men and pay them less in wages than they would be compelled to pay the union members. Carried to an extreme, this could eventually develop into exploitation by management of the workers to the point that they would be forced to organize themselves to obtain fair treatment. Labor unions would be destroyed, then would spring up again to the position of power they currently enjoy.

Ostensibly, Knowland's point is that no worker should be forced to join a union in order to get a job. Theoretically, he has a strong point. If people have the right to vote, speak, and assemble, they should have the right to work. The best way men can oppose the tyrannical leadership and handling of dues of such men as Dave Beck and James Hoffa is by joining them only because they want to. Voluntary membership will force the union officials to be honest in order to retain any members at all.

This is the essence of the argument on each side of the "right to work" debate. In November we'll see how the California voters feel.

Movie Moguls, Get 'Em Ads Outta There

By Ray Hackett

PET PEEVE Department . . . Some time ago when television raised its ugly head, the big brass in Hollywood put theirs together and came up with the idea, "Movies are better than ever."

But it wasn't long before this propaganda wasn't enough to compete with the one-eyed monster, and the movie boys reached a new low. The movies themselves are not the cause of the new low to which Hollywood has sunk. Instead, the cheap ads used by the grey flannel suit boys are the root of the trouble.

Much of the advertising used is not only false but done so stupidly it's an insult to the intelligence of the American public. But ironically enough, many of their most sensational ads repel rather than attract.

One great example of misinformation was presented in a blurb which stated The Long Hot Summer was the hottest book since Peyton Place. The Long Hot Summer was based on a collection of short stories by Nobel Prize winner William Faulkner.

To anyone who has read or attempted to read Faulkner this is an insult. To compare a work of this author to that of a woman who wrote a book which, as one critic nicely wrote, is "clean on page 27," is almost sacrilegious. Also, Mr. Faulkner wrote The Long Hot Summer before Grace Metalius ever started on her masterpiece of sex on the rocks.

It seems as if Hollywood publicity men believe Americans to be sex-deprived men and women. What's that about not judging everyone by your own actions? Most ads depict a curvaceous blonde in a flimsy nightgown sitting on an unmade bed with the caption Eighteen and Anxious. This scene is just in the ad, not in the movie, but this isn't mentioned. This type of ad attracts the comic book trade—but what doesn't?

Ads such as these should repel, not attract; and if it isn't evident why, someone in Hollywood has pretty warped values.

Actually, publicity of this type isn't needed to get the movie-goer back to the theater; all that is needed is good entertainment. This was proved by the late Mike Todd, who produced the greatest money-maker, better than Gone With The Wind, that has ever come out of the "entertainment capital of the world." A little thing called Around The World In Eighty Days, which is still going strong.

All the movie-goer wants is good entertainment. Hollywood might be producing entertaining shows but hides them behind cheap, vulgar advertising campaigns.

Until the front office boys realize that these ads insult the public's intelligence instead of filling the empty shows, they are chasing people by the throngs to the one-eyed monster which Hollywood fears.

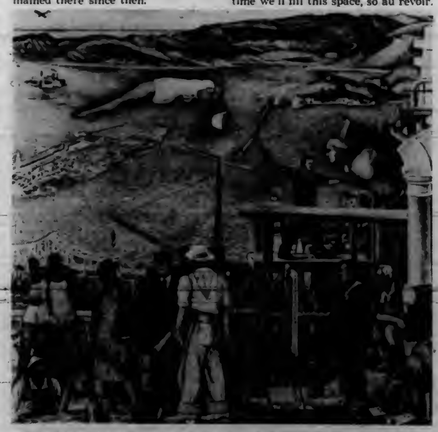
Rivera's Mural To Be Uncovered In Arts Building

The huge Diego Rivera mural, which has been stowed away in an insignificant corner of the men's gymnasium for 16 years, will remain there collecting dust until 1960 when the Arts Building construction is finished.

For 16 years it has been taking up space, packed in crates, and unobserved by the naked eye because there was no room to mount it.

In 1939 the story of how the mural came into being unfolded. Timothy Pflueger, the original architect of this college, became director of the Art In Action program for the second year of the Golden Gate International Exposition in San Francisco.

A fundamental part of this exhibit was a section in which several prominent artists would be at work before audiences, and an invitation to participate in this program was extended to and accepted by Rivera. His undertaking was a tremendous painting depicting Pan-American unity.



Circumstances leading to this college's acquisition of the painting then entered the picture. Dudley Carter, the sculptor who produced the wooden ram now located on the lawn near Smith Hall, was among the numerous artists at work near Rivera during the Fair.

Also present were Fred Olmsted and Herman Volz, who had been commissioned to do the mosaic murals and the heads of Leonardo da Vinci and Thomas Edison which now adorn the exterior of the Science Building here.

Rivera was so impressed by Carter and the ram he was carving that he included them both in his fresco. Paulette Goddard and Charlie Chaplin were among the other persons illustrated in Rivera's gift to posterity.

When the Fair was concluded, and the time came to dispose of the many exhibits that remained on the grounds, Rivera's association with Pflueger, Carter, Olmsted and Volz weighed heavily in his ultimate decision to present his gigantic mural to this college. Later on, a controversy over ownership was brought up by the local press, but the Board of Education ruled in favor of the college.

The painting, which is divided into several sections for carrying purposes, was placed in the small shack adjacent to the men's gymnasium, and has remained there since then.

End Of Semester Welcomed By Fatigued Students And Faculty

THE PROBLEM of survival during these last weeks of school is a difficult one even for the journalist. Getting up in the morning, riding a crowded street car or hunting for a parking place (within a mile of the college), and listening to lectures that have ceased to keep us awake is almost more than most of us can take.

The above symptoms are sure signs of the end of the semester. Now all that remains are a few final exams and some fond farewells to the people we've been working with (and against) during these last months.

If The Guardsman were to make a final gesture for its end of the semester note it would draw up sort of an Honorable Hall of Fame for the now-ending term. First on the Hall of Fame's list would be the names of Jack Patterson, Darlene Enfield, and the rest of the men and women who have kept the college's wheels moving. For the entire semester the ball has been kept rolling by these members of student government and it is prophesied that Freddie Hicks and his new officers will keep up the fast pace set by the "oldsters."

Faculty and administration cannot be left off this list in our honorable Hall for it is they who make it possible for us to learn something; a task that must at times seem hopeless. Furthermore, our counselors must be congratulated for getting us through two years of college. If it weren't for them, students would be tempted to take four periods of PE or something that doesn't require anything but physical presence.

Next on this list will be the names of Mr. Griffin's thespians, Mr. Morton's and Mr. Cahn's music groups, the athletic teams and the coaches, and the members of the various groups on campus. Without these people the college would be a pretty dead place.

Perhaps a special mention should go to the deans. Dean Mary Golding and Dean Ralph Hillsman spend a great deal of their time trying to get us out of tight spots, or figuring out how we got there in the first place. They act as counselors, first aid stations and information bureaus. Such is appreciated.

It is entirely possible that someone's name has been left off this Honorary Hall of Fame list; it is not intentional. Rather it is impossible to take the time and space that would be necessary to thank and mention all those deserving of credit. It only seems proper to say thank you on behalf of the paper and of the college; it seems proper to wish everyone luck, happiness, and good times; it seems proper to end this semester by saying goodbye and wishing to all an extremely happy summer.

Sink Or Swim, Pal; It's Been Fun Trying

By Tom Tatera

Students are rising out of the sea of knowledge for their third and final time. They are weary and washed free of energy, but the instinct of educational survival will enable them to indulge a few last gasps of textbook material before the finals descend like a giant wave, carrying them either to the safety of shore or out past the breakers where they will come face to face with the judgment of military recruitment offices, dreary-gray factories, and the disillusionments of a drab and very mediocre life.

And as these gasping collegians sit behind their stacks of notes, sweating out the fatal third hour in desperate, last minute cramming, they will often pause to relive the semester's activities, much as the drowning man reviews his former life.

The memories they stir up will be sweet, concerned with the never-to-be-forgotten carefree and exuberant side of college life. Concerned with such things as Saturday night dances, and coffee meetings in the cafeteria, and good fellowship throughout the days.

Yours truly, for example, can remember the past four months as the most enjoyable and fun-filled he has ever had, thanks to . . .

THOSE REGULAR EXCURSIONS to the Melody Mill, or "Little Germany," on Ocean Avenue with the "Guardsman" troupe of would-be writers. There the old faithfuls of journalism would meet at 12 daily to joke with each other and cry on the sympathetic shoulders of Fraulein Effie Koch, the waitress who took this tomfoolery in her smiling stride and brushed it off as one of the idiosyncracies of youth.

This writer was proud to consider himself a part of that carefree group.

A VERY CAPABLE and patient faculty staff, such as George Gould, instructor in life science; Joan Nourse, faculty adviser for The "Guardsman" newspaper; Mr. Brix, instructor in Humanities, and others. They take the trouble to gear themselves to the student and meet him at least three-fourths of the way in his search for knowledge, thereby giving him every opportunity in the book to gain that knowledge.

To them, this writer would like to express his personal thanks. Also, regrets that he would not take the time to receive all they were trying to impart.

BUT MOST OF ALL, to the many friends and acquaintances which yours truly has been privileged to make here. People who will live in his memories throughout life, helping to reeall over and over these once-lived and never-to-be-lost pleasures of college life.

So sink or swim, pass or fail; it's been fun!

Rams Win California Track Championship

Ex-Athletes Honnert, Matheny, Landi And Leong Honored With Membership In Hall Of Fame

By Nick Peters

As a result of last week's second annual Hall of Fame voting session, football stars Jerry Landi, Marshall Leong and Jim Honnert, along with cage ace Bob Matheny, were elected to the college's athletic honor society.

To be eligible for election to the coveted organization an athlete must have been out of the college for one year while a coach has to be retired from the ranks for five years.

Basketball star Matheny performed on Hillsman's 1949 Northern California championship five, which compiled a 30-2 record. The guard-forward was named to the NCJC Southern Division first team. He reached his greatest heights, however, when he was an All-PCC selection for California's Bears in 1953-54.

Gridder Landi came to the college as an All-City tackle from Balboa High in 1952. He proceeded to win All-Big Seven Conference tackle honors in 1953. The good looking gridder died of cancer while in the U. S. Army in 1955.

Leong's claim to fame was the fact that he was a member of the 1946 Ram grid eleven, the nation's number one pigskin contingent. The hard-running fullback was a first team NCJC Southern Division selection as a 27-year-old transfer from St. Mary's in '46.

Honnert starred in the backfield for the college in 1940 and despite the fact that he wasn't named to any All-Conference teams, he rates high in the estimation of some of the voting committee's members, who rate him as one of the best backs in the college's grid history.

Ernie Nevers, ex-Stanford grid great, pitching for the defunct St. Louis Browns, allowed Babe Ruth's 8th homer in 1927, the year the Bambino set the major league record at 60.

Bahn Scores 18 As Sigmas Win Intramural Title

By Warren Downes

Led by Ron Bahn's 18 points, Slavic instructor Michael Zarchin's Sigma Tau Sigma honor fraternity won the intramural basketball title by defeating Gamma Phi Ypsilon, 44-36, on May 26 in the men's gymnasium.

Sigma Tau Sigma, champions of the Club Activities Board league, won the game on the boards where they completely overwhelmed their smaller opponents with a front line composed of Doc O'Conner, Mike Lewis and Bahn, all well over six feet. Gamma Phi Ypsilon, outsized by their taller opponents, put on a tremendous fight throughout the game and were paced by Rudy Vasquez, who hit 12 points.

The Gammas, winners of the fraternity loop, were down eight points at half time and this proved to be the margin of defeat as both teams scored 23 points after the intermission.

Tripaldi Belongs On Big 8 All-Star Nine

RAMBLINGS

By Nick Peters

LAST WEEK, while looking over the list of nominees for the 1958 All-Big Eight baseball team as released by Commissioner Russell Azzara, we came to the conclusion that the system used in the conference for selecting the best players has very little merit.

In the first place only two Rams were nominated out of the 36 players on the list. The college's Earl Fauss was one of the eight pitchers singled out. Admittedly, Fauss pitched some good ball for the college, but certainly he cannot and should not be rated above the Rams' hill ace, Freddie Glosser, who, despite poor support from his mates, hurled some excellent baseball. However, we might be a bit selfish in underrating Fauss, as the ex-Sacred Heart star was selected to The Examiner's All-Big Eight second team.

Catcher Johnny May was chosen as one of the league's four best backstops and upon seeing him play we think that he's the best of the quartet. Apparently, The Examiner also expresses confidence in the slugging catcher's ability as it selected the magnificent May as the best catcher in Northern California.

Our main gripe at this year's nominee list is the omission of Ram Roy Tripaldi as one of the league's best shortstops. As a matter of fact four other shortstops were rated ahead of him. It's quite true that the ex-Sacred Heart flash may not be the best at his position, but he undoubtedly is one of the four best. The Examiner seems to agree with us in that it placed "Trip" on the conference second team.

At the end of the season the Big Eight coaches sent the names of the five players who they thought played the best against their respective teams to the league commissioner, who, in turn, printed up the nominee list. How the opposing coaches failed to recognize Tripaldi is beyond us, as the hard-hitting infielder unofficially batted over .400, a top effort in any league.

Certainly the Oakland, Santa Rosa and Modesto coaches should have praised "Trip" for his brilliant stick work against their clubs. In one Oakland game the shortstop batted three-for-three and enjoyed two brilliant afternoon doubleheaders against Santa Rosa and Modesto. In the Bearcub twin-bill he hit six-for-nine and had his best day of the season belting five-for-six against the Pirates in a pair.

If that trio of performances plus the fact that he socked the hide at a .400 clip doesn't merit his being chosen as one of the league's top four shortstops, then the Big Eight All-Star selection methods are bad news and that's an understatement!

With the major league's All-Star game scheduled for Baltimore on July 9 we'd like to predict who will start at each position for the National and American Leagues.

The NL alignment will be composed of Stan Musial (1b), Bill Mazeroski (2b), Ed Mathews (3b), Daryl Spencer of the Giants (ss), Ed Bailey (c), Frank Thomas, who normally plays third, (lf), Giant Willie Mays (cf), and Lee Walls (rf). Pitchers will be Warren Spahn, Robert Friend and Robin Roberts (who is by no means washed up), in that order.

AL starters include Bill Skowron (1b), Nellie Fox (2b), Frank Malzone (3b), Gil McDougald, who used to attend the college, (ss), Yogi Berra (c), Ted Williams (lf), Mickie Mantle (cf), and Bob Cerv (rf). Bob Turley, Jack Harshman, Ned Garver, and Early Wynn, in that order, will handle the mound chores.

Mays, Spencer Merit All-Star Game Berths

Giant Orlando Cepeda, the major league's outstanding rookie, should also make the team, as chosen by the players and coaches for the first time in several years. This new system will go into effect in order to prevent a repeat of last year's farce whereby exuberant Cincinnati fans stuffed the ballots and as a result five of the nine NL starters were scheduled to be Redlegs.

Cincinnati fans cannot be blamed for their enthusiasm over their ball club. After all, if the fans in other cities don't want to vote, so what? But the point is that the old system didn't give a fair representation of the best ball players; so this year's method should really prove to be the best, since baseball players and coaches are the best baseball "experts."

Baseball pennants aren't won in May, but you can't tell it to some psyched up Giant fans. It's rather ridiculous that some local supporters are already sending in requests for World Series ducats. As much as we hate to admit it, the Milwaukee Braves are still the team to beat despite the Giants' two-game lead over the Brewtowners at this writing.

It's within the realm of possibility that the local pros will have a collapse. It's not probable that four rookies could all come through in one season; it has never been done. But then again, the unprecedented could occur and we feel that the Giants may just be the club to do it, but we wouldn't bet on it and unless you're in a state of extreme wealth you'd better not either!

Everyone knows that the Yankees are the only team that ever won a pennant in May and if you don't believe it, look at the standings.

Three Ram Stars Elected To All North State Team

Hard-hitting Johnny May, the Rams' rugged catcher, was named to The Examiner's All-Northern California and All-Big Eight Conference squads, released last week. May joined four other Big Eight players on the All-Northern squad to give the local conference five of the 11 spots on the team.

Modesto placed their big "three" of pitcher Bill Honeycutt, shortstop Bill Inderbitzen, and outfielder Ed Ivy, while Jess Washington, Oakland outfielder, was the other Big Eighter to make the squad.

Other Rams who were honored by The Examiner were shortstop Roy Tripaldi and pitcher Earl Fauss, who both made the All-Big Eight Conference second team.

Ed Costa Sets New State High Jump Mark At 6-7¾, Leading Mates To Victory At Modesto

By George Grasso

Ram trackmen set one state record and four college records as they took an early lead and held it all the way to win the State Junior College Championship by upsetting favored Bakersfield at Modesto last Saturday.

Ed Costa, the college 6-2½ eighteen-year-old high jump star, set a new state record of 6-7¾. In reaching this height, he also broke the college's record of 6-6½ set by Will Gasper. Last year, Costa set the San Francisco prep mark at 6-5.

One of the biggest upsets of the day was pulled off by the Rams' untiring distance runner Paul Patton, as he won the mile run in 4:16.5, a full eight seconds faster than his record here at the college. But this was a day for all-out efforts. After catching his breath, the machine-like Patton entered the two-mile run and turned in a time of 9:34.5 for a third place. This lowers his previous two-mile record by almost a full seven seconds.

The mile relay team ran a 3:17.9 to better the college's record of 3:19.8 and take fourth at Modesto. James Austin started the race with a 50 flat quarter. Don Nasser carried the baton around the second lap in 49.7, and handed off to Myron Zimmerman who completed the third lap in 49.5. James Thomas anchored the team and turned in the fastest time of the quartet—49.2.

Iron man Mike Lewis was a slight surprise as he won the shotput with one of his best heaves of the year—53-9. He also got off a toss of 158-8¾ to take a third in the discus.

Mack Burton broadjumped 24-6¾, which was good enough for a second place in the state meet. The winning jump of 24-10 was set by Jackson of L. A. Harbor.

Will Gasper brought home points from two events. He went over 6-5¾ to take a second in the high jump behind his record breaking teammate, Ed Costa. He then cleared 13-6 in the pole vault to get a tie for third.

James Thomas, the 49-2 anchor man in the mile relay, represented the college in both hurdles. He took a fifth in the 120 highs and a sixth in the 220 lows.

Coach Lou Vasquez, formerly of Washington High School and now head of the Ram track team, pulled in four track titles this year. He received the Big Eight dual meet championship, the Big Eight conference meet championship, the Northern California State championship.

His formula for winning track championships consists of first having the luck to get the talent, and then employing stern training methods to get his team to give a peak performance. The workouts he threw at his team were tough, but if an athlete had any desire to improve himself, Vasquez showed him the way to do it. It was only because each member of the team was in peak condition and turned in top individual performances that they were able to upset the field at Modesto.

The final college scores were: CCSF 70, Bakersfield 64½, San Diego 40, Compton 30½, Sacramento 19, W. Contra Costa 18, Mt. San Antonio 18, Fresno 18, Glendale 18, Santa Monica 16, Sequoias (Visalia) 15½, Modesto 15, L. A. City 11, Taft 10, San Bernardino 10, Santa Ana 8, Pierce 7, Hartnell 7, El Camino 6, Long Beach 4¾, Yuba 4, Riverdale 2, Orange Coast 1, Sierra ¾.

Vasquezmen Take North State Meet By Large Margin

By George Grasso

Ed Costa, Mike Lewis and Mack Burton set three new Northern California meet records as the Ram thinclads rolled up an overwhelming 92¾ points to win the Northern California championship at Santa Rosa last week.

The final tally registered City College 92¾, Sacramento 50, Oakland 36, Modesto 33, College of Sequoias 33, Fresno 32, Hartnell 30¾, West Contra Costa 27, Taft 21, Yuba 12, Santa Rosa 11, East Contra Costa 11, Vallejo 9, Reedley 8¾, San Jose 8, American River 5¾, San Mateo 4, Sierra 3 and Menlo 1¾.

Eight records fell at this meet, three of them being set by Ram trackmen. Burton went 23-2 in the broad-jump to better the old mark of 23-8¾. Costa highjumped 6-5 to surpass the old mark of 6-4½. Lewis tossed the 16-pound shot 52-9¾, the old mark being 51-7½.

Lewis set a new Northern California meet record in the shot put with a toss of 52-9¾ and he set a new college record in the discus at 156-1½. The old Northern California shot put record of 51-7½ was set by Proverb Jacobs of Modesto, who is now a track star at the University of California. The Ram weight star took double honors by winning the discus at 156-1½, topping ex-Ram Jack Egan's mark of 155-11.

Bouncing Costa, the second half of the Ram one-two punch in the high-jump, took a first at Santa Rosa and in doing so set a new Northern California meet record of 6-5. The rangy star came through for the win when his favored teammate Will Gasper, having a bad day, dropped out after 6-2. Gasper, a 6-6½ performer, took third and Marion Page tied for fourth.

Paul Patton met his two favorite opponents at Santa Rosa and placed second to both of them. Rene Rogers of Oakland beat him to the tape in a blistering 4:21 flat mile. In the two-mile he met another old friend, Brian Matravers, who forced Patton to take runner-up honors in the two-mile.

James Thomas made a suitable contribution to the team effort. The swift hurdler took a second in the 220 lows and a third in the 120 highs.

The mile relay team (James Austin, Myron Zimmerman, James Thomas and Don Nasser) staged another battle with their favorite rivals, Sacramento's Panthers, but this week they came out on the short end of the track. Nasser's five-yard lead and 49.8 effort on the anchor lap wasn't enough to hold off a hungry Don Ramos as he ate up the last 440 for a time of 3:20.6. The Rams came in at 3:21.3.

Other Rams to get in the scoring column include Leroy Shields who pulled a sixth out of the shot put, and Gasper with a third in both the high-jump and the pole vault.

Simonian, Ryan Re-elected In RA

Newly elected officers for the Recreation Association include Sandy Simonian, president; Linda Ryan, vice-president; Carol Greenblat, treasurer; Faye Fountain, secretary, and Sheldon Leavitt, historian.

Under the leadership of Miss Simonian, Miss Ryan, Barbara Baxter, Mike Sullivan, Joe Saporita, and all sport managers, the RA has been able to put into effect new activities that have not been tried in past semesters.

Diederichsen Announces Soccer Team Sign-Ups

Sign-ups for the college's soccer squad participating next semester in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference, will take place at the men's gymnasium during the beginning of the Fall 1958 semester, according to Coach Roy Diederichsen.

The team, which placed second last year after tying champion USF and losing to the University of California eleven, will be playing the Dons, the Bears, Santa Clara, Stanford, Cal Aggies, San Francisco State College and San Jose State in next semester's play.

Dr. Polissar To Head Local Committee For New Chem Teachers' Manual And Text

Milton J. Polissar, instructor here, agreed May 23 to head a Bay Area committee to draft plans for a new teachers' manual or textbook for the introductory high school chemistry course. The agreement came following a semi-annual conference of high school and university teachers and representatives of the chemistry industry.

"Despite the high level of activity here in the Bay Area," Polissar stated, "on a nation wide scale, except in large cities, most high school teachers of chemistry are not adequately prepared, either in knowledge or in method of presentation. It will take years to build up a corps of teachers sufficiently prepared for the space age."

Preparation of a book specially written to train high school teachers in the core of fundamental topics may be a partial solution to the teacher training problem, the committee declared. The book is to provide adequate explanations of fundamentals, copious illustrative problems with solutions for the teachers, problems for the students, suggestions for effective methods of presentation of lectures and suggestions for related laboratory experiments.

Polissar was educated at the University of California and received his Ph.D degree in chemistry in 1929. In addition to almost 30 years of teaching, his experience includes two years as an industrial chemist and an assignment to the Manhattan Project at University of California Radiation Laboratory; four years as consultant in biophysics, National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, and four years as consultant in biophysics, National Cancer Institute.

Since 1935 Polissar has been associated with City College. His published works include a book written with Dr. Henry Eyring of the University of Utah, and Dr. Frank H. Johnson of Princeton University, The Kinetic Basis of Molecular Biology, and other texts written for his own courses at the college and for Engineering Extension courses, University of California.

Two Floriculture Students Tie For Eastwood Awards

Frank Salet and Elizabeth Story, two students at the college and both floriculture majors, tied for the $100 Alice Eastwood Floriculture Scholarship and therefore split the award which was presented May 27 in the library during a pre-commencement assembly.

The two winners were chosen from a group of six nominees by the Alice Eastwood Awards Committee, and Helen Abbott, head of the committee of the San Francisco Garden Club, officially made the presentation.

Harry Nelson, horticulture director here, stated that the scholarship, which is presented annually to some deserving student at the college here in honor of the late Bay Area botanist, is decided on the basis of potential contribution to horticulture in the future and to award the most promising student enrolled in floriculture. "It was a difficult decision to make," he added, "since each of the six candidates shows great promise."

Salet, who is intensely interested in plant quarantine and inspection work, gave credit to Nelson for his constant help and assistance.

Mrs. Story mentioned that the Eastwood awards do a great job in stimualting student interest in the field.

Mutt Speaks

If Humans Go To College, Us Dogs Can Do It Too

By John Wellington

He was determined to attend at least one session at City College. The look on his muzzle seemed to ask, "If humans can go to school, why can't I?"

His color was a rusty black. He had no spots and surely he had some noble blood in his veins, mixed of course with other blood. No collar or license adorned his throat. He seemed to be an outcast among other respectable dogs. This may have accounted for his desire to be educated.

He entered the Science Building through the basement door and looked in at the coffee machine. Seeing no one there, he climbed the stairs to the first floor, apparently concerned with finding the registrar's office.

A few minutes later he came bounding back down the stairs with a student in hot pursuit. Out the door and on to the lawn where he paused for a moment in haughty disdain. The student's cry of, "And stay out!" brought only a slight lifting of the nose.

A few moments later he was back, more eager than before to enroll in a class. This time he stayed a little longer, roaming the halls and bringing sounds of laughter from the lips of students.

He left once more, though not as disgracefully as before. He was, however, accompanied by a member of the faculty who seemed to convince him that it would be much better if he enrolled at the University of California.

The directions given to get there seemed a bit harsh at the time, but still, hades can't be that far away.

As he left he turned back for one more look at his almost Alma Mater and seemed to ask, "What's the name of that course that you study bones in?"

Banquets, Outings, Officer Installations Rank High On Post-Finals Social Schedule

By Jerry Redford

CONCLUSION of another semester is at hand, and all that remains are finals, which begin Friday. For most of the organizations on the campus, this is a quiet, dead week, to be climaxed with installation banquets, parties and outings.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held a very successful picnic with Zeta Chi sorority last weekend at Russian River. Plans being made by new president Ron Vierra include many get-togethers during the summer months to keep the group close together, beginning with an installation meeting and party after finals.

Kappa Phi sorority held its installation of new officers at the home of Fran Kistler recently, installing Fran McMurray as president; Billie Needham, vice-president; Judi Connor, recording secretary; Gay Traunson, corresponding secretary; Terry Pederson, treasurer; Carlene Chimenti, pledge mistress; Arlene Crabb, historian, and Ann Quantz, sergeant-at-arms. Awards presented were to Pledge Of The Semester, Ann Quantz, and the Scholarship Award to Audrey Bell. Outgoing President Jackie Wyner received an ivory gavel with ivory pounding block as a token of the sister's appreciation of her work this semester.

Newly elected Vice-President of the Associated Students, Audrey Bell, announced that Social Committee will meet today at 3 p.m. in S-140 to schedule dates for the social calendar. Any organization that intends to schedule an event on the calendar is requested to have a representative present at this meeting.

Phi Beta Delta fraternity officially closed its pledging activities May 30, with a dinner in honor of pledges Nick Bichard, Don Covello, Bill Koerner, Butch Marquardt, Bob Millward, Ed O'Donnell and Jack Roach. Formal pinning ceremonies took place before the dinner.

$500 Advertising Art Scholarship Won By Hopkins

George Hopkins, student of advertising art, has been awarded the Arts Scholarship Award, William J. Eckert, director of the college's advertising art department, disclosed recently.

Hopkins' ability to carry on all the assignments, as well as his attitude toward the job, were heavy factors considered in presenting him with the award, Eckert said. His eligibility for the scholarship was based upon his work in the Public Schools campaign, and also his work in art toward the publicity of the television show, Success Story, about the college's Hotel and Restaurant Department.

The scholarship consists of tuition for a full year at the Association of Advertising Arts in San Francisco. It amounts to approximately $500.

Qualifications required by the San Francisco Association of Advertising Arts for the granting of the scholarship are based on quality of art, the ability of the student to develop into a professional advertising artist and upon the accumulated production of four semesters of art.

"There are two more scholarships to be awarded to the students of advertising art," Eckert added. "These are furnished by the California College of Arts and Crafts."

James Hickey To Be New CAB President

Names of next semester's newly elected Club Activities Board officials were announced today by Adolph Hersvick, retiring president.

James Hickey, now serving on the Rally Committee, will be President.

Ellen Cleary will be Vice-President, Linda Ryan, recording secretary, and Shirley Jones, corresponding secretary.

Bermuda Shorts Won't Help Pass Finals, Gals!

San Francisco has long been known as the city with the world's best-dressed women. In this cosmopolitan city the feminine world takes great delight in wearing the latest fashions and showing a flare for good taste in clothes.

Party dresses, sports wear and campus clothes are all chosen with care, but on campus during exam time, women students seem to completely forget about their appearance and grab the most convenient set of clothes around home and rush off to exams wearing things such as slacks, bermudas, or other sporty garb not acceptable on campus.

Hicks, new Associated Student president, carried out his first duty of the office by appointing Don Smith last week as AS card sales chairman for the college.

Hicks, who was a delegate to the recent CJCSGA conference, intends to keep the ball rolling over the present Student Union issue. "I will do everything I can to have a union built on campus," he said.

For next semester's AS card sale he will try to improve the discount list of the card. "I will also try to get more discounts at local theaters, stores and restaurants," he said.

The car ticket issue which had started this semester did not go into effect. Hicks intends to do what he can to save the college student's carfare by having car tickets available.

In 1735, freedom of the press was recognized in New York by the acquittal of John Peter Zenger, editor of the Weekly Journal, on the charge of libelling British governor, Cosby, by criticizing conduct in court.

An undersea telephone cable system stretching 2,400 miles from California to Hawaii was placed in operation October 8, 1957, by the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. and the Hawaiian Telephone Co.

Insurance Plan Now Available To Students Here

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Beginning this semester, an insurance program protecting students here, as well as those enrolled in other educational institutions of the San Francisco Unified School District against accidental injury or death is offered to all interested parties by Max W. Phillips and Son, licensed San Francisco brokers, according to Dr. Oscar Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management.

The policy, which covers up to $1,000 medical or surgical treatment, hospital confinement and the services of a trained nurse, and dental treatment, is being placed on the carpet at a rate of $2.00 for benefactors from kindergarten through grade eight, with the price being raised an additional 50 cents for policies from junior high school through the college.

Information pamphlets containing the complete story behind the benefits of the Student Welfare Plan were passed out during registration, but, as all students have not yet received a copy of the plan, additional brochures will be available to interested personnel at the regular Guardsman pick-up stands, beginning this Friday.

According to Dr. Anderson, who has spent a good deal of his career in the insurance business, the rate of $2.50, which covers the student from the opening date of the Fall semester to the close of the spring, is excellent and is only made possible by the volume of business available by students in the San Francisco Public School System.

Loss of life, $1,000; both hands, feet, or eyes, $1,000; either hand or foot, or the sight of either eye, $500; thumb and index finger of either hand, $250.

The premium does not cover abdominal hernia, no matter what the cause, bacterial infections, any form of disease, eyeglasses or suicides.

Under the terms of the policy the student is protected against any accidental injury sustained while in actual attendance at the college, one hour prior to his or her first class, and for an equal amount of time following the dismissal of the student's final class.

In addition to the above, policyholders are also covered against injury during campus-sanctioned extra-curricular activities, while traveling to and from said activities, and while participating in either varsity or intramural sports, with the exception of tackle football.

Interested persons are advised to call or write the offices of Max W. Phillips & Son, 2407 Noriega St., LO 4-2030.

Fraternities Set Men's Gym For Tonight's Smoker

Ten of the colleges' on-campus fraternities will present the 11th consecutive Inter - Fraternity Council Smoker tonight from 7:30 to 10 p.m. in the men's gymnasium.

"The smoker is held to attract prospective pledges to meet fraternity representatives and ascertain the achievements and activities of each organization," Terry Chavez, IFC president, stated. "All men students of the college are invited to attend," he added.

While at the smoker sign-up for the different fraternities will take place in the individual fraternity booths.

Special speakers will include Ralph Hilisman, dean of Student Activities; Herb Davis, counselor and fraternity sponsor, and Gene Craft, a two-sport letterman, from the college.

Other entertainment will include a special show staged by each fraternity. A jazz combo, singing, and skits are included. Featured entertainer is George Hamilton, local piano and singing star.

Refreshments including doughnuts, cokes and cigarettes will be given free. Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity has taken the responsibility of arranging the program, Chavez said. Each of the ten fraternity presidents will present a short history of his organization.

The ten fraternities that will be represented in tonight's Smoker are Alpha Kappa Rho, Alpha Phi Omega, Alpha Sigma Delta, Beta Phi Beta, Beta Tau, Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Lambda Phi, Phi Beta Delta, Tau Chi Sigma and Zeta Phi Sigma.

ISC Tea To Start Fall Activities For Sororities

The Inter-Sorority Council will hold a tea for women students who intend to join a sorority this Sunday in Laurel Hall at California and Scott Streets from 2 to 4 p.m., according to Gertrude Norgard, acting Dean of Women.

All women students interested in joining a sorority should sign up this week in S-150, she added, explaining that registration for rushing started last Monday and will continue until this Friday. The registration cost is $1 and students may sign up any time after 8 a.m.

This Friday during college hour, an orientation meeting will be held in S-100, and there students will be informed of future rushing events.

Dean Norgard stated that during the week of October 6-10 each of the eight sororities is scheduled to hold different Firesides in designated individual homes. She added that starting Sunday, October 19, four dinners and three luncheons will be held at homes and rented halls.

Students will officially decide what sorority they want to join at a Coffee Preference Hour, which is to be held in certain homes during the week of October 26.

Other upcoming important ISC events are pledge orientations in S-100 starting October 31, and Pledge Week which will run from November 3 through 7.

First Week Of Card Sales Fall Behind Last Year's By 807

Sales of Associated Student membership cards are not meeting expectations, according to Don Smith, AS card sales chairman.

Exact card sales figures are not yet available, but approximately 1,600 cards were sold by September 25. This compares with 1,672 first-week card sales last semester, and a 2,407 figure a year ago.

Both the Associated Men and Associated Women Student organizations will be striving for a trophy that is presented to the group selling the most AS cards.

Smith stressed that all organizations financed by the Associated Students must have 100 per cent membership in the Associated Students, and those who are able to sustain themselves from their own revenue must have at least a 51 per cent membership belonging to the AS to remain on campus.

Club Activities, Social Life Go Into Full Swing With CAB Day, Dance Set For Friday

Social life and club activities at the college formally move into swing this Friday, Club Activities Board Day, according to Jim Hickey, CAB president.

Clubs participating in CAB Day will have their information booths set up between the Science Building and Cloud Hall during college hour, weather permitting. The booths will be set up in the corridors of Cloud Hall if the weather is bad.

The purpose of the displays is to encourage the new students to join the club or clubs of their choice. "There are more than 30 clubs on campus from which to choose, and social life is an important part of college life," Hickey declared.

Autumn Twilight, the theme of the CAB dance, will take place in Smith Hall from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight the same day. Music will be provided by Steven Paul and his band. The dress to this affair is sport.

Admission to the dance is by Associated Student and registration cards. Without an AS card the admission price is 75 cents and a registration card. Guest bids for non-students may be purchased for $1 with a registration card in S-150. Tickets to the dance can be purchased only at the door to the dance.

The different clubs and organizations will have a poster set up in the dance to remind the new students of their purpose. Hickey reminded students that they may sign up with as many clubs as they choose without obligation.

The Club Activities Board itself is just getting adjusted to the new semester, Hickey added, in describing the present situation of his group.

The CAB, which coordinates the activities and affairs of campus groups, will shift into high gear as soon as the rest of the college's organizations are adjusted.

"We're just getting our legs," was the way Hickey summed up the position of the CAB.

The board holds sway over the existence of every campus group. It reviews all constitutions of new organizations and if it approves them, recommends that the Student Council grant charters of official recognition. It also determines active or inactive status of existing groups.

Alphabetical Plan To Be Used Again In Programming

Applications for appointments for next semester's program planning will be taken in S-160 beginning next Monday, October 6, Waddington Blair of the counseling department stated today. Blair also stressed the desirability of applying for an appointment on the day assigned, according to the schedules listed below.

Students whose names end in N to S inclusive will apply for appointments on Monday, October 6; T to Z inclusive, Tuesday, October 7; A to C inclusive, Wednesday, October 8; D to H inclusive, Thursday, October 9; I to M inclusive, Friday, October 10; and beginning Monday, October 13, anyone may make an appointment.

Students who fail to apply for appointments on the day designated will not be permitted to do so until Monday, October 13, Blair warned. Counseling will begin a few weeks later, but registration numbers will be issued in the order in which students make their appointments in the counselor's office. All members of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, will be given early appointments.

This system was adopted a year ago and has facilitated assigning appointments, saving time for students and counselors, and omitting the necessity of standing in line for hours, Blair stated.

A different arrangement of the alphabet is set up each semester. However, the numbers are equally divided among the five days so that students in one part of the alphabet have no advantage over students in the other part of the alphabet.

Campus-Wide Recruitment Drive On For 500 Men, Women To Place In Part Time Jobs

By Donn Bernstein

Three extensive sales campaigns in the largest department store chains in Northern California caused the college placement center to launch a campus-wide recruitment drive for 500 job-pursuing college men and women, according to Joseph A. Amori, placement director here.

The placement center staff, prior to the opening of college classes, conducted interviews with hundreds of job seekers in search of part time jobs in order to work their way through college. Men outnumbered the women five to one.

However, the need for the sales staffs for the department stores is much greater for women than for men because of the very nature of the work involved. Men are being utilized for heavier tasks, such as stock clerks and delivery boys. Although 100 applicants have been screened and processed, Amori said, there is still need for 200 more, mostly women.

The jobs, Amori emphasized, call for appearance, poise, intelligence, reliability, and a willing attitude to carry out assigned tasks.

Those outstanding in the performance of their duties during the current sales campaign which begins this Saturday will be retained for further part time work and will be added to the huge Christmas sales staffs.

Sales jobs range in pay from $1.25 for the beginner to $1.51 for the experienced hand, an increase over last year.

Students with college schedules which allow for reporting on the job in downtown San Francisco by 1 p.m. daily have the best chance of obtaining employment, Amori explained, although night shifts are available, extending from 5 to 9 p.m. daily and full time on Saturdays.

While the downward trend in the economy during the past year has had a decided negative effect on the job market, there is now a definite upward trend in the employment picture, caused by many factors, such as going back to school, which has led to extensive buying of clothing and school supplies. Defense spending has also stimulated the market, Amori said.

The college placement center has more jobs, both part time and full time, than it can fill, not because of the lack of applicants, but because most of the job applicants are not qualified, measured in terms of the job requirements set forth by the employers.

The services of the placement center are available to all registered students. However, Amori declared, only those who are able to meet the specific job requirements will be referred to jobs, to meet the requirements as set forth by the respective employers.

In addition to jobs and vocational information, the placement center is equipped to perform extensive occupational and job counseling, Amori said.

The placement office is open daily, Monday through Friday, from 10 a.m. to 12 noon and from 2 to 4 p.m.

Enrollment Zips Over 7,000 Mark

Fall semester enrollment figures show that City College of San Francisco has a population greater than the Bay Area city of Atherton. A total of 6,013 daytime students have registered, an increase of 443 over the Fall 1957 figures, or 6 per cent, and exceeding the Fall 1956 daytime figures by 743.

A total of 1,303 has registered for evening classes, a slight increase of 31 over the spring semester, but somewhat less than the fall semester of 1957.

Other figures released by Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, show that a total of 4,176 of all enrolled are men and that 1,837 are women, a ratio of four to one. Miss Learnard noted that there are more women enrolled here now than ever before.

Several hundred of the students enrolled for the fall semester are expected to either drop from college before the semester ends or to take leaves of absence, something that occurs each year with regularity. At least 500 students were turned away from the college because of the bulging population.

Daytime students may also enroll in evening courses provided that they first obtain permission from the Dean of Extended-Day Program, and approval from their counselors.

Statistics indicate that the population of the college has increased by 1,363 students since the fall semester of 1954, or about 32 per cent.

Visual Aids To Present Film On Yacht Racing

History Of The America's Cup Races is the first presentation to be shown in this semester's film series, which will be run each college hour in S-136.

This first film in the series is in color and deals with the story of the yacht races between England and America. The film will have scenes from some of the actual America's cup races.

Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor, will initiate the season this Friday at 10 a.m., and each week after that there will be a 30 to 40 minute picture presented.

AS Membership Advantageous To Active College Students

MANY of us enroll in City College, take a maximum number of units, and enjoy several of its social functions without fully appreciating the fact that our college education is practically free—a phenomenon that mustn't be overlooked in this era of high costs of living.

The only compulsory fee is that which the student spends on books and/or other materials which are needed in his work. This fee, on the average, runs between $25 and $35 per semester. Besides this fee, the student is requested to buy an Associated Student card, the cost being a mere $5.

Several excuses encountered by the college's card salesmen while attempting to persuade students, new and old, to pull out a fin and gain the advantages of AS membership include: "I can't afford it," and "I won't get my money's worth."

In the first place $5 will not usually put that much of a dent in anybody's pocketbook, and secondly, the benefits derived from possessing this card are many and may be enjoyed by ALL City College students.

Card holders may receive discount rates for admission to the Clay and Larkin Theaters, cut prices at several florists, cleaners, gas stations, photo shops, sporting goods firms, haberdasheries, and jewelers, plus a special feature which was acquired by this semester's student leaders—a discount card which will admit one to any Fox Theater production at a reduced rate.

In addition to the aforementioned benefits ownership of an AS card entitles the holder to admission to all City College athletic events and drama productions. Card holders can also gain entrance to any of the college's sponsored dances at a greatly reduced rate.

It should be quite evident by now that for the small amount of money that it takes to become an AS member the privileges one receives in return are quite numerous. It is a wise person who shows his appreciation for a free education by becoming an AS member, because it is HE himself who is the sole beneficiary. Why not get the ball rolling and do our part to help the college as well as enjoying all that it has to offer us—both socially and academically.

New Campus Fashions

Fall Semester Finds Women, Men With Varied Fads, Faces

By J. Edward Bing

Out of the old summer rocker and back once more for another year of learning. At least our trusty almanac informs us that "those days" are here again. The only summery day we saw was last September 10, and vacation-time was a weekend between pre- and post-summer sessions.

Nevertheless, the fall semester opens like none other. There are always new faces on new types of collegiates. The sack is back, but with it this year come the special treats of trapezes, balloons, pointed-toe shoes (the feet are the same), and multi-colored nylon hose.

Men have changed their styles, too. Seems we've left the Davy Crockett and suave black leather jacket era and entered the age of Oregon lumberjacks. Men come in taller and broader frames nowadays with all the Pendleton accessories, work pants, and Paladin mustaches.

Of course some types never change though their faces do. Bobby-soxers plague us again; those who think this college is Lowell High's extension school. Then there are always the incognitos, folks who hide behind brown-tinted glasses on darkest days and in dim-lit classrooms . . . people you never really get to know.

Any stout veteran (perhaps the word "survivor" is more appropriate) of the student cafeteria need not be told enrollment has skyrocketed again. There are fewer chairs than ever before, and apparently more ashtrays have found their way to household bureaus.

The price of books has, of course, increased. This year there are some dillies on sale, from reducing texts to a car repair manual for 1953 Studebakers. Two of our favorites, Life Of The Bee by Maeterlinck, and a Frank book on How To Help Your Child In School. (The Franks have no children—that's how they found time to write the book.)

The "Sputnik" scare has caused some minor readjustment of curriculum and, according to certain powers, a crack-down on grades and class assignments. The Phys Ed dept. is in the act, too. Worried by the large number of anti-social, weekend homeworkers, they've added a "companionship" course this year that steals the show: Coed dancing in the gymnasium (down that-a-way) Monday mornings at 8 o'clock!

SINCE Education has become a public byword, many persons who have long neglected it are suddenly becoming education conscious. Even intellectual snobs are now snubbing other intellectual snobs because they are not intellectual enough.

Dental Love Affair

Former Coed, Hubby Team Up In More Ways Than One

By Pastor Valle-Garay

Twenty years ago Carol Fung and Lawrence Lee didn't know each other. As a matter of fact, one of them wasn't even born at the time. The other was probably walking around in diapers.

Today they are man and wife, a team about to start working as a team.

Both of them have the fulfillment of their dreams come true in more ways than one and the college puts its little grain of sand in the basis of this romance. A dental love affair.

Carol is a former student here who obtained her Associate in Arts degree majoring in Dental Assisting in the spring semester of 1957.

She met Lawrence, or was it Lawrence who met her?—anyway, they met at the UC Dental College where Carol was doing her practice and Lawrence is a Junior Dental student.

They were all smiles, beautiful teeth and a common interest: dentistry. Romance? It didn't wait. Love? Definitely. Wedding bells rang all over the clinic. Marriage talks mixed with studies on the maxillary bones, followed up.

The ceremony took place at the First Presbyterian Church last September 14, and 600 guests attended the couple's banquet.

Among them was Dr. Sidney Epstein, President of the San Francisco Dental Society, for whom Carol works until Lawrence sets up his own shop. Shirley Fong, another of the college's 1957 Dental Assistant graduates, was a bridesmaid.

Lawrence will soon be practicing his profession and then, potential patients, no flirting with the pretty brunette lady in white. She's the doctor's wife. You might be the next in line and, remember, dentists CAN be mean sometimes.

No Fine Paid Here; Daddy's A Big VIP

Memo to the Campus Police department: Paper, time and energy are being wasted. Those tickets "applied" to a Consular Corps car parked smack in front of Science Building every day are not being paid and won't be paid.

The owner is a student here but his daddy's a VIP, a foreign dignitary to San Francisco. Remember Rubiroso and Trujillo? Well, he isn't any of them, but diplomats always have a sneaky way to get away with little things. They don't pay traffic tags here.

Foresight

By Dick Dyer

THE most controversial issue to come out of television in the past few months has been the recent quiz show scandals.

Dotto, the first quiz to become involved, was immediately dropped after a stand-by contestant on the show told his story to the authorities. The contestant, Edward Hilgemeier, Jr., claimed that a woman on the show had been given answers before air-time and that after protesting to the producer, he and another cheated contestant were paid $5,500 in "hush money" to keep quiet. However, shortly after, Hilgemeier made the headlines.

Next in line to be given the once-over was Twenty One. Here Herbert Stempel, another contestant, revealed how he had been coached by producer Dan Enright to put on an act in the isolation booth, how he had been given answers in advance and how he had been forced off the show to make way for Charles Van Doren.

Ehright and co-producer Jack Barry denied most of the charges and in turn submitted their own evidence, a tape conversation on which Stempel supposedly tried to blackmail them. Stempel, on the other hand, claimed that the tape was altered and so on.

What then is the answer? Are the shows fixed? Network officials and producers admit that most quiz shows are "controlled" in some manner, for example, if too much money is given away too early in the program or if the giveaways exceed the allotted budget. Some producers feel that since it's their money they're entitled to spread it around in any manner, even if it results in forcing one contestant off a program in order to capitalize on a new face in the isolation booth.

Nevertheless, the networks have declared that they will scrutinize the quiz shows more carefully to uncover any "irregularities" which may exist. The New York district attorney is examining the matter to find out what law was broken, if any, and even the House committee on legislative oversight in Washington has recently started an investigation.

The only definite conclusion at present is that future quiz programs will have to tread softly lest they encounter foreboding investigation or a vindictive contestant. As Bob Hope put it, "There's been more singing on the quiz shows than on The Hit Parade."

Japan was elected October 1, 1957, to the Security Council of the United Nations, thus becoming the first former enemy of the World War II Allies to win a council seat.

Counterpoint

Appeasement Not Answer In Far East

By Don Seratti

IN THIS country's dealings with Communist aggression since 1945, two contrasting trends of thought have found support among statesmen, journalists, businessmen and others who directly or indirectly control the nation's destiny.

One existing theory is that we must be prepared to show our clenched fists to any potential aggressors to let them know that we genuinely mean to defend all free territory we are committed to. An advocate of this doctrine would say, "We must draw the line somewhere to show the Reds we mean business."

The other idea—probably based on a fervent desire to maintain at least an uncertain peace rather than enter a war—is to appease the potential aggressors in the hope they will be swayed by our good will efforts.

BOTH VIEWS POPULAR

Both of these views have been brought to bear in the crisis involving Communist and Nationalist forces on the China coastline. In the long run, one of the conflicting sides will win out and American foreign policy will be dictated by that faction's beliefs.

The "peace at any price" proponents are only doing what they think best to keep us out of war by saying that we should give the Reds the offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu in hopes they will forget all about Formosa. But when we consider the foe we are coping with, the fulfillment of this policy represents a gross underestimation of the enemy's objectives and would eventually prove more detrimental to this country's cause than a rigid policy of military preparation.

MUNICH REPEATED?

The "peace at any price" theory sounds too much like the words uttered by Chamberlain at Munich in 1938. In 20 short years, can the Western world have forgotten how Chamberlain sanctioned Hitler's seizure of Czechoslovakia, believing the Germani chancellor's desires for further conquests would then be satisfied?

Just as Hitler cast a covetous eye on Poland after subjugating the Czechs, what is to keep the Communists from moving toward Formosa if they are given Quemoy and Matsu? Twenty years have elapsed since Munich, but the people guided by the Communist Manifesto today are no more likely to be appeased than were those whose gospel was Mein Kampf. The Chamberlain appeasement, which should have been a lesson to all statesmen, appears to have been forgotten by some.

FIRM POLICY NEEDED

Lest history repeat itself, the West's policy toward Red China's unprovoked aggression should be one of utmost firmness. Communist activity in the past tells us that they understand nothing but a show of force. Only when we make crystal clear to the Reds that we intend to uphold our objectives to the hilt—whether it be a precarious government as in Lebanon or a border dispute as in Korea—will they realize that we are not bluffing.

In past years when the Communists have successfully infiltrated previously neutral territory by either military means or by subversion, it has been mainly because they felt they had nothing to fear from the West.

In the China crisis, the Reds have already heard a firm warning from the White House that the United States will defend Formosa in the event of aggression. This will in all probability be sufficient to restrict their bellicosity to cannon barrage.

This writer hopes the President's policy of non-appeasement will be emulated by other foes of communism. For while granting these islands to the Reds might appear to satisfy them, it would eventually prove as dangerous as Chamberlain's decision to award Czechoslovakia to Hitler. In dealing with Communists who are as inexorable as Hitler in attaining their ends, one appeasement leads to another and eventually leads to disaster for the free world. The time to draw the line is now.

High Jumper Costa, Miler Patton Lead Teammates To Top United States Marks

The Ram team's nine men placed eighth or better in 11 events in the National Junior College record book for the year. They set one state record and eight college records.

RAMBLINGS

By George Grasso

LAST SPRING, this college put together one of the finest track teams in the history of this institution. They won the Big Eight Dual Meet Championship, the Big Eight Conference Meet Championship, the Northern California Championship, and wound up the season by grabbing the California State Championship.

If there had been a United States Championship, they might very well have won that one, too.

On the night of the State finals at Modesto, the '58 track season saw a storybook ending for the cindermen. Bakersfield was favored for the title, but the Rams were on fire, and many were hitting marks far superior to anything they had done in the regular season. It was a case of great individual effort.

What this all means is that the Rams have set themselves up as the number one two-year college track power in the State, stealing the spotlight from such track-minded schools as Modesto and Mt. San Antonio. It means that when Spring rolls around again all eyes will be on this college and Coach Lou Vasquez to see what the Rams are going to come up with.

And it's a good bet that the Rams are going to enter next season grabbing for those Big Eight titles again. Vasquez is the type coach who demands conscientiousness and hard work, and just isn't happy unless he's winning track meets. He'll refuse to predict a victory over even his easiest opponent, allowing his team's performance to speak for itself.

Returning to what is current, the Ram eleven served notice of their championship intentions by defeating Los Angeles Valley, 19 to 6, in their opener at Kezar.

His pass protection was spotty, but this was due in part to Baikie himself, who stepped out of the pocket and continually jumped away from his line. Still the Ram quarterback came up with an excellent 8 for 11 completions for 60 yards.

Man on the spot was halfback Jerry White. When he plunged over for one touchdown, then came up with a timely interception and a 40-yard gallop for another TD.

But it looks as if the backbone of the team will turn out to be reliable Gene Craft. Craft is the bread and butter type ball carrier who ran, tunneled and crawled for 70 yards in 17 carriers against LA Valley. Stan Glass, while good, was not quite up to his old high school standards in the fullback spot.

Patton, who never ran the mile while attending Poly High, took eight seconds off his college time to place first in the state meet and in the country in 4:16.3. He turned in a 9:34.3 two mile to cop third in the state and fifth in the nation. Patton is still attending the college, and Vasquez says the cross country team will be built around him.

Costa, a Lincoln graduate, set a new state record in the high jump at 6'7¾", This height was also first in the nation for two-year colleges. Coach Vasquez feels that Costa has the ability to go even higher.

Mike Lewis, the college weight-man from Lincoln High, put the shot 53'11" to place second and got off a toss of 158'8½" in the discus to wind up third in the national circuit. Lewis, a sophomore at the college, broke records set here by Jack Egan, now a University of Southern California track star. The big Lewis plans to join Egan at USC.

James Thomas, the anchor man in the mile relay team, placed eighth in the high hurdles at 14.7, and fifth in the low hurdles at 23.3. His first semester at the college Thomas received the most valuable player award. He is now attending San Jose State.

One of Thomas' Washington High trackmates, Mac Burton, an All-American prep football end, pulled through in the broad jump with a leap of 24'7½" to take second in the nation.

Will Gasper, a high school mate of Patton's, went 13'8½" in the pole vault for third and 6'6½" in the high jump to tie for a third in the nation. He was named the most valuable player on the Ram squad for 1958.

The mile relay team composed of James Austin, Don Nasser, Myron Zimmerman and Thomas, ran a 3:17.9 to have the seventh best time in the nation. The relay team also broke the college record of 3:19.8. Austin is the only returning relay leg.

Palo Alto Meet First For Harriers

The Cross Country squad launches its first practice meet tomorrow, when the Rams meet Palo Alto High School on even ground, with little if any knowledge of what the other can do.

The team has been training under the wings of Coach Louis Vasquez at Balboa field. Coach Vasquez, whose squad practices nightly, is not giving any promises; but as to the group's strength in league competition, he stated the thinclads will be a stronger one, as it improves in strength.

Vasquez will probably find Blake Westmen, Paul Patton and Ken Dawdy his star pacers. Patton, at the end of the dual season last year, had the best individual time for the squad. Pulling a 15 minute and 26 second time, he helped the harriers close the unofficial dual meet season without a defeat.

Recreation Association Hosts Members

Under new faculty member and sponsor, Elizabeth Wirth of the women's physical education department, the Recreation Association hosted Bay Area members from other colleges last Friday.

The program was designed to give constructive criticism to the RA constitution, set up plans for the future, and discuss several of the mutual problems facing the association.

Various sports have been active since September 22. Interested students can still sign up for badminton, Monday, 3 p.m.; women's basketball, Tuesday, 3 p.m.; modern dance, Wednesday, 3 p.m.; coed volleyball, Thursday, 3 p.m.; men's basketball, swimming and archery, Friday, college hour; and golf, Friday, 2 p.m. Students can still sign up for all sports in the women's gymnasium.

The greatest number of points totaled in a U.S. football contest was racked up on October 19, 1916, when Georgia Tech murdered a hapless Cumberly eleven, 222-0.

All-Americans To Turn Tide In Cal Soccer Conference

Two All-American players from last year's Ram soccer squad plus nine returning veterans from the same campaign may turn the college's eleven into a powerhouse and a threat to the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference.

Coach Roy Diederichsen would not commit himself to make any predictions about the final outcome of this year's championship yet. He was confident that the team looks as good, if not better, than the 1957 kickers.

The Rams of that year took second place in the conference after losing to the University of California and tying the tenth-time champions USF Dons with a score of 2-2. They defeated the University of Santa Clara, Stanford University, Cal Aggies, San Jose State College, and San Francisco State College.

Back in this year's squad will be Al Morales, All-American fullback, who also was named the team's Most Valuable Player; Ronald Prydz, All-American halfback; Richard Prydz, who won All-Conference honors; Mohammed Ahramian, Robert Livingston, Yusuf Mirza, Gustavo Ortiz, Max Rouzier, George Salazar and the brothers Ailier and Eddie Zelaya.

Block SF Names Baikie President

The Block SF banquet will be held on December 8 to award blocks and other awards to the athletes of the college.

Keyed Up Los Angeles City College Bearcubs Shutout Klemmermen 15 To 0 In Southland Night Tilt

By George Grasso

A pepless, distracted Ram eleven marched on to the Los Angeles City College field and were promptly chewed to pieces by the keyed-up LA Cubs, who opened their season downing San Francisco 15 to 0 at Los Angeles last Friday.

The San Francisco Expeditionary Force played in a daze during the first half, then used up their entire season's allotment of mistakes in the second.

San Francisco opened the game by kicking off to the LA 27, and the Cubs promptly took the ball 73 yards in 11 plays to rack up the first touchdown. The point after failed.

Early in the second quarter, the Rams went through the motions of mounting an offensive. Jerry White, in a great individual effort, sparked the team with a 24-yard gallop. But the drive died on the nine, and LA took over.

In the second half, the Cubs scored like sudden death again. Gene Craft dropped back to within his own end zone to field a punt, and turned to see LA's Jolting Joe Wolmack coming down on him like a Jupiter C. Wolback, an All-WSC halfback, shot in and nailed Craft for the game's single safety.

The final score of the contest came in the fourth quarter, when the Cubs' second string quarterback, Ken Yeakel, passed 10 yards for a touchdown. The point after was good.

The statistics tell the story—the Rams rolled up 156 yards on the ground, compared to 238 for the Cubs. San Francisco had six first downs, to LA's 11. The Rams' first string quarterback Don Baikie could only complete one for six. And two of the Ram fumbles were at key points; one on the Los Angeles 11, and one on the LA 8.

The Cubs turned loose 13 different ball carriers against the Rams, the most devastating of which was Don Armstrong, who gathered in 101 yards in 10 carries.

Injuries ran unusually high in this contest. Most of the Ram players came off the Los Angeles plane limping or nursing a sore arm.

L. C. Shields, who had his ankle injured in the LA Valley game, found himself sidelined when it collapsed on him again against the Cubs. And Jerry White picked up a fresh sprained ankle after only three carries. One player, George Motakides, suddenly became violently ill right after the game.

Although Coach Grover Klemmer was dissatisfied with the game scorewise, he was pleased with the information he received about his second and third string. He spoke of a number of boys who were coming up fast and would be able to help the team.

In two weeks, the Rams tackle West Contra Costa and begin fighting in the Big Eight wars.

White Stars As Rams Defeat L.A. Valley In Opener

By Nick Peters

Showing no hospitality whatsoever, the college's underdog Ram grid contingent, paced by highly touted University of California transfer Jerry White's brilliant running, whipped the Los Angeles Valley Monarchs, 19-6, in the season opener for both clubs under the candles at Kezar on September 19.

The visitors from Van Nuys, rated as favorites stemming from the fact that they had 19 returning lettermen from their 1957 squad, simply couldn't contain the Rams' "new look" backfield.

Timely running by halfbacks White and Gene Craft, who incidentally, broke his ankle and consequently missed the '57 campaign as a result of last year's 31-13 victory over the Monarchs in the Southland, coupled with the steady turf-churning of fullback Stan Glass and the efficient passing of field general Don Baikie proved too much for the Valley eleven, which could only display one offensive threat —a back named Seay.

Veteran halfback Dick Seay ground out 73 yards in 14 carries and was a thorn in the Rams' side all night. The remainder of the Valley backfield produced a total of minus 6 yards, while the fruitless aerial display showed 4 completions in 19 attempts—and it took four quarterbacks to do it!

A good excuse for, this below par showing of the Monarchs can be attributed to the spirited play of the college's linemen, a beefy aggregation led by the lone returning starter from 1957, All-Conference tackle L. C. Shields, who had to sit out part of this one as a result of an injury early in the game.

Newcomer Oscar Donahue was particularly impressive from his defensive end spot. The lanky 6-3 lad was also qb Baikie's prime target on the offensive, being on the receiving end on four of the veteran's eight completions, including a touchdown pass.

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Displaying a seven-handed arsenal that spelled the complete undoing of the Monarchs from LA Valley in the opening Ram grid encounter of the '58 calendar, Grover Klemmer's front wall literally pushed its southern neighbors from one end of the sunset saucer to the other as the locals chalked up a 19-6 conquest of the smog-men in an exhibition thrill-packed from start to finish.

While awe-filled spectators thrilled to the incomparable dashes of Jerry White and Gene Craft, it is probable that few and far between were those who took leave of the arena realizing that without the spirited performance of that beefy line they would have gotten absolutely nowhere.

The most amazing point lies in the fact that six of the seven Valley front line spots were held down by veterans, while L. C. (loud crash) Shields was the sole "up front" lettermen with the Ram delegation.

Led by the tireless play of Shields and 225-pound Pete Morgan, who boasts All-City laurels from Lincoln High, the Klemmermen had the situation in the LA backfield as fouled up as a Chinese fire drill. Paul Dieterhert, a scrappy guard from Bill Felling's Lowell plant, who tips the scales at 230, had Monarch signal barkers running in circles throughout the evening.

'Jerry Ranghaisci, his colleague from the other side of the hitch-rack, tore holes in the Monarch offensive front time and time again, either dragging a would-be broken field runner to his knees, or throwing ice water on a proposed pass play.

On the offensive side of the scene, Horace Spikes and Oscar Donahue, a pair of sticky fingered ends from Washington and Galileo Highs, respectively, spread pandemonium throughout the LA backfield as they churned in, out, around, and through would-be defenders.

Rounding out the Red and White forward wall, center Jim Hickey, a 232-pound stallion from the Riordan stables, put on a bang-up exhibition from start to finish. He should prove an invaluable piece of machinery to the Klemmer forces before the final curtain descends on another grid season and the hardwooders of Sid Phelan step into the spotlight.

Club Cavalcade

Fifty-Seven Organizations Listed Officially On Campus; CAB Day To Kick Off Recruitment Activities

By Kathie Burns

STARTING off the semester's recruitment program for clubs, fraternities and sororities will be the Club Activities Day program this Friday. Displays for CAB Day will be presented in the court, weather permitting, during college hour.

Following are the college's organizations that are officially rated on campus and will be participating in the activities.

Special interest clubs are California Student Teachers Association, Canterbury Club, Chess Club, Chinese Students Club, Christian Science Fellowship, Collegiate Christian Fellowship, Contemporary Jazz Club, Filipino Club, Folk Dancing Group, Hawaiian Club, Hillel Foundation, Home Economics Club, Horticulture Society, International Relations Club, Lutheran Club, Acacia (Masonic), Newman Club, Veterans Association, Wesley Fellowship (Methodist) and the Westminster Student Fellowship (Presbyterian).

Honor groups around the campus are Alpha Gamma Sigma (scholastic honor society), Alpha Phi Omega (men's service fraternity), and Gamma Sigma Sigma (women's service sorority).

Organizations around campus in the professional vein are Broadcasters' Club, Campus Police, Drama Club, Engineering Society, Forum, Hotel & Restaurant, Le Cercle Francais, Merchandising Club, A Cappella Choir, C.C.S.F. Band Association, Men's Glee Club, Pick and Hammer (geology), Ram Cam (photography), Sigma Tau Sigma, and the Women's Treble Clef.

Other newly elected officers on the fraternity scene are Alpha Phi Epsilon's Charles Henderson, president; Roger Carpenter, treasurer; Richard Lee, secretary, and Alan Browning, dean of pledges.

Delta Psi sorority held its third meeting of the semester and is planning a bowling joint with Beta Tau fraternity on September 24.

Zeta Chi, along with the other sororities, are discussing plans for the coming rushing events. At their last meeting, the traditional box of candy was passed by Diana Boone, announcing her engagement.

A new club being organized on campus is the Hiking Club, and anyone interested in joining is invited to the meetings in S-344 during college hour.

The International Relations Club is now holding elections and discussing plans for its coming Fair, October 23.

All clubs wishing to submit news to Club Cavalcade should deliver information to The Guardsman office, S-304, before 12 noon every Wednesday.

Enrollment Hike Adds Pressure To Rule Enforcement

By Terry FitzPatrick

The larger a student body becomes, the more strictly enforced must be the rules and regulations governing them, John J. Brady, co-ordinator, Division of Student Welfare here, declared during an interview in his business office last week.

Students recognize that rules must be obeyed to the letter in certain mathematical formulae, he believes, and City College also has its rules and regulations which must be adhered to for the college to function properly.

Because the college is very much like a city its activities are performed only after careful planning and organization. Its precision can only be maintained by the society that it serves. Brady believes that it is important for a student to respect and abide by the rules that are set forth.

Not only does the administrative department of the college benefit from observing rules, he said, but students as individuals find that the proper discipline, planning, and systematic organization, put into effect now, will greatly improve their study habits in the future.

Students who are absent from a class twice the number of times the class meets each week without an accepted excuse may be dropped from the class with a grade of F for the course, according to the college regulations. If an excuse is accepted, the course must still be dropped but with no grade penalty.

Choir, Glee Club In Need Of Tenor Voices

An extreme need for tenors was emphasized last week by the Choir and Glee Club director, Robert Morton, for his two organizations. Morton explained that he has practically no tenors whatsoever in the Glee Club and in the choir he is short of basses as well as tenors.

Plans are underway now for the annual Christmas program, which will be held Thursday, December 11, and Friday, December 12. The Thursday presentation will be held in the cafeteria, while Friday's performance will be during college hour in the library.

The Glee Club meets Monday, Wednesday and Friday each week from 12 to 1 p.m. in B-6, while the choir meets daily from 1 to 2 p.m. in the same building. One unit is offered for the Glee Club and two units are offered for the choir.

More On Decisive 19-6 Grid Victory

Halfback White, a high school great at Riordan in 1955-56 and an outstanding performer on the 1957 Cal Frosh, definitely lived up to his buildup. Handling the ball only four times during the entire game, he completely stole the show with td jaunts of 12 and 11 yards, plus a pass interception and run of 56 yards—the longest and most spectacular gain of the evening.

Grover Klemmer's Rams started the scoring at 3:10 of the second quarter after recovering Jerry Smith's fumble on the Valley 38. On first down Baikie passed complete to Donahue for 18 yards to the 20. The elusive Craft, who appears not to have lost any of his 1956 running artistry, carried twice to the 12, whereby White skirted the remaining distance around right end for 6-0. The Rams held their six point margin throughout the remainder of the half.

The Red and White marched 65 yards in 16 plays after the second half kickoff to make it a two touchdown edge for the college. The final scoring play came on a pass from Baikie to Donahue from nine yards out. Baikie converted for 13-0.

Valley tallied its lone marker as a result of a bad Baikie boot. The Ram ace found himself on his own 10 in a fourth down situation. His punt, which went off the side of his shoe, travelled only 22 yards to the college's 32. Within eight plays the Monarchs hit paydirt, Seay culminating the drive with a draw from 10 yards out for 13-6.

With three minutes left in the game White intercepted a Valley pass on the Ram 33 and, behind some efficient blocking, raced 56 yards down the left sidelines to the Monarch 11. On the next play he scored a well earned td on a draw through right tackle and that is all she wrote—a satisfying 19-6 victory attributed to spirited team play and capable coaching by Grover Klemmer and his associates, Alex Schwarz and Sid Phelan.

AWS Set Fashion Show, Tea Date; Available Scholarships Listed

End Of First Midterm Deadline For Petitions

Two scholarships valued at $50 each are available to deserving Chinese students each semester, Gertrude Norgard, acting Dean of Women, announced this week.

Letters of application for the Chinese Students Club Scholarships should be filed in the dean's office, S-150. Also the Florence Louis Scholarship is made available by Miss Louis, an alumna of the college. This scholarship is provided each semester for a woman student. All petitions should be addressed to Mrs. Norgard.

The deadline of these two scholarships is the end of the first midterm period. There are also eight other scholarships available for which the application deadline is March 26, 1939.

Another item of importance, Dean Norgard added, is the three matinee operas being held Thursday, October 2; Thursday, October 16, and Wednesday, October 22. Twelve volunteer students are needed for ushering.

Students ushering at these matinees should be present by 1 p.m., she added. Three or four evening operas are also being held per week, and students interested can consult Dean Norgard for any further details.

Asked if she had any changes in mind now that she is acting dean while Mary Golding is on leave, she replied, "Definitely not. I only hope to carry on exactly as Dean Golding has. No on realizes the work and time involved until you are on the inside yourself and can see the tremendous and fine job Dean Golding did."

ACTING Dean of Women Gertrude N. Norgard, sponsor of the AWS Fashion Show and Tea, has also announced scholarship opportunities for students here.

80 Days Theme For November 5 Affair

With Around The World In 80 Days as the theme, the Associated Women Students will give their semi-annual fashion show and tea Wednesday, November 5, at 3 p.m. in the college cafeteria.

Senior high school women from surrounding areas will be special guests at the show. The high schools invited are Abraham Lincoln, Balboa, Galileo, George Washington, Lowell, Mission and Polytechnic. "We want all girls here to feel welcome to come," AWS President Kitty Stein commented.

Sponsor of the event is Gertrude N. Norgard, acting Dean of Women here.

Fashions are being presented by Joseph Magnin.

Police Chief Kern Urges Students To Procure Permits

Any student who has an Associated Student card, his car registration and a driver's license (and a car), should obtain a parking permit in bungalow one this Friday during college hour, Fred Kern, new Campus Police chief, said yesterday.

Kern mentioned that 1,000 permits have been given out to date and urged all students with cars to procure their permits as soon as possible. Last Monday the Campus Police began to issue tickets to any student parking on college grounds without a permit.

Students may park in Area A, which is bounded by Phelan Avenue and Cloud Hall Circle near Smith Hall; Area B, on Ocean Avenue bounded by the athletic field, and Area C, which is bounded by the archery field and men's gymnasium below Cloud Hall. Kern added that students may not park in faculty parking areas, either in Cloud Hall Circle or behind Smith Hall.

With 21 policemen on the job including assistant chiefs Bill Donohue and John Cottle, and a record of 300 citations a week, the Campus Police mean business when it comes to illegal parking.

Guardsman Sets Dates For Vol. 47

Publication dates for the fall semester editions of The Guardsman, the college's weekly newspaper, were adopted at a recent meeting of the Publications Board, according to Nick Peters, Editor-In-Chief of The Guardsman and chairman of the board.

Twelve editions will be published this semester with the possibility of a special election edition in early January.

After today's edition there will be eight consecutive Wednesday publication dates up to November 26. Because of the Thanksgiving break the tenth issue will not be available until December 10, and the long Christmas vacation doesn't permit the two final Guardsman editions to be published until January 14 and 21.

Peters added that any organization wishing to advertising a particular function or social events on posters throughout the college campus must first have those posters approved by him at The Guardsman office, S-304.

Three Man 'Football Committee' Appointed By Student Council To Probe Lack Of Publicity On Games

By Geneva Warner

After a warm discussion about the lack of college spirit here and inadequate publicity for the college, a football committee, so-called "for lack of a better name," was named by Freddie Hicks, Associated Student president, at the sixth meeting of the Student Council.

Gene Craft pointed out that newspapers do not publicize the college's football games enough, to which Nick Peters retorted that the college's Community Relations Committee is doing all it can.

Craft then suggested that spirit should be generated within the student body before trying to generate spirit in the newspapers and public. It was also decided that if the students telephone either the Chronicle or Examiner at GA 1-1112 or SU 1-2424 after a game for the football scores, the papers may feel that the interest shown merits more coverage than is given now.

The committee includes Peters, Craft and Jim Hickey.

Another problem that arose was a proposed amendment to the constitution concerning the voting powers of certain council members. A long discussion followed, and it was decided consideration of the amendment would be postponed until all the council seats are filled.

Plans for the Soph Ball, to be held on January 17 at the Whitcomb Hotel, are now being formulated. George Morf, Sophomore president, added that a possible jazz festival is being considered to raise money for the Sophomore Scholarship.

Both the Dean of Men's budget of $30.75 and the Dean of Women's budget of $25 were passed by the council.

Jerry Hoffman as Rally Commissioner and Gene Bunch as Election Commissioner were approved by the council and sworn in by AS President Hicks. Inter-Sorority Council members were also approved by the council.

Discounts Available To AS Card Holders

Other new discounts listed by Smith for AS members are the $2.50 plan whereby Paul's Union Station on Ocean Avenue gives members $2.50 every time a certain number of holes is punched in their cards, and a ten per cent discount on parts and labor at Lee's Mobile Station.

College Hour Activity Schedule Released

Friday's college hour schedule, changed last semester, will continue with the break falling between the 9 and 10 o'clock classes from 10 to 10:40 a.m., according to Ralph Hillman, dean of Student Activities.

This Friday is CAB Day; October 10, rally and student speakers; October 17, club meetings; October 24, club meetings; October 31, rally; November 7, rally; November 14, club meetings; November 21, no college hour; November 28, holiday; December 5, club meetings; December 12, Christmas Concert; January 2, holiday; January 9, election rally; January 16, Soph-Frosh basketball game, and January 28, start of final examination week, no college hour.

College Band To Play At Games

Under the direction of band director Meyer M. Cahn, an enthusiastic band composed of 25 members will represent the college this semester.

The pep band will play at football games under the direction of Nick Massenkoff. Halftimes will bring on genuine Dixieland music, with James Boggice leading the group.

At the present time the band is practicing various selections before making their final decision on what to play at their annual Christmas Concert. Besides practicing for the concert, another officer, Manager Cliff Cahan, is busy making preparations for the annual band banquet.

Student Director Massenkoff urged anyone capable of playing a musical instrument to participate in the band. The band will make many out of town trips this semester, he said, adding that anyone who does not have an instrument but who would like to be in the band, can be issued an instrument for the entire college year free of charge.

Besides meeting Monday, Wednesday and Friday each week in B-6 from 2 to 3 p.m., the band meets during college hour. Two units are earned by those regularly in the band.

Rams Face Comets In Loop Opener

Shields, White Recovered For Action Against Contra Costa This Friday Afternoon At Kezar

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Kicking off what promises to be another torrid Big Eight Conference grind, a spirited and highly improved delegation of Comets from Contra Costa move into Kezar stadium this Friday at 2:30 p.m. to tangle with a polished piece of Red and White football machinery, in the form of Grover Klemmer's 1958 Rams.

Previewing their wares against a better than average Monarch eleven from Los Angeles Valley in the Stanyan Street arena on September 19, the Phelan Avenue warriors showed an abundance of promise in digging a 19-6 grave for their southern adversaries, while the Richmondites were taking apart an equally talented Yuba mobilization by a 16-8 count.

The ensuing week, however, produced an entirely different outcome as far as the laurels of victory and the humiliation of defeat are concerned.

Traveling to the smog-lands of Los Angeles, the Rams laid their unblemished record on the line against their rivals from Los Angeles City College and returned up the coast with nothing more than a handful of minor injuries to show for the 15-0 drubbing they received at the hands of Steve Pritko's Cubs.

In an equally tragic Peninsula affair which saw their star fullback sidelined for the season with a broken arm, Vince Maiorani's Comets compiled an 8-0 lead over Menlo College, only to have the Oaks bounce back with a pair of tallies in the final three minutes of play to waltz away with a 16-8 verdict.

As in the pro ranks, though, this all becomes past history come Friday, as the Big Eight moves out of the frying pan and into the proverbial fire.

Although the match is considered a toss-up on the part of most authorities, the Comets, who were the "spoilers" of the Big Eight last year, dethroning the Mustangs from Stockton

Arab Desires, Soviet Gains Trouble West

By Don Seratti

ALTHOUGH the many vital issues emanating from the Middle East have taken a back seat to affairs in China during recent weeks, they still remain unsolved and demand as much attention as before they were pushed out of the limelight.

The primary issue, from which all others radiate, is that of Arab independence and unity. Whether Colonel Nasser is merely a demagogue suffering from megalomania or a man dedicated to the unity and well-being of the Arab world matters little at present.

What matters is that under his leadership the Arab countries have subordinated themselves and their resources to the Western powers for the last time, and are now embarking on a drive for independence that could prove of as far-reaching consequences in the world's future as did the Moslem conquests in the 7th century following the death of Mohammed. Arab motives may have changed during 1300 years but their determination has not.

In view of the forcefulness with which the Arabs have pursued their objectives, and since they have time on their side in gaining a position of authority on their own soil, very little doubt remains as to the prospects of their ultimate success. Therefore, it seems that whether the West deems the Arab insurgence good or bad, it has no choice but to recognize it and to make some quick decisions as to how to foster it. And of course, any plan for Western involvement in the seething Middle East must necessarily contain means for countering the Soviet Union's enormous influence in that area.

SOVIET INFLUENCE RISING

While Western influence wanes, that of the Soviets is in the ascendancy. That the Arabs have accepted Soviet assistance with alacrity is not due to Arab diplomatic adroitness. Soviet gains—both ideological and material—are a result primarily of a propaganda system that on the basis of its current success is far superior to anything the Western countries have come up with.

It appears that the widest success the Soviets have enjoyed from their propaganda activities is that while the West has been directly associated with all conflict in the Middle East and has had to send armed troops onto Arab soil in each instance, the Soviets have managed to increase their influence and sway the Arabs in their direction without a single troop movement or act that could be termed "aggression."

RADIO PLAYS BIG ROLE

Radio Cairo and other similar stations throughout the Levant are doing the Soviets' work for them by boosting Soviet prestige and at the same time playing a large role in gathering support among Arab people for the removal of all vestiges of Western "imperialists" in the Middle East.

By concealing their true motives and backing the Arabs in every issue concerning the U. S., Britain and Israel, the Soviets are achieving unparalleled success and can seem to do no wrong. They have become the world's most proficient opportunists.

The recent apogee of Soviet influence raises this dilemma for the West: The attainment of Arab unity may lessen the chances of war between pro-West and pro-Soviet nations, but once the Arabs are unified with Soviet and Western help, whose side will they take? If present indications

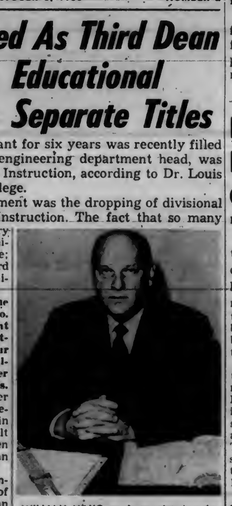
Mayo Appointed As Third Dean Of Instruction; Educational Division Drops Separate Titles

A position that has been vacant for six years was recently filled when William Mayo, former engineering department head, was appointed as the third Dean of Instruction, according to Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college.

Concurrent with the appointment was the dropping of divisional titles for the three Deans of Instruction. The fact that so many courses overlapped made it necessary to drop such titles as Dean of Semi-professional Courses, Louis Batmale; Dean of General Education, Edward Sandys, and Dean of University Parallel Courses, not filled since 1956.



Several factors prompted filling the position and the appointment of Mayo. One of the major factors, President Conlan said, was the desire to "attract more able students to our science courses and upgrade the quality of study;" as well as setting higher standards for students in those fields.

Another factor was that "under present circumstances, with the demand for increased emphasis in science and related subjects, we felt it would be advisable to strengthen our staff in those areas," Dr. Conlan added.

No one in the Department of Instruction has an understanding of science comparable to that of Dean Mayo, it was pointed out. However, the appointment does not indicate any lessening of interest in other courses of instruction in the college.

The point is to handle the problem of "supply and demand" and also to allow those students with the most potential to take advantage of the courses, the President added.

One example of the manner in which this can now be accomplished, he believes, is by the use of special placement tests given by the testing office under the direction of Thomas Nesbitt. Students entering engineering, for example, receive a pre-engineering test which determines to some extent their potential ability in the field of engineering.

No News On GI Benefits Feud

No information pertaining to the current legislative battle being waged in congress over the renewal of the GI Bill has been received at the Veterans Counseling Office, Robin Dunn, veterans counselor here, stated last week.

His office handles only veterans' benefits that are presently in effect. Dunn said he will receive information on the new bill if and when it becomes law.

The bill calling for more educational benefits for servicemen, regardless of whether they served during peacetime or war, was introduced into the House of Representatives a little over a month ago.

The new bill would allow post-Korean War veterans, who saw service for 90 days or more, to begin school training within three years after their discharge.

Friday Football Rally To Be Held At College Hour

A College Hour rally will be held for each football home game this season beginning with the Contra Costa get-together this Friday in the cafeteria or in front of the Red Ram, depending on the weather, Jerry Hoffman, rally commissioner, said yesterday.

Initiating the first rally with some new yells will be Head Cheer Leader Frank Maruyama, and songs girls Roberta Peeters, Shirley Jones, Beverly Olsen, Osa Holme, Vickey Mason, Roberta Kennedy, Vickie Torru, Liz Hoggan, Joan Roggero and Nancy Canning.

The Rally Committee has also made arrangements with the Greyhound Bus Company to charter buses for the Santa Rosa, Stockton and Modesto games. Students taking advantage of this offer will save a total of $6.45 on the three trips, which will cost $1.67, $2.55 and $2.75, respectively.

The buses will leave the student parking lot for the Santa Rosa game at 5:45 p.m., and will return after the game, Hoffman said, but if students wish to participate in after-game activities, arrangements can be made to hold the bus over for a few hours.

Tickets can be purchased in the Associated Student office in B-2 until the Wednesday before each game. Hoffman expressed hope that students will take advantage of this offer.

IFC Wins Plaque In Climax Of AS Card Sales Drive

By Donn Bernstein

Climaxing one of the largest three week Associated Student card sale drives in recent years, Don Smith, AS card sales chairman here, announced last week that there are only 400 more AS cards to be purchased to top the record held by the Fall 1957 semester when a total of 2,525 cards was sold.

During the period September 8 through September 26, AS card salesmen, comprised of students from the Inter-Fraternity Council, Inter-Sorority Council, and Club Activities Board, sold a total of 2,135 cards bringing an asset of more than $10,000 to the AS. These three week figures captured a substantial victory over last semester's sales, which amounted to only 1,938 cards sold.

The sales campaign, competitive in nature, pitted IFC, ISC and CAB members dueling for the plaque awarded to the organization selling the most AS cards. An individual prize, a $25 merchandise order good at any time for use at the student bookstore, is awarded the salesman reigning supreme in individual card sales. In the organization race, the IFC won the plaque by selling 615 cards. Runners-up were the CAB with 375 cards sold, and the ISC selling 358 cards.

The recipient of the prized bookstore merchandise order was Fred Muller, vendor of 271 AS cards. Smith made the presentation to Muller last week at the CAB dance. Runner-up to Muller in the individual contest was Don Nuti, who sold 271 cards.

Proceeds received from the sales are used for the benefit of AS members. Smith stressed that benefits include the operation of the college football team, the band, drama productions, and other budgeted organizations.

Discounts, as prescribed on the reverse side of the cards, are featured as an additional compensation for AS members. Card holders are also entitled to a Fox West Coast theater discount card which enables the bearer to attend all Fox theaters at reasonable rates.

Attached to this movie discount card is a special stub which is a free admission ticket to any Fox theater. These discount cards are available at the student finance office located in Smith Hall. Presentation of an AS card is mandatory in order to receive the movie card.

Smith praised card salesmen, and all persons connected with the drive, in their quest to conquer the Fall 1957 record, and he said that although salesmen have ended the sales campaign, AS cards are obtainable at the college finance office. The price is $5.

Mr. Columbus Goofed — No Holiday

By Pastor Valle-Garay

—A story on HIM?

—Yeap, and make it sound different for a change.

Christopher Columbus, that is. The Admiral, as far as this year is concerned, can very well stay where he belongs, the beatnik side of town.

His glorious date, October 12, will mean very little here to every red-blooded American who, from Alaska to Patagonia, goes for civic celebrations when and if a holiday from work or school is involved.

This year it's no dice. The commemoration of Mr. C's adventure falls on Sunday, therefore no holiday's on schedule for the college. Last year it fell on Saturday and the story was the same.

Spain's and Italy's governmental publicity agents must be raving mad. Why Columbus is liable to be forgotten, and for them this is a rotten deal. (Both nations have a claim on America's finder now. Five hundred years ago, prior to the trip, they just wanted to get rid of him and his crew of Spanish "baddies").

But history has changed the story. Spain's script writers turned American's discovery-by-mistake into an epic, heroic action. Today, with no holiday in schedule, things have changed again.

Columbus goofed. So did the calendar. Next year, however, his day of days will fall on a Monday. Some of us may still be around then, but the way the world is going a bet wouldn't be too recommendable.

Annual Shipwreck Dance To Be Held This Friday Night

Swaying palms and an artificial waterfall will highlight Phi Beta Delta's ninth annual Shipwreck Dance, this Friday night, October 10, in Smith Hall, according to Ed Bolman, fraternity president.

The music for the evening will be presented by The Five, featuring Brew Moore on the saxophone. "The Five played at our last dance and everyone enjoyed them," Bolman said. "They should be more outstanding this year than last," he added.

Appropriate dress for the dance will be shipwreck style, and during intermission there will be a prize given to the couple with the best costume.

Palm trees and four palm tree huts will be placed around the dance floor. An island in the middle and an artificial waterfall in one corner are expected to complete the basic structure of the scenery. Palm leaves, flowers and other decorations will make the dance floor resemble an island.

"The entire student body is invited to attend the event, and an Associated Student or registration card is not needed for admission, Bolman declared. Since the event is a couples affair, no stags will be admitted.

Tickets at $1.50 a couple are on sale at the student bank, at a booth set up in Smith Hall, and from any member of Phi Beta Delta fraternity. Tickets may also be secured at the door on the night of the affair.

The dance will start at 9 p.m. and end at midnight. This dance has been presented annually since the fall semester of 1947.

College Students Urged Not To Neglect Insurance Plans

BEFORE neglecting the newly proposed insurance plan for San Francisco Public School students it would be quite wise to look into the potentialities and advantages of the project.

Cost of the insurance for City College students will be $2.50 per semester—a minute fee in comparison to the benefits one can receive through the Student Welfare Plan.

Benefactors of the plan, offered by the Indemnity Insurance Company of North America and approved by the Board of Education, would be insured against accidents sustained while on college property during regular college hours.

Policy holders would also receive protection while traveling to the campus and while coming from the campus, one hour before regular classes start and one hour after their termination. This includes protection while riding on public transportation, private automobiles, motor scooters and walking.

Students would also be covered while in extra-curricular activities sponsored by the college and while going to or coming from any particular activity. Affairs under this category include outings, field trips and attendance at sports events. One may also be protected while competing in intramural and interscholastic sports, with the exception of tackle football, which has its own insurance arrangements.

The policy will insure holders $1,000 for loss of life, both hands, feet, or eyes; $500 for loss of either hand, foot, or eye; and $250 for loss of thumb and index finger of either hand. The nature of other injuries will determine the monetary settlement in those cases.

Information pamphlets containing the complete story behind the benefits of the Student Welfare Plan were distributed during registration. Naturally most students never even gave them a second thought.

Now, however, we begin to realize the terrific advantage of such a proposal and it's not too late to do something about it!

This insurance cannot be purchased through the college. Interested students are urged to call or write the offices of Max W. Phillips & Son, 2407 Noriega Street, LOmbard 4-2030—the sole distributors of the Student Welfare Plan insurance in San Francisco.

Clean Campus Responsibility Of All

IT'S OUR COLLEGE, yours and mine; let's keep it clean." Perhaps not an original slogan, but a good one to keep in mind while roaming the City College campus.

It seems rather ridiculous that an extensive "clean-up" campaign should have to be called by the college's student leaders—but justifiably so.

Many of us can scoff at this and say, "This is kid stuff; we're no longer in high school," but aren't we acting like kids in letting our campus be littered so as to necessitate such an action?

This clean-up campaign is no great burden on our backs. All that is required is that we pick up after ourselves. Receptacles in which to deposit all our waste materials are plentiful throughout the campus.

Why not assume some responsibility and show our appreciation to the college for the educational opportunity it gives us by keeping its face clean instead of scarring it with waste materials.

Let's act like the mature individuals which we supposedly are and keep City College CLEAN . . . Remember, "It's our college, yours and mine, let's keep it C-L-E-A-N!"

Pre-Med Student Here Wins $1,000 Award In National Baking Contest

By Geneva Warner

A chance interest in a television cooking show paved the way for a student here to win $1,000 in the Pillsbury Baking Contest last month.

GREGORY PATENT, JR. Pre-med is his major hero but baking has proved to be a rather profitable hobby.

A pre-med student of four semesters at the college, Patent is primarily interested in becoming "a good doctor" and confines his interest in cooking to a profitable hobby. (It may prove profitable again next year when he plans to enter, as he is eligible.)

His prize-winning recipe is an original, and Patent stated that he has several others that he has hopes of entering.

Patent and the other 99 contestants were required to bake two batches of their recipes, one for the 11 women judges and one for display. Although each was given enough ingredients for four batches, Patent was experienced enough to meet the requirement with only two.

SIX MORE new shows are scheduled to premiere on television during the coming week. Three are brand new and three are completely revised.

Tonight Bat Masterson and The Milton Berle Show both debut over Channel 4. The former is reportedly authentic and casts Gene Barry as the gentleman gunfighter, complete with cane, derby and six-shooter. The latter finds Milton Berle back in the spotlight with a new type variety show.

For music, mystery and adventure, tune in Channel 7 this Friday night, October 10.

Man With A Camera involves freelance photographer, Charles Bronson, in intrigue and derring-do. As Mike Kovac, ex-World War II combat cameraman, he encounters gangsters, delinquents and the like in New York City.

I 77 Sunset Strip is set in Hollywood and stars Efrem Zimbalist, Jr., as a private detective on the prowl. Regularly an hour show, the series will open with a special 90-minute telecast.

Next Tuesday, October 14, finds George Burns opening his new comedy program on Channel 4. He will appear without Gracie and is to be joined by various guest stars and his son Ronnie.

Sherwood fans: "The Navajo Kid" will now be seen on Channel 7 from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. starting next Monday, October 13. Don's new show will be a one-hour variety program and he will consequently drop his Friday and Tuesday night spots.

• •

The three top shows in San Francisco, according to the latest ratings, are Gunsmoke, Cheyenne and General Electric Theater, respectively. Groucho Marx and Alfred Hitchcock Presents tied for fourth, and Wagon Train placed fifth.

Shots At Ramdom

ONE REASON so many students here are passing out while standing in the chow line and growing old while looking for a place to put a tray once they have the food, may be because OUR cafeteria has been invaded by students from a nearby institution with the initials—San Francisco State College. What is it, State; better food, cheaper prices, or both—or nostalgia?

PEOPLE THESE days have lost the gambling urge. It was not too long ago when fortunes were made and lost by the turn of an investment and the turn of a wheel. In this age of neuroses, inhibitions, feelings of rejection, there is only one answer and Crocker-Anglo Bank has it. The new catch phrase is, "A savings account at Crocker-Anglo helps you feel secure." If this is any indication of an approaching trend, then Heaven help us poor neurotics.

THE EXCITEMENT on the campus lawn last week was caused by the appearance of a tiny (steady girls) fieldmouse that decided to take a short cut across the well-shaped legs of a coed. The coed prefers to remain unnamed.

THE WARDEN of Alcatraz should have realized something was brewing when the "Phantom of the Rock," Aaron Walter Budgett, for a full week prior to his disappearance from the above mentioned "Rock" was heard singing "Don't fence me in," and also the lines from another old favorite that went something like, "Fish got to swim, birds got to fly."

SOMETHING THAT should be brought to the attention of the college authorities is the increasing number of grasshoppers on the campus. Are these self-same insects seeking an education, or is it just that the grass is always greener on the other campus?

Reservoir?

Student Parking Replaces Water

Contrary to popular belief, that masterpiece of construction opposite the campus on Phelan Avenue will not be converted to twin stadiums, Roman type arenas, swimming pools or hydrogen bomb shelters.

At last word, the beautifully designed holes in the ground will still eventually be flooded. The hydrogen—two parts oxygen, will then be placed at the disposal of the people of San Francisco.

A delay in the flooding has benefited the college in that the waterless reservoir will be temporarily utilized as a parking lot for struggling students of both Riordan and the college.

There are a few drawbacks in the use of the reservoir as something other than what it was meant to be. For example, the distance involved may well wear students out before they even have a chance to get to class. Uphill walking is not a popular sport.

Exactly when the lot will start being used is not known at this time.

Can it be just a case of waiting for the little white lines to be drawn between individual parking spaces?

Circus Days

Western's Lure, 'Grown-Up' Kids Harm Big Tops

Circus days have come and gone, and with them, perhaps, the last opportunity for many to view this splendid combination of wit, talent and choreography.

Times have changed since this reporter last attended a circus in lil' ol' Knoxville. In those days, schools were vacated and stores closed, as bannerwaving crowds joined the Ringling Bros. parade along Gay Street. The U. of Tennessee supplied three bands, and professors arranged their week's lesson plans so all could spend a night at the circus.

Nowadays collegiates are too "shipwrecked" or "beat" for circus entertainment. And the troupe itself got no farther than the city limits for six days of poorly-attended performances. Old folks can't miss Gunsmoke, and as for the young 'uns? Well, they're too "grown-up" for that kid stuff anyhow.

Phi Beta Delta has filled Science Halls first-floor showcase with a true blue display promoting a Shipwreck Dance this Friday. Up on three, premeds removed that old skull from their window-box, replacing it with a bunch of flowers. In Memoriam, no doubt.

First week of classes, a coed stopped at the chemistry supply window (2nd floor, Science), mistook the aproned chemist for a soda jerk, and ordered one cup of coffee.

She got it — and the chemist — 10 minutes later in the cafeteria. Coffee and chemistry, sir? You're a man who thinks for himself.

The scooter-set will soon have their two-wheelers tagged by campus cops if illegally parked. The boys have been lenient up-to-now 'cause they couldn't decide where to put the ticket on these wiperless vehicles. Then someone discovered the rubber band. So back to work!

African Safari Goes No Further Than Europe

Mid-East Crisis Stops Lion Hunt

By Lee Anderson

After thousand upon thousands of miles of travel, and a 15-month Sabbatical leave, Helen Huffman has returned to her counseling position here —her experiences during the Sabbatical leave unique, to say the least.

Originally, the trip had been planned as a tour of Africa, with all the excitement of a big game hunt. In preparation for the trip, Mrs. Huffman and her three companions were inoculated for every type of disease. A pin cushion had nothing on them.

As they boarded the ship in New York, they were loaded for bear, rather for lion, with their 15-month supply of clothes, a tent, sleeping bags, stove, ice box, guns, snake bite kit, medical supplies, 5,000 water purification pills and personal articles.

The ship docked in France and the adventurers embarked upon the first stage of their exciting excursion. Pre-arrangements had been made for transportation, via the purchase of a Volkswagen—but naturally the automobile was missing. After three days, and added expense, they located the car.

When they applied for their African visas, they learned that International Affairs momentarily were disrupting their plans . . . a little thing called the Suez crisis . . . so they took a quick tour of Paris, and headed north, passing through Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Sweden and Norway en route to the land of the midnight sun.

Far into the Arctic Circle, they reached the land of perpetual cold, where, in keeping pace with the "never a dull moment" atmosphere of the trip, their car slipped on the icy, narrow road and overturned in a ditch.

Through the usage of native muscles and previous Volkswagen mechanics training, they were able to get the car back on its wheels and running.

Turning south through Finland and neighboring countries, Mrs. Huffman and companions reached Germany and drove through the Russian zone to Berlin. They found West Germany to be a thriving, modernized culture, while East Germany remained in the ruins of war. That part which has been rebuilt centers around Stalin Place.

They were also lucky enough to tour Czechoslovakia, where they found conditions extremely poor. As they drove across Czechoslovakia, they were stopped for numerous road checks and toll fees. Surprisingly, the soldiers would only accept American currency or East German marks.

Comets To Provide Stiff Competition For Klemmermen

by a 20-13 margin, could loom as slight favorites both on the basis of their flashy pre-season showing and their eight to four margin of returning lettermen.

The Klemmer forces, on the other hand, have ideas of their own as far as the clearing of the first hurdle toward the coveted crown is concerned, and a rugged forward wall averaging 207 pounds on the scale, coupled with a flashy "new look" backfield will be all out to upset the Richmond apple cart.

Aside from minor injuries to ball hawking end Oscar Donahue, All-Conference tackle L. C. Shields, and hard running half Jerry White, all of whom have nearly completely recovered during the two weeks of inactivity since the Cub fray, the entire squad is in the proverbial pink.

Mural Cage League To Start October 13

Competition, stressing strong sportsmanship, will be offered in a three-division intramural basketball league starting next Monday, October 13.

Fraternities, clubs and independent teams will form the three divisions vieing for the top championship berth. Winners from each division will play off to decide the final champion.

Deadline for application was set as of last Friday.

Under the jurisdiction this semester of Jack Gaddy, men's physical education director, the teams will compete on Tuesday and Thursday nights. The first game starts at 7 p.m. with games to be played in the gymnasiums.

All players must have an Associated Student card. Basketball lettermen are ineligible for intramural competition, and a team playing with an ineligible player must forfeit the game.

The St. Louis Cardinals boast a record of having never been beaten in a seven game World Series, winning the septet in '26, '31, '34, and '46.

Jerry White Shines In Right Half Position; Top Speed, Elusiveness Make Him Powerful Ram Threat

By Jim Clifford

"Scatback" is a pretty trite adjective on sport pages nowadays, but it's the best word to describe halfback Jerry White, the college's latest running threat.

Two weeks ago, against Los Angeles Valley, White scored twice for the Rams, once on a 40-yard interception return, to lead the college to a 19-7 victory over the visitors. After the Los Angeles clash, local sportswriters tagged White as the "Junior College Player of the Week" and the Ram to watch.

In the season's second game, with Los Angeles City College, he suffered an ankle injury and was sidelined for the entire second half. The Rams lost that one, 15-0. Ram line coach Alex Schwarz observed that had White seen more action the outcome might possibly have been reversed.

Schwarz is as high in his estimation of White as he is in regard to running mate Gene Scott. Schwarz says that both are exceptional halfbacks and are running threats against any team. Schwarz described White as "the best back I've seen in a long time for picking up blockers downfield."

Head coach Forever Klemmer says the key to White's success is his desire to pay. "Football is 90 per cent desire and White has plenty of that."

White had his football start at Riordan High, and there he amassed a long list of grid honors including All-Catholic All-American, All-Catholic Athletic League and All-Metropolitan titles. His off-tackle slants and end runs made him one of the most sought after prep stars in the Bay Area.

Selecting California as the best of the lot, he started there in 1957, but a leg injury dimmed his frosh grid hopes. After recovering he decided to transfer to City College, where he now stands a good chance of adding All-Big Eight to his list of football honors.

San Mateo Bulldogs To Improve Rating

By George Grasso

SAN MATEO'S Bulldogs, the Rams' traditional rivals to the south, have usually finished low on the football totem pole. Last year, they finished on the bottom of the ladder. But the '58 edition of the Bulldogs is this writer's choice to be the most improved team in the Big Eight, coming up from the bottom to the middle or better.

This season, the San Mateans received a bountiful crop of talent, and are offering an all-Capachino backfield. Capachino was the high school which won the N.P.A.L. championship.

At quarterback, they have Cap's Gene Tagliaferri, the 192-pound star who was All-NPAL in '55 and '56, All-Peninsula League '57, and named the most valuable player in the 20-30 East-West game at Kezar.

In the backfield is Jerry Scattini, who starred in the North-South Shrine game in Los Angeles, and was all-PAL and All-North Coast. The two remaining backs are Cap's Bill Cole, All-PAL in '56, and Jim Rodes.

This year's Bulldogs, made up of 55 players, eight of whom are veterans, won their opener defeating San Jose Junior College, last year's Coast Conference Champs, 28 to 26. Scovil gave credit to his line and back Jerry Scattini, who rolled up 175 yards on the ground, and received three passes for 57 more.

Two sets of brothers, both of them of foreign extraction, will bring back to the Ram soccer squad of this year impressive records of their '57 participation in Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference.

They are Roland and Richard Frydz from France, who respectively won All-American and All-Conference honors with the Rams last year, and Ed and Al Zelaya from Nicaragua, who were the college's All-Star and All-Conference choices, in the same year.

A heavy loss to the team will be the absence of Pastor Valle-Garay, former goal keeper for the soccer eleven, who will be ineligible to play this season.

He played ball at San Jose State College and here, thus completing in both centers his eligibility requirements.

Prospective Cagers Meet This Friday

Anyone who has intentions of making this year's team is urged by the veteran mentor, whose forces took runner-up honors in the Big Eight Conference last season, to see him and attend Friday's meeting.

A junior varsity squad will also be representing the college this year, the two teams will officially begin on Saturday, November 1.

Among the several cagers who have already expressed a desire to play are veterans Freddie Williams, Bob Wiseman and John Charoni, plus newcomers Ike McArthur, Vern Coleman, Cleo Coffelt (Washington); John Iles, George Shewl, Bill Simmons, George "Tom" Mik (Poly); Charles Gill, Odis Drucker (Mission); John Thomas, Bob Cranshaw (Balboa); John Stedin, John Cunningham, Fred Glosser (Lincoln); Sylvester Bruce (Galileo); Bob Burton (S. I.); Vince Rocchi (S. H.); Nick Caranica (Lowell), and Dean Prince (South San Francisco).

Al Morales Doubles As Soccer Star, Student Leader; Wins Coach's 'Best Fullback' Tribute

By Pastor Valle-Garay

One of the nation's most versatile soccer players in the college ranks is a student of Graphic Arts here.

His name is Alberto Jose Morales-Escampini, and once in the field he can handle a soccer game with the brilliant ability of a semi-pro kicker and the grace of a band leader.

Better known to his college friends as Al Morales, as Chamba to his teammates and nicknamed Estelito by his close comrades, Morales is this semester's president of the Associated Men Students and presided over Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity last spring.

He was born in Managua, Nicaragua, some year ago. He won't say how many, but he's old enough not to need his ID card, doesn't smoke, attended Commerce High and was in the Air Force four years.

After "serving his time" he enrolled here and soon was joining the college's soccer squad to become one of the main reasons the Rams have been a threat in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference.

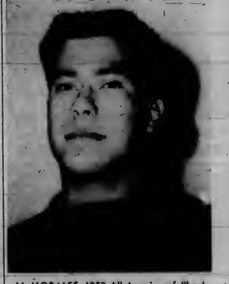
Considered by Coach Roy Diederichsen as the best fullback ever to play for the Red and White eleven, Morales won All-Conference honors and later participated in the All-Star game of his first collegiate soccer season in the NCISC's 1956 championship. The Rams of that year took second place in the league after losing to the eternal champions, the USF Dons, and bravely defeating the California Bears, Stanford University, University of Santa Clara, San Jose State College and San Francisco State College.

Playing the keen position of center fullback, he deserves a lot of credit for these wins and the ones on the following seasons, according to Diederichsen. His calm, good passing and fine distribution of game to his teammates were basic in making the Rams the "team to beat" during those and the forthcoming season.

Last year the Rams again took second place in the NCISC final standing after tying the Dons, losing to the Bears, and defeating the rest of the participating teams, plus the league's newcomer, the Cal Aggies eleven.

That year Morales, at the Block SF banquet in Smith Hall, took home with him everything but the microphone from Diederichsen as he was awarded All-Conference, Most Valuable Player and the NCAA's All-American honors.

He was the team's captain and played in the All-Star game.



That night also, the Latin, for whom the word "work" is supposed to be non-existent in his own dictionary, was also announced as the college's light heavyweight boxing champion of the intramural competition.

He really doesn't work but spends his Saturdays at the Beach Chalet soccer field training with a former star from the college, Jaime Martinez. With Martinez he's teamed up in First Division play for San Francisco teams, and for jazz sessions on Sunday nights at a place named the Tropics, where soccer victories are usually celebrated, even when games are not scheduled.

He did say that some people are mistaken in considering the game a minor sport here; especially in the unique case of City College's varsity kickers, who, being in a two-year institution, are the only players to compete against four-year college and university varsity squads.

Stressing the importance of backing the college's eleven, Morales said, "If in football the students' spirit shows very little, in our soccer games 'spirit' is seen nowhere. The only people who attend them are the referees and Dean Hillsman," he said, referring to the Dean of Student Activities, Ralph O. Hillsman.

Oh! Morales' "measurements" are 5'11" and 180 lbs. Bad for any contest not dealing with soccer or boxing matches.

Soccermen Open Against Broncos

Led by All-American returnees Al Morales and Roland Prydz, the Ram soccer team will meet Santa Clara this Saturday at 10 a.m. at Balboa Stadium in the first conference game of the season.

Diederichsen also stated that USF, California, and Cal Aggies will be very strong, and San Francisco State will also field a strong squad.

In practice games this year the Rams have defeated three of the strongest high school teams in the city. Mission fell twice, 6-5 and 5-1, while Galileo lost 5-2 and Balboa 4-2.

New Balboa Pool Boosts RA Sports

Coed sport has received an extra boost this semester, through the opening of the new $363,000 Balboa Park pool.

Tennis, volleyball, badminton, archery, fencing, social and folk dancing, bowling and modern dance are again available to all sports enthusiasts.

Elizabeth Wirth, Recreation Association adviser, announced last week that plans were being made to form a synchronized swimming team.

Fencing, perhaps the most popular of all the coed spots available, is held on Thursday and Friday afternoons, and it is due to this great enthusiasm shown by students not only at the college, but around the bay area, that regular competitions are held against other colleges and high schools. It is one of the few sports in which women can compete with men, for it is not a matter of strength, but of speed and finesse.

There are more than one hundred breeds of domesticated dogs.

Future models now enrolled here will have to postpone training in their chosen profession for this and next semester unless they attend classes in modeling some place else. Instructors' overcrowded schedules have made it necessary to drop photography 91A and 91B, photographic modeling and model directing.

The few who have been chosen as subjects for the future professional lensmen will receive no college credit for their efforts but will gain a wealth of experience and copies of all photos used, photo department spokesmen pointed out. A portfolio of these has been found useful when seeking future employment as a professional model.

In the past, the modeling courses offered at the college have turned out many successful students, one of whom, Shirley Payton, class of 1957, was recently in the Union Square Fashion Show representing P. G. & E. and Hale's Department Store.

A special course in kodacolor processing and printing is offered this semester, and according to Charles L. Lamp, an instruetor in the course, it is unique in that he knows of no other college in Northern California offering similar instruction.

He believes the future of professional photography lies in this process because of its convenience. Either color or black and white prints and slides may be made from the same film by this process with a minimum of special darkroom equipment.

Another course that is of special interest to the fourth semester photography major is photography 117, photographic work experience. In this course, students are employed by a commercial studio for 10 hours a week and quite often are retained as regular employees upon graduation. Two units are earned as well as a paycheck.

The corridor walls on the third floor of Cloud Hall are decorated with picked exampies of photography students' work. The display is changed every few weeks.

Anderson Backs Clean-Up Campaign

Start of a current Campus Clean-up campaign, which originated in Student Council, was marked last week by Dr. Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management, when he declared that classroom usage should be no problem in this respect.

Dr. Anderson stated that if students respect the campus as they would their own homes, conducting themselves properly, and showing courtesy and refinement at all times, the problem would cease to exist. It is also up to the student body to keep the campus grounds free from debris and paper, he declared.

Hiring people to pick up after students is simply wasting the taxpayer's money, he said. This money can be put to better use, such as purchasing new equipment and supplies for the college. Last semester new cigarette urns were purchased to aid students in a Campus Clean-up Program and to encourage tidiness.

Students are expected to know the civil defense and fire plans of the college, Dr. Anderson added. Instructions stating what to do in case of emergencies are posted in every classroom and on most bulletin boards around campus, he said.

mean anything, the Soviet Union, posing as the champion of Arab independence, is hardly likely to lose ground in the war of ideologies. The West is thus faced with catering to the Arabs' unification efforts and at the same time keeping them on as friendly terms as possible.

Since Arab unification is not to be denied, the challenge it presents can either make or break the free world. In answering the challenge the West must: (1) Recognize, associate itself with and assist Arab desires for independence even if it means licking Nasser's boots; (2) Come up with a crop of its own propaganda experts capable of countering Soviet ideology in that region, boosting Western prestige among Arab people, and convincing the Arabs that the West has no desire for material gains on their territories.

Applications Due Friday For Graduating Students

Students expecting to graduate at the end of this semester are expected to fill out and submit a petition for graduation by this Friday, according to Mary Jane Learnard, college registrar.

Submitting the petition in advance allows the registrar's staff time to review the grades and courses of each student to determine whether he is eligible for graduation and advise the student accordingly, Miss Learnard said, for it is possible that a student may not have enough grade points or units to graduate. Forms are available in the registrar's office in Science Hall.

Club Cavalcade

Rushing Activities To Be Followed By Big Pledge Events

By Kathie Burns

RUSHING activities are the main concern of the sororities and fraternities around campus this week. Firesides and smokers are being held to allow the members of the groups to get acquainted with the prospective pledges.

All Filipino students are invited to attend the Filipino Club meetings every Friday during College Hour in C-220. New officers of this club are Leo Gerardo, president; Gigi Galon, vice-president; Maryann Iglesias, secretary; Rolenda Rio, treasurer, and Pastor Amoroso, sergeant-at-arms.

Members of the Block SF, letter society of the college, will hold their next meeting this Friday during College Hour. During this meeting plans for the making of ash trays out of tin cans will be discussed, along with plans for distribution of them after they are made. Last semester block winners are urged to join the club by signing up with the new president, Don Baikie, or with sponsor Alex Schwarz.

With newly elected officers, the International Relations Club is busy making plans for its "Fair" to be held at Riordan High School on October 31.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity has also been busy with elections and rushing activities. New officers for the fraternity are Fred Miller, president; Loren Parrott, vice-president; Rich Dusell, treasurer; Bob Saivo, custodian; Lou Celli, historian; Niek Leahy, sergeant-at-arms; Davey Crockett, pledge master, and Ed Torres, secretary.

Deadline for club news is 12 noon each Wednesday in The Guardsman office, S-304.

Freshmen To Stage Golden Dream Ball

Golden Dream will be the theme for the Frosh Ball, to be held at the Fairmont Hotel Saturday, October 18, according to Ken Cooke, president of the Freshman Class.

Cooke has picked the Terrace and Vanderbilt rooms to be set aside for the first off-campus college dance scheduled this semester.

All students are invited to dance to the music of the Maury Wolohan orchestra. Admission to the ball is an Associated Student card or $2.50 per coupie. Attire for the affair will be cocktail dresses for the women and suits with ties for the men.

Highlight of the dance is the tradtional cutest couple contest. The winners of the contest will receive trophies awarded by Beta Phi Beta fraternity.

The semi-annual affair will last from 9 p.m. to midnight.

Pre-Program Signup To End This Friday

Programming for next semester started Monday and will continue through this Friday, and those who failed to make an appleation for an appointment on the day assigned according to the schedule published in last week's Guardsman will now have to wait until next Monday, October 13, according to Waddington Blair, of the counseling staff here.

The schedule for the remainder of the week is as follows: Those students having names starting with the initials A to C, inclusive, may apply for an appointment today; D to H, inclusive, tomorrow, and I to M, inclusive, Friday.

Registration numbers are assigned according to the time the appointment is made; thus the earlier the appointment the earlier the registration.

Many topics of interest to students here, such as student government and campus activities, will be discussed at the semi-annual conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association (Northern Region), to be held at Diablo Valley College, Concord, California, Saturday, October 18, according to Freddie Hicks, Associated Student president.

The conference, a once-a-semester affair, will bring together representatives from 18 Northern California two-year colleges, and 18 delegates from this college will participate in the one-day event. Representatives will be divided into various workshops.

Student government, Ken Cooke and Kitty Stein; current problems, Roberta Kennedy; Northern Region constitution, Ad Hersviek and Don Smith; public relations, Lee Anderson and Albert Salamanca; finance, Ann Finneran and Elizabeth Hogan; publications, Niek Peters and Jackie Pera; Veterans' clubs, Diek Alcala and Ben Northrup; athletics, Al Morales and Dick Cottieli; campus activities, Audrey Bell and Terry Chavez; student presidents, Hicks.

All resolutions resulting from workshop discussions will be placed before a general assembly for consideration, and the resolutions passed by that body will be placed on the agenda of the state wide CJCSGA conference to be held later this semester.

Through these meetings, college representatives have the opportunity to exchange ideas, coordinate activities, and solve mutual problems, Hicks said. Delegates from this college will be observing how other two-year institutions are operated, hoping to gain new and advanced ideas to better the college government.

There is no discussion planned regarding the proposed Student Union for the college because, according to Hicks, the conference is not an appropriate place for such a subject.

Council Members Fill Vacant Seats, Get Area At Kezar

By Roy Twitty

Vacant Student Council seats, created when previously elected members resigned or did not return to college, were mostly filled Thursday by action of the council.

One Freshman seat in the council remains to be filled through the disqualification of a nominee because of a low grade average. Students desiring to hold positions as councilmen must have grade point averages of "C" or better.

Kezar Stadium, according to the Rally Committee's Student Council representative, will have an area marked off for members of the Inter-Fraternity and Inter-Sorority Councils, and the Club Activities Board, who will wear white to football games beginning with this Friday's tilt against Contra Costa.

Presentation of a trophy will be made at the end of the season to the organization having the highest percentage attendance. Buses have been chartered, it was announced, to transport rooters to the next three games away. Half the price of a regular fare will be saved by those making use of this convenience.

Finances were again hashed over by the council as Finance Chairman Ann Finneran presented four money requests for approval.

Funds allotted amount to $1,000.00 for the athletes' injury fund, $725.00 for workmen's liability, health, and accident insurance, $150.00 for administration to pay for telephone charges and guest lunches, and $35.00 for the Social Committee.

Waste paper, daily being rained down on the campus by thoughtless students, is becoming a serious problem in the appearance of the grounds and may bring Campus Police action against litterbugs, according to a Student Counell disscussion.

The greatest known depth of any ocean is the Mindanao Deep off the island of Mindanao in the Pacific, where a depth of 35,400 feet has been recorded.

Alumni Dinner Set For Nov. 1

Inaugurating what is hoped will become a tradition, the City College Alumni Association will hold a grand reunion dinner dance on Saturday, November 1.

According to Maury Schwarz, chairman of the executive committee, former Associated Student president and member of the first graduating class, the affair will be held at The Village, 901 Columbus Avenue, from 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. It will be open to both former students and their friends.

A request has been made to Mayor George Christopher to proclaim October 15 as City College day.

Friday Film Shows 25 Years Of US Life

The Significant Years, an historical-documentary film dealing with the men and events of the past 25 years, will be shown this Friday during College Hour in S-136. Its showing will start at 10 a.m. and will run for approximately 40 minutes, Madison Devlin, audio-visual director, said.

Students and faculty members who are interested in United States history, beginning with the depression of the 1930's and ending with present days' space age, are invited to attend the presentation. This is the second film shown by the audio-visual department here during the current semester.

More About Stalled African Safari

territory, the travelers journeyed through Austria, then south to Venice where they stopped to give their African equipment a trial run, and enjoy a holiday.

Again applying for visas to carry out the safari plans, they found that International Affairs were still raging in and around that area and no American tourists were being allowed to enter.

As the changed tour continued, the travelers realized that hopes of getting into Africa would have to be abandoned. Upon this decision, Mrs. Huffman returned home.

In her own words:

"While I learned much from Europe and hope to return as soon as practicable, I came home filled with an awareness of being fiercely American. When my plane landed in a snowbanked, frozen Boston, I had to control an urge to run down the steps from the plane and hug the earth."

Here's What Moonmen Say About Earth

By Don Seratti

EARLIER this month Wladimir Jones, an amateur radio operator and astronomer living atop Mt. Whitney, overheard and recorded some highly unusual sounds which, according to his calculations, could have come only from the Moon. Based on his recordings, the following dialogue is the first of an exclusive series relating what the Moon's inhabitants think of the Earth, past and present.

"Isn't it strange how our ancestors have been able to look in on the Earth with these high-powered telescopes for hundreds of years while the people down there haven't established contact with us yet? And they consider themselves so advanced!"

"Yes, but since I've been able to observe their actions and listen in on their conversations, I think I have the answer. They have never been able to stop quarreling long enough to pool their efforts and scientific findings for the benefit of mankind. It's really quite a place, that planet."

"Always has been that way, hasn't it?"

"Yes. I can remember my grandfather telling me how he used to look in on ancient Rome during his hegemony in the Western world. People in those days often thought it was wise to fight almost aimless wars and to base their power and authority on the weakness of the conquered."

"Of course we are now aware of the utter aimlessness of such hostilities and have avoided war for hundreds of years. But what amazes me is how people on Earth can go on studying history and boasting of their vast knowledge of the past, when in reality they haven't yet found a way to live in peace."

"And until they do, they'll not receive a scintilla of help from us. You know, it is extremely frustrating—our being able to travel to Earth at our discretion but not wanting to because of how repugnant we would find it. They are all very war-conscious now as a result of what they are told by their governments. The Earth has been in a state of war for so long that many people would think it unusual if suddenly peace were achieved, and many diplomats would be out of jobs. We will just have to wait until they make their planet a desirable place in which to live."

"You know, I wouldn't feel safe down there now. What with those frequent bomb tests, the earth is liable to be split asunder at any time. That is, if the radioactivity doesn't kill everyone first."

"Not one power group on Earth is willing to trust the others for a minute. The two most powerful sides publicly blame each other for the Earth's crises and call for a settlement—"

"But they are really continuing their imperialistic policies and striving to win the allegiance of the uncommitted peoples, who see this as a chance to enhance their own economies."

"That's right. Perhaps the solution is the formation of a third power bloc."

"That might prove satisfactory for a while, but it wouldn't keep men on Earth from always wanting more."

"You're right, it wouldn't. But I'd like to see at least a temporary peace achieved. If we could ever be certain that any one faction has no other aim but worldwide peace and has no desire to increase its material possessions, I believe we would lend support to that side."

"What a world!"

"You mean what an Earth! There's much more to the world than the planet we're looking at. But of course they speak of themselves as if they were the whole world. In fact, one group actually calls itself 'the free world.' It's a planet of pretenders."

"No wonder some of the wiser Earthmen would like to leave Earth for something more pleasant. That is probably the real reason why they are building those rocketships and sending them in our direction."

(Next week: The Moonmen discuss varying aspects of life in the United States, including entertainment and advertising.)

Football Spirit Rally To Take Place This Friday

A spirit rally for the Santa Rosa game will be held in the cafeteria during College Hour this Friday, Jerry Hoffman, rally commissioner, announced yesterday.

Head Cheer Leader Frank Maruyama and the song girls will be on hand with some new yells taken from the melodies of popular songs.

Hoffman said that the yell taken from The Yellow Rose Of Texas will be a big attraction at the rally, and urged students to come and get acquainted with the new yells. There will also be a ticket booth in the cafeteria for those who wish to purchase bus tickets for the Santa Rosa game.

The buses will leave the student parking lot for the Santa Rosa game at 5.45 p.m. Saturday. If a group of students wish to participate in afternoon activities, arrangements can be made to hold a bus over for a few hours. Hoffman, considering the good attendance at the last game, expressed hope for a record road-game turnout at Saturday's contest.

The Rally Committee, taking advantage of the terrific spirit displayed at the first game, is making plans for an organized cheering section at all home games this semester. A section of the stands at the 50-yard line will be roped off and groups from the college's organizations are invited to sit in separate sections of the roped off area.

A count will be taken at each game of the number of students in each organization attending, and a trophy will be given out at the end of the semester to the organization which provides the largest attendance throughout the whole season.

Hoffman emphasized that this does not mean that students not with an organization will be excluded from the cheering section. He wants as many students as possible to sit in the cheering section and give the team support.

Plans for the October 31 homecoming rally are beginning to take shape. Hoffman said that the newly organized Rally Committee is very enthusiastic about this rally and is planning to make it the biggest affair this season. Tentative plans include professional entertainment, talent from the college and a big homecoming parade. Anyone with ideas or suggestions concerning the homecoming rally is invited to come to the Rally Committee meetings, which are held on Mondays and Wednesdays between 2 and 3 p.m. in the Hotel and Restaurant office in Smith Hall.

Art Classes Here Design Telecards For TV Education

By Donn Bernstein

Educational-TV authorities from Channel 9 have approached the advertising arts department here and requested that special title cards be produced for use on different educational TV programs, William J. Eckert, department director, announced last week.

The art class has drawn these title cards for use as an introductory feature for each television program. The cards are animated as well as designed and lettered. The programs, as outlined by San Francisco Superintendent of Public Schools Harold Spears, are as follows:

Story Teller, dealing with literature; Discovery, a scientific show; The Governing Factor, a program devoted to local government; and Math Matters, on general mathematics.

Other educational shows slated for Channel 9 viewing include subject matters of astronomy, sewing, and physics. This project is only one of the vast array of commercial art endeavors in which the department partakes, Eckert said.

Art students have also launched a Salvation Army project which will result in billboard posters to be seen throughout California, according to Eckert. Recently 15 students from the department toured the San Francisco headquarters of the Salvation Army. The tour included a series of discussions by Salvation Army public relations officers, and the students were briefed on the objectives and needs of the materials to be used in the posters.

The nature of the billboard displays will involve the recruiting of artieles to be repaired by handicapped people and sold for the benefit of the Salvation Army. The Salvation Army serves those persons whose problems have separated them from their normal place in society.

Following the Salvation Army trip, the art students paid a visit to the firm of Foster and Kleiser, West Coast advertisers. There, the students were given a complete run-down on billboard procedures.

American Registry Recognizes New X-Ray Technician Courses Given To Undergraduates Here

According to Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of Instruction, this will mean that graduates of the X-ray curriculum here, who have also completed 10 months of internship at one of the cooperating hospitals, will now be eligible to take the examination given by the American Registry of X-ray Technicians to become Registered Technicians.

The American Registry of X-ray Technicians is the only certifying body for X-ray technicians which is recognized by the American College of Radiology or the American Medical Association.

Plus the honor received, the significance of this recognition can not be overlooked, Dr. Luckmann said. Originally such technicians, after graduation from high school, went directly into hospitals for their training. Now, because of the many advancements that have been made in the medical field, the medical profession believes that these technicians need a broad, basic education with emphasis placed upon science.

According to the medical profession, a higher education will give the technician the versatility and ability he will need in order to keep up with new advances continually being made.

The X-ray curriculum consists of four semesters of college work, including practical hospital experience, and 10 months of internship at one of the cooperating hospitals. The cooperating hospitals in San Francisco are Children's Hospital, Franklin Hospital, Mt. Zion Hospital, St. Joseph's Hospital, St. Luke's Hospital, St. Mary's Hospital, and the Veterans' Administration Hospital.

At present there are 44 students enrolled in the major, five of whom are receiving practical training at the cooperating hospitals. Four students were working this summer at the hospitals and, according to Dr. Luckmann, received very good reports from the radiologists.

There are X-ray programs at three or four other two-year colleges in California, but the program here, established in 1937, is unique in that a course is offered during the second semester in order to prepare students for the practical experience courses which may partially be completed during the summer. Thus, the students here are introduced to practical training very early in the curriculum.

Eventually it is expected that the college will graduate 15 students in the X-ray Technology per year. Fifteen is all the cooperating hospitals can accommodate in the practical courses.

All X-day Technology majors are required to take an aptitude test in S-136, on Friday, October 24, at 1:10 p.m.

Students who are seriously considering changing their majors to X-ray should also take the test and should go as soon as possible to William Hoskins' office, S-237, to fill out an application form.

Although the aptitude test was designed by the United States Employment Service to measure aptitude of prospective students for X-ray training, it requires no knowledge of X-ray. The test will take one hour, Hoskins said.

Friday's Film Reveals Glass Through The Ages

The Nature Of Glass is scheduled for the college film series this Friday during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., in S-136. The film, made by the Corning Glass Company, shows glass through the ages, from the time when man first discovered glass to the present day where glass is being used for research and industry, according to Madison Devlin, audio-visual director. The film will also show the composition of glass for various purposes and its importance.

Cutest Couple To Highlight Frosh Dance Saturday

With Golden Dream as its theme, the Frosh Ball will be held at the Fairmont Hotel this Saturday night, October 18, according to Ken Cooke, president of the Freshman Class.

The Terrace and Vanderbilt Rooms have been picked to set the scene for the first off-campus college dance. All students are invited to dance to the music of the Maury Wolohan orchestra. Admission to the ball is an Associated Student card or $2.50 per couple.

The Cutest Couple contest, a standard highlight of the past Frosh Balls, will again be the featured event of the evening. The prize for the cutest couple will go to the twosome showing the best dancing ability and look the best together.

Individual trophies, donated by Beta Phi Beta fraternity, will be awarded to the couple. The lady will receive flowers donated by Alpha Phi-Epsilon fraternity. Those who wish to participate in the contest can sign up at the entrance to the dance. Judges will be composed of faculty members, Cooke said.

"The dance is open to the entire student body, the Freshman Class is just conducting it. Students shouldn't feel that the Freshman Class is the only group invited," he added.

The semi-annual affair will last from 9 p.m. to midnight. Dress will be semi-formal; suits and ties for the men and cocktail dresses for the women.

Cooke is being assisted in staging the ball by the other officers of the class. They are Secretary Clair Frankel, Treasurer Len Slater, and Vice-President Sue Shawl, who is in charge of the Cutest Couple contest.

Applications Due For Scholarships

Students wishing to apply for the two scholarships available this semester must apply immediately after the first midterm period ending this Friday, according to Gertrude Norgard, acting dean of women.

The only two scholarships available this fall are the Chinese Club scholarship for $50, and the $50 Florence Louis scholarship.

The scholarship offered by the Chinese Club is for any man or woman student, not necessarily Chinese. The Florence Louis scholarship is for women who have completed 15 units with at least a "C" average. Both scholarships are awarded on a need, character, and leadership basis.

The deadline for application for all other scholarships is March 26, 1959.

All scholarships are awarded at a pre-graduation assembly and applications may be obtained from Miss Norgard in S-150.

Three Departments Add New Courses

Five new courses have been added to three departments this semester, according to Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction.

In psychology, Adolph G. Stoll will be teaching a new course called the psychology of learning.

James B. Runner will introduce microscope and photography, and the microscope into the life science courses.

In the business department, secretarial machine transcription and a new real estate course will be added to Glenn H. Mereer's courses.

According to Louis F. Batmale, dean of instruction, some new advertising bulletins concerning the college's more outstanding courses have been published this year. This literature ineludes training for such courses as Advertising Art, Dental Assisting, Civil Engineering and Technology, and will be placed in high schools throughout the city for the benefit of the high school students.

College Spirit Must Develop Now, Last Throughout Season

DESPITE the fact that City College's 1957 football team shared the Big Eight Conference championship, it was let down by a student body which failed to show its appreciation to a team whose efforts merited the best support that a college of this size could provide.

Last year, during mid-season, The Guardsman urged City College students to back their top-caliber grid outfit; however, this appeal came too late in the season, and the small increase in attendance at the last few games was not nearly enough to compensate for the team's season-long quest for a championship.

This year, if past trends are indicative, the college's highly talented grid eleven will probably again perform before a minimum number of student spectators.

NOW is the time for student interest to develop, NOT at mid-season. The TEAM expresses spirit throughout the entire season, so there is no reason why each of US, in turn, can't give our all by attending the grid encounters. Admission to home games is free with an Associated Student card.

Take it from the team's standpoint; the players don't enjoy looking at the stands and witnessing only the college band, song girls, faculty, parents and a handful of loyal students. An added lift is given to the team when it plays to a full audience of exuberant student spectators.

If students cannot attend most of the games, they should at least make a great attempt at witnessing home games played on Fridays a 2 p.m. For those interested in making the road trips, transportation will be provided by the college, under the direction of the Rally Committee, at a nominal fee. These road jaunts will begin with this Saturday's Santa Rosa game. Buses will leave the student parking lot Saturday at 5:45 p.m. and return after the game. This first trip will cost $1.67, and two other trips will be made for the duration of the season, one to Stockton and one to Modesto. This transportation has been arranged for the convenience of those interested in attending the games.

For a team most deserving, we hope all students build the spirit, through loyal attendance, which is so vitally needed to assist the footballers in their hopes for a successful season.

We'll see you at the games!

Locked Doors Face Early Birds In Science Hall's Pre-Programming Lines

By Albert Salamanca

"You get a yellow sheet, fill it and stand in the line."

These were the first words that students, trying to make an appointment for programming, heard in the morning of October 6.

But these were not the only days when waiting students stood in a long line on the first floor of Science Hall in order to get a program planning sheet to be presented to their counselors in a near future.

Timely Reminder

Learning Upheld By Huge Mosaics

Eighteen years ago, artist Herman Volz gave the finishing touch to a couple of large mosaics, located on each end of the college's Science Hall, and thus impressed there for generations to come the importance of the study of science.

At present, as never before, scientific experiments and approaches are the cause of constant discussion by all those who desire to make of this world a greater, safer place to live.

The college, one can be sure, has not been caught off-baiance in this scientific campaign, and the mosaics are doing their part in emphasizing the importance of this campaign.

They measure 42 feet by 52 feet and can be seen on the north and south walls of Science Hall.

Although they do not represent any definite person or persons in the fields of science or invention, the mosaics deal mainly with the influence of youth and education on those subjects.

The mosaic on the north side of the building represents the interaction of science, while the one on the south represents the interaction of mechanics.

Youthful Dreams Become Realities As STOP Tour Gets Go Sign To Europe

By Geneva Warner

Enchantment, adventure, excitement, laughter, and even a few tears were experienced by a group of young Americans on tour as the luxurious Empress of Britain docked in Liverpool.

Europe, a dream come true, was finally here.

The STOP, Student Travel Overseas Program, tour was a three-month summer vacation of travel on the continent. It originated in San Francisco, even though its members were from both the West and East coasts, and it included both university students and young teachers.

There were 38 altogether, including the young, fun-loving tour leader and his wife. With 31 women and only 5 men, the trip promised to be an interesting one. It was!

England was the first stop. One hears so much about the mother country and now, one was to become acquainted with its terrible weather, tasteless food, and cold, reserved people.

But it also displayed Stratford-on-Avon with its memorable performance of Romeo and Juliet at the Shakespeare Memorial Theater, Oxford with its well-known universities, Windsor with its elaborate castle, and London with its magnificient crown jewels and the stately halls where America's way of life was born: this is what will be remembered in years to come.

France followed, with a visit to "Gay Paree." Here the group climbed the Eiffel Tower, took a boat trip down the Seine, spent an evening at the Folies Bergere, and stopped for a snack at a small sidewalk cafe.

We'll remember SHAPE, where the tour had its first and only American food; Versailles, where everyone decided "refreshments" were more desirable than sightseeing; Nice with its miles of Mediterranean beaches, where midnight swims and beach parties were the pastimes of the tour. And we'll also remember the signs saying, "Yankees go home!" — not many, but they were there.

On to Italy with its gracious and warm people, its incredibly rich artistic treasures, its ancient history and modern progress, and its terrific shopping boys. We'll recall how we asked for milk and had to drink wine, how the hotel manager in Rome disliked us just because we parked bikes in his hotel lobby, how we walked for an hour trying to find a Pizzeria in Florence, and how many hammer and sickle signs we saw throughout Italy.

Switzerland was a miniature land like a scenic calendar, each page more beautiful than the last. Here we met and talked with Swiss students, who enjoyed our humor but thought of us as "crazy Americans." Here five of the tour boarded the wrong train, and it took them five hours to catch up with the rest of us.

Next the tour headed for Austria, the Salzburg Festival, the best shopping buys in Europe, and the gorgeous scenery.

We continued on to Germany (party-time again) where we found more American soldiers than Germans; on to the happy gathering at the Hofbrauhaus in Munich, with steins raised high and everybody singing; on to the preserved medieval town of Rothenburg; on to the university city of Heidelberg; on to East Berlin and back to the hammer and sickle signs, back to signs saying, "Americans, get out of Lebanon," back to where you're ordered not to take pictures of Russian soldiers and East Germans. This, to many on the tour, was the highlight of the trip.

We hurried through the Scandinavian countries — Norway, Sweden and Denmark—where both the food and the people were magnificent.

Holland brought to life the wooden shoes, the canals and the flower auctions.

The new World's Fair in an Old World setting is what we found at Brussels. The huge and elaborate French Pavilion was so unorganized that we walked in one door and out the other. At the Russian Pavilion we were faced with a tremendous marble statue of Lenin, and the communist guides continually handed to the public pamphlets containing propaganda.

The American Pavilion became our "hangout," not only because it exhibited everything that can be seen in America, but also because of the wonderful sight of a hot dog stand. To most of us, the smaller pavilions, such as the British Isles, the Belgium Congo, and The Netherlands, put over their way of life as well, if not better, than the three larger ones.

Our last country to visit in Europe was Scotland with its charming Scots. The Military Tattoo during the Edinburg Festival was a fabulous sight, but when it was finally realized that our own United States Marines were performing, everyone got glassy-eyed, and the first signs of homesickness appeared.

Back to Liverpool to board the Empress of France, and we said a tearful farewell to Europe and its people, but knew we had the memories that would last a lifetime.

So sad to leave the continent—but so glad to be heading home.

Weary Of It All?

Fort Ord Offers Outdoor Classes, Early Breakfast

By J. Edward Bing

Bored with the dull routine of classes and fraternity meetings? A golden opportunity awaits collegiates at Fort Ord, California, and take it from this writer that it does exist!

All a student must do is apply for a three-year scholarship at the Geary Blvd. U. S. Army Recruiting office. The only qualifications are that the applicant is male and has a certain intelligence rating. That's all! Uncle Sam takes care of the rest.

There are a lot of eligible males in Monterey who were formerly sweating it out at the college. Actually the "Fort" is just a southern extension of the "Hill."

The schedule will be carefully planned for the student upon arrival at no extra cost. Marching 1A, Drill 35, and KP G20 offer practical training in the warm out-of-doors. No French in drafty Science 204 or Economics in stuffy Cloud Hall. The Student Center there is not as modern as Smith Hall, but offers relaxation during those restful hours.

To provide uniformity, all students at Fort Ord have 8 o'clock classes and finish at 5:00. Frequently there are evening classes, just like at the college. Sound good? That's not all! Breakfast is served free of charge bright and early each morning.

The climate in Monterey is ideal. Nothing like San Francisco. Ford Ord is nestled in the heart of artichoke land. No hills to climb, no fog. Ideal for golf at nearby Pebble Beach.

Fraternity meetings are held Mondays in the mess halls scattered about. The Alpha Phi E's have the kitchen area, the Gammas congregate in the dining rooms, and the AKE's get the garbage pails. The Tau's have money for a fraternity house, but officials can't seem to conceive such a plan.

Each Saturday, Fort Ord holds a "Shipwreck" dance at the Service Club. The Delta Psi's (nicknamed the WAC's down there) entertain the men in various ways. Five theaters provide the latest movies currently popular at the Esquire in downtown SF.

Classes are the greatest at Ord. No flickering fluorescents to glare in the eyes, no cramped seats or squeaky chalk boards to distract one's attention. Practical training puts the student to work. Just a breath of that dusty air, a few rolls in the mud, a command to double-time for three miles, and the course enrollee stays wide awake.

Groups interested in learning more about this new way of living are urged to write for full particulars. Address all inquiries to: "College for Nothing," Recruitment Dept., 6820 Geary.

Pamphlets and folders will arrive shortly by return mail, followed by a man in green and pen in hand. Short of cash? Need money, or a change of environment? Join up with the ORD-way gang!

Foresight — Students Offered TV Educational Series

By Dick Dyer

TWO educational programs, Sunrise Semester and Continental Classroom, have recently made their debut on television, and they offer early-bird students a series of courses in modern fiction and atomic physics either for college credit or pure enjoyment.

Channel 5's Sunrise Semester, which runs Monday through Friday from 6:30 to 7 a.m., presents such courses as Classical Civilization H1, a history and literature course; English H5, a "great books" series; Mathematics N1, an introductory course, and Government S1, a study of American governmental theory and practice.

Comparative Literature 10, the first semester course, includes fiction from Dickens to Hemingway, Dr. Floyd Zulli, Jr., assistant professor of Romance Languages and Literature at New York University, will be the instructor.

Next week, Dr. Zulli will discuss The Pickwick Papers, by Charles Dickens, Future novels to be discussed include Moby Dick, Madame Bovary, The Brothers Karamazov, Main Street and The Sun Also Rises.

This educational series, which received wide acclaim in the East, was taped in New York and sent to KPIX.

Continental Classroom, also daily at the same time on Channel 4, presents courses in atomic physics. Dr. Harvey E. White, professor of physics at the University of California, will be the instructor.

Three units of college credit will be given by correspondence. If any student is interested and has completed high school algebra and plane geometry, he should write to University of California Extension Division, Correspondence Department, Berkeley 4. The fee is $25 for residents and $30 for out-of-staters. This applies to Continental Classroom only.

Catching up with the quiz shows—James Snodgrass, a former contestant on Twenty One, recently told a New York grand jury that he received advance answers from producers Jack Barry and Dan Enright when competing against Hank Bloomgarten. Snodgrass also submitted several sealed letters which he said contained the answers to the questions he was asked on the show.

It is reported that if these charges are upheld, NBC will drop Twenty One and all other Barry-Enright quiz shows. This would involve a cancelation of some four million dollars worth of programs.

Pursuit, and MacKenzie's Raiders, two more new shows, are scheduled to premiere this week over Channel 5.

Pursuit, a one hour mystery show with a different star each week, starts tonight with Sal Mineo in The Vengeance. The storyline follows a simple pattern: someone always get chased.

All American Prydz Paces Soccer Win Over Broncos; Rams Play Gators Saturday

By Pastor Valle-Garay

It'll be Ram booters against San Francisco State Gators as the college's eleven tries for a second win in the 1958 Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference this Saturday at 10 a.m. in State's field.

Last year the Rams defeated State 4-1. More recently though, last Saturday, the college had its NCISC's "baptism of fire" and came through with a convincing, 4-0 victory over the University of Santa Clara squad.

Santa Clara, who seemed to have no better team than last year's, when the Rams defeated them in their own field to the tune of 9-3, came up with a surprisingly strong, if inexperienced, defensive line which kept the Rams from scoring during three quarters of last Saturday's action.

Actually it took the college 10 golden minutes in the game's starting quarter to beat the Broncos, as the home team did all its scoring during that time.

Less than a minute after the whistle sent the teams to action, Richard Prydz, the college's All-American center forward, blasted the visitors' net for the first Ram goal. Another minute and the squad's captain, inside left George Salazar, extended the count to two with another well-connected shot the Broncos' goalie couldn't stop.

No sooner had he done that when Prydz, again playing brilliant ball, dodged through and past the universitarians' defensive line to score twice in a row with what eventually marked all of the day's points for either team.

It also took a great labor on the part of the Bronco goalie, Foster, to save the visitors from a clobbering equal to last year's at the powerful, but sometimes misdirected, boots of the college kickers. The Rams fired a total of 48 shots at Foster's well-kept post, succeeded four times and missed a few by a mile while the Ram defensive men limited the visitors' scoring attempts to only eight luckless shots at the Rams' goalkeeper, Art Fisher, throughout the contest.

The Rams played almost-perfect hosts to the Santa Clarans. Since the visiting team's uniform didn't arrive before game time (c'mon, boys, who's got 'em?) they had to wear the college's other outfit, which is as far as friendship went.

Minutes after, manners aside, the college's eleven, not scared of playing against the red colors of their own uniforms, tallied four consecutive times on their guests from Santa Clara to clinch the NCISC opener.

Both teams remain friends, though.

RAMBLINGS

By George Grasso

THERE'S trouble afoot with Jerry White's ankle—it's not healing quickly enough. The star halfback, whose ankle was injured in the Los Angeles City College game, is having a time of it getting over his ailment. As a halfback, the constant turning and cutting in practice doesn't do him any good.

As long as his condition prevails, heavy responsibility falls on the shoulders of hard working Mel Sims. Another candidate for White's position is George Molakides. Should Molakides prove himself at practice, he could quite possibly become the number two man behind White.

Rumblings are going on in the soccer team. It seems the players object to buying their own insurance before they can play, especially when the football team has its policy paid for by the college. It's not the money, it's the principle of the thing.

• •

Winging their way down South a few weeks back, the football team started such a large card game in the rear that the plane flew to Los Angeles at a 45 degree angle.

Donahue dropped an easy ace of hearts, and the coach pulled him out of the game.

Baikie, mixing his singles up perfectly, shifted his team to the nose of the plane, and the pilot missed the Salinas City Hall by four feet.

The team wouldn't allow Pete Morgan to play unless he wore a short-sleeved shirt. Morgan, who spells his name M-A-V-E-R-I-C-K, has a 58-card deck and will travel.

Simonian Heads RA Council Here

Recreation Association activities start this semester with an eight-member council composed of Sandy Simonian, president; Linda Ryan, vice-president; Faye Fountain, secretary; Carol Greenblat, treasurer; Joe Saporita, historian; Florence Lynch, delegate-at-large, and Chuck Zanardi and Lucy West, election commissioners.

The remainder of the RA council will be decided when the election of individual team managers takes place. Activities include coed women's teams and men's teams.

Cross Country Men Prepare For Meets

Running the National Collegiate Athletic Association freshman distance of three miles for cross country, Paul Patton, Ken Dawdy and Blake Westman will attempt to lead the college's team to All-Northern California laurels at the Northern California Championships, November 22.

State junior college mile champion Patton received the most valuable competitor trophy for the Ram cross country team last season.

In building stamina for their final burst of energy, the Rams will compete in the San Jose Invitational on November 14, and the Sacramento Invitational on November 18.

Dual meets and body builders will be held against Modesto, Vallejo, Sacramento and Diablo Valley Colleges. The Rams do not compete in a conference in cross country.

Klemmermen Take On Santa Rosa's Bearcubs Saturday

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Boasting some of the highest spirit in many a Ram grid season, Grover Klemmer's Red and White charges head for the North bay this Saturday to tangle with Bill Archer's Santa Rosa crew in the hope of sewing up another victory toward a repeat performance of last year's championship drive.

This one, however, promises to be no cake walk, as the Bear Cubs, who share the coveted Big Eight grid crown with the Rams, boast six returning veterans from last year's hard-hitting delegation, and will be all out to drop the locals a notch down the ladder and grab the conference laurels for their own trophy case.

A versatile performer, speedster Jerry Brown, whose sticky fingers proved to be the death of the Vallejo and Diablo Valley outfits, who fell victims to the Santa Rosa machinery by 8-6 and 34-22 counts, respectively, is at the left end position.

The Bear Cubs should indeed prove themselves not only a rugged threat to Ram domesticity, but a sharp clan of contenders to repeat as Big Eight dictators as well.

The Rams, on the other hand, aside from the fact that L. C. Shields is their only "top flight" veteran, have added a fast and flashy "new look" backfield to seven of the most rough and ready linemen in the circuit, and should prove themselves superior to their North Bay rivals by from anywhere from six to eight points.

Highlighting the Red and White push will be halfback Gene Craft, whose four speeds forward broken field running in the three Ram outings thus far have proved to be one of the better highlights of these shows, as well as the quick opener spurts of hard-running Jerry White and the up the middle driving of fullback Stan Glass.

Shooting for the aerial yardage will be the formidable team of ball-hawking ends Horace Spikes and Oscar Donahue hauling in the deadly tosses of signal caller Don Baikie, which have figured tremendously in the comparative success of the Klemmermen thus far.

Providing the Ram backs measure up to their usual flashy performances, and with a better than average forward wall to open up those all-important holes in the enemy front line, the locals should prove themselves too much for their northern neighbors, and in all probability will return south bearing the coveted laurels of victory.

Glancing back at the annals of last year's crucial, the Red and White dynamos literally kicked the Cubs out of sole domination of the final Big Eight standings via a hard fought 20-12 dumping at Kezar, the final result of which resulted in a four-way championship tie between Stockton, Modesto, Santa Rosa and the Rams.

Baikie, Craft, Donahue Lead Rams In Come-From-Behind Triumph Over Contra Costa

By Nick Peters

Staging a brilliant come-from-behind effort, with quarterback Don Baikie, end Oscar Donahue and halfback Gene Craft in the lead roles, the college's Ram footballers successfully launched their 1958 Big Eight Conference campaign by posting an exciting 26-12 win over Contra Costa's Comets at Kezar last Friday.

Credit, however, cannot only be given to the offensive; so it should be pointed out that the Ram line of L. C. Shields & Company was at its best.

Contra Costa started out as if it was to be their day. On the second play of the game with the Comets in possession on their own 45, qb Tom Kinnard faded back to his 40 and threw over center to end Ed Whittle, who caught the pass on the Ram 45 and raced the remaining distance to paydirt and 6-0. Kinnard's conversion pass was broken up.

After an exchange of punts the visitors got their second scoring chance and they took advantage of it. On a first down play Baikie fumbled the ball on his own 31 and the Comets recovered. Six plays and two first downs later the boys from Richmond, with workhorse halfback Bob Ross, who gained 66 yards, doing the majority of damage, were on the Ram nine, first and goal to go. And they went.

A holding penalty put the ball back on the 18. This, however, didn't seem to bother the cool Kinnard, who passed to halfback Charles Petino for 12-0 and the Comet bench was jubilant. Little did they know that they wouldn't set another foot in the end zone for the remaining 47½ minutes of play.

After realizing that spotting their rivals 12 points was a bad show, the Rams got tough. Their offense started clicking, their line molded into an impenetratable wall and within three plays after the kickoff Klemmer's men scratched the scoreboard.

Craft, who was at his craftiest in this scoring match, took the boot on his own 16 and zigged-zagged to the 37. On third down Baikie threw a flat pass to Craft back on the 37 and the speedy ex-Galileo great, behind two key blocks, weaved down the right sidelines for 59 yards and the initial Ram tally. Baikie's boot was wide and the scoreboard showed 12-6.

Two minutes into the second quarter the college eleven regained possession on the messy 49. In three plays the Rams moved to a first down on the 35. On the next play Craft, who collected 63 yards in 11 carries, raced expertly around left end and down the sidelines escaping a would-be tackler on the 10 and going proudly into the end zone with the equalizer. Baikie's kick was good, climaxing a spirited Ram effort to gain the lead and putting the college ahead to stay.

A drive which started on their own 34 late in the third period resulted in the college's third tally on the first play of the final stanza. Three running plays carried the Rams to a first down on their own 44. Craft picked up a pair to the 46, then Baikie threw a 34-yard aerial on which Donahue made a circus catch over a defender on the 20 and scored easily. Baikie's boot split the sticks for 20-12.

Wasting no time, the Klemmer eleven scored their last td the next time they handled the hide, when Baikie again hit his favorite target Donahue on a 29-yarder, with the lanky 6-3 ace hitting paydirt for his second score making it 26-12, where it stood until the gun sounded.

Shields Mainstay Of Ram Gridders, Puts Spark In Line

The 6'1" tackle was an All-City performer from Polytechnic High School. He was graduated from there in June of 1957, and has a lot of experience under his belt. He was captain of the North team in the annual North-South Prep Shrine football game at Los Angeles, and he also captained the West squad in the East-West Prep Shrine game in San Francisco.

Shields climaxed his first year of college football by being named to the All-Big Eight Conference first eleven. His experience, ability and desire are the reasons Shields is one of the top tackles in the Big Eight. This spirit typifies the brand of players on the Ram squad.

The big tackle feels that the Ram squad is very strong in all positions. "This is the greatest team I ever played for," he said, adding, "All the students should come to the games."

He had his ankle injured in the Los Angeles Valley game and found himself sidelined when it collapsed on him again against Los Angeles City College, but he is now in full swing.

This mainstay of the line is planning to attend the University of Oregon when he graduates from the college, which should be next spring. His further goals include the teaching profession, but, he added, "I would like to play professional football."

Bob Lemon, a former infielder, holds the record for pitchers participating in the most double plays in a season, with 15 in 1953.

Paris Florist Visitor Here

Maurice Debrie Addresses Class On Floral Design

Students enrolled in the college's retail floristry department here were honored last week by an address from Maurice Debrie, renowned president of the International Florists Wire Association. Debrie recently came to San Francisco from Paris in order to attend the California State Florists Convention.

Debrie discussed with the floristry students different concepts of floral use, comparing European methods with those used in the United States. He stated Europeans cherish flowers much more than Americans do, and they utilize them more frequently in their homes. On the other hand, Debrie said, Americans take better advantage of floral display and design in business.

He pointed out Americans stress use of flowers for employee-employer relations, weddings, and funerals, whereas in Europe, Debrie said, this policy is not so strictly adhered to.

Prices of flowers in Europe are comparable to American costs, yet Europeans pride themselves more than Americans by displaying exquisite floral advertisements, Debrie added.

Students under the supervision of Maryhope Cummings, director of the retail floristry department here, recently engaged in projects which were observed by Debrie while he was on his campus visit.

Miss Cummings said the projects included the floral arrangements to be exhibited at the Associated Women Student fashion tea, and the flower displays which will decorate the college buildings and offices during the Christmas season.

The photography and criminology departments of the college have teamed up to produce a course of interest to law enforcement officers, future photographers and lawyers.

Criminology 50, police photography, combines such basic aspects of photography as exposure, development and printing, negative materials and filters with specific techniques needed by the police photographer.

Morris Grodsky, an instructor in the course, claims that no single advance in the field of criminal investigation made in recent years can be considered of more importance. Photographs retain accurate descriptions of crime and accident scenes long after all witnesses are gone, and keep a much more accurate account than any amount of written description.

Film will sometimes bring to the fore things that would never be noticed by any amount of first-hand examination, Grodsky pointed out.

All photos used as evidence at trials must have a careful and accurate history kept from the time of exposure to presentation to the court and this is also taught in the course along with such necessities as sketches to show distances and record.

Drama Group Rehearses For Petrified Forest

With the return of their director, Michael Griffin, drama students to begin intensive rehearsals this week for the production of Robert E. Sherwood's The Petrified Forest.

The curtain rises on this two-act Broadway success Friday, October 31, at 8 p.m. in the little theater located in S-28. Admission will be either an Associated Student card or $1.

Main characters portrayed in the play will be John Rose as Alan Squier and JoAnne Kreling as Gabby Maple.

Walter, Gould, Rubinstein Will Highlight Symphony Forum Series; Tickets Now Available At Bank

Tickets are now available for the annual Symphony Forum series of concerts to be held on Wednesdays at 8:30 p.m. later this year.

The college is one of 38 Northern California colleges and hospitals to participate in the forum, with Menlo College and the Kaiser and Veterans' hospitals in for the first time.

Artists scheduled to appear in the series of concerts include many of the most notable ones in their respective fields. Jean Casadesus of the Paris conservatoire, internationally famous pianist and member of the musical Casadesus family, will appear in February. Other pianists include Vladimir Ashkenazy, Artur Rubinstein and Glen Gould, the controversial American artist.

One of the greatest of living orchestral conductors, Bruno Walter, universally known as one of the great interpreters of Brahms and Beethoven's music, will be guest conductor.

Eileen Farrell, who recently received high praise for her role in Medea, which had its premiere in the United States at the beginning of the 1958 San Francisco Opera season, will also appear.

Tickets are now on sale at the student bank and the prices range from $10 to $24 for the entire season. This represents a saving of better than 50 per cent, and seats are available in every section except boxes.

For the first time this semester, fraternities, sororities and clubs are invited to purchase pairs of season tickets for the use of their members.

The Forums, which are held a few days before the actual performance, give the members an opportunity to meet and mix with the various celebrities, with the accent on informality.

Committee members from the college include William Forshay, recording secretary and the first member from the college ever to attain an executive position; David Terry, publicity director, and Niek Massenkoff, student band director.

The Forum is unique in that it is the only one of its kind to have been successful, its popularity being to such an extent as to have been featured in a Saturday Evening Post article.

AGS Membership Reaches 75 With 136 Still Eligible

Although 75 students have joined the college's scholastic honor society, Alpha Gamma Sigma, a check of last semester's grades reveals that another 136 students are eligible for membership in the organization, according to William G. Richardson, adviser. The list, along with a display, is now being shown in the glass casement at the main entrance to the library.

Tutoring is one of the scholastic society's main functions. In the past, Alpha Gamma Sigma members have given scholastic aid to those students in need. Students are asked to come early to request aid and not to hold back until late in the semester; in this way it is a benefit both for the tutor and student, Richardson explained.

Any student who maintains a 3.0 grade point average with at least 42 grade points, and a minimum of 12 units carried the previous semester, may claim a temporary membership in the society.

Floyd Lehman, Ilona Lichtenstein, Carolee Locke, Ronald McDonald, Maryellen McSweeney, Irene Mattson, Beatrice Mauch, Jerry Mordasini, Thomas Murphy, Roger Nicholson, Paul Ong, Irene Owyang, Ronald Pavellas, Jacquelyn Pera, Nancy Phillips, Jacqueline Premack, Robert Ramstead, Ramon Ray, Jean Reed, Henry Repetto, John Rhodes, Frank Rose, Robert Ross, Esther Shwartz, Earl Scribner, Donald Seratti, Robert Sheridan, Gerald Sherwood, Jo Ann Skold, Donald Smith, Elmer Smith, Wilfred Sugiyama, John Surges.

Criminology Head Waits Pistol Match

The college's criminology department is looking forward with enthusiasm to its upcoming pistol match at the United Revolver Club in Sacramento, according to Fred Fitzgerald, department head.

This year's squad has five contenders in Donohoe, Frank Williams, Captain Brown, Frances Lorimor and Ed Nelson.

The team will travel to Sacramento on Sunday, October 19. On this same day, the tyro team will shoot a match at the San Francisco Revolver Club.

Car-Stripping Stirs Council, Campus Police; Low Funds Put Budgets In Quick Freeze

By Roy Twitty

Stripping of autos and unauthorized student parking exploded a discussion in Student Council during which the Campus Police were accused of "playing around the cafeteria."

Chief of Campus Police Donohoe, recently sworn into office to replace ex-Chief Fred Kern upon Kern's resignation, stated that the car-stripping is under investigation and that the police are being lenient on parking until the reservoir area is opened.

President of the Inter-Fraternity Council Terry Chavez commented that a member of the IFC has turned over to the Campus Police the license number of an automobile containing five unidentified individuals seen stripping a car parked on campus.

Chavez declared that he too is a victim of these petty thieves and has suffered the loss of hub caps and other items while his car was parked only one block from the police station.

Wrecked and rolled downhill from Judson Avenue almost onto Hurley Village Road, a new 1958 Thunderbird was found last week with three tires missing, a smashed windshield, and a caved-in hood.

Causing quite a stir among organizations that have not yet had their budgets approved, the Finance Chairman requested Thursday that all budgets be frozen because of insufficient funds.

Budgets do not balance, it was announced, in view of requests that total more than $31,000.00; the Associated Student treasury contains $26,000.00. Activities temporarily will not be able to obtain funds to carry out their projects, the Finance Chairman stated, until Dr. Oscar Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management, reviews the situation.

Deadline for the submission of petitions to nominate candidates for Associated Student offices has been set for December 11, according to the Election Committee Chairman.

Keep-the-campus-clean slogans to be painted on trash cans by the IFC may be the subject of a student-wide contest.

Suggested prizes vary from trophies to cash awards, but none has been decided upon by the council. Suggested slogans must be submitted to the Inter-Fraternity Council by the beginning of pledge week, Monday, November 3.

Tentative schedules for College Hour lectures were read to the Student Council. Topics and dates for the talks are China, November 14; Science and Education, December 12, and Visit to Russia, January 9. Council opinion on a "Coffee Hour," during which students would have the opportunity to meet members of the faculty, was favorable and a tentative date has been set for Friday, October 24.

Club Cavalcade

Organizations Urge Students To Join; Choose From 39

By Kathie Burns

THE official day to introduce new students into the various clubs around campus is over, but students are still asked and urged to join any club of their choice.

With 39 various clubs, students should have no trouble in finding an organization to fit any like or need. Just a few will be named here, but a complete list can be found in either of the dean's offices.

All veterans are invited to come to the Veterans Association meetings during College Hours in C-268. This association sponsors many worthwhile activities, such as last year's Christmas Drive.

Religious clubs also meeting during College Hours on Fridays are the Lutheran Club in S-256; Catholic students are invited to attend the Newman Club meetings in S-204; the Acacia Club (Masonic) holds its meetings in S-7; Methodist students are asked to the Wesley Fellowship meetings in C-103, and Presbyterians may join in the activities of the Westminster Student Fellowship, Fridays in C-102.

All geology majors, or those men or women interested in the field, may find special interest in the Pick and Hammer Club, with their meetings also held Fridays during College Hours in S-45.

The Ram Cam may be of special interest to some. Photography is the purpose and meetings are in C-126 during College Hours.

Any future teachers on campus? The California Student Teachers Association would be more than happy to see them at their meetings in C-269. Any student even thinking about a teaching career can receive help and counseling through this association. Guest speakers will be featured throughout the semester and present educational problems discussed.

More Than 50,000 Vols. Available To Students, Browsers In Library

With a ratio of more than nine volumes per student, the college's 50,000 volume library features the "open stack" system, a privilege system that few colleges offer.

Two thousand of these volumes, which are located in the reference reading room, are for reference use and include atlases, bibliographies, dictionaries, encyclopedias, periodical indexes, yearbooks and special handbooks. Miscellaneous and vocational pamphlets are also located here. This large reading room is reserved for quiet, individual study. Reserved at the circulation desk are 1,000 volumes placed there by instructors for specific class assignments.

Operated on the "open stack" system, the library offers students the opportunity of examining books of their own choice. The open stack sections are arranged by subjects according to the Dewey Decimal System. Located on the first floor are books 000 to 699, and those numbered 700 to 900 can be found in the second floor stack.

Bound volumes of magazines, for library use only, are shelved alphabetically in the reserve reading room. Here study groups may converse quietly. Current editions of newspapers and magazines are found in the periodical room and browsing area.

This spacious, modern library, which seats 750 and whose doors are open eight hours daily (8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.), is run by a staff which emphasizes the point that any student should feel free to ask for library assistance whenever necessary.

IRC Sets Date For Annual Fair

International Fair, the annual event held by the International Relations Club, will be staged at Riordan Auditorium on Friday, October 31, according to Joseph M. Jacobsen, foreign student adviser here.

The IRC will welcome anyone who wishes to attend their fair. It will start at 7:45 p.m. and will feature such events as native dances, songs, music, colorful fashions, and an extra special food display set up by the students from various countries, Jacobsen added.

The newly elected officers, which include President Jhaveri Narendra from India; Vice-President Gene Mattingly from the United States; Secretary Felicity Beard hailing from England, and Treasurer Marlo Gutierrez, representing Bolivia, urged students to consider joining the IRC.

Need Changes In U.S., Moon Dwellers Say

By Don Seratti

THIS is the second in a series on what the inhabitants of the Moon think about Earth. Last week they surveyed the Earth in general; in this article they discuss some varying aspects of life in the United States.

"Isn't it wonderful to be able to look in on the Earthmen with complete impartiality?"

"It certainly is. Thousands of people on Earth have tried to solve their existing problems, but most of these individuals see things only their own way. No one wants to make any concessions."

"I suppose we could make a descent and try to help them modify their outlook before it is too late."

"No, we'd most likely be fired upon by one of their atomic weapons."

"Atomic weapons?"

"Oh, yes. Well, are we going to just stay up here and watch the Earth people destroy each other? At the rate they're going, they will."

"Not necessarily. I have some hope that the United States can play a significant role in preserving a complete peace upon Earth. That is, if they make a few changes in their present way of life. At the rate they are going, their society might easily be transformed into one in which the people will believe everything they are told. This happened in Communist countries as a result of effective government propaganda, but in the United States it is being achieved by other means as well. Various circumstances are combining to turn the people into non-thinking robots."

"What are some of the institutions in America that you find fault with? Do you think the Americans' entertainment and advertising are partially responsible for their present plight?"

"Absolutely! Now, I'm not criticizing their entertainment per se, because only a small portion of it, namely television, is proving deleterious to people's intellects."

"It can be advantageous, as evidenced by the few high quality programs and educational stations, and it has unlimited possibilities of becoming useful."

"Yes, but never has any other diversion had such a potential to captivate men's minds. Thousands of people have become addicted to it because it is a form of entertainment that requires a minimum of thought and concentration. In an era when people want to do everything the easy way, television is as ideal as frozen foods and condensed books. But the trouble is, when people's minds have been dulled by such cheap entertainment, they practically stop thinking for themselves and scarcely realize how dangerous this can be."

"Despite what you say, I notice books are selling like hot cakes down there. How do you explain this?"

"It's true that more people are reading in America. But what are they reading? Many people are reading the book War And Peace because they saw the movie and want to compare them. Many others read in order to be able to discuss intelligently the current crop of best-sellers at their next social gathering. I may sound like a cynic, but the fact is, the people who read for genuine diversion and edification are in the minority and probably always will be."

"Well, I think we agree to a great extent that television in America as it is now is doing more harm than good. And of course advertising relies greatly on television. My faith in the inherent individuality of man is being put to its severest test by the recent accomplishments of advertising men."

"They are making it difficult for a person to think for himself anymore. They spend millions of dollars a year on surveys to ascertain people's predilections, and go so far as to invent products the people don't really need and then they convince them that they do need these products."

"Advertisers are becoming veritable gods down there, not by ordering people, but by persuading them. And when this becomes possible, you find that people can be convinced they are happy and contented. In the face of

Song Girls Set Pace

Fashion magazines are usually inclined to dictate to women what to wear, where and how to wear it. One inch below the knee is the order for skirts' length this season.

On campus, however, the coeds have the last word proving again that San Francisco women DO know how to dress as the occasion demands. Take the song girls here. This enthusiastic group is usually recognized at the sports events by their bright red skirts and white knit sweaters.

Through a vote, though, they become outstanding among the many song girls this year and, at the same time, set a new style for song girls' skirts—three inches above the knee is their fancy.

The song girls observe routines carried out by song girls in other colleges and universities, create their own routines, and all in all give a good deal of time and effort to make rallies and games colorful.—Guardsman photo by Russ Nichols.

Requests Top Assets; Finance Committee Unable To Fulfill Quotas, Firmly Cuts Budgets

By Paul Malfatti

Increased spending, along with excessive demands for funds by organizations and activities this year, led the Finance Committee last week to start counting its pennies.

The budget, which was currently raised $1,000 and which now stands at $27,000, has so far taken quite a beating.

When Finance Committee Chairman Ann Finneran received requisitions totaling more than $31,000, and when a huge cut was taken out of the budget by the football team, which was allocated over $7,000 for such things as new uniforms, equipment, transportation and lodgings for out of town games, she was forced to withhold all demands because of the shortage of money.

This action has since been lifted; but burdened with the enormous task of making ends meet, Miss Finneran has had to cut most fund requisitions to reduce the over-all cost.

Clubs and organizations which wish to be supported by the Associated Students were reminded last week that they must first submit a list containing all of their members, along with their AS membership card numbers, to the Finance Committee. If this action is not taken, it is impossible to receive any financial aid from the AS treasury, Miss Finneran warned.

Card Sales Chairman Don Smith announced that 2,230 students have bought their Associated Student cards. Of the college's 6,000 day students, this still leaves 3,770, or more than one half of the student body, not receiving the benefits which are guaranteed upon becoming a member of the Associated Students.

In short, this means that 3,770 students do not park in the student lots, which some say is debatable, get in free at the dances and generally do not receive the privileges and savings that an AS card holder receives.

Contest Held For Student Ideas On Cleanup Problem

Sponsoring a campus-wide slogan contest to call attention to the clean-up situation, the Inter-Fraternity Council last week urged students to submit ideas before Wednesday, October 29, to Dean Ralph O. Hillsman's office, S-148, according to IFC President Terry Chavez.

The contest will coincide with the service project of the IFC pledges of painting garbage cans in which the slogans will be placed. Also, an old idea of placing cigarette urns around the campus will be put into effect.

Slogans will be made into posters, so the IFC expects each entry to be accompanied by a design. Helping to make and distribute the posters at every available spot on the college will be the Inter-Sorority Council's participation, Chavez said.

Traditionally, Tau Chi Sigma members have done the work of painting the garbage cans; however, this semester they will have a limited number of pledges, so the IFC feels it will be of great service to the college if all of the fraternities work together with joint effort and try to find a solution for keeping the campus clean.

"If the IFC takes the first step by setting an example, others will become aware of the importance of keeping the campus clean," Chavez stated.

He believes that if students would view the campus as a cooperating group instead of as individuals, the grounds would be invariably clean.

Chavez added, "It's not that the students don't care; it's just that they don't think."

Campus Police Issue 672 Parking Citations

Six hundred seventy two citations, with a minimum fine of $2 each, have been issued to parking regulation violators by the Campus Police since the first day of registration, September 8.

These citations are regular San Francisco Police parking tickets and must be paid at the City Hall Traffic Fines Bureau, Fred F. Fitzgerald, head of the Criminology department, stated last week.

Carstrippers To Face 6 Months In Jail Plus Stiff Fine; New Campus Police Officers Named

By Roy Twitty

Stripping of automobiles, which has recently occurred here, is classified under section 488 of the California Penal Code as a misdemeanor, punishable by six months in the county jail and a $500.00 fine, according to Fred Fitzgerald, Campus Police adviser, as he announced the names of the students appointed to fill vacancies in the campus force.

Sworn in by San Francisco Police Chief Thomas J. Cahill, the ten students appointed as special police officers to the college replace ten men who have graduated.

"Participation of the San Francisco Police Department in the program here at the college," Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president, declared, "has been of great assistance to us in alleviating the traffic problems which have developed on and adjacent to our campus."

Damage to cars parked on-campus, according to Fitzgerald, is not due to any internal problem but is rather the maliciousness of disgruntled outsiders not allowed to attend student affairs, such as dances.

Petty vandalism occurred at the Chinese Club sponsored dance held a few weeks ago in which the club's faculty adviser found his tires flattened. Campus Police protection for personal property had not been requested at the time.

Over 300 man-hours have been donated to the student government for the issuance of parking permits since the start of the semester by the 21 student policemen enrolled in Criminology 70, a course designed to instruct students in the field of law-enforcement and related field problems.

Participation on the Campus Police force is considered as part of the field or laboratory requirement. Three additional hours in the field are required for this three unit course per student in excess of the classroom time.

Although many students complain about attending 8 o'clock classes, Campus Police are on duty directing traffic at 7:30 a.m., Fitzgerald pointed out.

As a result, they usually breakfast in the cafeteria between 8 and 9 a.m., he added, clarifying the misunderstanding that led to criticism in Student Council recently.

Guardsman Rates ACP First Class

A rating of First Class for its Spring 1958 volume was awarded to The Guardsman this week by the Associated Collegiate Press, whose headquarters are at the University of Minnesota.

This marks the sixth First Class award for The Guardsman, which has also earned 28 All-American ratings in 34 semesters of publication since Fall 1939. First Class is one noteh below All-American and exceeds other ACP ratings of Second Class and Third Class.

The awards, given each semester to colleges and universities entered in the ACP competition, are based on general content, style, writing, and news coverage. The ACP's board of critic judges is comprised of journalistic authorities from various newspapers and academic staffs.

Categories in which the Spring 1958 Guardsman excelled, according to the ratings, included overall balance, news stories, style, leads, editorials, sports coverage, page makeup and headlines.

Famed Hungarian Fencing Master To Visit College

George J. Piller, fencing instructor at the University of California and one time Olympic fencing champion (1931-33), will be at the college December 6 to give a fencing exhibit and instruction-clinic to interested students.

Performed by three of his former students, the exhibit will feature the use of the sabre and foil swords. Personal instruction in fencing will be given twice during the day. High school students may receive instruction at 10 a.m., and college students may receive it at 1 p.m.

Piller was an officer in the Hungarian army and taught fencing at the Hungarian Military Academy. As Olympic coach of the Hungarian fencing team in 1956, he accompanied the team to the Olympic Games in Melbourne, Australia. While there he decided not to return to his native land. He sent for his family and is now living in San Francisco.

Besides Piller's Olympic title, he has won many other sports titles in skiing, boxing, and wrestling. At one time he taught skiing in the Alps.

Today Piller is fencing instructor at the University of California at Berkeley and also teaches at Sacramento State College. Although he is constantly being asked to return to Europe, Piller says that he likes the United States and will most likely stay here.

3 Ex-Writers Earn Top Press Posts

Two former Guardsman staff writers have been recently appointed to top positions in the journalism department of San Jose State College, while a former editor holds an important post at San Francisco State College.

They are Bob Kauth and Lou Lucia, at San Jose, and Pat Metsack, the Guardsman's Spring 1958 Editor-in-Chief, appointed this semester's news editor of the Golden Gater, at San Francisco State.

Kauth, feature editor of The Guardsman during Spring 1956 and Editor-in-Chief of the Fall semester of that year, has been named editor of State's feature magazine, Lyke. Lucia, feature, then sports editor here, is the Spartan Daily's sports editor.

Kauth promised at his State office that this year's magazine would be the "best ever," and issued a call for 100 women students there. They are to visit State's photographers and have their pictures taken in order to enter the magazine's Likeable Doll theme girl contest.

Appointments Still Open For Spring '59

Appointments for counseling are still being made for the Spring 1959 program planning and registration numbers, according to Waddington Blair of the counseling staff.

Students who have not yet made appointments are advised to sign up soon, since those who do not have an appointment will be given a later registration hour, Blair said.

Responsible Campus Must Help Curb Car Stripping Vandalism

RECENT car-stripping incidents which have occurred on the college's campus lead us to believe that the students here aren't doing their part to curb such foul practices.

It has been noted that several students have witnessed these thefts, whereby hubcaps, chrome extension pipes, gas and radiator caps, fender guards, and hood ornaments are stolen from automobiles; but have just been afraid to report the guilty parties to the proper college authorities.

These student's apparently consider that turning in such information would label them "unsportsmanlike." On the contrary, one need not feel that way; for one is not a "stool pigeon" when he protects the interests of his fellow students.

As the law-preserving body of City College, why couldn't the Campus Police assign members of their student force to patrol the campus parking areas? After all, they receive credit for being the college's law enforcement department; so one or two men designated to such a patrol certainly would instill the fear of being caught into would-be confiscators of car equipment and would probably eliminate the threat of further incidents completely.

It's quite true that one cannot feel the real damage of these thefts until his car is "stripped." But why wait for this to happen, and it well might without immediate action; so let's all be alert and aware of this problem and do our part as students to maintain law and order in City College.

Council Welcomes AS Card Holders

STUDENT COUNCIL meetings, which are held every Tuesday and Thursday in C-301, are open to all Associated Students of City College. Any AS member who has a definite interest in college affairs should make it a point to attend council—the melting pot of campus activities and student government.

Anyone who believes that council members think that they are "big wheels" and above the average student would be shocked to learn that they are serious-minded students who work hard for their grades as well as keeping student functions running smoothly.

AS President Freddie Hicks runs a particularly impressing meeting, and it is his hope as well as ours to generate student interest for council attendance.

Shots At Ramdom — Nice Music's Gone; Lovers Don't Dig It

By Jack Wellington

GONE are the days when—music soothed the savage beast, songs of love ran rampant, young love was in bloom, and the coming generation was one of hope.

Music now not only does not soothe the savage beast; it only enrages the poor thing to further savagery.

Modern music played to soothe said beast would probably drive the poor quivering monster to the brink of insanity.

OVERHEARD the other day was a conversation between two young lovers discussing the pros and cons of a group of songs, the object being the selection of, one to call "their very own." The sweet rhapsodies included were Witchdoctor, The Purple People Eater, He Walks, He Talks, and the lovely melody entitled The Bloh.

SPEAKING OF young lovers, they just don't make 'em the way they used to. A sight commonly seen is the 6 ft. 2 in. athlete strolling regally around the campus with some poor, bedraggled female hanging on to him for dear life with one arm and holding on to several books with the other. The hero speaks, "Hey, dig that chick over there." Whereupon he takes his books from his present girl and strolls over to the new one in order to give her the privilege of feeling his muscle. (Not the one in his head.)

AFTER A YEAR of research, one of the social scientists of the college (student size) has finally discovered the real meaning of being part of the "beat generation." He left his safe, soft home one night in order to accompany several of his friends on a "round of the town." When he finally crept into bed at three in the morning, he was so sick and so tired he could hardly lift his head to turn over. Man: He was not only "beat," he was on the brink of complete exhaustion.

No Cat's Paradise This

AFTER WHAT THEIR SCIENTIFIC-MINDED student friends have put them through, these serious looking little heroes could be just about ready for a space fling and not feel it. They show no signs of the experiments conducted on them nor do they anticipate what's coming. Should their stomachs talk they could say a thing or two, not nice either, about diets. The pictures of the white mice and the two guinea pigs on a Vitamin C diet (lower right hand corner), were taken by faculty member James B. Runner, currently teaching photo-micrography here.

Science Hall Onlookers Get Treat As Biology Students Hold Vitamin Tests On Rats

By Pastor Valle-Garay

Attracting a good deal of attention from visitors and students, especially from those who have to climb everyday the Science Hall's third floor heights, are two sets of white rats undergoing scientific experiments.

They are kept in home-made cages under the zealous care of biology instructor Briggita K. Beetz.

In other words, there ARE rats in this place but not the kind cats chase. These rats are here strictly for biological studies.

Some of them, according to the particular vitamin treatment given to them, will gradually go blind, lose their hair or become extremely weak after a period of from three to six weeks, under the close observation of the biology students.

One casualty has already occurred, but this is not liable to happen again, assured Mrs. Beetz. "As soon as the experiments are over," she said, "the animals are sent back to normal conditions through a normal diet."

Otherwise the animals will be the dearly beloved pets of Mrs. Beetz' students, men and women (?), for the rest of this and other semesters.

Although experimental, she regards them as her "harmless little friends," keeps them under constant surveillance and, while not being victimized, under a balanced diet.

They are weighed every two days and their cages are built so that "changing" them is not such a problem. Just pull out some papers placed underneath their chicken-wire floors and home cleaning is done.

She placed one of them in the hands of this reporter who couldn't, overcome by joy probably, say anything but "Oui" to the action of the former laboratory technician at Detroit's Henry Ford Hospital.

"Isn't she cute?" she asked. Agreed. Next question.

The cages were built by John E. Hare, also of the college's biology department.

guinea pigs who habitate the third floor's mezzanine.

When does he sleep? He says it is a pure case of "Katch as—katch can," but added that "since a degree has become increasingly important, the discomforts of today are worth the advantages of tomorrow."

A second student reported that he attended college full time, worked full time, and studied in between the two. How? Well, he studies on the bus going to and from college and work, during his lunch hour, and at any other unoccupied moment.

To add to the confusion of his life, he says that he has trained himself to sleep at any given moment . . . at any given place. Is it worth it? Apparently so. In order to reach his goal in life, he must attain a degree.

The radical change in the pattern of life that these, and the hundreds and hundreds of students like them, must face in order to get an education is astounding. They've set high goals and are willing to sacrifice to achieve them. Is it any wonder, then, with students with such perseverance as these, that the United States is considered the most educated of nations?

Fulltime Job, College?—Veterans Do It

By Lee Anderson

Today, as never before, college students are finding it necessary to hold down part time jobs in order to afford a higher education. There are many reasons leading to this situation.

Many of the students are veterans who are attending college on their G.I. Bill of Rights. Although this program is a great financial help to the veteran, it is not nearly enough to support the living standards of the veteran, especially if he has dependents.

Students attending college without veteran's rights or parental aid know well that the "Fruits of Thought" are fine for the mind, but the stomach demands much, much more.

And, of course, there are always those who find work a necessity to meet financial obligations.

Whatever the reason, the number of college students who are part time employed, and those seeking employment is rapidly increasing. This increase imposes definite problems. Work is becoming almost impossible to find.

The imposing question in this issue is, why are young men and women willing to undergo such hardships for an education?

One such student who was interviewed stated that he attends classes from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. He is carrying 16 units in order to receive his Associate in Arts degree in February. All of his studying must be done between 4 p.m. and 10 p.m. as he works on the job from 10 p.m. until 6 a.m.

Foresight

By Dick Dyer

TEN Westerns, nine mystery and adventure shows, and five situation comedies compose the majority of television's roundup of new shows this season.

Cimarron City, Bat Masterson, Yancey Derringer, and The Texan take top honors in the horse opera category. Each is well-plotted, well-acted and contains plenty of action.

The Rifleman and Man Without A Gun are good, but Wanted Dead or Alive, Northwest Passage, The Lawman and The Rough Riders are merely mediocre oaters, which generally lean heavy on the cliches.

In the mystery department, Peter Gunn and Naked City are first rate thrillers. The former, in this writer's opinion, is the standout of the season; the show is refreshing, lively, and exceptionally well-done. The latter contains some of the most panoramic scenes of New York ever filmed and often the excellent photography even overshadows the plots.

While 77 Sunset Strip and Behind Closed Doors are also top quality, the rest of the adventure shows fall short.

The new situation comedies on the whole are fairly good. How To Marry A Millionaire, The Donna Reed Show, and This Is Alice are corny but cute; the last appears to be the "sleeper" of the season.

The new Ann Sothern Show doesn't fare so well, and that annoying laugh track doesn't help.

Ed Wynn is certainly "The Perfect Fool" for appearing in his new comedy series. The show is plotless and downright unfunny.

New formats have been devised for Arthur Godfrey, Milton Berle, and Gary Moore. Godfrey, the Colossus of New York, is still hogging the spotlight: Berle is better than ever, and Moore may just possibly have the best hour variety show on TV.

Patti Page is back, but this time her show is trimmed down to half an hour and instead of a carload of celebrities, she has only one each week. However, the program seems to fare better this way.

Jackie Gleason has also returned, but without his usual cast. He is now joined regularly by Buddy Hackett, a poor man's Lou Costello, in taking off his well-known character sketches. Hackett is no more than Gleason's stooge on the show, and Jackie apparently wants it that way.

Many of these shows have proven themselves top-notch from the start, while others need plasma fast if they hope to continue through next season. The ever dreaded ratings, the people's voice, and the sponsor's axe will alone decide which programs are to be killed and which will survive.

Adult Group Ranks High Among Night Time Enrollment

For most day students, classes end in the afternoon. But from 7 to 10 p.m., Mondays through Thursdays, the activity of 518 women and 816 men shows the eagerness and necessity to learn for people who can not attend classes here during the day.

These are the college's evening students. To accommodate them are 43 courses, all of which are university courses. There are no semiprofessional or academic classes and the college is not run as an adult school.

In charge of these classes is a staff of 35 instructors, many of whom also teach during day sessions.

On the average, evening students are older than the day students. About 10 per cent of them are under 21 years of age as compared to 50 per cent of these days students under 21.

Although a student can take up to six units without special permission, night classes are not encouraged by the college and the enrollment is handled on a "first come, first served" basis. This is a policy because there is always a great demand for these classes, which are limited in number.

Soccermen Defeat Gators 7-2; Meet Cal Bears Saturday

By Pastor Valle-Garay

San Francisco State soccermen started to play an aggressive game, kept it a tight, if unfavorable, 2-1 contest at the end of the second quarter, and were completely overrun by the college's eleven in the third to lose a 7-2 decision at the boots of the Rams last Saturday on the loser's field.

It was the college's second consecutive, and its most impressive, win in the 1958 Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference. They defeated University of Santa Clara 4-0 two weeks ago, and will host a strong University of California squad this Saturday at 10 a.m., at the Balboa Soccer Stadium.

When the Bears met the Rams in the 1957 NCISC league action, Cal tallied a last-second goal to beat the college 2-1 and, eventually, ruin its plans for a shot at the league's championship. The Rams then took second place and the USF Dons the title.)

On last Saturday's action against the Gators the college kickers saw the first quarter of play elapse with neither team scoring, as both squads' defensive lines kept the other's forwards far from shooting distance on the wet, slippery field of State College.

Five minutes in the second quarter though, and the Rams' scoring rampage began. Right wing Julio Arostegui, on a pass from Nick Nedaskowsky, cut loose from State's defensors to boot in the first goal for the college. Moments later State's All-American center forward, Paco Guerra, evened things up with a 30-yard free kick that crossed the Ram post's upper left corner. But that was about all State did for the remainder of the contest.

Another star center forward, the Rams' Richard Prydz, broke the tie in a do-or-die attack seconds before the quarter's end. Prydz, injured in the play, was forced to leave the game. The score, though, was Rams 2, State 1.

Jahan Fouladi, replacing him, opened the game's third quarter by successfully dribbling around and past the Gators' defensive twice in a row and give the college a 4-1 lead. Diminutive Oscar Gutierrez followed the Red and White's dribbling apree to augment the count to 5-1, and inside left George "Quena" Salazar's outstanding timing got hold of a ball about to fall in the Gator goalie's hands, took it away from him, shot, and made it a 6-1 game for the Rams.

Closing the third quarter, forward Giovanni Halstead called it a day for the college team as he came out the better in a mad scramble in front of the State's post, making the count 7-1 for the Rams.

Guerra also scored the Gators' second goal in the game's final frame.

Professional Golfers To Give Demonstrations

Professional golfers, Beverly Hanson and Joyce Ziska, will appear on the college practice football field tomorrow from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. to give a free golf demonstration.

Miss Hanson, referred to as the "Glamour Girl of Golf," won her first professional tournament in 1951, the week after she turned professional. This year she is the leading money winner with over $12,000.

It was in 1955 that Miss Ziska turned professional. As a professional, she netted $9,733 and had the honor of being fifth money winner that year. Her 1956 performance was marked by a high degree of consistency as she finished in the top 10 in 20 of the 26 tournaments in which she competed. Miss Ziska is regarded as one of the longest hitters in women's golf.

Top Star In Discus, Javelin

By Vicky Aumann

Four years ago, a schoolgirl at San Francisco's Abraham Lincoln High School was fired with a desire to represent the United States in the Olympic Games.

Today, Pamela Kurrell, that same schoolgirl now grown up and attending college here, has not only fulfilled her ambition but has gone on to claim more honors than most star male athletes of her age.

Presently training at Palo Alto under Dink Templeton, Stanford's former track coach, she is hoping to gain top honors in the discus and javelin events at the 1959 Pan American games to be held next summer.

Early in 1958, in tryouts at New Jersey to select 72 athletes and officials to compete in Moscow, Hungary, Greece and Poland, Miss Kurrell qualified with ease, and gained a place on the team. Finishing in fourth place in the discus finals in Moscow, she put up her best performance yet, with a toss of 145.

Since returning from Moscow, Miss Kurrell has improved her discus mark to 150. The Olympic record stands at 176-1½ recorded by Olga Fikotova, Czechoslovakia, at the 1956 games in Melbourne, Australia.

A recreation major who hopes to teach physical education, Miss Kurrell first gained nationwide attention by winning several medals at the 1955 Pan American games in Mexico City. The next year she won the baseball throw and javelin event at the National AAU track and field meet in Philadelphia and set a new American discus record of 139-1.

Competing in the Olympic trials

at Washington, D. C., in August, 1956, she secured for herself a berth on the U. S. Athletic team by breaking her own record with a toss of 141-7½, although coming off second best to Earlene Browne, who broke all existing records with a throw of 145-4½.

Failing to qualify for the discus finals at the Melbourne Olympics, her performances after only three short years of training were nothing short of phenomenal. However, she returned from the games with a firm determination to train even harder.

According to the consensus of track coaches, Pam Kurrell should reach her peak by the 1960 Olympics in Rome and the discus crown could well be hers.

RAMBLINGS

By George Grasso

THE San Francisco Forty Niners have troubles.

First of all it must be said that winning or losing, the local ball club offers some of the most exciting football in the NFL. San Francisco has become the home of the alley-oop pass and the 30 second comeback.

The "prospectors" have a circus repertoire that would do the Ringling Brothers proud. With their aerial gymnastics they have the power to upset any team in professional football. This makes for exciting play—but it does not win championships!

Championships are won by clubs with three bread and butter ball carriers and a beefy rhinceros-like line.

Certainly, the 49er passing attack cannot be criticized; it is the proudest segment of the team. In Billy Wilson, Clyde Conner, Fred Dugan and R. C. Owens, San Francisco has some of the finest receivers in pro ball. Tittle is not as old as his protection has been making him look, and John Brodie can thread the needle with three and four defenders guarding his receiver. It was the "Miracle Catch," which almost carried the Forty-Niners to the Western championship last year.

But a club can't depend on miracles to carry them all the way to the championship. And if the Forty-Niners ever hope to bring the title to San Francisco, they must somehow get a couple of horses at running backs and a line without a sieve complex.

RA Holds Sports Day October 25 As Major Event

Plans have been completed by the Recreation Association for its Sports Day, to be held at the college this Saturday, October 25, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

It is the first major event of the association this semester, and invitations have been extended to ten colleges in the Bay Area.

According to Sandy Simonian, RA president, at least 200 sports enthusiasts are expected to participate, and all activities are coeducational. They include tennis, bowling, archery, volleyball and badminton, with golf a newly added attraction this semester.

Dates for other sports days were set at a recent meeting of all Bay Area Recreation Association representatives. Also November 15 was chosen for the sports night to be held in the women's gymnasium from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m.

All students who are members of the Associated Students are eligible to join the RA. It is a coeducational association and gives its members the opportunity to participate in recreational activities.

Fencing Team Wins First Match Of Season

Victory for the college's fencing team was the result of the team's first Inter-Collegiate and Inter-Scholastic Fencing Association League outing.

Lincoln High School was the victim, bowing in the men's A and B contests, while the college's women's team was also downing Lincoln.

The fencing team's next opponent will be Balboa High School, and the meet will be held in the women's gymnasium tomorrow at 4 p.m. The college will also have meets with Polytechnic High School, Continuation High School, California, Stanford, San Mateo, Napa, and Santa Rosa.

The fencing team is sponsored by the college Recreation Association. Members of the men's A team are Captain Kirby Griffen, Bill Crabtree and Neil Pace. The men's B team is composed of Joe Saporita, Rolland La Pelle, John Pray and James Chiu.

Bearcubs Come Alive On Rain Soaked Field To Stop Rams; Aerial Attack Proves Decisive

By George Grasso

Suddenly catching fire after a disastrous first quarter, the Santa Rosa Bearcubs came back to stop the San Francisco Rams 14 to 7 in a packed stadium of drizzle-soaked fans at Santa Rosa last Saturday night.

Unable to find any opening in the Ram wall, the Santa Rosa backfield spent the first 15 minutes of the contest bouncing off the San Francisco line. In the second quarter, the Bearcubs came alive and began to solve the problem of the immovable object ahead of them.

Opening the game like they owned the field, the Ram eleven got hold of a Bearcub aerial on the San Francisco 24, then in a series of short battering plays hammered it for 76 yards and a touchdown. Gene Cratt carried it over from the one in 10:12 of the first quarter. Don Baikie added the extra point and it was 7-0.

In the second quarter the Bearcubs began to get mean. Bob Davis intercepted a Baikie aerial on his own 47. Five plays later Santa Rosa had it on the Ram 14, and that was close enough for Bill Grey to pile around right guard for the score.

The Bearcubs tried for the two points, failed, and it was 7 to 6 at the half.

The final score came in the middle of the third quarter, when Santa Rosa's outstanding quarterback, Tommy Harper, climaxed a ten play drive by squeezing over from the one-yard line. Ron Hall went up the middle for two more and the final score was 14 to 7.

In rushing, all the Ram backs managed to pile up impressive records as they totaled up 160 yards on the ground to the Bearcubs' 98.

Craft in 12 carries ran up 55 yards for a 4.5 average, while Jerry White had 66 yards in 16 carries for 4.2.

But it was the passing which made the difference. Harper completed 8 out of 15 for a fabulous 100 yards gained, while the Rams could only manage four completions in 13 tries, and had four passes intercepted.

14 IFC, CAB Teams Start Intramural Play

Fourteen teams will battle it out tonight and tomorrow night in the first round of the intramural basketball race that will run until December 9, Jack Gaddy, the college's intramural athletic director, announced yesterday.

The Inter-Fraternity Council teams playing tonight are Beta Tau vs. Lambda Phi at 7 p.m. in the men's gymnasium; Zeta Phi vs. Gamma Phi at 7 p.m. in the women's gymnasium; Kappa Rho vs. Alpha Phi Epsilon at 8 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, and Beta Phi vs. Phi Delts at 8 p.m. in the women's gymnasium.

Playing tomorrow night will be the Club Activities Board teams: the Recreation Association vs. Rickey Ross Rockets at 7 p.m. in the men's gymnasium; The Guardsman vs. the Filipino Club at 8 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, and the H&R Society vs. the Filipino Club at 7 p.m. in the women's gymnasium.

Klemmermen To Tackle Stockton Saturday Night

Returning to the Red and White side of the fence, the situation doesn't seem to appear too optimistic in this area either.

Although the Klemmermen lived up to their pre-season expectations in hauling down a 26-12 verdict from a highly-touted Contra Costa delegation, one injury after another to some of Klemmer's brightest charges has brought brief to the local gridders.

Three days prior to last week's Santa Rosa collision, signal caller Don Baikie came down with a heavy case of the flu bug, and, although still able to make the Cub affair, was not up to his usual par.

The club's sole starting lineup survivor is lightning fast Willie Simpson, a flashy halfback. The Mustang line is one of the weakest in many a year, and aside from the dashes of Simpson, the offense is relying entirely on the arm of quarterback Mike Flock teaming up with veteran ends Bobby Peters and Jim Quessenberry to keep the Stockton banner in contention.

Since the two colleges met in 1949 with the locals grabbing that one 26-19, the Mustangs have won five and the Rams three, with the 1953 affair going to the cat via a 13-13 count.

Four years have passed since the Klemmermen last won out over Stockton, but there seems little doubt but that the Rams should end the famine by at least two touchdowns.

U.S. Junior College Distance Champ Patton Leads Ram Harriers To Tie

Paul Patton, United States two-year college mile champion, led the Ram cross country team to a 36-36 tie with Diablo Valley Junior College at the Solano County Fair Grounds in Vallejo last week.

Patton won the race with Blake Westman not far behind. Ken Dawdy, Phil Fortier and Al Masson finished next in that order for the college.

The meet was a success for the Ram harriers since Diablo Valley has a victory over the college earlier in the season. Vallejo Junior College placed third in the triangular meet with 50 points.

The college cross country team will further its practice meets for the Northern California Championships, November 22, at Diablo Valley by traveling to Modesto next Wednesday, October 29, for another triangular meet with Modesto, Oakland and Sacramento.

In his freshman year, Patton ran the mile in 4:16.3 in the State meet to score the fastest two-year college time in the U. S.

IRC Flavors Fair With Display Of Delicious Dishes

The International Relations Club's Fair, to be held at Riordan Auditorium on Friday, October 31, at 7:45 p.m., will be the "best ever," according to the announcement of Joseph M. Jacobsen, foreign student adviser.

Tickets are available now at the student bank at 75 cents for those with Associated Student cards and $1 for general admission.

"Exotic and delicious dishes of their native countries will be prepared by the students themselves for the food display of such countries as India, France, Hawaii and many, many others," Jacobsen said. These food displays will circle the floor where a dance will follow the Fair.

Each country has a chairman representing its group under the supervision of Narendra Jhaveri, president of the IRC.

These chairman are Tanya Solemani for Iran; Saiko Suzuki for Japan, Sarwan Singh for India; Dolores Cruz for the Philippines, Tanya Konstantinon for Russia, Mario Gutierrez for Central and South America, Serge Jean Joseph for France, Andy Lau for Hawaii and Don McGee for the United States.

These chairmen and their groups decide on the programs, food, fashion shows and exhibitions. "Each country has 15 minutes to present its entertainment, which means a two hour, eventful evening is in store," Jacobsen stated.

For example, Jacobsen said that some of the numbers, such as Japan's program, will consist of a dance group doing Sakura in the cherry blossom season plus Koto, a musical instrument solo; the Bao Dance will be the highlight of the Philippine program with the Salacot Dance and six models showing a revolution of the 18th, 19th and 20th century fashions; Latin America will be featuring the Tango, Mambo, Rhumba and Cha Cha; and the USA will have a barber shop quartet, jazz and modern dance.

Exhibitions of arts and crafts will be displayed in the fountain area. The social dancing will be held in Smith Hall following the programs, with not one but two bands, the Latin American band, composed of college students, and the regular band.

More than 100 students take part in committees and sub-committees. The chairmen are Helen Krsheninikoff for decorations, Dolores Cruz for the welcome committee in which the ushers will be wearing native costumes of India, Greece, Thailand, Turkey, Japan and others; Jose Bran for exhibitions; Jean Joseph for stage; Ari Wong for food; Sonia Singson for make-up and wardrobe, and Diana Preddy and Richard Chinn for art.

Tutoring Given At Minimum Charge

With the first midterm examination period ended, Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college scholastic honor society, is currently making arrangements for private tutoring of individuals at a minimum charge.

"We have tried to provide tutoring for almost all subjects taught at the college," William G. Richardson, AGS adviser, said, urging students to act early in order to secure aid.

A small fee of $1.50 per hour is required, payable for time expense of the society member. "During College Hours, students can obtain free instruction," Richardson added. Information concerning this program can be secured at his office, S-143G.

Joanne Kreling, Drama Student, Stars As Gabby In Sherwood's Petrified Forest Opening Oct. 31

Playing her first leading role in Robert Sherwood's The Petrified Forest, Joanne Kreling will make her debut as Gabby here when the play opens Friday, October 31.

"I want to be different and good in this role since it is my first chance to make a character really come to life on the stage," Miss Kreling said in a recent interview. "This is the kind of role that means something since it portrays real problems and real people in a desperate situation."

The 19-year-old beauty has taken an active part in previous plays. She was stage manager for the production of The Merchant Of Venice, helped make props, painted, and ushered. She also enrolled in radio and TV courses to further her studies in drama.

Miss Kreling is fond of skiing, tennis, rock and roll, popular music, sports cars, and loves to dance. She has had offers to do commercials on TV in Los Angeles. Modeling at Magnin's gives her an extra incentive that she believes she needs for the poise necessary in commercials on TV.

She was chosen for the role of Gabby because she acted the part so well for a final grade in drama last semester.

Other performances of the play will be held November 1, 7, 8, 14 and 15. Starting time for each performance will be 8 p.m., and the play will be presented in the Little Theater, S-28.

The play, by one of this country's foremost playwrights, is set in the Black Mesa Cafe near the Petrified Forest in Arizona.

General admission will be $1, but the production is free to Associated Students who wish to attend the opening show of the semester.

Council Approves Drama Budget; President Vetoes

By Roy Twitty

Slashes in appropriations for student organizations caused a split in student council opinions but were upheld by Freddie Hicks, President of the Associated Students, as he exercised his veto powers for the first time this semester in defeating the Drama Department budget passed by the council.

Reminding council members that Associated Students income has come down this semester while requests for funds have gone up, Hicks quoted Article 2, Section 4, of the AS constitution which vests in him the power to veto motions passed by the council. "There simply is not enough money in the treasury," he stated, "to cover the entire amount of $1,400.00 asked for."

Ann Finneran, finance chairman, requested that the Drama allocation be reduced by $400.00 to $1,000.00 as a partial measure to balance allotments with the amount on hand, which has now been upped by Dr. Oscar E. Anderson to $2,700.00. Ralph Prior, Student Councilman, moved to override the veto of the President, but the motion did not pass, lacking, a two-thirds majority vote of council.

Freshman Class budget, which amounted to $607.00 last year and $682.00 in the spring semester of 1957, was cut also from $570.00 to $540.00 by reducing the Frosh activities fund by $30.00.

Hypnotism will be featured by a professional with a Ph.D. in psychology on the evenings of November 21 and 22 at 8:00 p.m., it was learned from John Dunn, faculty adviser to the Rally Committee. Revenues from these two evening performances could net the student government as much as $800.00, Dunn reported. Although having exceeded $1,200.00 in the past, the Rally Committee's budget of $481.00 was lowered to $456.00 by eliminating the $25 used to purchase [illegible] were printed.

Third and final of the budgets passed was the appropriation for the College Controller of $2,373.00, which was okayed by the council with no changes.

Apologies are in order from this writer to Terry Chavez, President of the Inter-Fraternity Council, and Diek Cottrell, IFC representative to the Student Council. Statements concerning the vandalism of autos were attributed to Chavez when actually they were issued by Cottrell.

H&R Dept. Announces Scholarship Winners

Winners of fall semester scholarships have recently been announced by the Hotel and Restaurant Department of the college.

Three recipients of the Harvey M. Toy Scholarships for $250 each are Rupert Sutton, Thomas Hamill and Sammy Loule.

The Executive Stewards and Caterers Association Scholarship for $100 has been given to Stanley Diemoz.

All of these scholarships are awarded on the bases of scholastic achievement, student leadership, performance in college and industry, and personal need.

Fashion Show Set For Nov. 5 With '80 Days' Theme

Approximately 1,000 women students from surrounding high schools as well as the college are expected to attend the Associated Women Student fashion show, Around The World In 80 Days, scheduled for November 5 at 3 p.m. in the college cafeteria, according to Kitty Stein, AWS president.

The 11 AWS models will be composed of one from each of the eight sororities on campus, one each from the independents, the Recreation Association, and the Chinese Students Club.

Other models will be chosen at a later date, and each model will make approximately four changes of attire, the fashions ranging from sport to formal dress, Miss Stein said.

In accordance with the theme, highlights of the show will feature colorful arrays of international flags and helium-filled balloons, and to further supplement the attraction will be 12 coeds from the International Relations Club modeling costumes from their native countries. Entertainment on the agenda will include an AWS member singing the theme song from "80 Days."

Gertrude Norgard, acting dean of women, is sponsor of the event, at which fashions from Joseph Magnin will be presented. Refreshments consisting of cookies and punch will be served in the cafeteria.

Miss Stein added that AWS meetings are held every Tuesday in S-150, and that all women students holding AS cards are welcome to attend.

Ushers Needed For Opera Season End

Prospective ushers will have their last opportunity to attend an opera this season, Le Nozze Di Figaro, free of charge tomorrow at 8 p.m. by volunteering in the office of Gertrude Norgard, acting dean of women, S-150, at 8 a.m. tomorrow.

Ushers are also needed for today's matinee, scheduled for 2 p.m., when La Boheme will be presented.

Dark shoes, dresses, or suits must be worn by the ushers, Dean Norgard said. Men are not permitted to usher wearing sport jackets or sport shirts. All ushers must be present one hour before the performance, Dean Norgard added, but they may later sit on the stairs or in the aisle seats if there are any vacancies.

Eileen Farrell and Raymond Manton, stars of Le Nozze Di Figaro, will be heard later in the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra during the 18 Wednesday evening forum concerts.

Rushing Activities Almost Over; Hell Week Starts Soon

By Kathie Burns

MOST of the sorority and fraternity life, is centered around coming rushing events, as the sororities have concluded their firesides and some of the fraternities have had their first affairs.

Plans are now being made for final dinners and luncheons, and the sorority coffee preference hours next Tuesday, with Hell Week coming up next.

Zeta Chi sorority's western dinner will be held this Sunday at the Letterman Officers' Club. Officers of the sorority are Ann Thuss, president; Ellie Vilinova, vice-president; Rose Azaldi, corresponding secretary; Faith Judson, recording secretary; Bev Johns, treasurer; Roberta Kennedy, historian, and Karen Beck, alumnae liaison officer.

Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity deemed its smoker last week a success with 40 prospective pledges attending. The traditional welcome, a short history of the fraternity and an address on the value of fraternity life were presented. Also discussed was the value of Alpha Phi Epsilon as a service organization and its scholastic and social activities.

Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college's honor society, will hold a meeting this Friday in C-232 during College Hour. Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction, will discuss scholarships and the benefits that good grades can bring. Officers of the society this semester are Dennis Kalos, president; Nancy Canning, vice-president, and Roberta Kennedy, secretary-treasurer.

Gamma Sigma Sigma members are now working on plans for their semester service project. Officers of the women's service sorority are Osa Holme, president; Liz Hogan, first vice-president; Barbara Schofield, second vice-president and pledge mistress; Rae Jean Williams, recording secretary; Nancy Canning, corresponding secretary; Judie Cordy, treasurer, and Joan Rogerro, historian.

For all Vespa and motor scooter enthusiasts who are interested there is a Vespa club in the planning stage. According to Tim Casey, promoter of the proposed club, "It's about time that we organized a Vespa club, as other colleges around the Bay Area have them and they are very successful. With all the Vespas and Lambretas parked by Smith Hall and the book store every day the club should have a good turnout." The club, which will start soon and is as yet unnamed, will feature outings, dances and other social functions, both by themselves and with other clubs in the area.

Three Main Events Highlight College Hour

Former Dean Shows Vacation Trip Slides

An unusual program, consisting of picture slides of South America, will be presented for the college film series during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., this Friday, according to Madison Devlin, audio-visual instructor.

Edwin C. Browne, former dean of men, will be guest speaker. He will show slides from his recent trip to South America and give talks on the Amazon Jungle, Pisac, La Paz and Machu Picchu, a famous mountain stronghold in South America.

"This time we're using picture slides instead of actual films," Devlin said. "This is something different, but it should be very interesting. Dean Browne is a very good speaker and his talks are extremely interesting. An opportunity like this doesn't come along very often, and we're very happy to be able to present a program in this style. This will be a good chance for students who are interested in South America to get some useful information."

Dr. Whitaker Opens First Lecture Series

Speaking on the timely subject of Our China Policy, Dr. Urban Whitaker will open the semester's scheduled College Hour lecture series this Friday in S-100, according to Irving Witt, sociology instructor here.

Dr. Whitaker, a professor of International Relations at San Francisco State College, and assistant director of Inter-Cultural Relations of the Carnegie Foundation, furthered his knowledge of China as a student at Peking University, under a Chiang Kai-Shek scholarship.

Friday, December 5, will bring Dr. Reukema, an electrical engineering professor at the University of California, to the college to discuss the controversial topic of Peace In The Age of H-Bombs And Missiles.

Two other lectures will take place later in the semester, but as of this date, speakers have not been selected.

All students and instructors are invited to attend the free series, which last semester proved itself, with approximately 200 persons attending each presentation, Witt said.

Henry Leff Speaks To CSTA Members

Henry Leff, the college's Radio-Television coordinator, will speak to members of the California Student Teachers Association this Friday during College Hour in C-269, according to Bev J. Pasqualetti, CSTA adviser here.

Leff, who has been instrumental in initiating educational television in San Francisco, will speak to the future teachers on the psychology of speech in the classroom. He will also highlight the principles of the language arts as they are applied to educational TV.

Floyd Lehman, CSTA president, introduced the panel members. At the conclusion of the meeting he announced the program schedule for the remainder of the year.

Council Vote Tables Guardsman Budget In Disagreement Over Issue To Get Axe Treatment

By Roy Twitty

Student Council members tabled The Guardsman budget last week when a Finance Committee recommendation to cut the amount of one issue from the budget led to disagreement over which issue is to be cancelled.

Faced with the necessity of balancing an overall Associated Student budget whose requests exceeded available money by $4,000, the Finance Committee asked for the cancellation of the issue.

Agreement was reached, by members present at a meeting of the Publications Board last week, according to Nick Peters, Guardsman Editor-in-Chief, that the final issue would not be published.

(Except for one issue just after the Pearl Harbor disaster in 1941, this is the first time in the 23-year history of the college paper that few than 12 issues will be printed.)

Election results and announcements concerning new AS office holders, usually run in the final issue of The Guardsman, would appear in the first edition next semester.

Special pre-election coverage has been requested by the Student Council in the form of a single sheet issue of The Guardsman with printing on one side, costing over 1½ times the normal cost of a single Guardsman page. This resulted in raising the amount requested, according to Peters, from $3,750.62, which provided for 12 issues, to $3,870.62.

By cutting one issue of The Guardsman, the Finance Committee plans to save $305.62. Thus the Publications Board picked the last issue to be cut in hopes that enough money will be in the council coffers by the semester's end to allow it to be printed.

The motion to table was then made and passed.

An inside source stated, quoting an ex-Student Council member, "The chopping of budgets this semester is the direct result of passing under pressure the largest budget ever allowed any Associated Student sponsored activity—that of football. Last semester it was voted to allot $7,200.00 for this semester's football activities, which is more than $1,000.00 greater than last year's record budget."

Sophomore class funds were among other budgets cut by the Student Council. Originally requesting $758.50, the amount of $698.50 was allotted, of which $250.00 will be paid out to Howard Frederick's band at the Sophomore Ball.

Don Smith, AS card sales chairman, protested the fact that wages higher than union scale will be paid to members of the band. Sophomore class council representative stated, however, that an extra combo as well as a singer will supplement the dance band.

Moonmen Give Views On U.S. Youth, Schools

By Don Seratti

THIS is the third in a series on what the inhabitants of the Moon think about Earth. In this article, they discuss youth and education in the United States.

"Well, aside from television and advertising, what do you think are some of America's other ills?"

"I have been thinking quite deeply also about their concepts of education."

"There is much room for improvement, isn't there?"

"There certainly is, my friend, especially when we consider that education is the basis of everything that happens in America, no matter how one looks at it. And yet, every time I look in on one of their schools, I see some students passing their courses with a minimum of effort. This occurs even as high as on the college level. Schoolwork, in many circles, is regarded as something to be attended to between 9:00 and 3:00 and forgotten about at all other times. And students don't always show proper respect for their instructors."

"I've also noticed that many courses being offered, such as personality development and family living, aren't forcing students to work very hard. Required courses that will eventually if not instantaneously benefit the student, are deplorably conspicuous by their absence. Extra-curricular activities are good, but they are being overemphasized in America to such an extent that many people are forgetting the real meaning of schools and education. Now, what do you propose to ameliorate these shortcomings?"

"In the first place, responsible educators must start bearing down in matters academic and disciplinary. There has been too much laxity in maintaining discipline, in telling the students exactly why they are attend-

Budgeteer Balances Out The Financial Scales

Pressure Blamed On AS Card Sale Slump

Financial lifelines of the college's activities were cut two weeks ago when Ann Finneran, Finance Chairman, was forced to freeze all budgets. Since then the budgets were "defrosted," and she hinted that the crux of the severe initial step was the lack of Associated Student card holders in the activities ranks.

Miss Finneran said she was forced to freeze the budget because of the 100 per cent rule, whereby every member of any budgeted organization must have an AS card. The rule applies to 35 of the college's activities. When the budget was frozen only two of these groups, the Campus Police and the Recreation Association, had submitted lists of 100 per cent participation.

Meanwhile, Don Smith, card sales chairman, announced that sales have reached 2,250, 219 cards short of last fall semester's record of 2,469. He pointed out that card sales will continue until the end of the semester and may be purchased at the student bank.

Smith stated that the sales are starting to slack off; only 20 cards were sold last week. He feels this is due largely to the end of the semester drawing near, and many students think it would be unwise to purchase one so close to its expiration date. Smith pointed out that this is a fallacy, and students should consider the advantages card holders receive.

Lyrics, Farmer, Hamilton Star At Friday Rally

Entertainment by The Lyrics, George Hamilton and Julie Farmer, will be the keynote of a double rally to be presented by the joint effort of the International Relations Club and the Rally Committee, this Friday during College Hour, according to John Dunn, faculty adviser to the Rally Committee.

The biggest rally of the football season, and the first of its kind, will be pushing two things: the 2 p.m. football game against Oakland City College at Kezar, and the IRC's fair and dance that will take place that night.

From 10 to 10:20 a.m. the rally will be in the courtyard for outdoor enthusiasts, but at 10:20 will move down the hill to Smith Hall where the entertainment will continue until 10:40 a.m.

According to Dunn, this type of rally has been requested by many students, and if what they want is presented, it is probable that more students will attend the game as well as the IRC presentation.

With the last "away" game to be played at Modesto Friday, November 14, the Rally Committee urged students to save enough emergency absences to cover the day, for the chartered buses will leave the college at 10 a.m. in order to reach the game by 2 p.m.

The bus fare is offered at a reduced price of $2.75. Tickets can be purchased in the cafeteria until Wednesday, November 12.

At the recent game at Santa Rosa, about 100 students from the college attended, and Dunn expressed his appreciation to the members of the Recreation Association and the Rally Committee who composed the majority of those students.

Oil Film This Friday

Venezuelan oil exploration will be the theme of this Friday's College Hour film in S-136. The film's title is A Mile To El Dorado, with the locale centered about the Lake Maracaibo region in South America.

Attendance at the past film showings has been more than satisfactory, according to Madison Devlin, instructor of audio-visual aids.

Suspense, Romance, Comedy Featured In Petrified Forest Drama Production This Friday

By Donn Bernstein

Death, romance and humor come to the little theater Friday night with the opening of Robert E. Sherwood's The Petrified Forest. Curtain time for the two-act play is 8 p.m., according to Michael J. Griffin, play director.

Other performances will be held November 1, 7, 8, 14, 15. Students with Associated Student cards are admitted free. Admission for students without AS cards is 50c and the adult price is $1. No advanced ticket sales are being held, however, tickets will be available at the little theater box office before each performance, Griffin said. Location of the little theater is the basement level of Science Hall, room 28.

John Rose portrays Alan Squirer, a talented, middle-aged man who feels he has lost his place in society because of his failures. Tom Moorehead is cast as Duke Mantee, a gun-slinging hombre who has just broken out of prison.

Other parts include Bruce Johnson as Boze Hertzlinger, Jordy Cooney at Gramp Maple, David Terry as Mr. Chisholm, Marilyn Banchieri as Mrs. Chisholm, and Jules Farmer as Jackie.

Significant to the plot of the play is the period of time in which the drama takes place, Griffin said. The early 1930's is the setting, an age which followed prohibition and gangsterism and preceded government regulation. Symbolic to that interlude, the characters illustrate individuals of two types, those who compromised dreams are lost, and those whose dreams materialize with fulfillment.

A western environment prevails with the drama opening in the Black Mesa Cafe, located near the Petrified Forest in Arizona. This cafe is the center of all action. Gabby Maple is the cafe waitress and she has the job because her grandfather owns the restaurant.

Gabby meets Alan Squirer as he drops into the cafe for a sandwich, Gabby and Alan discuss varied topics and by doing so reveal certain common interests. Later Alan falls in love with the waitress.

As the play progresses, other characters who are already in the cafe or come in later, try to show their courage and lack of fright, but they all fail, except Squirer. He asks to be shot, and signs his insurance policy over to Gabby. Tense moments follow with a climax that, according to Griffin, "should appeal to the search for realization that is in most of us."

'Loco' Jones

Former Student, Now TV Star, In Bay Area Visit

By Pastor Valle-Garay

Barbara Huffman, former coed who won the Miss San Francisco title while attending the college in 1951, paid a visit to the city last week. She is now well on her way to television and movie stardom.

Miss Huffman arrived last Wednesday to "her city by the Golden Gate" to promote her new TV show, and was officially welcomed at the International Airport, in the name of the college's students, by a delegation headed by Associated Student President Freddie Hicks.

Better known in the theatrical world as Barbara Eden, the green-eyed, auburn-haired beauty is currently starring with two other lovelies, Lori Nelson and Merry Anders, in the TV comedy series How To Marry A Millionaire.

There, her name changes (again?) to Loco Jones "because I just can't keep from messing up things with the plans and wealthy dates of my comrades." She portrays a near-sighted, but-oh-so-shapely, dumb blonde model who always seems to do the cutest wrong things at exactly the wrong time, all the time.

Now, if one wonders how a gal who works seriously 14 hours a day, seven days a week and radiates beauty at night, manages to look great at 9:30 in the morning, this writer does not know.

However, a press conference set for that time at the Clift Hotel brought the following results last Thursday—Barbara looks as lovely as if she didn't do anything but sit pretty all day long. No formula, either.

In addition she is "engaged" for the next seven years to 20th Century-Fox, the producers of the video series. (How To Marry A Millionaire is a nation-wide program seen every Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. on KTVU-Channel 2.)

The show's plot centers around the age-old ambition of the pretty but poor girl whose power of positive thinking leads her to one end—wealth in marriage. Thus, all the ladies want is a lil 'ol millionaire, "any lil 'ol millionaire," says Barbara, who in real life is the trio's only married gal.

Mayor Designates City College Day

With the first alumni reunion slated for this Saturday night, Mayor George Christopher last week proclaimed November 1 City College of San Francisco Day.

The reunion will be a dinner dance at The Village, 901 Columbus Avenue, from 7 p.m. to 2 a.m., according to Edward Frediani, one of the co-chairmen of the Alumni Association and a prominent San Francisco attorney.

A huge crowd of former students from the college and their friends are expected to be on hand, and ticket sales have already gone over the 300 mark. Among those planning to attend are Maury Schwarz, second Associated Student president of the college; Dr. Harold Spears, Superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools and Dr. Louis Conlan, president of the college.

After the dinner, door prizes will be awarded, and dancing to the music of Diek Rheinhart and his band will follow. Also slated for the evening is a program consisting of short speeches to be delivered by Dr. Conlan, Dr. Spears and Schwarz, chairman of the reunion.

Exercise American Heritage By Casting Ballot Next Tuesday

MANY of us are over the age of 21, but does that make us voters? A good American citizen not only exercises his right to vote, but he makes intelligent use of it through unbiased weighing of the facts presented by both sides of a proposition or bond issue and then records his vote. Those of us who have yet to reach the coveted voting age can do our part by stressing to our parents the importance of their vote.

The controversy over Proposition 16, dealing with the taxation of parochial schools, is undoubtedly one of the most controversial issues presented to the California voters for thought before the statewide election next Tuesday, November 4.

By voting yes on "16" one would be favoring the taxation of parochial institutions, i.e., schools run by the Baptist, Catholic, Episcopal, Lutheran and other faiths.

Advocates of taxing these schools state as their reasons: 1—To stop violation of the principle of American separation between Church and State, 2—To stop diversion of public funds to private purposes, 3—To stop suicide of public school system, and 4—To shut flood gates to parochial school expansion at public expense. Their mottos are, "Let them pay the cost themselves," and "Vote yes; the real issue is preservation of American freedoms."

Opponents call these points impressive but question their validity.

In the first place, if parochial schools want to give their students religious training it's their business—as long as they give that training along with a program that parallels the public school curriculum. They do not use public funds. People who send their children to these schools are more than willing to pay the expense; but should the "yes" vote win out they would have to pay double taxes.

The strength of the public schools is not by any means endangered and parochial school expansion is minute in comparison to the larger number of new public schools.

Advocates' mottos could also be better explained. "They" shouldn't have to "pay the cost themselves" because as Americans they do pay taxes for public schools and are saving the boards of education a great deal of money by educating students who normally would attend public schools.

In San Francisco alone, 29,000 students attend parochial schools or roughly 20 per cent of the total school enrollment of 149,000. By educating one-fifth of the San Francisco students, parochial schools in San Francisco save the taxpayers approximately 12½ million dollars—a very large figure as compared to the half million the state would gain from San Francisco County in tax money.

The real issue isn't the preservation of American freedoms because by voting yes on Proposition 16 Californians could appear somewhat un-American since no other state taxes its parochial institutions.

Those who advocate a "NO" vote on 16, among them both the Democratic Party and Republican Assembly, the state legislature by 108 to 3, and the state AFL-CIO have issued sound reasons for a negative attitude on this issue.

They point out that it would raise taxes for a large portion of the population; it would over-load public schools, perhaps forcing more children into half-day sessions; it is an unfair issue aimed at the more prominent religious faiths involved; it is highly un-American; it rejects the historic principle of tax free education, and it is condemned by many prominent people who thoroughly understand the situation.

We can't tell you how to vote but would like to encourage you to weigh the facts and vote democratically. The important thing is to get out and vote on NOvember 4!

Russ TViewers Love No-Pay Quiz Shows

QUIZ SHOWS, which are currently on the downgrade in the United States, are now hitting a new high in Russia, according to a recent article in TV Guide.

Moscow television today features a dilly of a quiz program entitled The Musical Question (English translation) in which there are no contestants, no studio audience, and no big prizes. How is this done? Simple. Home viewers write in both questions and answers to the show and are given tokens in return. This may sound ridiculous to the American viewer, but to the Soviets it's a real treat.

The question game in Russia has gone over so big that quizzes on sculpture, painting, astronomy, and other arts and sciences have been booked for the near future. The main purpose of these programs, as stated by the Moscow television weekly, is to stimulate the interest of farmers, workers, and students and to "activize their initiative."

The Russian people are also demanding shows with humor and light entertainment and they have written many letters to their TV stations, screaming for such programs. Apparently, the average Moscovite prefers Red Skelton's brand of comedy over Krushchev's dull propaganda.

Moscow's two channels also schedule movies and short educational films. However, the Soviets' sense of logic must be warped as the movies are always shown at the same time they are being played at the theaters. The pictures presented include Chinese, Mexican and Indian, and the educational films usually cover such subjects as industry, agriculture, science and education.

Their commercials often run for four minutes but do not boost any one particular brand or product. Viewers are simply urged to read good books and eat ice cream. How liberal can you get?

Reception in Russia is reportedly good and a clear picture generally results. Statistics indicate that there are 43 stations and 2,400,000 sets in the Soviet Union today.

What with the people constantly crying for any new type of show, perhaps for a Halloween present we should send them such "gems" as Howdy Doody, Ding Dong School, and Captain Satellite, a space show in orbit.

What's Going On Behind Those Closed Doors?

Reporter's Curiosity 'Uncovers' Mystery Of Rarely Seen Places On College Grounds

By Jo Ann Griffin

Strange things occur behind closed doors. In some parts of the world closed doors stand for intrigue, mystery or adventure.

Within the confines of the college are such doors. They are shut and silent, but they hold the key to the adventure of learning and the mystery of knowledge.

Behind the elevator on each of the first three floors of Science Hall are three mezzanines seldom seen by any students other than those enrolled in biology, chemistry or physics courses.

The first of these mezzanines opens to S-114. Physics equipment of all types for use in the physics lab are stored in that room.

Chemicals are kept on the second floor mezzanine which opens to 203 and a service window where chemistry students obtain the various chemicals needed in experiments.

Snakes, mice and other animals for biology experiments are in the third floor mezzanine near 306. Botany department students keep plants for various uses in the same room.

Films and slides for educational purposes are also in this mezzanine.

The drama department has its hidden rooms which are as vital to its life as the store rooms are to that of the science classes.

Room 103 holds a wide assortment of items of clothing. These are the dresses, hats, suits, coats and materials from which students comprise the costumes used in Little Theater productions. Band uniforms and the caps and gowns worn at commencement make up the remainder of the particulars kept there.

Plays and dramas are produced in the little theater, which is located in the basement of Science Hall. From the front of the room the lights and sound are controlled. Special sound effects for plays come from recordings and records, the equipment for which is in another corner of the basement. A microphone for speech classes is also located there.

Make-up rooms contain a great variety of grease-paint and accessories used to make the actors look like the people they represent in plays.

Room 19 is one of the most important rooms to the little theater, for it is there that most of the props are made. Sewing machines, costume patterns, a lathe and drill set, lumber, plywood, scenery, chairs, tables, benches and other furniture, cabinets and other odds and ends are the evidence of past plays and predictions of those in the future.

Gasless Wonders Solve Parking!

New Age Dawns With Four Wheelers Obsolete

By J. Edward Bing

Down Stanford way and at campuses across the land, something new in transportation threatens the whole era of expanding parking lots. Collegiates by the thousands are now speeding to their academic confabs on two-wheeled, motorless contraptions called bicycles.

Relatively simple in construction, these new-fangled conveyances use no petrol, emit no smelly fumes, and are easy to manipulate. They do require an acute sense of balance and the rider's ability to operate both feet and legs with revolving energy unlike the traditional accelerator foot-push method.

But it seems only college students are acclaiming these economical modes of transportation. Certain professions, long a part of the American business scene, are frankly concerned with rising sales and unprecedented popularization of bicycles.

The Portland Cement folks are justifiably worried, for a continued switch to spokes could put them smack out of business. Small-sized and light weight, bikes do not require acreages of cement parking lots, curbs, or massive concrete retaining walls.

Detroit, already retooling for smaller cars, may skip that phase entirely and set its massive assembly lines to accommodate these chain-driven vehicles. It's reported one firm has the '61 swept-wing bikes on the drawing boards now.

Police, too, are worried. For if two-wheelers don't make the flatfoots non-essentials altogether, the bicycle age will demand they rewrite their 238 manuals on illegal parking. Up to now little has been said to determine just when, where, and how spokemobnes can be tagged.

The zoning commission says campus lawns may soon be seeded with green, yellow, and red grass, but repainting pedestrian cross-walks after every mowing could prove unfeasible and expensive.

The bicycle age "sense of urgency" has hit campus hierarchy. Officials agree that gas discounts now offered to card-bearing students may be replaced with "specials" on quick-energy chocolate bars at Safeway. Ram's head fender ornaments may serve as parking permits.

Undoubtedly those most dejected and dismayed by the spoked revolution are parking planners, those dedicated individuals who once foresaw the day when parking lots clear to the front door replaced the college campus. New buildings and campuses, formerly designed with paved accommodations for motorized commuters and interwoven thoroughfares, will now have spacious frontiers of fertile green grass.

Unfortunately, bicycles are expensive, some costing upwards of $50. Until long-term financing and good used bike lots come into being, the shift to shiftless vehicles remains for the privileged few.

Shots At Ramdom
By Jack Wellington

SOMETHING seems to be amiss in this modern world of ours. People have become so dependent upon artificial means to regulate their lives, that just about every one is guilty of carrying on their person at least one little bottle of pills. No-Doz pills to keep them awake, tranquilizers to soothe their shattered nerves, and sleeping pills to put them to sleep. Smoke-no-more pills have replaced good old will power, vitality pills take the place of energy giving foods. The list goes on and on. A die-hard student is just waiting for the next two types of pills to appear on the market. Study pills taken with a supplementary diet of wealthy pills.

JUNIOR HIGH girls are at a rather awkward stage of life, (as no doubt some of our own coeds can tell you): too young to go steady and too old to play with dolls. This has led to a strange sense of values as one father found out. Daddy asked his growing pride and joy what it was she wanted most out of life. With dewy-eyes and an ecstatic smile, she ahswered, "Oh, Daddy, if only once I could see Elvis whirl a hula hoop, I'd die happy."

Mustangs Stampede, Crush Ram Gridders 38-12 Behind Potent Turf, Aerial Attack

By Jim Clifford

Stockton College's Mustangs drew first blood and were never headed as they handed the college's Rams a 38-12 lacing last Saturday night on College of the Pacific's Baxter Field.

This loss dropped the Rams' record to 1-2. Sacramento's Panthers remain the Big Eight Conference's only undefeated eleven, leading the league with a 3-0 slate after upending Oakland 24-22. Modesto and Santa Rosa are runners-up with 2-1 marks.

Mustang halfback Ray Heinrich burst through the San Francisco line in the first quarter and galloped 70 yards for a touchdown before the game was three minutes old. Heinrich tucked in qb Pete Valentine's pass to add the PAT, making it Stockton, 8-0.

Gene Craft and Don Baikie started the Rams moving in first quarter play with Craft running the end for 30 yards and Baikie faking a kick and barreling 45 yards to the Stockton 42.

A series of Craft runs and Baikie passes set the Rams deep in scoring territory, but the Mustang line held and they took over on their own 15.

Two plays later L. G. Shields hit Mustang Isaiah Simpson hard enough to make the Stockton end fumble and the Rams had possession again. Following a series of plays, Gene Craft bulled over from the one, culminating a 96-yard drive, briefly interrupted by two Stockton plays. Craft's PAT attempt failed, making it Stockton 8, Rams 6.

Second quarter action found Stockton's Waymond Hall scoring from the 21. Versatile Hall then brought in a Heinrich pat pass to keep Stockton in front, 16-6.

Mustang Willie Simpson, adding insult to injury, intercepted a Baikie pass 12 plays later and ran 17 yards to paydirt. Hall made the PAT, putting the Stockton group way out in front, 24 to 6.

Momentarily reversing the tables, Pete Schneli grabbed a wayward pass, only to be hit by guard Jerry Ranghiasci and fumbling, which put the Rams on their own 48.

Looking like a new team, the Rams closed the edge when Baikie hit Mel Sims in the end zone with a 32-yard pass that brought the college to 12 against the home team's 24.

The second half looked like the first when Heinrich burst up the middle again on a 23-yard td jaunt. Heinrich's PAT failed, making it 30-12, Stockton's lead.

Third quarter play saw Ram qb Don Baikie piled on time and time again. At one point Baikie was literally smothered by 233-lb. Mustang tackle Pat Mulloy, whose action brought penalty, but not dismissal.

The final Mustang tally came on an 82-yard drive that ended with a 3-yard scoring run by Rich Spiekerman. Valentine's PAT pass to Hall ended the game—Stockton 38, Rams 12.

Rams Favored For Friday Grid Clash; T-Birds Tough Foe

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Moving into the fourth cog of a rugged Big Eight grind, Grover Klemmer's Ram delegation kick off Homecoming festivities this Friday afternoon, tangling with the Thunderbirds from Oakland College at Kezar at 2 p.m.

Although the T-Birds cannot be considered too serious a threat to the Rams, they still boast eight returning starters from last season's eleven, and field a slim, outside chance of turning the tables on the Phelan Avenue eleven.

Led by the golden arm of qb Larry Albright, the pass receiving of veteran ends Bill Herrera and Rolf Dahl, highlighted by the hard running of fullback Joe Crimson and the rugged performances of a hard-charging front line, the T-Birds will be giving their all to throw ice water on the local Homecoming celebration.

However, the spirited play of one of the toughest Ram lines in history, teaming up with a flashy backfield which revolves around the brilliant dashes of Gene Craft, should prove too much for the East Bayers to contain.

Potential Cagers To Meet This Saturday

Ram basketball mentor, Sid Phelan, announced yesterday that all cagers who are interested in playing on the 1958-59 hoop squad must be at the team's first practice this Saturday, November 1, at 9:30 a.m. in the men's gymnasium.

After the first meeting, practice sessions will be held daily at 3 p.m.

Last year's team won the Modesto State tournament, and took second, behind Oakland, in the Big Eight conference play.

Sac Halfback Proves San Mateo Undoing

By George Grasso

THE ONLY two undefeated teams in the Big Eight Conference bucked heads at the San Mateo High School field October 18, when the high flying College of San Mateo Bulldogs ran into the solid Sacramento Panthers and came out on the short end of an 18 to 8 score.

San Mateo's undoing was mainly brought about by Sac's halfback Frank Robinson, who packed the ball for 205 yards.

The 100 per cent improved Bulldogs weren't improved enough to crack the Sacramento defense. Mateo's offensive, that had averaged over 300 yards in the first three games, was almost stopped by the big Panthers. The Bulldogs gained 49 yards on the ground and 98 in the air for 147 net yards, while the Panthers ran up 225 on the ground and 96 in the air for a total of 321.

As of October 18, this win left Sacramento's slate clean as the Panthers won both pre-season games and had a 2-0 record in league wars to lead the Big Eight Conference along with Santa Rosa. Santa Rosa got her second league win, edging the Rams 14 to 7.

The big action of the October 18 weekend, however, was brought off by Oakland. The T-Birds, a four-touchdown underdog, whipped Stockton 28 to 24.

A pass from the Air Force quarterback was completed to one of his ends, whereupon the receiver ran amuck into Fisher and fell to the ground. Of course, the play was called dead right there.

The Stanford rooting section promptly went wild and gave a Big Six for Bill Fisher. And up in the CBS broadcast booth, announcer Don Klein was quick to credit Fisher with the stop.

One of the most spirit-packed sports at the college is soccer, and it is beginning to challenge football, basketball and track for odd ball action.

Take the San Francisco State game.

While being defeated by the Rams, the mother of a State player screamed that one of the college's kickers, namely Ed Zelaya, was playing for a Sunday League squad.

Since college players are not to participate in any league when playing for their institution, up popped State's coach, promptly deciding to play the game under protest. This didn't help them, however; they were downed 7 to 2.

As for Zelaya, he did not figure in any Sunday teams' lineup this year. When the collegiate season is over, he plans to play for Nicaragua A. C., a club which bears the name of the country from which the State player's mother came . . . as well as Zelaya.

In the entire athletic history of the University of California only five men have ever won three varsity letters in the combination of football, basketball and track. One of these men is Grover Klemmer, the college's head football coach.

Klemmer blew open the 1941 Pacific Coast Conference meet at Berkeley, setting records in the 440, 880 and then helping to set one in the mile relay. His 440 mark of 46.4 and the mile relay time of 3:09.4 still stand, but the 880 record of 1.51.7 was shattered recently.

While in the Navy, he was selected to the All-Service eleven while playing for the Great Lakes Training Center squad, which was coached by Paul Brown of Detroit Lion fame.

Brown wanted Klemmer to play for the Lions when he returned to civilian life. He wasn't the only coach who asked for Klemmer's services; so did the Chicago Bears and the now defunct Los Angeles Dons.

Klemmer passed up the tempting offers of pro football to coach here, where he introduced the "T" formation to the Rams and guided them to a Big Eight Championship in 1948.

His fame eventually spread beyond the sports pages and into Hollywood, because he almost went there to leap from tree to tree as Tarzan for RKO Pictures.

Producer Joe Murton was combing the nation's campuses in 1948 in search of a prospect to fill the loin cloth that Johnny Weismuller was soon to vacate.

Brutus Hamilton, Klemmer's UC track coach, recommended the youthful, blond grid coach to Murton. He looked Klemmer over, but thought he was too young and slim to play the jungle role.

Intramurals Enter Second Week With Strong IFC, CAB Competition

Simultaneous games tonight bring Associated Men Student basketball play into its second week of intramural action.

Tonight's games pit squads from the Inter-Fraternity Council bracket of the AMS league, which consists of two conferences, one composed of teams from the IFC and the other of Club Activities Board squads.

The first game gets underway at 7 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, and brings together Kappa Rho and Phi Delta. Simultaneously, Zeta Phi and Beta Phi play in the women's gymnasium.

Following the initial game, Alpha Phi Epsilon and Beta Tau take the court in the men's gymnasium at 8 p.m., while Gamma Phi and Lambda Phi battle in the women's gymnasium.

Tomorrow night CAB teams hit the floor, with the Celtics vying against the Filipino Club at 7 p.m. in the men's gymnasium. At 7:30 p.m., The Guardsman meets the Hotel and Restaurant Society in the women's gymnasium. At 8 p.m., the Recreation Association faces the International Relations Club in the men's gymnasium.

Next Tuesday the action shifts back to the IFC squads. The 7 p.m. contest features Alpha Phi Epsilon and the Phi Delts in the men's gymnasium, while Lambda Phi and Beta Phi play on the women's gymnasium court. The second game, at 8 p.m., brings Beta Tau and Gamma Phi together in the men's gymnasium, while Kappa Rho and Zeta Phi play on the other court.

First week fraternity results found Lambda Phi edging out Beta Tau 21-20, last season's IFC winner Gamma Phi Epsilon a 57-25 winner over Zeta Phi, Alpha Phi Epsilon victorious over Kappa Rho 39-18 and Phi Beta Delta crushing Beta Phi, 54-10.

CAB results found Riekey Ross edging the RA 28-27 in the feature, H&R clobbering the IRC 37-18 and the Filipino Club besting the Guardsman, 32-28.

Ed O'Donnell (PBD) and Dennis Shutter (GPE) paced the IFC scorers with 26 and 18 points, respectively.

RA Head Appoints Two New Officers

Two new offices have been created in the Recreation Association council because of increase in membership as well as a stronger affiliation of the association with college functions this semester, according to Sandy Simonian, RA president.

Miss Simonian last week appointed Chuck Zanardi and Lucy West as election commissioners. Since the RA is under the athletic code of the college, it is necessary for all members who are eligible for athletic awards to hold an average grade of "C".

One duty of the election commissioners is to check grade point averages as well as to make sure that all RA members are Associated Student members. They also have the power to remove from office any council members who fail to do their job, and in January they assist the president in the task of deciding which athletic club will receive the spirit plaque. The election commissioners' job is completed at the end of the semester after they have reviewed the petitions of members filing to run for the RA office.

In an interview last week, Zanardi pointed out that the RA is not only concerned with athletics, but it encourages support of all college functions as well as other activities sponsored by various clubs on the campus. He also added that the RA tries to promote interest in student government, and that at the present time quite a large majority of members are active in some phase of student government.

Ram Harriers Meet Modestans Tuesday

Harriers Paul Patton and Blake Westman will lead the Ram cross country squad against Modesto College next Tuesday, November 4, in the fourth of a series of dual meets.

The Ram pacers, who do not appear in regular league competition with other two-year colleges, have arranged two meets with Sacramento and Oakland before their partieipation in the Northern California Junior College Championships to be held at Diablo Valley College Saturday, November 22.

Kickers Lose To Cal 3-1; Battle Aggies Saturday

By Pastor Valle-Garay

University of California's soccermen not only handed the college's eleven a 3-1 decision last Saturday at the Beach Chalet field but, in doing so, dropped the team to a second place position in this year's race for the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference's title.

This is the second year in a row that the Bears beat the Rams while being overpowered by the Red and White kickers. The loss gave the University of San Francisco Dons, for the last ten years NCISC champions, sole control of the league's top spot as they have won all their three commitments so far. It also made the Rams' chances for a shot at the title somewhat dubious.

They will be traveling to Davis this Saturday where the college, now with a 2 win, 1 loss record, is scheduled to meet the Cal Aggies at 11 a.m. The last time these two teams played, the Rams defeated the Aggies with a score of 8-0. This year, though, the Aggies, reinforced by a group of newcomers from South America, have apparently become a better team than last year's and a major threat for the NCISC's championship.

Whether they were downhearted by the loss to Cal or not, the college booters didn't say or show it offhand.

In last Saturday's action, the men from Berkeley came up with a couple of quick attacks against the college's defensive line and successfully blasted the Ram goalkeeper twice in the first quarter of play.

From then on, it was the college's game as far as dominating it was concerned. The Rams completely outplayed the Bears, bottled them up constantly but could never realize the key plays that would bring home the two tallies they needed to tie the contest.

Fifty minutes, almost the game's length, were gone before the college boosters could save themselves from a shutout. All-American Roland Prydz did it for the Rams as he, switched from his usual halfback position to the forward line, scored in brilliant play their lone goal. Minutes after Cal took all hope away from the Rams as the Bears' third point crossed past the college's goal post.

Soph-Prof Game? Sophs Prefer Frosh

The traditional Soph-Prof basketball game is being shunned like the plague this year. Scheduled during a double College Hour during Soph Week for the past eight years, the Soph-Prof game has seen 15 Soph teams wither before the might of the Profs, with but one Soph team victory.

Rather than face the muscular Prof squad again this year, the Sophs would rather turn their vengeance upon the Frosh.

Conflicting reasons have been given for this unprecedented change. The Sophs say that a contest between them and the faculty would not be favorable because the Profs are too "dignified" to play with students. "We would rather play the Frosh," said one Soph, "to promote competition between the two classes."

The Profs are reluctant to engage the Sophs again because they are "too old for such a strenuous game." In the past the Profs have shown little "dignity" upon the floor as they overwhelmed the Soph quintets by sheer force and effective body blocks, led by Alex "The Buil" Schwarz, Grover "Killer" Klemmer, "Rugged" Ralph Hillsman and "Elephant Arm" Sid Phelan.

CJCSGA Upholds 'C' Average For Student Athletes

By Lee Anderson

Major resolutions adopted by the Regional California Junior College Student Government Association Conference, held at Diablo Valley College at Concord October 18, may lead to changes in some two-year college regulations.

After much deliberation, delegates representing 24 Northern Region junior colleges stood by a resolution adopted at the State Conference last spring, stating that all students participating in athletics must have at least a C average.

During a heated debate concerning the resolution, it was pointed out that students enter college to get an education, not to participate in sports, and that if students place more importance upon sports than scholastic standing, then they should be dropped from both sports and college.

The opponents to this theory argued that the resolution was discriminating against certain sports and participants. The resolution was overwhelmingly upheld.

The Veterans Workshop chairman, Don Smith, presented a resolution stating that the veterans organization from each college should have one delegate present at the State Convention. This resolution was based on the grounds that the veterans organization is often attacked as a "Do-nothing-but-party" organization and that it should be represented in order to defend itself.

Adoption of a new constitution proved to be the most interesting and most controversial topic of the conference.

Many delegates felt that because many of the college delegates had been excused, a caucus no longer existed, and that voting on the constitution was out of order.

Others felt that the constitution provided for the dismissal of delegates and that a caucus did exist. Therefore, voting on the constitution was in order. Finally, it was moved and passed to set constitutional regulations aside.

Modesto City College was selected as host for the Spring 1959 CJCSGA Regional Conference before the conference was adjourned.

Featuring performances by more than 100 students from various parts of the world, currently attending the college, the International Relations Club will present its Fifth Annual International Fair at the Riordan High School Auditorium this Friday, October 31, starting at 7:45 p.m.

Music, songs and dances from these students' native lands plus an exhibition of their respective countries' products, foods and fashions will be part of the evening's program.

Following the stage show, a dance to Latin and American music has been scheduled to be held at Smith Hall from 10 p.m. to midnight.

"We expect the show to be an even greater success than last year's when the Smith Hall locale was completely packed. The students played to a capacity crowd then, and as far as I can see now, this year's fair will be at least a repeat performance of that presented in 1957," Joseph M. Jacobsen, IRC sponsor, commented.

Two television appearances, one to take place tomorrow at 3:30 p.m. on Ted Randall's KPIX-Channel 5 show, and another made this morning over the same channel for the Charlie Dugdale show, will preview to San Francisco TV fans the fair's program.

Highlights of the event will be the Philippine's Bao dance, Japan's cherry blossom season dance, Latin America's tangos, mambos and cha chas, as well as American numbers by a barbershop quartet and a jazz combo.

Six foreign-born models will take care of the fashions side of the fair. They will parade during the affair showing the changes fashions have gone through from the 18th to the 20th century.

Invitations to members of the consular corps, city officials and other personalities who, according to Jacobsen, "have generally responded enthusiastically to the IRC's top celebration," are now being distributed.

Open to the general public, admittance to the show will be 75 cents for the college's students and $1 for others.

Pledges Select Sororities Today; Rushees Fill Out Preference Slips

Prospective pledges must select their sorority preference today in S-150, according to Ann Thuss, Inter-Sorority Council president.

Each rushee will fill out a preference slip to indicate her choice of sorority. She will pick up her invitation to pledge after 2 p.m. tomorrow in S-150. The pledges should respond to the invitations immediately, Miss Thuss warned.

The ISC constitution states that no rushee will receive an invitation to pledge a sorority unless she has a C average and is carrying at least 12 units. A rushee who is unable to pledge this semester because of these requirements may rush again next semester.

Miss Thuss added that to avoid high pressure salesmanship, there will be a period of silence which will last from the preference hours to the time a pledge receives her bid. In observation of the silence time, there must not be any conversation between members of sororities and pledges.

During the Friday College Hour, there will be a meeting of all the pledges in S-100. Each pledge will be seated with the sorority from which she has accepted an invitation.

The chief reason for this meeting will be to plan the responsibilities that pledges will carry in the Associated Women Student fashion show and tea which will be held next Wednesday, November 5.

Miss Thuss added that there will be no pledge activities during that day or evening because of the fashion show and tea. She further stated that pledge instruction will be held this Sunday, November 2.

Dinners, Parties, 'Fair' Highlight Social Activities

By Kathie Burns

DINNERS, luncheons, service projects, parties, and a "fair" are just some of the activities being held this week by the various organizations around campus.

Foods, customs and dancing to music from every corner of the world will highlight the International Fair this Friday night. The fair, given annually by the International Relations Club, is to be held in Riordan High School auditorium beginning at 7:45 p.m.

Beta Tau fraternity will hold its third and final rushing affair this Sunday. The affair will be for the accepting of new brothers into the fraternity.

Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority is currently working on its service project for the semester. This year the members are working with the Hotel & Restaurant Society in making refreshments to take to the Laguna Honda Home at Thanksgiving.

Students interested in reorganizing the college's Christian Science organization will meet in C-101 every College Hour. This organization is trying to get started again, and assistance in appointing a committee to nominate officers will be appreciated.

Educational Help Available For Vets

Veterans who served in the armed forces between June 27, 1950, and January 31, 1955, and are residents of California, may be eligible for California Veterans educational assistance, according to Sections 980 and 981 of the California Military and Veterans Code.

Ex-servicemen who have used up their educational entitlement under the Federal GI Bill of Rights or who have let too much time lapse between discharge, from service and registration in college to receive the GI Bill may be eligible for state benefits as high as $40 a month.

In order to be eligible a veteran must have been a resident of California at the time of his enlistment into the armed forces, be enrolled for 12 or more semester units, and maintain grade standards consistent with his educational objectives.

Additional information may be obtained at the veterans counseling office in S-134 or by visiting the State Department of Veterans Affairs at 515 Van Ness Avenue.

December 11 Deadline For Candidate Petition

Candidates for Spring, 1959, Associated Student office must submit their petitions on or before December 11, Gene Bunch, newly appointed Election Commissioner, announced.

Petitions may be submitted to Dean Ralph Hillsman or to Bunch in the AS office in B-2. Bunch will be holding office hours on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 1 p.m. in the AS office.

Bunch is making plans to have four polling places situated around campus on election days. The spots he has picked are as follows: the first floor of Science Hall, in the court near the library, between the two gymnasiums, and inside the cafeteria.

This semester's election rally will be held during College Hour on January 9, and election days are January 12 and 13. The election rally will give students a chance to meet the election candidates and hear their platform speeches, Bunch said.

ing school, and in placing a heavy emphasis on what they call 'the three R's.' How are students ever going to think for themselves and be aware of what is going on around them if they are allowed to bypass certain difficult courses they think they will dislike?"

"It seems to me that most high school students don't know what they want to do."

"What do you think about freedom of discussion in classrooms?"

"Well, in courses like history, political science and economics, all views should be covered. If a teacher is going to explain capitalism, he should also answer questions about socialism willingly. Students have a right to hear both sides of any argument and reach their own conclusions. If America's way of life is so far superior as many claim, it will gain by being compared with opposing outlooks."

"Very poignant ideas. What do you have to say about indifferent parents in America?"

"I think many of America's parents are neglecting their parental responsibilities when they fail to adequately prepare their children for the problems of adolescence and subsequent adulthood. Youths appear to be reaching adulthood and assuming responsibilities at an earlier age, but in reality they are, for the most part, quite immature. All that the Americans can do in this respect is to educate today's youth properly in hopes they will become responsible parents."

"You're right; and only when children can be made to see these things we've talked about, will they grow up to be sensible adults who can and will put an end to such sores as racial prejudice, the high divorce rate, and conformity. For example, in the type of society which would evolve, certain segregationists would be tarred and feathered."

"Every time I looked at and listened in on the United States I used to think that since everyone appeared to be so happy and satisfied, there was really no room for reform. 'How can such an apparently successful nation have any flaws?' I thought. But when I peered into the people's lives and thoughts I soon saw otherwise. It was then that I discovered how imperceptible these ills are to people living on Earth. It takes someone in a vantage point like ours to notice them."

"Say, isn't Europe experiencing trouble with its youth also?"

"Yes, and much of it stems from the enormous influence the youth of America seem to have on the rest of the Earth's children."

"Well, perhaps if America's youngsters can be made to influence the rest of Earth's children, everyone will settle back to play with hula hoops, dance ludicrous dances and drive hotrods, and the Earth's problems will be dissipated overnight."

"You, my friend, are unduly sarcastic. I'm sure we can find a better solution for them than that."

Coeds To Model At AWS Fashion Show

Models have been chosen for the semi-annual Associated Women Student fashion show, entitled Around The World In 80 Days, to be held next Wednesday at 3 p.m. in the college's cafeteria.

They are Carol Greenblat from the Recreation Association, Mavis Hung, the Chinese Students Club, and Evonne Weiss from Gamma Kappa Beta, substituting for Sandy Courtenenche.

Nine coeds from International Relations Club modeling their native costumes have also been selected. These include Ari Wong, Thailand; Dolores Cruz, Philippines; Saiko Suzuki, Japan; Margarita Aparicio, Guatemala; Diana Botto, Jordan; Sonja Gonzales, Nicaragua; Duky Kim, Korea; Roxana Kiwi, Germany, and Sonja Singson, Philippines.

Background music and special decorations will add an international atmosphere to the affair, at which fashions from Joseph Magnin will be shown.

All women students are invited to attend the style show, Kitty Stein, AWS president, said.

The sun's light reaches the earth in slightly less than eight minutes; it takes nearly five and one-half hours to reach Pluto.

Men's Glee Club, Choir Rehearsing For Concert

Carrying a 23-year-old tradition back to the college for the 24th time, members of the Men's Glee Club and A Cappella Choir are currently rehearsing for a Christmas concert scheduled for December 11 and 12, Robert Morton, choir director here, announced last week.

The cafeteria will be the setting for the Thursday, December 11, performance, and the concert slated for Friday, December 12, will be held in the library. Times are 8 p.m. and College Hours, respectively.

Featured in this year's production will be pantomime artists and modern dancers. They are being furnished for the show by the women's physical education department, Morton added.

Keep Appointment Or Lose Early Reg Number

Failure to keep counseling appointments for program planning will result in the loss of registration numbers, Waddington Blair of the counseling department warned today.

It is important, he emphasized, that all students keep their appointments as scheduled. If they cannot keep their appointments, they are advised to telephone or call in person at the counseling office prior to the time of the appointment to request a new appointment, Blair added.

World Peace Is Possible, Moonmen Say

By Don Seratti

This is the last of a series on what the inhabitants of the Moon think about Earth. In this article they discuss America, its relation to the rest of the Earth, and some solutions for current political and economic differences.

"We have covered America's internal flaws pretty thoroughly and I think we agree that the remedy for that country is to achieve a well-informed populace that can think for itself."

"Of course, since the country in its outward appearance seems devoid of flaws in the eyes of most of its citizens, things might have to get worse before people become aware of their problems. My guess is that if their government continues to lose prestige all over the Earth, Americans won't be able to remain ignorant of foreign affairs even if they try. America's position abroad will have to get bad enough to affect the daily lives of the American people before they will open their eyes to the sad facts."

"I think that if people are suddenly denied some of the conveniences they now take for granted, they will want to know the reason why. If they discover that their country's foreign policy is partially responsible, they will start taking a closer interest in such affairs."

"Right now the Americans resemble the people of ancient Pompeii, sitting complacently in their homes, completely oblivious of the dangers facing them. What Mt. Vesuvius did to Pompeii, a continuation of narrow-minded foreign policy can do to America."

"Do you feel that a proper system of education, among other things, will start people thinking again?"

"Yes. A successful nation, especially one that hopes to lead others, has got to have an inquiring, aware public. Only when people are attentive enough to criticize their country's institutions can that country maintain

New National Defense Education Act Makes $1,000 Loans Available Soon For Full-Time Students In College

By Brun Imberg

Loans up to $1,000 per year will soon be available to students attending institutions of higher learning on a full-time basis, according to the new National Defense Education Act which was passed in the last session of Congress.

There is no information as to when this college will apply for a loan fund, Dr. Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator, Division of Education here, announced recently. Anderson is confident that definite information on the subject will be known by the end of this month.

Under the terms of this act, Congress has authorized an appropriation of $48,500,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1959, toward the establishment at institutions of higher education of loan funds to provide low interest loans for students pursuing an education.

The money will be allotted to the states on the basis of the relative number of persons enrolled in colleges and universities within the state. The State Commissioner of Education will allot money to each college subscribing for a loan fund.

In order to be eligible a student must have a definite need for the loan in order to pursue a course of study, be capable of maintaining good standing in such a course, and have been accepted for enrollment as a full-time student.

Special consideration will be given to students who have a superior academic background and are planning to become teachers in elementary or secondary schools, or to students whose academic background shows a superior capacity in science, mathematics or a modern language.

Eligible students may borrow up to $1,000 for each year, not to exceed $5,000 over the whole educational period.

Repayment at three per cent interest is to begin one year after a student stops pursuing a full-time course of study, and is to end 11 years thereafter, unless the repayment period is extended for a good cause.

Speakers Moved To Control Hi-Fi

A solution was reached last week to the problem caused when music from Hi-Fi concerts, held regularly at College Hour in the little theater, penetrated the first floor of Science Hall.

The solution involves moving the four speakers which are located near ventilators through which the music, in full volume, reached the first floor.

John Rose, who originally had the idea of starting the Hi-Fi concerts last summer, and Chuck Huntley, who recently organized the concerts for College Hours, stated that the one this Friday is the seventh concert this semester and that there are definite plans to continue.

Huntley added that the concerts have been very well attended despite the fact that the volume must be turned down to prevent disturbances.

"Van Cliburn will be heard in the future on several recordings which I have just ordered," Huntley remarked. Selections of Toscanini, who Huntley believes was the best of conductors, and the NBC Symphony Orchestra will be played during many of the concerts.

Jules Farmer, a student starring in the current production here of The Petrified Forest, has a collection of recordings that will be played at concerts in the near future.

AWS Fashions Shown Today Range From Sportswear To Formals, Native Costumes

By Beverly Meek

Styles ranging from Bermudas and campus clothes to dressy dresses, cocktail dresses and semi-formals will be featured today at the semi-annual Associated Women Student fashion show and tea, entitled Around The World In 80 Days, starting at 3 p.m. in the college cafeteria.

Honored at the show will be senior high school women from nearby areas. Invitations have been sent to Abraham Lincoln, Lowell, Mission, Balboa, Galileo, George Washington and Polytechnic, Kitty Stein, AWS president, said.

The group modeling is composed of one coed from each of the eight sororities on campus, one each from the AWS, Recreation Association and the Chinese Students Club and nine from the International Relations Club. The IRC group will model their native costumes.

Each model will make approximately four changes of attire, and the nine foreign students will also be hostesses for the function.

Entertainment on the agenda will be provided by AWS member Virginia Shimmon, who will sing the show's theme-song and two other selections.

Background music to the tune of 80 Days and a display of international flags and hellum-filled balloons are expected to provide a foreign flavor to the attraction.

George Morf, Sophomore Class president, will be commentator, and Gertrude Norgard, acting dean of women, is sponsor of the affair at which fashions from Joseph Magnin's will be shown. Miss Stein declared that the price range of these styles will not exceed $45.

Refreshments, cookies and punch will be served in the cafeteria.

AWS officers working with Miss Stein are Miss Christoffersen, corresponding secretary, and Miss Kordoules, recording secretary.

All women from the college are invited to attend the style show, and Miss Stein added that they are also urged to come to the AWS meetings which are held every Tuesday at 1 p.m. in S-150.

Beta Phi Beta To Hold Dance Friday

Beta Phi Beta fraternity will present its annual Golden Slippers dance this Friday night at the Forest Hill Lodge, 266 Laguna Honda Boulevard, across from the Seventh Avenue Reservoir, according to Joe Fitzpatrick, fraternity treasurer.

Highlight of the evening will be the selection of a "Golden Slipper Girl." The woman at the dance whose foot size corresponds exactly with the size of the fraternity's golden slipper will win the contest and the slipper.

Dress for the affair will be semi-formal, cocktail dresses for the women and suits and ties for the men. There will be dancing from 9 p.m. until midnight to the music of Jimmy Price's orchestra.

Tickets can be secured for $2.00 a couple at the door of the dance, from any fraternity member or from the booth set up in Smith Hall.

Pledge Week Hazing Halts For Tea Today

Pledge Week hazing, involving approximately 65 pledges and eight sororities, will halt today only, because of the Associated Women Student fashion show, according to Ann Thuss, president of the Inter-Sorority Council.

The four-day initiation program began last Monday and will continue through Friday. The reason for discontinuing hazing today is that each sorority is participating in the fashion show, and pledges have been assigned specific duties.

A number of joints are being held throughout the week where pledges must generally do whatever their sisters desire.

300 At Alumni Reunion Dinner

More than 300 of the college's alumni and their friends were on hand to celebrate "City College of San Francisco Day" at the first grand alumni reunion, held at The Village, 901 Columbus Avenue, last Saturday night.

November 1 was declared official "City College of San Francisco Day" by Mayor George Christopher in recognition of the affair, and Alumni Association leaders are hoping that it will become a tradition each year.

Head Custodian Decries Student Litter Habits

By Jo Ann Griffin

With one daytime janitor for approximately every 550 students, a pressing problem is the refusal of students to use the numerous receptacles placed around the campus, according to Dennis Ponan, maintenance custodian.

The bulk of janitorial work is done by 17 workers on night duty, while there are 11 janitors during the day. These men must not only clean up after 6,000 day students but also after 1,300 evening students, the total of whom create an increase work load.

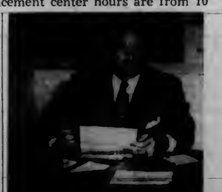
One of these areas is the lawn near the cafeteria where plates, dishes and silverware are often strewn about, although a cafeteria regualtion forbids the removal of dishes from the cafeteria by the students.

The basement of Science Hall is another source of needless litter. Coffee is frequently carried to other rooms and is spilled on the stairs and in the hallways. Coke and coffee cups are carelessly tossed anywhere making an unsightly mess.

A quite unsatisfactory matter is the burning of linoleum which sometimes occurs when cigarets are thrown on the floor and stepped on.

Another serious problem area is the vicinity of the gymnasiums where paper and other trash is dumped on the ground by students who eat their lunches there. The situation is also poor on the hill between Science Hall and the cafeteria.



In addition to cleaning up after students, Ponan said, the janitors have many other duties such as unlocking the doors in the morning, turning on the lights, making minor repairs and distributing heavy mail and supplies.

Post Office Jobs Top List Of Christmas Employment; Vets Given First Choice In Selection

By Donn Bernstein

Post office jobs currently top the list of offerings for Christmas employment, Joseph A. Amori, placement director here, announced last week.

Post office policy allows veterans first choice for employment, and applications for Christmas postal assistants are available at the placement center, S-187. Placement center hours are from 10 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Applicants are personally screened, and vets are urged to bring their certificate of honorable discharge with them, Amori said. The former military men have an edge over non-vets in that applications have been set aside for veterans until Monday, November 10. There are no openings for women, except those who are veterans, Amori added.

Applications for non-veterans interested in postal work will be available at a later date to be announced by the Post Office Department. When the placement center receives this information, the date will be announced over the campus carrier system. Despite veteran preference, Amori is confident that there will be many postal vacancies left for the non-vets.

Veterans eligible for early applications must have entered the armed forces for a period of not less than two years before July 1, 1955.

Potential Christmas postal helpers are required to be at least 18 years of age, as evidenced by a selective service card, a resident of the City and County of San Francisco, and a United States citizen. No one may work with the post office if he has had a criminal record or if he has been previously dismissed from a government job.

Three main divisions of postal work constitute the scheduled Christmas employment program. Truck drivers are needed, men are wanted to assist with the air-mail as it arrives at the San Francisco Airport, and postal carriers must be furnished to help regular postmen deliver mail to business and residential districts. Wages for all three categories are $1.86 per hour and go up to $2.20 after 6 p.m.

Students who plan to work during the Christmas season in other jobs may sign up at the placement center now, Amori said. Women are needed for department store sales, and will be hired at wages starting at $1.25 per hour. Experienced hands can earn up to $1.51 per hour. Although women outnumber the men five to one in this type of work, there are opportunities for men to work as salesmen. However, most men are used as stock clerks and delivery boys.

Other Christmas jobs available, for men only, include parcel post assistants who will earn $2 per hour. These men work on the parcel post trucks and help deliver packages. Railroad mail baggage handlers are also wanted and will be paid $2.10 per hour.

The need for florist assistants has

Last Minute Changes Confuse Everything, Excusable Or Not

PLAYING the game isn't half the battle when making arrangements for an upcoming football contest; but through some apparently excusable scheduling errors this concept wasn't considered by the individuals who made last minute changes on the 1958 City College football slate.

Not by any means attempting to embarrass the guilty parties, we would just like to stress the importance of avoiding these oversights in future game date planning—particularly in those cases where rescheduling was done only a few days before the game.

It is quite easy for the teams involved to change the date, but it greatly inconveniences transportation, communications, newspaper and band arrangements which are prepared with the original schedule in mind.

Early this season, for instance, the college was making preparations for the Santa Rosa road game which was to be played on Friday, October 17, at 8 p.m. On Monday, October 13, however, Santa Rosa requested that the game be played on Saturday night at 8, so as to make their Homecoming game more successful. To further confuse the matter the game time was changed to 7:30 p.m., yet The Guardsman wasn't notified of this change until after publication.

As a result last minute bus transportation was made available, The Guardsman and the college's Publicity Department had the wrong information in their pre-game publications and posters, the college's band and press were forced to postpone all Saturday commitments and everyone, including the football players, who attended the game at Santa Rosa was compelled to miss the Frosh Ball, a major City College social affair, which was also held that Saturday night.

A repercussion occurred just before the Stockton road game which was scheduled by City College for Friday, October 24. Stockton had the game listed on its schedule for Saturday night and since the Stockton high school teams use the football field on Friday night the game was played on Saturday night. This, subsequently, resulted in another publicity and transportation conflict.

It is understood that emergencies are often unavoidable, but a more careful scrutinization of the entire Big Eight Conference slate before the season starts by a group consisting of a member from each college might well be the key to the solution of a problem which proves confusing to everyone involved.

IF THERE is a chance for the City College football team to regain part of the Big Eight Conference crown which it shared last year, it will be put on the line this Friday afternoon against Sacramento at 2 p.m. in Kezar Stadium.

Sacramento's Panthers are currently the league's best grid outfit, having a surprisingly strong offensive attack which has brought the Capitol City eleven an excellent 6-0 mark this season.

The Rams have the potential to upset the high-flying Panthers and might need just an extra spark to insure a peak performance.

This extra "spark" could very well be an enthusiastic rooting section. Why not give it a try? The team certainly could do no worse if a few hundred fans attend—but they certainly could do a lot better!

Slipping Down Grade?

Patting Redwood Ram's Nose Brings Luck Before Midterms, Final Exams, Might Lead To A, B Class Upgrade

College mascots or symbols always seem to bring good luck. The Navy's penny-pinching Tecumseh, for instance, serves as a penny catcher for Annapolis men hoping to pass examinations. Where the pennies go, no one seems to know, but it doesn't seem to distract from Tecumseh's charm.

Although such a tradition grows with a college, and this college is comparatively young, still it can boast of a lucky mascot called the Ram. Made of redwood, he sits alone and unnoticed, just waiting for someone to pay him a little attention. He's wise for his years (he should, he's been to college all his life), and is more than willing to share that wisdom with anyone who will become his friend.

Just before midterms, one up-and-coming student heard that the Ram was lonesome and paid him a visit. While admiring him, this student patted him on the nose. As a reward, the Ram doled out a few A's and B's in midterms, where the student was expecting C's.

To say that the Ram alone caused the unexpected good grades would be an exaggeration. However, perhaps the knowledge that the Ram's well-wishes were with the student during the examinations gave her added assurance.

Perhaps her fine marks could only be attributed to hard study, pure chance, or a combination of both. Could the Ram have influenced her grades? Is the Ram lucky? Sure, and why not? Try him. No harm in doing that. Besides, all college symbols and mascots are lucky.

The Big Switch

Ex-Chief Kern, Cottle, Pound Police Beats

Pounding a beat seems to be quite a switch from being an executive officer, but in the cases of former Campus Police chief Fred Kern and his assistant, John Cottle, this is quite an opposite story.

Kern, strictly a non-veteran officer, became a patrolman for the San Francisco Police Department last month, after scoring high on the entrance qualification examination. That made him eligible for a starting salary of $466 a month. Out of the 1,100 applying candidates, Kern placed 72 on the exam. In a medical examination, he surpassed the other individuals physically and rated number 16 on the list.

The test taken by Kern consisted of four parts, an oral examination, a written test to determine knowledge and intelligence, a physical test, and an athletic test. Those who fail the last part of the test cannot qualify and are rejected. This test includes events in track and field.

Cottle, who also left the college's department, has obtained a job for himself.

"He is now with the Larkspur Police Department," informs Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor here; "it is not a very big department—a sheriff, deputy and two officers—but Cottle is happy. He is one of the officers."

Rana Catesbeiana Attracts Attention

Frogs are not a many splendored thing, or animal as the case may be and is, from an esthetic point of view. Bullfrogs are less good looking, to use the word rather loosely.

However, one of the latter specimens has managed lately to attract the attention of students who attend classes in Science Hall's third floor.

Foresight

LAST MONTH, Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire both took their initial crack at television, each with an hour spectacular on the same week but on different networks.

Miss Rogers, now 47 and with 69 films to her credit, was star and hostess of a musical review. The show, however, fell short when compared to the advance build-up and ballyhoo it received. As a matter of fact, it was pretty saggy even without the publicity.

BOLGER'S CONTRIBUTION

Her guests, Ray Bolger and the Ritz Brothers, certainly contributed heavily to the show's downfall. Bolger's silly antics and expressions plus mediocre dance routines must have sickened any wide-awake TV fan. The Ritz Brothers have been out of circulation so long, rigor mortis has set in, and their jokes were just as fosslized.

Ginger also had to get in the act and help destroy her own show by giving the viewer third-rate impressions of various stereotype actresses.

GINGER'S DOUBLE BILLING

Dissension even occurred behind the scenes concerning billing and salary when the program was in its production stages at CBS. Nevertheless, Ginger won out hands down with double billing ('The Ginger Rogers Show starring Ginger Rogers), and a handsome fee of $37,500. Poor Ray came in second with a mere $15,000. Too bad Miss Rogers didn't plan her spectacular for November when her undisputed "turkey" would have been in season.

The Fred Astaire Show fared much better, even though he did the entire program in solo fashion without any guest stars. Fred, 60 years young, looked twice as good as his former dancing partner, and it was a pleasure just to watch him dance in his refreshing, casual style. Of course, the show had a few dull moments, but what program hasn't?

ROGERS-ASTAIRE TOGETHER

In regard to a future Rogers-Astaire get-together, Astaire commented to the press, "Maybe if we both reach 80 we may do a brief and nostalgic soft-shoe on 'The Ed Sullivan, Jr., Show,' but not before then." At the rate Ginger is going in TV, she'll never make it.

Twenty-One was finally dropped by NBC after months of probing investigation. The two-year quiz show hit its peak in 1957, thanks to Charles Van Doren, with a Trendex rating of 34.7, but later fell to a weak 10.3 after numerous attacks on its "integrity."

The only giant quiz left is The $64,000 Question and according to reports, it also is feeling the threat of getting the "axe."

DON RIDES AGAIN—OUT

"The Navajo Kid" rides again—Don Sherwood leads all stations of the ABC network with 7,282 letters in the total audience mail pull received for local programming, according to recent tabulations.

Thanks to Sherwood, San Francisco now leads all cities in local mail pull followed by Hollywood, Chicago, and New York, respectively.

He is now on vacation but is scheduled to return to TV in the near future—under the wing of a new sponsor.

also taken a niche in the opportunity-laden field of part time holiday jobs. There are openings for several college students desiring part time Christmas jobs in the florist industry. Both men and women are wanted.

Prior to a short indoctrination program, floristry department instructors will screen applicants on Thursday, November 20, at 2 p.m. in Annex C, located to the north of the women's gymnasium.

After the screening, a class will be held to familiarize the potential florist assistant with the aspects of a florist shop and what to expect in the way of Christmas business. This brief training program is scheduled for December 11 from 1 to 5 p.m. in Annex C. Students will be excused from classes to attend, Amori said.

Soccermen Bow To 'Underdog' Cal Aggies 4-2 Losing Shot At NCISC's Crown, Face Stanford On Saturday

By Pastor Valle-Garay

Completely overpowered by an underestimated Cal Aggies eleven, the college's soccermen dropped their second consecutive league contest with score of 4-2 last Saturday at the winner's field in Davis.

The loss sent the team to the third place position in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference for its first time in the last three years. With USF clobbering the University of Santa Clara kickers 15-0, the college has lost another opportunity for a shot at the NCISC title, while the mighty Dons in defeating the Broncos clinched it for their 11th time in a row.

It was the Hilltoppers' fourth triumph in this year's conference with no losses to their account. The Rams, who still are to face them, will play Stanford University at the Balboa soccer stadium this Saturday at 10 a.m.

Saturday's game at their field, supposedly an upset for the losing Rams, saw a better-than-underdog Cal Aggies squad overwhelm the college kickers as the Davismen scored three times in the first half of play and added a fourth goal in the third quarter to take an easy lead over the Rams, who could never return their hosts' attacks successfully—not in the manner the Aggies blasted the Red and White 'net, anyway.

After trailing 4-0, Ram kickers Bohdan Papari and Jahan Fouladi holed in a couple of late-comers goals for the college in the third and last quarter of play, respectively.

CAB, IFC Mural Cage Leagues In Third Round Play

Third round play in the Club Activities Board intramural basketball league continues tomorrow night with the Rickey Ross Rockets (1-0) playing the IRC (0-2) at 7 p.m. in the men's gym, the H&R Society (2-0) hosting the Celtics (0-1) at 8 p.m. in the men's gymnasium and the RA (1-1) meeting The Guardsman (0-2) at 7:30 in the women's gymnasium.

Last week's IFC results found three fraternities tied for the top rung after two games. The Phi Delts (2-0) behind Ed O'Donnell's 14 points whipped Kappa Rho (0-2), 29-18, last year's champ Gamma Phi (2-0) aided by Bob Mattson's 15 markers shellacked Lambda Phi (1-1), 49-18, the Alpha Phi's -0) edged out Beta Tau (0-2), 27-21, and Warren Downes' 17 digits paced the Zeta Phi's (1-1) past the Beta Phi's (0-2), 47-20.

In second round CAB competition the RA, with Bob Cranshaw hitting 24 points, completely obliterated the IRC, 72-18. The Filipino Club (2-0), ably assisted by Joe Cumagon's 16 tallies, stayed in the thick of the race by upending the Celtics 36-29, and the H&R behind a balanced attack staged a comeback 41-29 victory over The Guardsman.

Lambda Phi's O'Donnell tops the IFC scoring race with 40 points for a 20.0 average. Runners-ups are the Gamma Phi's Matson (32 points-16.0) and Dennis Shutter (28 points-14.0).

The RA's Chanshaw, an All-City performer for Balboa in 1957, has a 31-point total for a 15.5 average to lead the CAB scorers. The Guardsman's Nick Peters (28 points-14.0) and Rickey Ross' Mike O'Brien (14 points-14.0 in one game) are next in line.—N.P.

Rams Wallop T-Birds 33-12 In Homecoming

By Nick Peters

Stimulated by the fine all-around play of end Oscar Donahue, halfback Gene Craft and an immovable forward wall, the college's Ram gridders received a much needed lift to snap a two-game losing streak and hand Oakland's Thunderbirds a 33-12 lacing before a sparse audience in the annual Homecoming game last Friday at Kezar.

Not enough praise can be given Donahue, who caught four passes for 77 yards and was a terror on defense, consistently troubling the T-Bird backfield and recovering two fumbles.

Craft scored a pair of touchdowns, netting 87 yards in 17 carries, and the college's forward wall of L. C. Shields and Co. cleared the way for 247 Ram rushing yards while holding Oakland to a mere 85.

The first Ram score, coming at 6:17 of the second period, was the culmination of a 63-yard drive. Donahue recovered Joe Crismon's fumble on the Ram 37 and within 10 plays Klemmer's charges found themselves on the T-Bird 3—first and goal to go. Craft did on the next play, circling left end for the initial marker. Baikie's PAT attempt cleared the bar for 7-0.

Wasting no time the Red and White scored again the next time they handled the hide. Taking over on their own 27 qb Don Baikie, on a first down pass, hit Donahue who carried the porkskin to the enemy 41. In five plays they were down to the 16 whereby the East Bayers were penalized 15 yards giving the Rams a first down on the 1. Mel Sims plunged over left tackle for the td. Baikie's PAT made it 14-0.

After the ensuing kickoff Oakland took over on their own 21. A Ram "red dog" sent qb Larry Albright sprawling on the 10. On second down the Ram line sent Albright backtracking into the end zone, from where he threw a desperation pass; Ram Mel Oliver promptly intercepted and ran four yards to paydirt and 20-0.

The T-Birds, after gaining possession, took over on their own 40 from where they rode on qb Ron Gasper's right arm for 60 yards and the first Oakland score. In this series Gasper, who hit 10 for 20 and a 115-yard total, connected for 5 out of 8. Halfback Stan Peters went around left end on an option for 20-6.

At 5:31 of the third quarter Craft went 26 yards around left end culminating a 31-yard drive in four plays. Baikie's kick made it 27-6.

Oakland bounced back to 27-12, going 52 yards in eight plays, Gasper's 10-yard scoring pitch to Crismon climaxing the drive.

Ram Jerry White, who had 71 yards in nine carries and a 51yard kickoff return to his credit, scored the last td on a 3-yard plunge through left guard for 33-12, where it stood until the gun.

FREDDIE WILLIAMS, returning Ram star forward.

Hustle To Make Up For Lack Of Height On Ram Cage Team

With one of the smallest varsity basketball teams in Ram history, Coach Sid Phelan faces as his chief problem a Big Eight Conference of tougher and taller squads.

Returning lettermen are John Charoni, Fred Williams, and Bob Wiseman.

"Although I have a small team, I hope to have hustle to compensate for the lack of height," Phelan stated after the ball club's first practice last Saturday. He added that anyone interested in joining the set shot artists is invited, encouraged and urged to tryout for the team.

Placing second last year, the Ram court slickers will be all but ready come January 20, when the sharpshooters battle with Oakland, last year's champs.

College Runners Aim For Top Race Marks

Top invitational races and the All-Northern California Junior College meet are the prime targets for this year's Ram cross country squad, Coach Louis Vasquez stated this week.

The San Jose and Sacramento invitational meets, to be held toward the end of the year, will feature some of the best cross country groups in Northern California.

The winner of the All-N.C.J.C. meet at Diablo Valley Junior College on November 22 will be regarded as the top harrier club among Northern California's two-year colleges.

Gridders Face Title Favorites In Do-Or-Die Kezar Scrape, Last Chance For Big 8 Crown

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Now sporting less than a slim, outside chance of sneaking off with even a co-championship harvest, Grover Klemmer's Rams move into Kezar Stadium this Friday afternoon to buck heads with the toughest assembly of gridders the 1958 edition of the Big Eight Conference has thus far been able to produce.

Having opened their quest for the circuit laurels with a highly impressive 26-12 undoing of the Comets from Contra Costa, an overabundance of injuries to nearly half of the starting lineup led to a pair of untimely dumpings received at the hands of Santa Rosa and the Mustangs from Stockton College, the combination of which virtually eliminated the Rams from further Big Eight contention.

Sacramento, on the other hand, after drawing no pre-season recognition whatsoever, has shown itself the powerhouse of the league roster, belting out a trio of conquests over Stockton, San Mateo and Oakland, and will be out to sew up at least a tie for the first Big Eight grid crown in its entire history.

Aside from holding one of the sharpest signal callers in the circuit in the person of 19-year-old Bobby Gatiss, the Panthers boast the most rugged forward wall in many a Sacramento grid season, highlighted by the versatile performances of veteran guard Bill Brock and the spirited play of 250 lb. left tackle Babe Williams.

Heading the Red and White offensive charge, Klemmer will once again call on the brilliant services of his leading ground gainer, Gene Craft, who is capably assisted by the flashy broken field sprints of Jerry White and the power running of Stan Glass.

Aside from this, qb Don Baikie appears to have completely recovered from his encounter with the flu, and with prospective All-Conference end Oscar Donahue back in the pink of things the situation appears to look better for the local gridders.

The Panthers, though, are definitely "the team to beat" this year and will certainly prevail as two touchdown favorites over the Klemmermen.

Awards Banquet Date Set By Block Society

The Block Society is planning to invite a guest speaker, who may be Jack Curtice, this year's new head football coach at Stanford. If Curtice is not available there will be another speaker present.

The officers of the Block Society this semester are Pete Morgan, vice-president; Jim Williams, treasurer; Marion Page, secretary, and Baikie.

Ramblings

By George Grasso

THREE games left for the Rams as they come down the home stretch of a topsy-turvy '58 season.

To say the league was unpredictable would be an understatement, as most of the teams seem to have taken turns beating one another.

But despite the confusion, this writer would have to pick the Sacramento Panthers as the probable Big Eight Conference champions. The Panthers combine a sparkling offense with an immovable defense — and that's the formula for a conference championship and a possible shot at the Junior Rose Bowl.

Incidentally, the Panthers last went to the Bowl in 1922.

The race for second place (considering Sac takes first) is wide open. San Mateo may come up with it, but they are hindered by a very light line. Stockton, San Francisco, Oakland, Santa Rosa and Modesto all have a chance for second, and it will probably wind up as a two or three way tie.

• • •

Stockton has been chosen as the site of the third annual East-West Junior College game to be played there December 20.

The first two games were played in Jackson, Mississippi.

• • •

A nation-wide study shows the coaches favored the new rule during the first four games. But after the fifth game of halfway point, the kick was back in business.

National Collegiate Athletic Bureau statistics show that place kicks have been 65 per cent successful on 484 tries after 744 touchdowns.

Going for the two points, the figures show 152 successful passes for the PAT's after 303 touchdowns.

The field goal is also rising in importance as a college weapon. Fifty-four have been kicked at this writing, as compared to 32 last year and 64 for the entire season.

Olympic Fencing Stars To Give Demonstration

Fencing enthusiasts will have a golden opportunity to obtain first hand instruction from George J. Piller, one of the world's best known fencing masters, on Saturday, December 6, in the women's gymnasium.

Piller will be at the college to participate in a special fencing day, beginning at 10 a.m. for high school students and 1 p.m. for students here. The event will be sponsored by the college's Recreation Association, according to Lene Johnson, college fencing instructor, and all interested students are invited to attend.

The highlight of the program will be an exhibition of fencing presented by top fencers from this area who have qualified for the 1960 Olympic Games. The techniques of both foil and sabre fencing will be demonstrated.

An introduction to fencing and fencing lessons will be presented to those who have never before handled a fencing blade. This part of the program is for the benefit of fencing beginners, and Mrs. Johnson stressed the fact that no previous fencing experience is necessary. Students who expect to participate are not required to bring equipment other than tennis shoes.

By Roy Twitty

Mixed opinions were voiced by Student Council members Thursday as the controversial Sophomore Class budget was reviewed again after having been tabled the previous week.

Threatened with further postponement by again tabling the issue, the budget was recommended for a final vote by Freddie Hicks, Associated Student president, because the allotment request had already been delayed so long. Cut from the original $758.50 asked for to $698.50 upon the initial presentation to council, the Sophomore Class budget was further reduced to $673.50 when resubmitted after having been tabled.

Controversy arose again for a short period of time over the proposed cost of the Soph Ball but was put down by George Morf, Sophomore Class president.

Union scale wages simply will not be accepted by a good band, according to Morf, and it is about time the Sophomore Class hired good musicians.

Twenty dollars above union scale is being paid to the nine-piece Howard Frederick band, which also features a vocalist. Part of this group is a combo calling themselves the Swinging Sophomores. Further discussion was stopped and the budget was passed with 12 councilmen voting in its favor.

Student operated KCSF, the campus closed-circuit broadcasting station, had its budget of $200.00 tabled until this week because of failure to meet on-campus rules established by the Club Activities Board, according to Jim Hickey, chairman. Submission of a list of members will rectify the situation.

Guardsman budget funds were taken from the council table and okayed minus money for an originally scheduled last issue. Audrey Bell, Associated Student vice-president and Social Committee chairman, questioned the legality of bringing up the budget because of the wording of the original motion to table it, which hinged on the selection of an issue to cut. The Publications Board had met, she was informed, and the last issue selected.

Representatives are now being elected from the Student Council to attend the state-wide conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association to be held November 20, 21, and 22 at the Bakersfield Inn, Bakersfield.

Budget Cut Points To Cancellation Of Police Shoot Entry

Shooting team entry reservations for coming meets may have to be cancelled because of a proposed 25 per cent cut in the as-yet-unpassed Campus Police budget, according to Fred Fitzgerald, Campus Police and shooting team adviser.

Four matches have been completed so far this year by the shooting team, which won and placed very high in the two classes entered. Fitzgerald, who is also a director of the Western Revolver Association, explained that trophies won for the college in previous years may now be impossible to attain because of lack of funds if the Campus Police budget is as drastically reduced as indicated.

Plans are being made, approval depending on the money situation, to compete in shooting meets next Sunday, in December, and January and February of 1959.

Entry fees, ammunition for competition, and transportation for the ten-man squad to and from the matches are the only items financed by the Associated Students, Fitzgerald commented.

All equipment, including firearms, used by the shooting team is supplied by the college for Criminology 71A-B, a course designed to teach the legal aspects, safety in handling, and accuracy in shooting firearms. The ten most accurate, highest scoring students in this course are placed on one of the two four-man shooting teams or are made alternates, Fitzgerald stated.

Competing recently in a meet held at the San Francisco Pistol Range, the college teams took top honors, Fitzgerald reiterated. Firing in the marksman and sharpshooter classes, two first places were won over the Oakland Police Department, the Oakland Pistol Club, the Olympic Club, the Peninsula Shooting Club, the San Francisco Police Department and the San Francisco Revolver Club. Scoring its high man in the sharpshooter class, William Donohoe, chief of the Campus Police, won three first places.

Viet-Nam Shown On Asian Film Friday

its prosperity. When criticism of public institutions is missing or is not permitted, the country can easily become stagnant and its advances delayed."

"You aren't suggesting a return to the democratic processes of fifth century Greece, I hope."

"Oh, no, that would be impracticable in a country of America's size. I'm merely saying that a more informed, more curious citizenry in America would not stand by and permit its statesmen to lead the country into oblivion abroad, as certain tactless diplomats and indecisive leaders are now doing."

"You say you have faith in America as the country to bring about a lasting peace down on Earth. Does this mean you favor capitalism over socialism?"

"Not necessarily. Both systems have their weaknesses. Extreme capitalism permits possible exploitation of many people, while extreme socialism practically ignores individual effort and initiative. I would favor a heavily regulated capitalism, with numerous socialistic concepts adopted to keep the big men from becoming too big and to allow the little men to get off the ground. Income tax, labor unions and benefits, and socialized medicine can all help the majority of people, provided they are conducted properly."

"So much for economics. Now, regarding a political solution—"

"Again, a compromise between the two most powerful forces—democracy and totalitarianism. Democracy as practiced in America is a farce; how are 175 million people going to choose capable leaders intelligently from a handful of ambitious politicians placed before them each election day? Totalitarianism, however, instead of allowing its people too much freedom, denies them any. I'd like one day to see the powerful countries of the Earth reconcile their ideological differences and adopt a capitalistic-socialistic economic system and a democratic-totalitarian political system. Perhaps some day the two opposing camps will come to terms, if men can be made to realize that there are other things worth striving for besides personal possessions and power."

"If they don't destroy themselves first, that is. I think that if all politicians and leaders were to resign suddenly and leave the people of the different countries to deal with each other, the people would realize that the differences between them are few indeed, and peace would be achieved much sooner."

"I have a great deal of faith in the people on Earth. Let's let them solve their problems for themselves. And if in the process of their advancement they should happen to land up here with one of their rockets, perhaps then we can talk some sense into them."

'Forest' On Stage Again Friday

Kreling, Rose Give Memorable Performances

By Lee Anderson

Subtle comedy mingled with stark brutality and sudden death, as The Petrified Forest, by Robert Sherwood, opened at the little theater here last Friday night. Future performances are scheduled for this and the following Friday and Saturday nights at 8 p.m.

In her first starring role as Gabby, a dissatisfied waitress filled with dreams of romance and adventure, Joanne Kreling gave a memorable performance. Her portrayal of the suppressed emotions of youth was realistic and moving.

Alan Squirer, a modern day beatnik, who strolls into Gabby's drab life, bringing to her the light of love, is portrayed by John Rose, a talented and polished actor. Rose, in this writer's opinion, bears a striking resemblance in his acting abilities to stage and screen star John Kerr.

Jules Farmer, a one-time singer and piano player at Facks II turned actor, brought to life on stage all the sadistic tendencies of a hardened gunslinger. Farmer, on stage, is a joy to watch. He does not merely act the part, he lives it.

Tom Moreland, cast as Duke Mantee, is the rough, tough gang-leader who has just broken out of prison. Mantee is a man of action, and controls his gang with a gun-filled hand. Moreland interprets Mantee as a cruel, angered man with a touch of justice.

Other parts include Bruce Johnson as Boze Hertzlinger, Jordy Cooney as Gramp Maple, David Terry as Mr. Chisholm, Marilyn Banchieri as Mrs. Chisholm, and Carl Mayo as Jason.

All the action takes place in the Black Mesa Cafe, located near the Petrified Forest in Arizona. The stage setting gains authenticity and beauty through the painted desert visible through the window and door of the cafe.

Michael Griffin, drama director, commenting on the lighting and sound effects, said that Chuck Huntley, technical director, and Rose, musical director, deserved considerable credit for the techniques used in developing the effects to such realistic proportions.

This is only a small list of the students in the drama department who are performing to paying audiences. Others have already proved their skill on the stage in such places as Los Angeles and New York. Many others, with less experience but much talent, are currently enrolled with Michael Griffin, drama director in drama courses here.

Six College Drama Students Work In Professional Field

By Jack Swain

Present as well as former drama students of the college are enjoying considerable success in carving a niche for themselves in the theatrical world.

Such noted local companies as The Interplayers, Great Plays and Abbott Abrams Companies have many students in their casts performing a variety of roles from leads to bit parts and doing some of the technical work.

Among the more active students in outside productions are Dawn Roberts, who had the lead in Thief's Carnival, and Bob Doyle, who has worked with the Abbot Abrams group and is presently understudying the part of the secretary in Waltz Of The Toreador, produced by the Actor's Workshop.

Ken Kitch is currently appearing as the Archbishop in The Lark at the Golden Hind in Oakland and has worked with the Interplayers.

Two other students, Tom Wilson and Chuck Huntley, did the lighting for the Shakespearean Festival at San Francisco State College during the summer months.

This is only a small list of the students in the drama department who are performing to paying audiences. Engineering Students Must Meet This Friday

Engineering students who intend to transfer to the University of California next spring must meet in S-204 during College Hour this Friday, William K. Mayo, dean of instruction here announced yesterday.

Details concerning the junior engineering examination which is required of all prospective juniors in the College of Engineering at the University of California, will be discussed. Grade point requirements, details of the upper division curriculum, eligibility list requirements and other information for prospective transfers will also be outlined, Dean Mayo said.

In addition to Dean Mayo, Howard Schoon will represent the counseling department, and C. J. Aggeler the engineering department.

Deadlines Listed For Scholarships

Students planning to take the last State Scholarship Award examination on Saturday, January 10, 1959, must register immediately in S-150, according to Gertrude Norgard, acting Dean of Women.

Compiled by the College Entrance Examination Board, the competitive aptitude test will provide winners with tuition and/or necessary fees for any one of 57 California colleges or universities accredited by the Western College Association. Payment to the preferred institution will begin with the Fall Semester, 1959.

Eligibility will be determined by four major factors: the financial need of students with consideration of the financial status of parents. Students must be under 24 years of age and be citizens of the United States or living here under a permanent resident visa. They must also be residents of California.

State scholarship applications are to be filed with the State Scholarship Commission, Room 505, 1227 O Street, Sacramento 14, by Thursday, January 29, 1959. Applications received later cannot be accepted, regulations state.

In case of physical disabilities which would make it impossible or inconvenient to take the test on that Saturday morning, special dates can be arranged if the College Board is notified well in advance, Dean Norgard said.

Students wishing to learn more about the examination or of the College Board should consult their counselors, Dean Norgard added.

IRC Offers Grants For 2 Students

Two student grants are being offered by the International Relations Club this semester, according to Joseph Jacobsen, IRC sponsor.

Awarded on scholarship, promise and need, the grants are for $50 each, and both men and women here on student visas are eligible to apply.

Last year was the first time that these grants were awarded, and a Chinese student and a Latin American student were the winners.

Jacobsen added that next year the grants may be offered to all foreign students and not necessarily to those on student visas. The profits from the annual IRC International Fair are used in financing these grants.

Miss Appointment? Get Late Reg Number

Students who fail to keep counseling appointments for program planning will lose their early registration numbers and will have to accept one at a later hour, according to Waddington Blair of the counseling department.

It is necessary for all students to keep their appointments as scheduled, Blair explained, but if for some reason it is impossible, they must either telephone or call in person at the counseling office prior to the time of the appointment to request a new appointment.

Student Faculty Coffee Hour Set

A student-faculty coffee hour will take place Friday, November 14, during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., John Fawcett, chairman of the Student-Faculty Relations Committee, announced last week.

Weather permitting, this affair will be held in the open courtyard between Cloud Hall and Science Hall. The purpose of the coffee hour is for the faculty and the students to become better acquainted, Fawcett said.

The coffee hour, a presentation of the Faculty Association in past semesters, will feature a change this year. For the first time, students have been added to the Student-Faculty Relations Committee, and will co-sponsor the event. They are Roberta Kennedy, Student Council member and head song girl, and Terry Chavez, Inter-Fraternity Council president.

Coffee and cookies will be served, as well as punch for non-coffee drinkers. Faculty members, with student assistance, will serve the refreshments, which will be prepared by the Hotel and Restaurant Department here.

Outdoor Rally Planned To Raise Spirit Friday

To raise spirit for the game against Sacramento Junior College this Friday at Kezar, an outdoor rally, weather permitting, has been planned for students during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., according to John Dunn, faculty adviser to the Rally Committee.

The rally will be a combination of spirit and entertainment, and the committee is working hard to bring in outside entertainment as well as the college's Dixieland Band or Pep Band. The song girls will also be on hand to show their new routine.

"The rally will be equal to last week's," Dunn said, "and everyone who comes will enjoy himself."

Rebelais Rates More Notice By Readers

By Don Seratti

WHEN the word "satire" is mentioned, one almost invariably calls to mind Jonathan Swift and Voltaire as two of literature's most formidable satirists.

Swift rendered some powerful criticism of social and political evils in Gulliver's Travels, and Voltaire lambasted the "there is a reason for everything" theory in his novel Candide.

But when the aforementioned works are compared to those of Francois Rabelais for satiric value, we find that Rabelais dealt not only with specific items, but satirized practically everything that could be commented on in 16th century Europe in his book Gargantua and Pantagruel.

Although this voluminous work has been acknowledged through the centuries as a masterpiece of wit and satire, Rabelais must, unfortunately, be classified as one of today's virtually forgotten men of world literature. Gargantua and Pantagruel gathers dust on literary shelves, and people say "who?" when Rabelais or his writings are mentioned.

READERS MISSING HUMOR

This modern day unawareness and neglect of Rabelais' works is most regrettable, for today's reading public, by passing this book off as "just another of the many French classics," is missing out on a poignant satire, a humorous and exciting narrative, and a remarkably good insight into Renaissance thought all rolled into one 800-page volume.

In what might be called an attempted popular revival of Rabelais' writings, this writer will strive to point out some of the many ways in which a person can profit from a reading of this book.

In essence, the book concerns a boisterous giant named Gargantua and his son Pantagruel, who with a

Guardsman Adviser Workshop Speaker

One of the workshop-round table speakers at the publications conference of the Journalism Association of Junior Colleges, northern section, slated to meet at San Francisco State College this Saturday, will be Joan Nourse, journalism instructor here and faculty adviser to The Guardsman.

Because of The Guardsman record of 28 All-American and six First Class ratings by the Associated Collegiate Press in 34 semesters of ACP membership, John Gothberg, Oakland City College adviser and President of the association's northern section, invited Miss Nourse to discuss publication methods as they are operated here.

Ten journalism students from the college will attend the conference as delegates. Also attending and leading a discussion group with Miss Nourse will be Pat Metsack, last semester's Editor-in-Chief of The Guardsman, and presently News Editor of State's Golden Gater.

Sydney Kossen, political editor of The San Francisco News, is scheduled to be the keynote speaker at the conference's morning session.

X-Rays Must For All New Students

Official notices are now being sent to all students here who have not as yet been X-rayed. They are to report to the San Francisco Department of Public Health within seven days of reception, and failure to comply with this directive will result in cancellation of registration for the current semester, according to John Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare here.

Thus far, 850 freshman students have still not been X-rayed, thereby failing to complete the entrance requirements for the college.

X-rays not only detect tuberculosis, but also other internal disorders such as cancer, an enlarged heart, damaged bone structures, and other injuries which may have gone unnoticed in the past.

Gloria Anderson, the college nurse, recently stated that these X-rays are for the individual's own benefit. Early stages of T.B. are easily coped with; therefore, if it is caught before given an opportunity to spread, the patient is most likely to attain a rapid recovery and the cost of the treatments is reduced considerably.

Informality Keynotes Semi-Annual Coffee Hour Friday With Students, Faculty Acting As Event's Sponsors

By Elmer Milligan

A student-faculty coffee hour will be held during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., this Friday. The coffee hour, a presentation of the Student-Faculty Relations Committee, offers students and faculty members an opportunity to meet on an informal basis and become better acquainted, John Fawcett, chairman of the committee, said.

Weather permitting, Fawcett stated, this semesterly event will take place in the open courtyard between Cloud Hall and Science Hall. All students and faculty members are invited to attend.

This semester, the coffee hour will be operated on a different basis. For the first time, students have been added to the Student-Faculty Relations Committee, and will co-sponsor the event. They are Roberta Kennedy, Student Council member and head song girl; Terry Chavez, Inter-Fraternity Council president; Ann Thuss, Inter - Sorority Council president; Jackie Pera, Student Council Secretary, and Ben Northrup, State Information Chairman.

Coffee, punch and cookies will be served, with the refreshment table probably located in the center of the courtyard. Plans are also being made to set up tables designed to be headquarters for the various departments, Fawcett said.

Under this plan, if a student wishes to become acquainted with instructors in the science department, for example, he can locate them at their assigned department table.

Faculty members, with student assistance, will serve the refreshments, which are being prepared by the Hotel and Restaurant Department here.

Other instructors who are members of the committee are Ruth Inskipp, Lone Johnson, John Hare, Lloyd Carroll, Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, and Gertrude Norgard, acting dean of women.

Carols Highlight Holiday Program

Highlighting the traditional Christmas concert scheduled for December 11 and 12 will be the singing of three soloists and a trio, according to Flossita Badger, voice instructor here.

Sopranos Teresa Langmade and Louise Viscaino, and baritone Allen Belton reigned supreme over 15 contestants who auditioned for the feature solo roles. "They were chosen," Miss Badger said, "because of their outstanding ability and musical talent." The voice instructor added, however, that competition was very close and that the final decisions were difficult to make.

Miss Langmade will sing Oh Holy Night, by Adam, followed by Miss Viscaino's rendition of Panis Angelicus, by Franck. Allen Belton's selection has not yet been announced, Miss Badger said.

Jean Thompson, Janet Currie and Andre Brehaut, soprano, contralto and baritone, respectively, form the trio which will sing varied arrangements of Schubert's Ave Maria.

All performers will be accompanied by pianist Loyd Carroll.

Setting for the Thursday, December 11, performance will be the cafeteria, and on Friday, December 12, the concert will be held in the library. Times are 8 p.m. and College Hour, respectively.

Disney Nature Films Set For College Hour

Two of Walt Disney nature films, The Olympic Elk and Moose Baby, will be shown this Friday during College Hour in S-136.

The Olympic Elk, which took more than three years to film before completion, has been shown in commercial theater houses. The locale is the Pacific Northwest, principally in the State of Washington.

The companion film, Moose Baby, deals with the problems and antics of a baby moose.

According to Madison Devlin, instructor in audio-visual aids, both films are excellent and well worth viewing.

Election Committee Submits Changed Rules To Council With New Provisions For Campaigns

By Roy Twitty

Differing slightly from last semester, election regulations for the offices of the Associated Students have recenfly been submitted by Gene Bunch, Election Commissioner, to the Student Council for approval.

Final passing of the rules by council has been postponed pending a review of the parliamentary legality to amend the list while it is before the council for acceptance. Deletion of the word "proposed" from Article 3, Section 5, was the amendment motion made by Ralph E. Prior, sophomore councilman. The sentence, as yet unchanged, reads: "An itemized list of all past, present, and proposed expenditures shall be available . . ."

Compared to the regulations of last semester, the rules contain several additions and elaborations. One limitation placed on candidates for office is the requirement that all campaign materials available must be purchased from the Associated Student book store, the Ramporium.

Campaign expenditures by candidates last spring were limited to $30.00 for executive offices and $25.00 for all others; however, $25.00 and $20.00, respectively, is the maximum amount to be spent this semester.

Petitions for offices, which may be obtained from the Dean of Student Activities and Dean of Women after December 1, must be signed by 15 Associated Student card holders who belong to the group the candidate wishes to represent. Previously, any AS card holder could sign any petition.

Additional signatures required on the petitions are those of the candidates' counselor, the Registrar, the Dean of Student Activities or Dean of Women, the Election Commissioner, and that of the bank to verify the payment of a $1.00 fee for post-campaign cleanup. Deadline for petitions to be turned in to the Election Commissioner has been set at 12 midnight on December 11.

Additions to the regulations primarily concern the political parties and affiliations of candidates. Concerning the candidate directly, Article I, Section 5, states, "Any candidate who is affiliated with any other candidate or group of candidates for mutual political support must include his party name on his petition." The ballot will list anyone as non-partisan who does not register his party affiliations.

New to the regulations for this fall, Article II deals with political parties. Three or more candidates who affiliate with one another, according to Section 1, "must be registered as a political party with the Election Commissioner." Section 2 provides that "All political parties must be named in such a manner as to avoid confusion with previously registered parties."

Statements of political parties' income and campaign expenditures are deadlined by Section 3 to be on file before 8 a.m. on January 13, 1959. A roster of all candidates who will appear on their tickets must be filed by all political parties, as set forth in Section 4, not later than 2 p.m. on December 12.

Inside sources stated that the above rules and regulations, especially those in Article II, may have been drawn up in an effort to prevent the formation of undeclared political cliques and coups d'etat, such as involved several organizations a few semesters ago.

Ben A. Northrup, present State Information Service chairman, announced the formation of a new political party calling themselves the Individualists. Preparing for the approaching January 12 and 13 elections, Northrup added that he will run for President of the Associated Students on the Individual party ticket.

Roberta Kennedy, former president of the South San Francisco High School student body, will run for Vice-President. Northrup added that the party presently needs individuals to run on the same ticket for positions on the Student Council.

Stripes Or No Stripes, New Reservoir Lot To Open Soon

Striped or not striped, the reservoir parking lot will definitely open this week for student parking by permit, Don Smith, Associated Student card sales chairman, announced Friday.

According to Dr. Oscar Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management, painting of the stripes was expected to begin last week, but he emphasized that the lot will be open for parking this week whether the painting is completed or not.

There will be about 800 new parking spaces available, Smith said. This means students with cars and late classes won't have to come so early to find a place to park. During past semesters, limited parking facilities on and about the campus here have forced students with cars to join in a race each morning to arrive early enough to obtain a decent parking space.

"For example," Smith explained, "it seems that by 8 a.m. there isn't any parking space available for miles around. One student parking lot open to those with parking permits, is located next to Smith Hall, but appears to be filled by at least 7:30 a.m."

Not long afterward, Smith added, the lower parking lot between Cloud Hall and the men's gymnasium begins to be filled. After 8 a.m., both parking lots are filled, and many students must find spaces off campus. Since there are so many in this category, it is sometimes necessary for them to go as far as five or six blocks away.

The waterless reservoir, temporarily utilized as a parking lot, will service both students of the college and Riordan High School.

Festival Features Hiles' Jazz Combo

Amateur musicians from the college will combine with the professional Buddy Hiles' Combo to provide entertainment in a Jazz Festival Friday, December 5, during College Hour and for the following hour.

During the first hour, Hiles will play arrangements of Duke Ellington and some touches of Progressive Jazz. The latter hour will introduce some of the amateur players who are enrolled here.

To capture the interest of the jazz enthusiasts here, instruments employed will include five saxophones, six trumpets, five trombones, and a drum. George Morf, president of the Sophomore Class and a connoisseur in the field, has visited Hiles' studio. He likes the musicians' strong, brassy tones and their deep sense of rhythm. He feels that they are wholly worthy of any musical advocate.

Two Students Win IRC's $50 Grants

A Japanese and an Iranian student are joint winners of this year's International Relations Club $100 grant, Joseph M. Jacobsen, IRC sponsor, announced last week.

Saiko Suzuki and Iradj Azarm will be formally presented tomorrow with their grants, which were awarded on the basis of scholarship, promise and need, by Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college.

Miss Suzuki, a native of Tokyo, first enrolled at the college in February 1957 as a commercial art major. Upon her graduation next June she will continue her studies by transferring to an art school in New York City.

Azarm enrolled in February 1958 as a petroleum engineering major and is a straight A student.

The presentation at 10 a.m. in President Conlan's office will be attended by Coordinator John J. Brady, Jacobsen and Narendra Jhaveri, IRC president.

Revision Of Council Procedure Needed To Reduce Time Waste

IN AN EDITORIAL which recently appeared in The Guardsman, we thoroughly approved Associated Student President Freddie Hicks' method of presiding over the City College Student Council.

Through no fault of his own, however, recent council meetings have been long and dry, a situation which can be attributed to the council members' tendency to spend too much time on one particular matter; subsequently not allotting other just as important topics equal time.

Sometimes this is excusable when the topic being discussed is of immediate importance; but when the council devotes a half hour of an October meeting to registration in mid-February, with no concrete facts given and no apparent decisions reached, there is need for a change in procedure.

We feel that when the council is confronted with a topic that is not familiar to the majority of its members a short informative discussion should follow stating the pros and cons of the issue. This discussion ideally should not last for more than five or ten minutes, since other important business must be discussed before adjournment.

Then, after this short presentation of facts by people who know what they're talking about, the council members must be given ample time to judge the issue and could act intelligently on the matter within a few minutes at the next session.

We know that the Student Council is always looking out for the best interests of City College; but as the result of witnessing a few haphazard procedures we feel that some members of council are not taking their positions seriously enough.

They must be made to realize that their purpose is to initiate effective plans for the smooth operation of the college's social and academic functions; therefore, they must feel the necessity of arriving at decisions only through wise and extensive thought instead of just debating for the sake of debating or voting on an issue for the sake of voting.

We are quite sure that with the potential ability of most council members a more interesting and intelligent meeting can take place. Now at the semester's mid-point we would like to see a rapid and to-the-point session with each organization given an equal opportunity to make its announcements, instead of the recent procedure whereby discussions deviate from the accepted standard and supposedly intelligent students go off on tangents in arguing for or against relatively trivial matters.

Importance Of Conference Calls For Careful Selection Of All Delegates

IN PREPARING for the upcoming California Junior College Student Government Association (CJCSGA) state conference which will be held in Bakersfield on November 21, 22, 23, four college students were selected to represent City College at the semi-annual conclave.

Three of these delegates are justified in representing the college because they are going to the conference as representatives of particular departments, the functions of which they have top caliber knowledge, namely social affairs, Associated Student Vice-President Audrey Bell; finance, AS Finance Chairman Ann Finneran, and publications, Guardsman Staff Editor and Assistant Publicity Chairman Albert Salamanca.

The fourth, however, who will attend the confab as an athletic representative, although qualified in other fields, has little or no knowledge of the athletic eligibility situation or athletics in general, and his unwarranted selection could possibly be investigated to perhaps explain why he was given the honor over countless others whose merits in working with athletics make them more deserving of the privilege of representing athletics.

Continual fallacies of this nature could make the innocent observer start thinking whether student government procedures are wholeheartedly legitimate.

It would indeed be wise to send deserving personnel to conventions of this importance in the future, because City College would benefit greatly by naming delegates who know their business instead of providing a "free ride" for some without experience.

Man 'Sets' 232 Coeds Dancing

Eight times a week students hear the faint strains of music coming from the women's gymnasium. Upon investigation they find that there are a total of 235 members of the modern dance classes twisting and turning to music played by Warren Jepson, who assists instructor Lene A. Johnson with those classes.

Jepson is a professional player who has been with the college for 3½ years. Other than playing the piano for the dance classes, he is also an accompanist at Welland Lathrop Dance School and works with Ann Halprin, a noted dancer. He assists her with teaching at Kentfield, near San Rafael.

Now a resident of San Francisco, Jepson was born in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, and received his high school education at Bethlehem High School.

Skilled in music, he obtained his Bachelor of Music degree at the Oberlin Conservatory, located in Oberlin, Ohio.

When asked how he felt playing for all of those coeds, he paused for a long moment and then said, simply, "It's great."

The Lock Is Off Soon, Drivers

ESTHER LISAMA'S FACE won't have to sport that grim expression—one hopes—when the eternal problem of parking around campus confronts her in the future. Neither will some hundreds of students, for that matter, who think that not finding a place to estation their cars "could only happen to them." The college, in a supreme effort to solve this problem, has obtained permit to have students' cars park at the reservoir opposite Science Hall on Phelan Avenue. Now all anyone has to worry about is the long, uphill climbing adventure.—Guardsman photo by David M. Abrahams.

What's In A Purse?

Coeds Find 50 Items Lead To Peace Of Mind

By Dick Souder

Since the turn of the century, men and women with the ability to think and apply their thoughts in constructive manner, have been producing new and wonderful things from the primitive mysteries of nature.

From America's own Fourth of July treat, the Atomic bomb, to a hundred and some new wonder drugs, the world has gone forth at a rapid pace, with only a world-wide lack of common sense standing in the way of total destruction.

But for some strange reason, it seems inevitable that the simplest things of life remain the greatest mysteries to a world tuned to atomic weapons and cough medicine. The case in question is simply a woman's purse.

The size is not important, generally they're gigantic, but the contents are. A purse is the only item that a woman will not be without, including shoes, socks, cigarettes, money, family, husbands, boy friends, school books and transportation.

A purse to a woman is the life line to peace of mind; it is a two-week vacation, a trip to the moon, and material proof that the bearer is a 100 per cent American woman.

The contents of a woman's purse will generally disclose the following—lipstick in several shades, a girl friend's house key, mascara that doesn't drip in the rain, sun glasses, reading glasses, glasses to look intelligent with, love letters from "old" boy friends now in the service, notes from girl friends, notes from "new" boy friend, pens that don't work, pencils that instructors won't accept, and assorted pictures of assorted characters.

Those items are generally on top of the heap. Dig a little and find—phone numbers, bills that have never quite been paid, an ID card that lies, a picture of a dress that she just has to have with a price that only father can produce, bobby pins in a box that leaks, a comb, a mirror, another comb, another mirror, a napkin from the hungry I, and a match book from The Tropics.

Don't stop now, there's more. Aspirin, a small piece of white paper folded carefully containing the date on which The Tropics will re-open, a piece of string, a rubber band, a broken watch, a Vote NO on Prop. 18 pin, a Vote YES on Prop. 18 pin, a how tie (how did that get in there?), cigarettes (filter tipped), a lighter, a button, a calendar (1957), and an ashtray from The Tropics.

Whew! Don't give up now, the end is near. A nail file, nail polish, one earring, a blank postcard, a bottle of ink (thank goodness that doesn't leak), a tooth brush, two pieces of gum—chewed, an autograph book, a notebook, and (goody) a clipping torn from a magazine advertising a larger purse.

Contrary to popular belief, these items are all of a useful nature to any red-blooded American woman, and any one of them will be more than glad to tell a man on any time. Man is lucky; the only thing he needs to keep abreast of a woman and her purse is, you guessed it, a car. Better make it a big one.

'Golden Slipper' Traffic Court Big Drawing Card

By Lee Anderson

There are several types of publicity used by organizations and institutions promotion-wise. Pure and simple coverage of an event is most widely used. However, the publicity stunt is quite often most successful.

Last week an organization, Beta Phi Beta to be precise, pulled one of the most effective stunts ever witnessed on this campus. Rather than the obvious, it was the "Sneak up from behind and club 'em type of stunt. Those hardest hit were the students who drive to college.

These poor individuals have an ever watchful eye trained to pick up evidence of such unmentionables as patrol cars, policemen, and illegal parking citations. No explanation is needed for such alertness.

For this reason alone, Beta Phi Beta's publicity stunt was a "corker" as the following observation will point out:

About 2 p.m., November 4, a student, loaded with books, came trudging down the hill toward the second parking lot. Midway he stopped and stared at the auto parked directly below him. His shoulders slumped, and he trudged on.

Reaching the car, he opened the door, literally threw his books into the seat, reached across the windshield, and yanked away the citation wrapped around his windshield wiper. Anger, mixed with confusion, was expressed in his every action.

He unrolled the citation, read it, sighed with relief, and crumpled it in his hand. After a second's pause, he uncrumpled the citation, re-read it, and smiled. This is what he read:

"You are hereby cited to appear at Forest Lodge, 266 Laguna Honda Blvd., on the night of November 7, 1958. The reason: Beta Phi Beta's annual Golden Slipper Dance (for pleasure only). The fine: $2.00 per couple. Attire: Semi-formal. Mood music: Jimmy Price's Orchestra featuring Brow Moore on Sax. The time: 9 until 12 p.m. See you there."

EDUCATIONAL television was officially accepted recently in classrooms in California for the first time, when KQED-Channel 9 began its instruction to more than 140,000 students in the Bay Area.

Raymond L. Smith, educator and TV film producer, is in charge of the school broadcasting program, and he is supervising a faculty of 18 instructors offering 14 hours of classes on a Monday through Friday basis.

The Channel 9 faculty was chosen from full-time Bay Area teachers who were nominated from participating school districts. These instructors make their scheduled telecasts in addition to their regular teaching chores.

Subjects to be televised include science, Spanish, art, political science, history, and current events. Bay Area counties participating are Alameda, Contra Costa, Santa Clara, San Francisco, Sonoma and San Mateo.

Forty-one San Francisco elementary and high schools are equipped with TV classes, including Commodore Sloat, Francis Scott Key, Parkside, A. P. Giannini, Aptos, Balboa and Mission, among others. It is interesting to note that parents and home viewers can also tune in and see exactly what "junior" is being taught.

Program financing comes mainly from the participating school districts. However, a Ford Foundation grant-in-aid of $25,000 has increased the total capital to $80,000.

Educational TV Gives Learning Big Boost

Cities in other states such as Cincinnati, St. Louis and Chicago had TV-conducted classes long before California, but this state had to wait out the red tape and enabling legislation before being given the go-ahead from Sacramento.

Playhouse 90's production of The Plot To Kill Stalin, which was seen several weeks ago, earned black looks from the Soviets, according to a recent editorial in TV Guide.

The play opened with a grim announcement that it was "based on extensive research using maximum information available to the western world," and was consequently taken as fact and not fiction by the Russians. The final sequence showed Krushchev, surrounded notably by Malenkov and Molotov, denying Stalin medicine which would have saved the latter's life.

There is no proof that Stalin was murdered by Krushchev or anyone else, for that matter. The story itself was fictional and was written by a Hollywood playwright.

But the Soviets took offense at the alleged documentary, and the Russian ambassador put in a complaint to the State Department, which in turn replied that the teleplay was produced by a private corporation and that there is no governmental censorship in America. The Soviets retaliated by promptly kicking the CBS news correspondent out of Moscow and they now do not hesitate to expel over-aggressive correspondents, whether from CBS or not.

Soccer's Booting Brothers

AL AND ED ZELAYA, Central America's gift to the Rom soccer team.

Nicaragua's Zelaya Brothers Spark Ram Soccer Victories

By Jay Vierra

Central America lost two outstanding soccer players when Al and Ed Zelaya moved to the United States to continue their education.

Born in Nicaragua, the Zelayas went to grammar school in their native country before moving to San Francisco and attending Lowell High School.

"In Nicaragua they play more baseball than they do soccer. When the countries in Central America compete in international competition, Nicaragua has the worst soccer team on the field; yet when the competition changes to baseball she is the best. I wish they would stress and play more soccer," Ed stated in a recent interview.

Al's sentiments go along with his brother's feelings. With this in mind the Zelaya brothers made the best of their opportunities to play soccer by competing two years on the varsity at Lowell. They were both awarded block letters for each season they played.

Al, standing five feet, eight inches tall, and Ed at five feet, seven and one-half inches, are fullbacks on the Ram team. Each brother weighs in at 170 pounds.

San Francisco State and the University of Santa Clara have gone down to defeat by the Ram team by scores of 7-2 and 4-0, respectively. The Rams have tasted defeat from the Cal Aggies, 4-2, and the University of California, 3-1.

Stanford University, San Jose State and the University of San Francisco are the remaining games this season for the Zelaya brothers as Ram teammates. Al and Ed have each played one year for the college and with these three games ride their last year of eligibility.

International law holds a vast interest for Ed and he will continue his education at USF after graduating from the college this semester. Architecture and the University of California are goals that Al is working for.

For the past four years, Sunday soccer competition has kept the brothers occupied as they have played for the Mexican and Nicaraguan clubs here in the city.

Al is carrying 12½ units and Ed 15½ units besides practicing soccer 10 hours a week and working 37 hours a week for Koret of California. This is a load for any athlete, but the brothers are still maintaining good grades.

171 Bay Area Students Attend RA Sports Day

Seven Bay Area colleges took part in the first Recreation Association sports day held at the college this semester. One hundred and seventy-one students participated, and competitions were held in volleyball, bowling, tennis, badminton and archery.

The college was successful in winning the volleyball and men's singles and women's and men's doubles in badminton. At the completion of the major events, a hula hoop contest was held strictly for men, in which a tie occurred among the seven colleges entered.

RAMBLINGS

By George Grasso

HAD Stan Glass' eligibility not been cleared last Friday, George Molakides would have moved to the number one fullback spot, filling the space between Gene Craft and Jerry White.

With the addition of Molakides, who stands 5-7, the Rams would have had one of the smallest backfields in the league, with all the starting running backs under 5-10.

But whereas Craft and White might be termed scatbacks, the same cannot apply to Molakides who packs a hard-hitting 175 pounds.

What these men lack in size, they make up in heart. All are hard runners, elusive and difficult to hold on to.

Looks as if end Oscar Donahue has decided to run for All-Big Eight office on the Ram ticket. One of his best campaign actions of the season was carried out against Oakland when he caught four passes for 77 yards and recovered two fumbles.

His running mate, the dependable L. C. Shields, looks like a good bet to be re-elected for All-Big Eight honors. The veteran lineman has led the action at tackle spot and has consistently inspired the rest of the line.

Another member of the team who has been reliable all year is Craft, who may also come up with post-season honors.

The word Olympics has always been associated with the greatest athletic competitions in history. The Games draw world-wide attention and do much to promote good will. Because of their importance, Northern Californians should feel more than proud to host the 1960 Winter Olympics at Squaw Valley.

From latest reports, the men in charge of staging it are planning a Mike Todd spectacular. Northern California may be trying to steal some of the glory Los Angeles received for hosting the 1932 Olympic Games.

A thousand contestants from 33 nations are due to compete in the VIII Winter Games. These are the second winter games to be hosted in the United States. Lake Placid in New York had the first games in 1932.

White Victory, the official film of the VII Olympic Games at Cortina in 1956, will be shown for the last time tonight in San Francisco at Nourse Auditorium.

Kezar Scrape Minute Too Long For Sacramento; Baikie's Boot Shocks Conference Leaders 7-6

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

With 35 seconds remaining to play in the fourth and final period of an immortal Kezar scrape that will have to go down in history as one of the most dramatic ever witnessed in the mighty Stanyan Street arena, Don Baikie, operating out of the hold of Gene Craft, virtually kicked Sacramento out of the Junior Rose Bowl, 7-6.

The game winning boot came as the culmination of an 80-yard "do-or-die" touchdown drive, highlighted by the spectacular 32-yard dash of Genie "can-do" Craft, who hauled in a Baikie swing pass on the Sac 47, cut back the full width of the field, and packed the mail all the way to the enemy 15 before being pushed out of bounds.

Mel Sims then hit the right side of the Panther forward wall on a mouse trap that backfired for no gain, and then came the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer finale.

Baikie wound up his sling-shot, faded back to the 27, and fired a perfect end zone strike to Oscar Donahue, who leaped 10 feet in the air to pull the hide out of the itchy fingers of Rod Holtz and Lou Blakley, who flanked him tightly from both sides.

Following Baikie's conversion shot, Frank Robinson returned Pete Morgan's kick-off to his own 33, Jerry Conway shot off tackle for 16 yards to the Ram 35, then fired a desperation pass downfield which was intercepted by Donahue, and the game was in the bag by a 7-6 margin.

The Sacs picked up their sole tally with 2:45 remaining in the first half when Ram qb Bill Baker, with his back to the wall on the Red and White 2½, tossed wildly on a pitchout to Stan Glass. Holtz gobbled up the goods and danced completely untouched to paydirt for 6-0.

Panther signal caller Bobby Gatiss went for "double or nothing" on the post touchdown bonus, dropped back to pass and wound up eating the ball, the outcome of which proved to be the difference between victory and defeat.

This was by no means the only element in the undoing of the men from the capitol city, however, as Ray Clemons' charges pulled a pair of the biggest boners since "Wrong Way" Corrigan made his immortal imprint in history. Twice they moved inside the one-yard line, failing to pick up the marbles on each occasion, as the result of the brutal stubbornness of a Ram front line that, beyond the shadow of a doubt, came through with its greatest performance of the year.

Aside from the per usual incomparable performance of Donahue, just about a lead pipe cinch for All-Conference honors, as well as a good bet for Junior All-American, who blocked a punt, recovered a pair of fumbles, and scored the big tally, it would be difficult to point out the outstanding Ram performer. They all played like tigers and the win was definitely a team effort.

Rams Head South For Friday Clash With Modestans

Moving into the fifth week of the Big Eight season, the college eleven meets the Modesto Pirates this Friday at 2 p.m. on the Bucaneer home field.

From a comparative scoring standpoint the Modesto school has a slight edge.

Both squads faced the Stockton Mustangs, the Rams coming out second best, 38-12, and the Pirates losing, 28-13. West Contra Costa fell before both squads, losing to the college, 26-12, and whitewashed by Modesto, 15-0.

Modesto Coach Stan Pavko centers his straight T attack around 217-pound fullback Bob Jenkins, who ran roughshod over Diablo Valley earlier in the season by gaining 89 yards in seven carries and scoring twice to head a 30-20 triumph.

To counterbalance Jenkins' blunderbuss running, Coach Grover Kiemmer has a weighty line, headed by L. C. Shields and Pete Morgan, that can put forth enough hard nose to keep him in line. The sometimes-up, sometimes-down college line could prove to be the toughest seven man aggregation the Modesto fullback has ever faced.

As always, Ram hopes fall mainly on Don Baikie's passing, coupled with Gene Craft's and Jerry White's running.

White showed plenty of power two weeks ago when the locals trounced Oakland, 38-12. White scored once and amassed 71 yards in nine carries. Craft had 83 for 13, two of them tallies.

Mel Sims, White's main competitor, showed his style against the Thunderbirds by scoring once for the college. This gives the Rams three strong-running scatbacks to toss at the Pirates.

Former Rams Help Gators Win Meet

Former Ram athletes competed against their alma mater last Thursday in a cross country meet at San Francisco State College.

Bill Tillson, Ray Batz, Roy Buchman and Karl Greipenburg, numbers one, two, four and six, respectively, on State's team, were running their race under different colors. Instead of sporting the college's red and white they were competing in State's purple and gold satins.

This meet was a practice affair with only the physical achievement important, not the outcome. The Ram squad had a record of four wins, two losses, and one tie going into the meet against State.

Vallejo, Modesto, American River and Sacramento Junior Colleges have tasted defeat from the Ram forces, while Diablo Valley and Sacramento State College outdistanced the Rams. In an early season meet, Diablo Valley ran a dead heat with the college's team.

Phi Delta Downs Alpha Phi 26-24 In Mural Feature

By Nick Peters

In the battle of unbeatens Phi Beta Delta (3-0) sneaked by Alpha Epsilon (2-1) 26-24 in the feature contest of the IFC league's third round play.

Behind Dick Jenkins' 12 points and Ed O'Donnell's 10 the Phi Delts maintained a two-point lead practically throughout the game to tie Gamma Phi Epsilon (3-0) for the IFC lead.

Gamma Phi, last year's champs, had their torrid offensive pace slowed down, but they were never in danger against Beta Tau (0-3) as guard Rudy Vasquez 11 markers carried them to a 37-23 victory.

Other IFC results found Lambda Phi (2-1) walloping Beta Phi (0-3) to the tune of 54-22, and Zeta Phi (2-1) besting Kappa Rho (0-3) 32-19.

Lambda Phi, playing its best game of the season, staged an over-powering scoring attack with Jack Conroy and Jim Murray in the lead roles with 16 and 23 points, respectively.

Only one game was played in CAB competition, since the two others resulted in 2-0 forfeitures. Winners by forfeit were the Rickey Ross Rockets (2-0) over the IRC (0-3) and the H&R Society (3-0) over the Independent Celtics (0-2).

The played game found the Recreation Association (2-1) running away from The Guardsman (0-3) 58-30, despite holding only a 24-22 margin at the intermission." Playing his first game, 6-4 center Dick Minderman, who played his prep basketball at Lincoln, was unstoppable from a two-foot area of the hoop, tallying 16 points and grabbing countless rebounds against the inexperienced scribe squad.

Phi Delta's O'Donnell continued his scoring supremacy in the IFC loop with 50 points in three games for a 16.7 average. Runners-up are Lambda Phi's Murray (40 pts.-13.3) and Conroy (37 pts.-12.3).

The Guardsman's Nick Peters (38 pts.-12.7) took over the CAB point parade from the RA's Bob Crenshaw (35 pts.-11.7). Next in line is Joe Cumagon, Filipino Club (25 pts. in 2 games-12.5).

Feature contests this week are Filipino Club (2-0) vs. H&R (3-0) tomorrow night at 7 o'clock in the men's gymnasium, and Alpha Phi (2-1) vs. Zeta Phi (2-1) tonight at the same time on the women's court.

Salazar Boots Trio As Ram Soccermen Whip Stanford 7-3

Led by George Salazar's three goals the Ram booters overwhelmed a hustling Stanford Indian squad 7-3 last Saturday at Balboa Stadium.

Salazar booted his first goal in 19:15 of the first quarter to tie the game at 1-1 after Stanford had taken a 1-0 lead in the first 15 seconds of the game on a long shot by left wing Ed Lowe. Salazar's two other goals came in the third and fourth quarters. These scores broke the back of the fighting Indians and iced the game for the Rams.

With the score tied 1-1 in the second quarter Giovanni Halstad boomed home a goal to break the game wide open. During the remainder of this quarter there were four goals scored, three of them by the Rams. The lone Stanford goal came off the foot of Dick Bartlett.

The Rams' goals were scored by Bob Papara on a penalty kick, Rolland Prydz on a long high boot which the goalie misjudged, and John Foudadi.—W.D.

Phelan Drills Cagers For Upcoming Season

Less than a month away from their first practice tilt of the season, Coach Sid Phelan's Ram cagers are going through some extensive and tough workout drills.

By running a few laps around the men's gymnasium every day, the set-shot artists are getting in tip top shape for those long trips from one end of the court to the other.

Having a small turnout for this year's court slickers, Phelan commented, "Anyone who is interested in playing basketball for the Rams is urged to come out for the team practice, every afternoon at 3 p.m. in the men's gymnasium."

'Survivors' Now Full Members; Zany Acts Over

By Kathie Burns

CIGAR BOXES filled with cigarettes, candy and gum, the beanies, canes, banners, and singing and shouting in the cafeteria are gone this week.

Pledge Week ended with the Golden Slipper dance last Friday night, and the students who survived this hectic week are now full-fledged members of the fraternities and sororities they pledged.

Theta Tau sorority's pledges included Betsy Hawkins, pledge captain; Joan Arrigale, Karen Blushel, Judy Miller and Elaine Ruud. The new members gave a dinner for their sisters last Sunday night.

Pledges of Kappa Phi sorority were De-de Vlandreas, pledge captain; Dolly O'Donnell, Diane Massuceo, Margi Hill, Sue Etzler, Karen Raisis and Isabel Nadel. Pledge mistress of the sorority who helped the women through the week was Donna De Fount.

Zeta Chi sorority accepted the following pledges this semester: Lynn Gannon, president; Joan Lloyd, vice-president; Irene Palmini, secretary-treasurer; Nancy Canning, Mary Eileard, Sorelle Lowe, Valerie Oldaker, Judy Rogers, Linda Rogers and Sylvia Schwanebeck. The officers were elected by the pledges and led the pledge class.

Phi Beta Delta fraternity had the most pledges of the fraternities with 19. The pledges challenged the pledge class of Beta Tau fraternity to a basketball game to be held this week.

The Westminster Fellowship, the Presbyterian group, meets every Friday during College Hour in C-102. This Friday there will be a missionary from the Philippines speaking to them on The Life And Mission Of The Church. Anyone interested may attend the meeting as it should prove very interesting, Al Heil, publicity chairman of the organization, said.

Any students interested in flying or learning how to fly at the lowest possible cost are invited to attend the meetings of the San Francisco Flying Club every Friday during College Hour in S-320. This club, although not affiliated directly with the college, includes members who attend and did attend the college. Its constitution is enforced by Steve Ladas, president; Don Rogers, vice-president; Jack Harrigan, treasurer, and John Lippitt, sponsor.

AS Council Finds Orientation Reports, Budget Approvals, Election Rules Hard To Grasp

By Roy Twitty

Kicked around Student Council for the past three meetings, budgets, plans for the orientation of next semester's new students, and regulations for the elections of Associated Students are issues still being ruminated over by the council.

Set aside to familiarize entering students with the college campus and registration procedures, Orientation Day has been scheduled by the council tentatively for February 9, 1959. Preceding the start of registration by one day, attendance at this event by those new to the college will be mandatory.

Associated Men Students announced that their annual smoker, exclusively for new men students, will be held on this date in the men's gymnasium. New women will be hosted concurrently at a tea in Smith Hall by the Associated Women Students.

Familiarization of new students with registration procedures will be accomplished by a special Student Council committee with the aid of campus fraternities and sororities. Procedure on registration day will be similar to previous semesters with the addition of the showing of slides depicting an average student in the process of registering.

Terry Chavez, IFC president; Ann Finneran, Finance Chairman; Al Salamanca, Guardsman staff editor and Publicity Committee member; and Audrey Bell, Associated Student vice-president, are the delegates picked by AS President Freddie Hicks to attend the November 20, 21, and 22 conference of the CJCSGA in Bakersfield.

Chavez will represent the college in athletics; Miss Finneran, finance; Salamanca, publicity; and Miss Bell, student government. Elections had been held by council to piek the California Junior College Student Government Association conference delegates, but were declared invalid by Hicks because three women had been chosen, which would pose a housing problem.

Nearing the end of the list of unpassed budgets, three more money requests were submitted to the Student Council for approval. Cut by almost $1,000.00, the Campus Police budget was okayed by council at $911.45. Last semester the campus force was allowed $1,951.00.

The second budget accepted by the Student Council was $315.00 for the cross-country track team. Varsity and junior-varsity basketball teams received a total of $1,715.80.

Two budgets are left to be reviewed by the council; one, the KCSF student broadcasters, is still tabled, and the other has not been presented.

Hi-Fi Concerts' Volume Leads To End Of Programs

Rather than lower the quality of the College Hour concerts, the little theater has decided to discontinue all remaining concerts planned for this semester, according to Chuck Huntley, who originated the program.

The problem involved inability to control the volume and keep the sound from traveling through the ventilation shaft and radiator pipes to first floor offices. This left Huntley with only two alternatives, either to establish a sound-proofing system which is impossible at this time, or to turn down the volume of the Hi-Fi.

"The latter would not help matters since Hi-Fi and volume run hand-in-hand," Huntley said.

"These concerts were established in order to get more students interested in the little theater, and it has, since there has been an excellent turnout—nearly a full house every College Hour," Huntley explained.

The only possible way the concerts can continue is to find another suitable place to hold them since the equipment is movable: Huntley commented. "Have sound system, will travel."

Claim Number On Hand Can Speed GI Benefits

Veterans claiming benefits under the GI Bill are urged to have their claim numbers on hand when filing monthly report forms, Robin Dunn, Veterans Counselor here, announced recently.

If the claim number is on the report, there is less delay in sorting and therefore less delay in submitting them to the Veterans Administration, Dunn said.

Modesto Bus Ticket Sale To Close Today

Last chance to purchase bus tickets, costing $2.75, for the Modesto game this Friday, is today, according to John Dunn, faculty adviser to the Rally Committee.

Students planning to attend must be ready to leave the college at 10:30 a.m. in order to reach the game by the 2 p.m. kickoff.

"As we want a big turnout for the last "away" game, we will take any student who wants to go but is unable to pay the bus fare," Dunn added. Tickets can be purchased in the cafeteria office.

No rally will be presented Friday, because of the student-faculty coffee hour.

Marksman Class Pistol Club Tops Air Force Team

Marksman class pistol shots captured the first place trophy for the college in the Western Revolver Association sanctioned shooting match held November 2 at Knowland Park in Oakland.

Racking up a 1,005 point high score for the day, the team pulled the deadly Hamilton Air Force Base team, with a score of 800, down to second place.

The Richmond Police Department marksman team fired its way into third place, and fourth place was grabbed by the Oakland Police Department.

Competing with the national .38 caliber match course against 300 other shooters, the individual scores for the four marksmen were:

William Donohoe, 270 (high score for the day); Frank Williams, 263; James Sunderland, 239; and Frank Mateo, 233. All are officers of the Campus Police force.

Fourth place in the sharpshooter class, the next highest category, was grasped by the other team entered by the college. The U. S. Coast Guard team rose to first place, crowding the Fort Ord sharpshooters into the runner-up spot.

Championship of the year is in sight for the team, according to Fred Fitzgerald, Campus Police and shooting team adviser, if the upcoming December 7 match is won by taking the trophy. Fitzgerald, a director of the Western Revolver Association and a qualified expert shot, expressed concern over the accuracy and past record of the Hamilton Air Force team.

Petrified Forest Moves Into Final Weekend Showing

After two highly successful week-end runs, the drama department's production of The Petrified Forest moves into its final performance this Friday and Saturday nights at 8 p.m. in the little theater.

"Rehearsals on this play were hard to coordinate with the students' working hours," Michael Griffin, drama director, commented today, adding, "the bugs have worked themselves out, and we feel that we have a very fine play."

Griffin's statement is concurred with by William Dir, affiliated with the Opera Ring, and now casting My Three Angels, who visited the drama department, saw the production of The Petrified Forest, and was so pleased that he invited three of the actors to try out for his cast.

"Surprisingly enough," Griffin stated, "most of our audience are paying customers from downtown. We would like to encourage our own people to see what we have . . . especially those who have been connected with drama production."

Without waiting for the close of The Petrified Forest, the drama department has completed the casting of its next play, You Can't Take It With You, by Moss Hart and George Kaufman. Rehearsal of the three-act comedy began on Monday.

Although You Can't Take It With You doesn't open until January 9, Griffin said, by starting now there will be ample time "to get the play down pat. The more time spent in rehearsal, the better the production; and, of course," he emphasized, "every actor's dream is the perfect performance."

Graduating Students Can Still Submit To Forum

Student writers who expect to graduate this semester are still eligible to contribute material for possible publication in Forum, the college's yearly literary magazine which is published each spring.

Contributions should be submitted early because there is usually an overflow of material each spring, Miss Connolly said. Last year more than 200 items were turned in. Essays, poems and short, short stories are acceptable for publication.

Rabelais: A Master Of Satire

motley group of companions get involved in an endless series of adventures, every one of which becomes an instrument of allegory directed against anything that could hinder Rabelais' philosophic conception of liberty. He satirizes everything from war to cliches, and makes his readers laugh heartily in the process.

SATIRE ON MILITARISM

One of the things almost everyone living in 16th century Europe dreaded was war, and Rabelais expresses his distaste for all warfare and militarism quite eloquently in a biting sarcasm that exposes warmongers for what they are. After a petty dispute between cake-dealers and shepherds develops into nationwide war, one ruler is persuaded by his advisers to refuse peace terms, and is eventually dealt a crushing setback. Rabelais leaves little doubt in the reader's mind that warfare is aimless and that those who perpetuate it deserve no pardon.

The abuses of justice are dealt with in a more humorous fashion by Rabelais. He describes the plight of Bridlegoose, an elderly judge who for years had decided his court cases not by deliberation but by a throw of the dice. Justice finally catches up with Bridlegoose as his eyes become weaker in his old age and he miscreads the dice.

Rabelais flays pedantry quite effectively in one chapter in which a young man says, "Submurmurating my horary precules, I elave and absterge my anima of its nocturnal inquinations," when what he means is, "While saying my prayers, I wash and cleanse my soul of the pollution of the night."

CLICHE USERS EXPOSED

Cliche users are also made to look ridiculous when Rabelais writes an entire chapter using nothing but cliches and trite proverbs.

His utter disgust with the vanity of the popes of his time is manifested during a visit by Pantagruel to the fictitious island of Papimania, whose inhabitants worship the pope, considering him a god who rules on earth.

All of these objects are satirized in such a subtle manner that an untrained reader would overlook many of them. Regarding this allegory which abounds in the book, Rabelais said, "By careful reading, you should break the bone and suck the substantial marrow of my meaning."

In addition to the powerful satire, the book offers many humorous incidents, such as Gargantua's running off with the bells of Notre Dame in Paris, and Pantagruel's eating six average-sized men who had fallen into his salad.

Perhaps the book's apparent literary desuetude signifies a rejection by readers of Rabelais' extremely frank and exuberant treatment of the facts of human physiology, among other things. But this frank, unbridled treatment of life was symbolic of the Renaissance and should be taken as such by the modern reader.

BOOK NOW A CLASSIC

In spite of the parts some people may deem objectionable, Gargantua and Pantagruel has unquestionably achieved classical status through the centuries. Through the modern acceptance of many of his concepts of human conduct and education, Rabelais has attained universality.

The wit, satire and erudition offered in Gargantua and Pantagruel make it a book that will entertain a modern day reader while stimulating him with a myriad of controversial ideas to ponder.

College Engineers Honored By IBM

Company Awards Kit For Outstanding Service

By Jim Clifford

In recognition of the outstanding service rendered by many of the college's former students now in their employ, International Business Machines Corporation (IBM) last week presented the engineering department with an electronic computer kit, used to demonstrate the circuitry of commercial computers.

Dean of Instruction William Mayo and Mark Sheldon of the engineering department accepted the kit from Bob Jensen, class of '49, field manager of customer engineering for IBM, and A. W. Wohlrab, manager of IBM's customer engineering.

The kit, the first given to a Bay Area school by IBM, will be utilized to set up various basic circuits to simulate the operation of a computer and to demonstrate the individual circuits involved.

"This is something that can be used in numerous ways to teach basic circuitry," Sheldon stated.

Mayo pointed out that kits such as this will be invaluable in the teaching of future electronic technicians, a talent in great demand by the nation's industry. Mayo noted that many of the country's larger firms are designating work, formerly handled by four-year engineers, to electronic technicians, thus moving the graduate engineers up to the research field.

Wohlrab said, "A great number of former City College students are now working for every IBM branch in the area." He hopes that this training tool will encourage more young men to make their futures as electronic engineering technicians.

Joseph A. Amori, the college's placement director, who has guided many engineering students to futures with IBM and other top organizations, deemed the presentation another example of the cooperation between the nation's industry and education.

Rams, Bulldogs Vie For 'Tom-Tom' Trophy Friday

By George Grasso, Sports Editor

Moving into the final week of football, the topsy-turvy Big Eight Conference will try to settle a few more places in standings as it features a traditional duel between the college's Rams and Doug Scovil's San Mateo Bulldogs at Kezar, Friday at 2 p.m. in a battle for the coveted "Tom-Tom" trophy.

The Bulldogs' position as favorites suffered with the college's great upset over Sacramento, and Stockton's timely trouneing of San Mateo to the tune of 34-8 in San Mateo's homecoming game. This turn of events left Sacramento with a very shaky lead for first and San Francisco, San Mateo, Stockton, Santa Rosa and Oakland tied for second.

The San Mateans' guiding light, and at the same time their Achilles' heel, is their outstanding quarterback, most valuable player in the 20-30 East-West game, Gene Tagliaferri.

There is a saying on the peninsula which is pretty much to the point, "As goes Tagliaferri, so go the Bulldogs." The entire team is too heavily centered around their 192-pound fieldgeneral, and when he has a bad day, the rest of the squad may as well pack up and go home.

The most dangerous Bulldog running back is speedy Jerry Seattini, who has missed two weeks of action but will start Friday to bring his team up to full strength.

As far as the running game is concerned, it will be a contest of elusiveness against power. Gene Craft (155) and Jerry White (160) will try to match their shifty scatback movements against the head-on power plays of San Mateo's Scattini (195), Bill Cole (195) and Jim Rodes (170).

Up front it's just the reverse. The Ram line should make mudpies out of the light Bulldog wall, as Oscar Donahue, Pete Morgan, L. C. Shields and Tony Hobbs looked tough against Sacramento. If they play the same way Friday the Bulldogs are in trouble.

Facing Shields, Morgan, Hobbs and other bulldozers, who average more than 200 pounds, will be a San Mateo line exemplified by its top guard, East-West star Bill Dickey, who weighs in at a light 170. There is only one San Mateo starting lineman ovgr 200 pounds.

This season, the Bulldogs dropped Modesto 32-0, Santa Rosa 36-12, Contra Costa 28-14, and Oakland 36-0. They were beaten by Sacramento 18-8, and by Stockton 34-8.

Much of San Mateo's early success belongs to their freshman coach Doug Scovil. Scovil, who was born in Anacortes, Washington, and now lives in South San Francisco, played his high school ball at Lowell. He won All-City honors as an end, and went on to become an outstanding quarterback at College of Pacific. He excels at coaching as well as playing football, and last year piloted Sacred Heart to its first AAA championship in 31 years.

"I think we'll give you a good game," Scovil said. "We were not up to full strength against Stockton, and missed the speed of Jerry Scattini." Scovil, and rightly so, refused to predict the outcome of Friday's game.

Lapse In College Spirit Spurs AMS Survey Of Student Unity; Radical Policy Changes Urged

By Donn Bernstein

Radical changes in the Associated Men Students' policies are currently being proposed in an all-out effort to better student interest and unity, Al Morales, AMS president, announced here last week.

Convinced that the present attitude and lapse in college spirit displayed by men students here can be improved, Morales has launched a campaign whereby he and his assistant officers have screened, through the mail, several two-year colleges throughout California requesting data and suggestions concerning the benefits and welfare of college students.

"I am particularly interested," Morales stated, "in developing a unified and spirit-conscious student body. Thus far our attempts to create this relationship have been in vain. Although I cannot pinpoint the exact reasons for this lack of college-student alliance, I sincerely hope that by investigating the student-affairs policies of other two-year colleges, I can perhaps come up with the solution needed to gain student interest in college life which is so badly needed here at City College."

Morales went on to state that he is particularly interested in improving the structure of the AMS policies so that next semester an adequate niche will be carved for the incoming AMS president.

Although men students' activities haven't been neglected this semester, Morales has put emphasis on reorganizing plans for the future effectiveness and aid of the AMS.

"This is a job which must start now," Morales stressed, "for if there are to be advantageous results we must plan way ahead of time."

Another prime objective of the two-year college survey is to establish clear cut lines designating the actual duties of the AMS president. All two-year colleges engage in various activities, yet determining the area of jurisdiction under whom they should be placed has been a major problem, the AMS president said.

As an example, homecoming activities during the football season are technically under the control of the AMS office; yet, the Rally Committee handles this function, and despite the fact they do a fine job, there is some doubt as to who should actually supervise the program, Morales added.

He hopes to set up a program whereby the designation of responsibilities for the vast array of college functions will be distributed to the committees on campus who are most apt in handling their own special tasks.

Morales is interested in obtaining distinctive college features for the men students which will specifically be dealt with by the AMS office. Scrutinizing other two-year colleges has been helpful in furnishing information which will serve to better the standards of the AMS program.

The AMS president requested suggestions from the men students in his continuous quest to gain a more closely-knit group of male student body members. These suggestions can be deposited in Morales' mailbox located in the Associated Student office, B-1.

Student Caution Sustains Record, Foils Death Trap

Despite their infrequent use of crosswalks, the college's students were pointed out last week as using outstanding caution, either knowlingly or unconsciously, in their driving and walking habits at the "death trap" intersection of Ocean and Phelan Avenues.

Sergeant Clayton Mitchell, traffic accident analyst, revealed that fatalities and major accidents for this year are nil at this intersection, which is an indication of carefulness on the part of many students.

"For the great amount of pedestrian and auto traffic it receives," he said, "the number of accidents at Ocean and Phelan, three minor ones in the past year, is exemplary."

The age group of the average college student is the least accident prone, pedestrian wise. This is largely due to the fact that their reactions are much keener than those of older people.

Mitchell said, however, that the crosswalks at Phelan and Ocean are not used enough. He added that too many of the students jaywalk rather than use the crosswalks. "Wide awake caution should be used in crossing these streets," he stated, "if we want to keep the accident rate down at this intersection."

Officer John Bird of the Ingleside Station said that many of the students are not observing the set rule of good pedestrian traffic, which is the use of designated crosswalks.

Bing, Forshay Win Journalism Awards

Two of three Journalism students here who entered competitions won awards at a conference of the Journalism Association of Junior Colleges, northern section, held last Saturday on the San Francisco State campus.

J. Edward Bing, Guardsman reporter, won first place in the news writing category, and William Forshay, Guardsman news editor, won first place in the feature writing category.

Other first place winners were John Orr, Contra Costa, sports writing; Harley Monian, Sacramento, photography; Clarence Vlekland, Oakland, editorial writing, and Paul Fletcher, Sacramento, advertising.

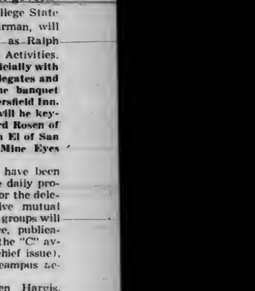
CAB Starts Drive For Induction Of 13 Organizations

A shakeup will take place in the immediate future because of the fact that the Club Activities Board recognizes only 17 of the 30 existing campus organizations, CAB President Jim Hickey announced last week.

Hickey has decided to take quick action if the remaining 13 clubs do not request permission to be recognized as chartered on-campus organizations.

An amendment to the constitution was drawn by the CAB and passed by the Student Council which states that clubs wishing recognition as on-campus organizations must hand their applications into the CAB by the time of its twelfth meeting.

If this is not done, the violating clubs will be put on probation until the sixteenth meeting takes place. After the sixteenth meeting, if the club has failed to comply with this rule, it will no longer be recognized as an on-campus organization.



Last year, one club was declared off campus for not heeding the laws set down by the CAB.

Composed of one representative from each chartered on-campus organization or a proxy in the case of a club of which no members are free to attend, the CAB administers its functions in Cloud Hall every Tuesday and Thursday at 1 p.m.

Bakersfield Site Of Upcoming Three Day Student Government Conference For Junior Colleges

Representing the college at the conference will be Terry Chavez, athletics; Ann Finneran, finance; Albert Salamanca, publications; Audrey Bell, campus activities, and Freddie Hicks, student government. Ben A. Northrup, college State Information Services Chairman, will be in attendance as well as Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities.

FREDDIE HICKS, Associated Student president, who will lead a party of 10 student government leaders to the semi-annual CJCSGA conference at Bakersfield this weekend.

Proceedings will begin officially with the hosting of some 320 delegates and 128 advisers at a welcome banquet Saturday night at the Bakersfield Inn. Highlighting the banquet will be keynote speaker, Rabbi Sanford Rosen of the Peninsula Temple Beth El of San Mateo, whose subject is Mine Eyes To See.

Five workshop sessions have been scheduled as a part of the daily program to make it possible for the delegates to discuss and solve mutual problems. These discussion groups will be concerned with finance, publications, athletics (of which the "C" average for athletes is the chief issue), student government and campus activities.

Aiding Hargis will be the three vice-presidents of the association, Gary Pyle of Fresno City College, Howard Reed of Diablo Valley College, and Gene Berkowitz of Los Angeles Trade-Technical College.

Pledges To Paint Winning Slogan On Refuse Cans

Slogans by the hundreds were submitted to the Clean-up Campus Campaign Committee, and Palmroy Bush's A Neater Campus Is A Sweeter Campus was selected as the winning motto, according to Dick Cottrell, president of Tau Chi Sigma fraternity.

Contrary to the custom of previous years, when only Tau Chi Sigma pledges rendered their paint services, this year will find all fraternities getting in the clean-up act, Cottrell said.

Pledges of the different on-campus fraternities will participate in the traditional garbage-can paint festival. This Saturday at 1 p.m. red paint and brushes, in the hands of eager, clean-up minded pledges, will start to apply the new look to the refuse receptacles, Cottrell commented.

Judges who selected the winning slogan were Cottrell, Terry Chavez, president of the Inter-Fraternity Council, and Dick Appuhn. According to Cottrell, there were several fine mottos submitted.

Hundreds Of Students Needed For Holiday Jobs

Several hundred students are needed to fill part time Christmas jobs, Joseph A. Amori, placement director here, announced last week.

Currently leading the parade for job callers are the downtown department stores and specialty shops, who are seeking both men and women for sales work, wrappers, cashiers and stock clerks. Wages start at $1.25 per hour, and experienced hands can earn up to $1.51 per hour.

Thanksgiving marks the actual opening of the holiday rush season, and job holders will be working each day from Thanksgiving until Christmas, Amori said. Part time jobs are available, however, at the present time.

In accordance with a new union contract, which became effective last July 1, part time Christmas employees will not receive $1.50 dinner money, as was the custom during previous years. Other compensations, however, will be available, such as more regular work hours and increased overtime, Amori said. This new ruling does not apply to permanent department store personnel.

"Experience is not the criterion for getting a job. Students are expected, however, to have a neat appearance, be well poised, reliable and be willing to carry out their assigned tasks," he added.

Students interested should report to the placement center, S-187, to fill out applications for work. The placement center is open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 12 noon and from 2 to 4 p.m.

Post office assistants are no longer needed, said Amori, as the college has furnished over 800 applicants who will work as postal assistants during the Christmas holiday.

Newman Club, H&R Give Flapper Dance

In collaboration for the first time with the Hotel and Restaurant Society, the Newman Club presents its annual November dance this Friday night.

The affair, named Flapper Fling by the two societies, is scheduled from 9 p.m. until midnight in Smith Hall. Along with the theme, dress will be roaring 20's costumes or sport with ties for the men.

Main features of the evening will be a Charleston contest and prizes for the best costumes.

Jerry Granelli and his band will provide the dance music.

Tickets costing 75 cents stag and $1.25 drag along with an Associated Student or registration card will be sold at the door to the dance.

According to Dona Camaren-Gonzalez, decoration chairman, "Both organizations have been working hard to make the dance a success."

Editorial: Greater Support Urged For Last Game

FRIDAY'S grid encounter at Kezar pits City College against College of San Mateo in the annual "Tom-Tom Trophy" competition. This game merits the support of all the college's students.

Firstly, as a tribute to a team whose excellent performances have deserved more spectators than they have received, it is our responsibility to provide an enthusiastic rooting section at this game.

Secondly, the tradition of this contest—the team's final 1958 effort—certainly calls for a spirited home team backing.

And finally, the Rams, with a current 3-3 record, have the possibility of a tie for second in the Big Eight Conference should they emerge victorious come sundown this Friday.

In a traditional rival such as this, whereby the San Mateo student body will turn out in great numbers to support its team, we, the City College students, should not allow ourselves to be outnumbered by a group of students whose home base is about 20 miles away.

However, if past attendance trends are indicative, our hard-fighting football team will probably be let down once more by its unfaithful student body.

There is only one remedy for this pathetic state of affairs, and that is the wholehearted support which all of us should instinctively be willing to provide for our deserving grid squad.

Despite the meager attendance figures, a few faithful individuals are exempt as targets for this criticism.

Sincere appreciation must be given to John Dunn, energetic faculty adviser of the college's Rally Committee, on behalf of his constant attempts to ignite a spark of student-fan enthusiasm.

Along with Dunn's efforts, the song girls, the band, the members of the press and the broadcasting club, have shown their loyalty and know that their efforts have not been wasted. These few, however, do not nearly comprise what can be called faithful student backing.

All semester long, through editorials and other modes of publicity, we have tried to emphasize the importance of game attendance. Our attempts, however, have apparently been in vain, as evidenced by a very low Kezar gate count.

Facing the facts, it has become a matter of personal laziness and general lack of loyalty toward a major college function. This lackadaisical attitude cannot be attributed to those who are in class or are working during game hours (kickoff is at 2 p.m.); but there is absolutely no excuse for the minimum effort displayed by the rest of the students, who have had the time to attend these games, but for some reason or other have neglected to do so.

(In the above cartoon, which first appeared in The Guardsman on October 22, 1948, artist Lloyd Cunningham illustrated lack of student interest at that time. Immediately after its appearance attendance increased a great deal to watch the Ollie Matson-led Rams go on to win the Conference championship. Perhaps a similar reaction could play an instrumental role in bringing the Red and White at least a tie for second place this year?)

Our football players have suffered discouragement throughout the season because of a complex of performing before a near empty Kezar Stadium. Although it is a bit late to repent for this lack of support, a good showing Friday can somewhat compensate for the previous neglect on the part of our student body.

We have done our share—why not start doing yours. Believe it or not, we do field an excellent football team which is worthy of your interest.

Why not come out and see for yourself—it's your last chance!

Culture Triumphs Over Politics

SF Ballet Tour Bolsters USA International Plans

By Pastor Valle-Garay

A success story in the United States' delicate program of international relations could easily be written today by the publicity men and/or by any of the performers of the San Francisco Ballet Company.

Just back from a State Department-sponsored tour through all but two of the Western Hemisphere's countries, the City That Knows How does not have to report to anyone what the accomplishments of the tour were—the Latin American press and people have done it for them, and their commentaries enthusiastically spell t-r-i-u-m-p-h.

Even Bruce Kelly, the company's stage manager whose many commitments kept him practically "living" inside the Central and South American theaters and away from sightseeing experiences, noticed the "favorably great reception given to the ballet there, and, through it, the fantastic homage the people paid to American cultural life."

There is no doubt in the minds of the performers that animosity does not exist, as such, toward the people of the United States in Latin America. At least, that is the impression they were given.

The San Francisco Ballet performed in Venezuela right after the visit of Vice-President Nixon to that country, and, while the governmental representative of the USA was disastrously "welcomed" by the Venezuelans, the ballet, treated as a representative of America's culture, was given one of the greatest receptions ever received by any foreign group of performers. They played to cheering, standing-room-only crowds there and everywhere, and "were treated royally by the press and people," according to Kelly.

"It was a new picture of America for them and they loved it as much as we do here," he commented. In other words, the strained relations between the United States and Latin America have definitely improved through the troupers' visit. The message sent back to America by the host countries' press is one of "let's have more of this type of understanding and relations," as, apparently, opposed to the kind of aid sometimes based on shipments of arms or moral backing to dictatorship-ruled nations.

The Latins, for "just about too long," according to informed sources, have felt that the United States has taken for granted their friendship and has done too little or nothing to keep the flame going.

The problem, according to these sources, is that the people of the United States, as well as those of the Western Hemisphere, are undergoing a period of lack of information about each other's affairs. One thinks of America as the nation in the constant race for world power which is too busy to care for the smaller countries' problems, while the Latins only make the American newspapers when a colorful little revolution of theirs appeals as good copy to the editors.

That is as far as knowledge about each other's "doings" has gone for a long time. Now the State Department has come up with a brilliant device—more mutual cultural and educational exchange between Latin and North America.

The move has proved highly successful for both sides. Educators, newspapermen, Mexico's symphony orchestra, and other cultural expressions from the Western Hemisphere are traveling throughout the United States, while the people in South American realize, through such performances as those by the San Francisco Ballet Company, that there is more to this country than weapons and power—namely culture.

Ballet and politics may not mix. However, one can't blame one, ballet, when it succeeds in an atmosphere where politics or diplomacy have not done too well.

Apparently nothing but a true picture of America's way of life and its down-to-earth interests can bring back to the USA from Latin America, and vice-versa, the good neighbor policy ground lost by each other in recent times—ground each needs to regain today.

Foresight

By Dick Dyer

MONEY may be the root of all evil, as the old cliche goes, but to the average television celebrity, it's the staff of life.

Frank Sinatra, for example, has a contract with ABC in which he gets a cool $3,000,000 in exchange for his three years of exclusive service. Bob Crosby's summer stint brought him $3,000 a week, and Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme earned themselves $2,500 apiece while subbing for vacationing Steve Allen.

A mystery guest on What's My Line gets $500 for merely disguising his voice. Regular panel members, such as Arlene Francis and Bennett Cerf, are paid more than $1,000 each, while I've Got A Secret pays guest panelists $500; however, cocky Henry Morgan has a new contract which starts him at $850 a week and then $1,000 a week after three years.

According to TV Guide, there is no way of telling exactly how much a performer is actually worth; it is simply up to the actor's agent to get him as much as possible. For instance, Jack Benny's deal with Dennis Day provides that the latter receives $2,500 for an appearance and $3,500 for a singing appearance. Esther Williams recently turned down a $10,000 bid from Steve Allen in favor of Ed Sullivan's offer of $3,500.

Ethel Barrymore was given $10,000 for merely taking a bow, and Charlton Heston was paid $10,000 for a Playhouse 90 performance and received the same amount again when the teleplay was re-run.

Danny Kaye recently turned down an offer from a cigarette lighter outfit in which he would have done two spectaculars annually for five years. Had he accepted, he would have been paid a tax-free $2,000,000.

The Jack Benny Show has a budget of $70,000 per show, reportedly the highest of the half-hour programs. After expenses, salaries, and guest fees, Benny is left with a net profit of at least $15,000 per show.

Sometimes top stars like Jerry Lewis and Victor Borge are given a straight $200,000 out of which they must organize an entire program, complete with writers, actors, directors, costumes, orchestra and whatnot. After the show, they are allowed to keep what is left for themselves.

Broadway musical spectaculars which are adapted for TV generally average a budget of around a quarter of a million dollars. A good example of this is the upcoming, two-hour, $500,000 production, Wonderful Town, with Rosalind Russell, which is scheduled for November 30.

On the other hand, Person To Person's budget policy decides no payment to guest stars, which is the main reason you'll never see Elvis Presley on the show. He demands a minimum salary of $100,000, immediate payment after the program is over even if the show is to be canceled, and will do guest shots only at his own convenience.

Considering all this green stuff in circulation via the TV circuit, no wonder California has the highest revenue of any state.

Chaos In Cafeteria

Sticky Fingered Students Point To Egg-Smeared Books, Covers While Wiping Orange Juice From Shirts

By Dick Souder

The place is reminiscent of a scene from Quo Vadis, starring a cast of thousands, and the individual is the principal pigeon. The place is actually the college's cafeteria, the time is high noon, and the conversation generally starts in the same manner.

"Excuse me, but you have your finger in my coffee."

"Sorry."

We wipe the coffee from our finger and the egg from our book, and continue. "Oh, I'm terribly sorry." We smile and watch the orange juice drip down the front of our shirt, but this time we don't bother to wipe it off.

It is not hard to describe this "den of congestion." Just take an enclosed area of approximately 50 by 50 feet, cram it with tables and chairs, and get someone to ring the class dismissal bell. Then get behind something sturdy—like the other side of San Francisco—and watch the fun. Here they come down the hill, all five thousand of them, and all with the same little thought in the back of their little minds. "Get there first, and get that all-important seat."

One can generally judge the population of the cafeteria by the movement of the building, and, on this particular day, it would appear that hurricane Frankenstein is on the loose.

Some rough statistics may help to explain just why the cafeteria is the way it is. Five thousand people are sitting in 2,000 seats, smoking 4,000 cigarettes, drinking 3,000 cups of coffee, 1,500 glasses of orange juice—minus the one that got our friend—and 97 cups of water spiked with aspirin.

The conversation is heard in Stereophonic sound and spoken in seven different languages. Topics of conversation range from Eddie Fisher to the fact that "it was never like this in Europe." The girl dropping her ashes in her boy friend's coffee will find it rather difficult to get him to take her to the coming dance unless he has an iron-clad stomach.

As if we don't have enough troubles as it is, here is a real pain. A college—another San Francisco college, that is—has a habit of sending a daily delegation to "the" college's cafeteria for a purpose we have never figured out. They enter in a very unmilitary manner, shouting their battle cries at the top of their untrained lungs. They're easy to spot. They smoke filters and curl their little finger when drinking coffee from the cafeteria's very uncultured cups.

"What to do about it," is the question of the week. A suggestion, if one may, is if you're from west of Junipero Serra, stay west; don't cross that line. There's Rams in them thar hills.

The clock has now battled its way around to nearly 1 p.m., and with this comes the anticipation of "getting out." Those possessing the imagination needed in this day and age merely to survive will sneak quietly out the back door. Those "other" individuals will merely stand up boldly and begin walking toward the closest exit. May they rest in peace. Brave are those who surge into the throng, throwing caution to the winds.

Yet, day after day, they return, battered and beaten, to drink coffee, smoke cigarettes, and talk of the day when the moon will relieve the population of the world and of the college's cafeteria.

University Of San Francisco's Booters Clinch NCISC Crown With Impressive 3-0 Triumph

By Warren Downes

A strong Ram defense was not enough to hold the league champion University of San Francisco soccermen from their 35th consecutive league game without a loss as the Hilltoppers whipped the college booters 3-0 last Saturday at the winners' field.

This win marked the eleventh consecutive year in which Coach Gus Donaghue's boys have won the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference title. It also resulted in the worst Ram soccer record in many seasons. Roy Diederichsen, veteran mentor, had good material this year but the players just couldn't seem to find themselves against California's Bears, the Cal Aggies or the Hilltoppers.

USF's champions, playing brilliant soccer at times, scored once in the second quarter and twice in the third period.

Their first goal came in ten minutes of the second quarter when Ludwig Sedderman took a pass from Herb Weiss and rammed it into the far corner of the goal for the initial score of the contest. For the remainder of the first half the Ram defense, led by goalie Art Fisher and fullback Roland Fryda, held tight and the league champs were unable to score.

With ten minutes gone in the third period Weiss scored the second goal of the game after receiving a pass from Frank Suarez, who played a standout game for the Dons. Eight minutes later in the same quarter outside left Marcelo Gumucio closed out the scoring for the day on a booming shot into the net.

During the entire game there was a strong wind blowing the length of the field, but the great defenses of both squads kept this advantage to a minimum.

Next Saturday the Ram squad travels to San Jose State to take on the Spartans in the last league game of the season for both teams.

Cross Country Title To Be Decided At Concord

Highlighting the college's 1958 cross country season is the Northern California Junior College championship meet to be held at Concord on Saturday, November 22.

Teams representing most of Northern California's junior colleges will participate in this meet. Ram coach Lou Vasquez said that the college harriers have been pointing for this meet which will decide the Northern California championship.

Vasquez stated that as a team the college is in for a rough afternoon, possibly being not quite as strong as the top teams in the meet. Teamwise, the squads to beat in this meet will be San Jose and Fresno. However, in Paul Patton the Rams have one of the finest runners in Northern California, and he could easily come up with individual honors.

Filipino Cagers, Rickey Ross Tied In CAB Basketball

Rickey Ross' Rockets (3-0) and the Filipino Club (3-0) moved into a tie for the CAB cage lead as a result of their impressive victories last week.

Filipino Club's surprisingly effective attack carried them to a 39-36 win over the H&R (3-1) on the strength of Joe Cumagon's 17 markers. Rickey Ross crushed The Guardsman (0-4) by an astronomical 81-32 verdict, Wilson Williams pacing the club with 20 points. Also triumphant; the RA (3-1) easily downed the Celtics (0-3) 49-39. Bob Crenshaw and Al White shared high point honors with 17 apiece.

IFC leaders Gamma Phi Ypsilon and Phi Beta Delta, both sporting 4-0 marks, easily got past their opposition. The Gammas downed Beta Phi (0-4) 57-23 behind Rudy Vasquez' 17 points.

Dick Jenkins' 17-point output carried the Phi Delts past Beta Tau (0-4) 42-27. Lambda Phi (3-1) whipped Kappa Rho (0-4) as Jim Murray and Jack Conroy contributed 17 and 18 points, respectively. Harold Cade's 15 digits led his Alpha Phi (3-1) mates to an easy 41-36 triumph over Zeta Phi (2-2).

In a tight IFC scoring race Lambda Phi's Murray (57 pts.-14.3) leads, with teammate Conray (55 pts.-13.8) and the Phi Delts' Ed O'Donnell (54 pts.-13.5) close behind. RA's Crenshaw (52 pts.-13.0) tops CAB pointmen, with The Guardsman's Nick Peters (46 pts.-11.5) next in line.—N.P.

Olympic Club Scrum Readies Ram Cagers

Moving into their first dress rehearsal of the '58-'59 cage season, Sid Phelan's Ram charges tangled with the veteran-packed Olympic Club machinery in a hard fought 40-minute scrimmage Friday night at the men's gymnasium.

Led by the versatile performances of Freddie Williams, the Rams came out with a better show than most authorities expected, and should be well heard from in the coming Big Eight circuit.

Title Hopes Crushed As Pirates Edge Gridders; Baikie-To-Donahue 83 Yard Scoring Play Only Bright Spot In Loss

By Donn Bernstein

Hopes for at least a Big Eight Conference title tie faded last Friday afternoon as Grover Klemmer's Rams fell short by a one point margin, 7-6, against Modesto on the Pirates' field.

After a scoreless first period Modesto threw a scare into the Red and White early in the second stanza. Led by halfback Jerry Campbell, who gained 115 yards, and fullback Bob Jenkins, the Pirates took the ball deep into Ram territory. With fourth down on the college's 12, Pirate quarterback Ray Podesto fumbled on a keeper and center Jim Hickey grabbed the loose ball to give the locals a first and ten on their own 15.

Jerry White carried the ball for 2 yards. With second and 8 to go, qb Don Baikie faded back to his own 10 and heaved a perfect 30-yard pitch to end Oscar Donahue, who snatched the leather oval and scampered unscathed the remaining 60 yards to give the college a 6-0 lead.

On the conversion attempt, Baikie split the uprights, but an untimely illegal procedure penalty nullified the play and Baikie was forced to kick again, the second time five yards farther back from the original point of placement. Baikie's second attempt was in vain as the placement was obliterated by a Modesto lineman.

The balance of the second quarter found both teams battling back and forth, with Modesto again driving deep into Ram territory late in the period. In a desperate attempt to put Modesto on the scoreboard, Podesto tried a 17-yard field goal, but it fell short, the Ram contingent holding the halftime edge, 6-0.

Opening the third period of play, Donahue received the kickoff from Phil Larsen, whose brother Paul was an All-American at UC, and the lanky end returned the ball to his own 42. Failing to pick up a first down, Baikie was forced to punt and the Bucs took over on their own 35. Seven plays, one penalty and 65 yards later, Pirate qb Garry Norvell brought the Modesto rooters to their feet as he shot seven yards up the middle for the tying touchdown. Larsen heroically kicked the PAT, giving his mates a 7-6 lead.

A ray of hope sparked the Red and White backers in the final stanza as the locals moved 55 yards in nine plays, highlighted by White's 37-yard sprint. The Rams failed to score, however, as Baikie's passes didn't eat up enough yards for the first down.

Mel Sims intercepted a Modesto pass on the Pirate 45 and raced the ball to the 25. Desperate attempts to score failed and the Modestans took over to run out the clock, winning it 7-6, and sealing the lid on coffin of the Rams' 1958 title hopes.

Bulldogs Out To Regain Trophy In Friday Crucial

By Jim Clifford

To the victor go the spoils, and the spoils at stake in this Friday's game between the college and the San Mateo Bulldogs is the coveted Tom-Tom Trophy (a Chinese Tom-Tom with an embossed Bulldog on one end and a Ram's head on the other) that has been an emblem of Ram-Bulldog grid rivalry since its debut in 1946.

The 1946 contest witnessed a culmination of a long-growing rivalry between the two colleges that dates back to 1941, the year one of the greatest squads in Bulldog history narrowly escaped a fired-up, mediocre Ram eleven, 12-7.

That season the peninsula team was the scourge of Northern California, downing the opposition with relative ease. The Rams, on the other hand, were usually on the embarrassing end of the score. The game was the last of the season for both teams, and a victory meant an undefeated season for the San Mateo eleven.

Their hubble was almost burst by the Rams that day, and the emergence of a symbol to represent the heated competition was sought by both colleges.

During the war years the game was suspended, but the memory of the '41 game still lingered on.

The '46 clash showed that the spirit was still there when Sonny Lewis, a Bulldog cheerleader, constructed the Tom-Tom for presentation to the winning team.

Walking away handily with a 35-18 victory, the Rams killed the Bulldogs' revenge that had fermented for five years.

Ramblings

By George Grasso

CAN the Rams be beaten on their home ground?

It doesn't look as if they can.

A number of tough teams have tried and failed, the most recent being Sacramento, number one in the Big Eight, and number six in the United States.

For some reason, the college footballers turn tiger when they get within the walls of Kezar. They refuse to lose on their home field no matter whom they have to upset. On the other hand, it must be admitted that when away from home quite the opposite is true. They have dropped all their road games even when heavily favored to win.

Much of the credit for the 7-6 upset has been given to the offensive play—in particular Gene Craft's last minute run to set up the touchdown pass from Don Baikie to Oscar Donahue.

The offensive play was terrific, probably the best of the year. But this writer would have to give the game to the defensive team. The Panthers had to strain for every foot of yardage they gained.

Pete Morgan was having his best day of the year, making vital tackles or assisting on them. Tony Hobbs was continually jumping through the Panther line to break up enemy plays. L. C. Shields was not only a tackling terror, but blocked a Sacramento punt and recovered a Panther fumble. And finally, Craft equalled his offensive performance in breaking up pass plays alone.

• • •

Two even teams will meet at Kezar this Friday, as the light backfield and heavy line of the Rams meet the heavy backfield and light line of the San Mateo Bulldogs. The game looks very even, with perhaps the edge going to the Rams playing on their home field.

The formula for San Francisco success is to pressure the passing of Gene Tagliaferri and bottle up the running of Jerry Seattini. If these two team leaders can be forced into having a bad day, the decline and fall of San Mateo is almost assured.

To ward off complacency let it be noted that this is the best Bulldog team in its college's history, and is presently ranked 22nd among two-year colleges nationally.

Donahue, Shields, Craft Rams' Hopes For All-Big Eight Honors

By Nick Peters, Editor

An outstanding all-around performer, a rugged lineman and a flashy scatback constitute the Rams' hopes for All-Conference grid honors.

Only three of the team's 34 members are given consideration because, although a team effort is the most necessary ingredient for pigskin success, this trio possess that certain luster which puts them a step ahead of the rest as far as football ability is concerned.

The "outstanding all-around performer" is none other than the elongated 6-3 end Oscar Donahue, whose consistently superb play best exemplifies the mettle of top caliber football material which the Big Eight is capable of producing.

Versatility is the 21-year-old flanker's chief attribute. On offense he is unparalleled as a receiver. As qb Don Baikie's prime target, Donahue has been averaging about four receptions per game, a high total considering that the Rams emphasize a running attack.

His unbelievable end zone snare, with two defenders glued to his suit, against previously unbeaten Sacramento in the last 40 seconds of play, ultimately sent the Panthers down to defeat, 7-6.

It must be noted that the end, who played prep ball at Galileo and service grid in Germany, is practically unstoppable on any aerials within a radius of his fantastic glue-fingered reach. He has dropped only a few passes, but has more than compensated by grasping countless others in his steady and often miraculous manner.

Not slowing down in the least, he is also one of the league's best defensive ends, constantly harassing enemy field generals and doing his share in the arts of pass interception and fumble recovery.

Head Coach Grover Klemmer best illustrates the player's contribution to the team in stating, "The guy is really terrific, he has yet to play a poor game this season." This testimonial is merely indicative of the strong backing Donahue has in his quest for unanimous post-season honors and a possible Junior College All-American berth.

"Rugged lineman" is an understatement when preaching the merits of L. C. Shields, who should be awarded an All-Conference berth on the basis of his sterling play and the fact that he is an incumbent.

As a freshman in 1957 he was confronted with a major problem. The college's grid teams have perennially been graced with a rash of superior tackles. Ernie Ibarra, All-Conference in 1956, already had a tackle spot sewed up.

Through consistently brilliant play the 6-1 225-pounder earned the other tackle position and at season's end when Ibarra was reinstated as All-Big Eight, Shields wasn't by any means left behind, but instead also swept into a berth on the coveted eleven.

At Polytechnic, where he was All-City in 1956, he was one of Milt Axt's favorite players. The winningest Bay Area coach considers Shields "one of the best linemen to ever don a Parrot jersey," an extremely worthy compliment coming from a good grid critic.

The fact that grid honors are commonplace for the line stalwart hasn't slowed him down at all. As a matter of fact, recovering from an early season injury, Shields has played an excellent brand of ball—finding himself in just about every play, recovering enemy fumbles and often adding minus yardage to opponents' rushing statistics.

Gene Craft, labeled a "flashy scatback," is just that. In 1955 he was an All-City performer for Galileo. Coming to the college as a highly touted prep the 5-8 speedster had himself a ball on the 1956 Ram eleven, gaining 567 yards in 74 carries for a 7.7 average, scoring five touchdowns and eventually being named second team All-Conference.

Last season Craft broke his ankle in the team's first game at Van Nuys against Los Angeles Valley, consequently being shelved for the remainder of the season. This year, however, he is back in his old form as the team's leading ground gainer, scorer and clutch performer. His 32-yard run on a flanker pass in the waning seconds of the Sacramento contest set up the game-winning toss from Baikie to Donahue.

It cannot be denied that the league teams are loaded with top backfield men this season, but Craft's steady play hasn't gone unnoticed and, he should have little trouble in acquiring all-conference honors.

John "Pope" Illia, who coached both Craft and Donahue at Galileo, credits the scatback as "truly a great player to have on your side" and the end as "an excellent prep gridder."

Regardless of whether the aforementioned trio win standout recognition or not, it should be kept in mind that victory on the gridiron depends on a great deal more than just individual ability, but that a few gifted individuals possess the physical ability and natural talent to place them a notch above the rest.

And in this category lie the likes of Donahue, Shields and Craft—All-Stars in every sense of the word.

Cal Changes Language Requirements

US Prestige, Leadership Call For More Foreign Language Study

United States prestige and leadership require knowledge of the languages of other nations, Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction, stated recently in reference to recent emphasis placed on language study.

Partly to meet this need, a new language requirement has been set up for admission to the college of Letters and Science at the University of California. In the future students must complete the equivalent of 12 units of study of one foreign language.

Starting in 1959 students planning to go to the University of California from high school or a junior college will be required to take a placement examination before continuing the language at the university.

Luckmann further stated, "We should be aware of the demands of the twentieth century for communication with other peoples, for we do not always accommodate ourselves to people who speak languages other than English."

The teaching of Russian will be resumed at the college when there is a big enough demand for it by students, he said.

Concentration on one foreign language, Luckmann believes, will develop greater fluency and educators hope that students will adopt the language they are studying and use it as a second forte.

Because the study of a language broadens a person's horizons, develops his culture and leads to a better understanding of other people, Luckmann is confident that all students will want to study at least one other language than their native one.

Symphony Ticket Early Sellout Insures Larger '59 Allotment

Complete early sellout of tickets for the annual Symphony Forum concerts has once again proved the popularity of these series of concerts.

Although the $10 seats were the first to be sold out, the more expensive ones at $18 and $24 were not long to follow.

William Forshay, recording secretary of the Symphony Forum Committee, commenting last week on the oustanding success of ticket sales, added that next year more $10 seats will be allotted to the college to enable a greater number of musically inclined students to take advantage of this value.

Even by paying $18 or $24, which at first seems a lot of money, the purchase of a season's ticket admits the holder to 18 celebrity-filled concerts. This works out to just over $1 per concert, representing a 50 per cent or better savings on the general public admission charge of $2 or more.

Besides the opportunity to hear many world-famous artists for a fraction of the normal cost, members are able to meet and talk with those artists. Forums are held a few days before the actual performance, on different campuses each time, at which the artist appears as a guest.

He does not perform, but is invited for the sole purpose of giving students an opportunity for informal discussions. Coffee is served during the course of the evening.

Jean Casadesus, the French pianist, is the artist scheduled to take part in the forum to be held here in February, 1959, and he will be accompanied by well-known music critic Alexander Fried of The Examiner.

The 1958-59 Symphony Forum concerts will introduce such world-famous artists as Vladimir Ashkenazy, Dame Myra Hess, Artur Rubinstein, pianists; Richard Lewis and Maureen Forrester, singers; Nathan Milstein and Henryk Szeryng, violinists, as well as guest conductors Sir John Barbirolli and Bruno Walter.

Special information will be available later this year concerning the annual Pops concerts conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

Midterms Cancel College Hour Friday

Because of a split in midterm week there will be no College Hour this Friday, according to Ralph M. Hillsman, dean of Student Activities.

The second midterm week is split because of the Thanksgiving holidays on November 27 and 28. Midterm week will be the last two days of this week and the first three days of next week.

College Hour activities and schedule will be continued the following week and every Friday throughout the remainder of the semester, Hillsman added.

Delta Psi Omega Elects Officers At College Hour

David Terry leads the group as president with Tanya Soleimani holding the position of secretary-treasurer. It was decided that these two offices would be sufficient.

Discussion of membership to this organization brought the decision to have more restrictive requirements. Accomplishments in little theater productions and good acting have been the basic requirements.

From now on good acting will not only be stressed, but interest in all areas must be demonstrated, the officers said. This means work in the library, stage, wardrobe, and whatever may be connected with little theater productions. For example, Michael J. Griffin, director of drama, explained John Rose combines work with sound techniques along with acting.

Just as a student may be required to write a thesis at the beginning of a course, a drama student is asked to present a complete scene as a requirement to becoming a member of Delta Psi Omega, Griffin added. This includes costumes, make-up, lighting, sound, and all techniques involved in production.

Twenty students will be eligible for Delta Psi Omega membership if, by next semester, they can meet all requirements in every phase. Review of possible membership is held each semester.

Purchase Of Associated Student Card Urged For All Prospective Grads

Students expecting to graduate this semester are urged to purchase an Associated Student card, or be faced with extra expense at commencement, Don Smith, AS card sales chairman, announced last week.

All graduating students with AS cards will be allowed to use caps and gowns free of charge, while those without cards will have to pay for the use of them. Further information concerning this matter will be released at a later date, Smith stated.

He announced that 2,264 AS cards have been sold, and asked each student without one to purchase one and receive the benefits which are guaranteed upon becoming a member of the AS. The price of the card is $5.

Smith also stressed the importance of AS voting privileges, stating that student leaders derive their offices through the actions of the AS card holders, and therefore, the card holder is the power behind student government here.

THE ELECTION COMMISSIONER, whose election regulations have been approved by Student Council to start the ball rolling on candidates' activities for the coming campaign for Associated Student offices, Bunch has set December 1 as the deadline for obtaining petitions for offices from the Dean of Student Activities or the Dean of Women.

Instruction in Motion Picture Photography is available to day students at the college this semester for the first time in several years. This course, originally designed by Beverly Pasqualetti, head of the photography department, and using a textbook written by him, takes students into the fundamentals of motion photography, proper lighting, script planning and editing of the developed film.

The class, composed of about 20 students, is sub-divided into three groups who work on separate projects. Each group is provided with a camera and a roll of film, then expected to produce a short film, which must be completed on the maximum of three rolls per project. Successful groups are given additional film after their project is completed and allowed to enlarge upon their theme.

To get the most possible benefit from the course, Emmett Smith, the course instructor, recommends that prospective and present students associate themselves with the little theater group so that various acting and stage techniques may be observed and studied. The prospective student should also have at least one semester of still photography study behind him when applying for the course, he emphasized.

Administration Problems In Student Governments Due For Debate At SF State Conference

By Roy Twitty

Extending invitations to this college's student government, the Associated Students of San Francisco State College will host another conference one week from today dealing with the problems of student administration.

Interchange of views next Wednesday will be preceded by a luncheon beginning at 12:15 and lasting until 1 p.m. Establishing better relations between other colleges in the area, according to Freddie Hicks, AS president here, State has sent invitations to additional student governments to view a Student Council meeting as it is conducted there.

Following the luncheon, six workshops will be offered involving the subjects of student government, reciprocal athletic attendance, creative arts, publications, economic union and activities.

The reciprocal athletic attendance huddle may lead to the acceptance of each college's student cards toward admission to athletic events, Hicks commented. Students here would thus have the opportunity of attending four-year college games.

Palmroy Bush has been announced the winner of the Campus Cleanup Committee and Inter-Fraternity Council keep-the-campus-clean slogan contest. Bush triumphed over all other entries with the slogan: "A neater campus is a sweeter campus." Pledges and brethren of IFC fraternities converged on the campus last Saturday to paint this slogan on trash cans.

Closing football events for this year, the last game of the season will be played this Friday against the College of San Mateo. Rally Committee representative John Velasquez declared. The committee stated that it is hoping for support equal to if not greater than that demonstrated at the last home game with Sacramento.

Appreciation has been extended by the Inter-Fraternity Council to the student body for its support of the pledge week games. A two-way tie for first place presently exists because of a question of legality in the judging of certain affairs, Terry Chavez, IFC president, announced. First place for the best decorated automobile for the Sacramento game car parade, Chavez continued, was awarded to Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority.

Changes in the constitution of the Associated Students have been proposed by a vote of the Student Council last week. Addition of three officers to the Social Committee was suggested by Sandy Simonian, Sophomore Council member.

This proposed change will be entered on the ballot in January, Hicks stated, for Associated Student vote.

Comedy Hit Now In Rehearsal At Little Theater

A "belly laugh" comedy, You Can't Take It With You, by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman, is now in rehearsal in the college's little theater, according to Michael Griffin, drama director.

"The complete play has been already blocked and cast," Griffin said. "With the time we have, plus a very fine cast, the play should work out smoothly," he added.

You Can't Take It With You is a type of play that has all the problems in life which usually lead to ulcers and tension; yet, they are the kind of problems that are easy to forget by sitting down and enjoying what life has to offer. The theme of the play could be summed up in four words, Slow Down and Live.

Even though many of the actors are busy in college dramatics, they are also often found in other productions.

Jue Farmer, who gave an outstanding performance in The Petrified Forest as the henchman to a gunslinger, is currently performing in Marin City's production of Take A Giant Step.

John Rose, who starred in The Petrified Forest as Alan Squirer, a roving young intellect, and who is now cast in a leading role as Martin Vanderhof in You Can't Take It With You, is also appearing in the Berkeley Theater's production of Salome.

Pat Hickey, who starred in the dual role as the doctor and his son in The Willow And I, is providing the lighting effects for the Repertory Play House production of The Wild Duck.

These and many more drama students are walking, acting publicity for the college, Griffin said today.

Chessman Case Reconsidered

WHILE California politicians were campaigning vigorously to keep their respective heads above water in the recent pre-election campaign, a man in a lonely cell on San Quentin's Death Row, Caryl Chessman, was thinking of a campaign of his own—one designed to perpetuate not a career, but his life, the last 10 years of which have been spent under the onus of a death sentence.

Chessman can rightfully be considered a symbol of the condemned men behind bars in California and elsewhere who could conceivably be of more help to their society if they were allowed to benefit from a practice which should have been adopted long ago—rehabilitation.

What is to be gained by executing Chessman? With this individual out of circulation, his convincing arguments against the death penalty and his blasts at people in public life who support the death penalty would cease, and the lights in the governor's mansion could be turned off earlier in the evening. Others who would gain from an imposition of the death penalty are those personal antagonists of Chessman who for the past 10 years have been wanting to satisfy their bloodthirsty instincts under the guise of "wanting to see justice done." What they really advocate is legalized vengeance.

All this talk about the necessity of eliminating Chessman because of his "debt to society" is unmitigated folderol. After viewing the slow progress made in the field of penology, "society" should begin to think about its debt to Caryl Chessman.

Rehabilitation Not Impossible

By Don Seratti

We are not living in an age where burning at the stake and burying alive are still accepted forms of punishment. We are, supposedly, living in a progressive society, marked by many achievements in all fields. Each generation is a full stride ahead of the preceding one in its record of accomplishments. And yet, in the midst of this remarkable advancement, we are taking a long step backward with regard to the treatment of criminals.

Various concepts of penology have been brought up to date, but in practice, we are not keeping pace with these concepts. Theoretically, the trend—and it is a natural one—has been towards rehabilitation rather than retribution. And although some people can point with pride to the gradually decreasing number of executions, the snowball rolling toward the abolition of capital punishment could certainly afford to gain momentum much sooner than it now promises to.

Abolition of the death penalty is not something that must be handled as carefully as racial integration for fear of offending someone. Who would be harmed by such a decision? Only a few influential politicians and criminologists who are forestalling what the public will one day demand.

Numerous examples of successful rehabilitation of men who were once considered incorrigible prove that with an adequate supply of psychiatric and correctional specialists at its disposal, any state is capable of converting condemned criminals into useful citizens.

Although most "dangerous men" do not readily present such a clear-cut example of this, Caryl Chessman is the personification of the man behind bars who can almost unquestionably become an asset to society. Since his confinement to San Quentin in 1948, Chessman has written three highly regarded books and has artfully employed his vast legal knowledge to delay his scheduled executions time after time.

If the constant pressure of an incipient execution were removed and his sentenced modified to a term of imprisonment, there is no limit as to how much he could add to his already valuable contributions to law and literature.

But why should the state be satisfied with a prison sentence for Chessman? The advent of genuine penological progress in California will occur only when a person like Chessman is provided with the necessary rehabilitative assistance and is one day allowed to return to society.

This idea is not as improbable as it may sound. The basic issue is not necessarily the releasing of a man's crime or the shocking thought of allowing a one-time "dangerous" criminal to walk the streets.

The thing to be considered is that in rehabilitating criminals, we are dealing with the human mind, and recent medical discoveries have proved that what was once considered impossible can now be accomplished with proper treatment of the individual. If condemned criminals in California can be converted into useful citizens, there is no reason why they should not be allowed to benefit from the achievements of modern psychiatric research.

Ram Cagers Start 1958-59 Play Tuesday

By Nick Peters, Editor

With the start of the 1958-59 cage campaign drawing near, and without the services of any returning varsity lettermen, Ram hoop mentor Sid Phelan is faced with a major problem of developing a formidable court quintet entirely from a flock of former All-City prep standouts.

Opening against Vallejo next Tuesday, December 2, at 3:30 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, venturing to the Bakersfield Tournament on December 4-5 and ending the jaunt by clashing with Allan Hancock on December 6, the veteran hoop coach will have to build his squad out of a group of potentially good eagers who have yet to play in a two-year college ball game.

Undeniably this chore won't be easy since he lost the services of last year's All-Northern California performers 6-6 forward Mal McCormick (who was the team's leading scorer and is now playing for Cal Poly), and sharpshooter Vic Corl (second leading scorer—San Jose State). Also gone are 6-8 pivot Doug North, the high scoring Freddie Williams, 6-6 center John Henry (SJS) and the team's spark-plug-playmakers, Stan Rosenberg and Al Holder (SJS).

With the absence of three men who stood over 6-6 a definite height shortage will be apparent on this year's five; however, as Phelan is quick to point out, what this season's varsity lacks in size it makes up in desire and agility—two attributes which could easily make witnesses overlook the squad's somewhat diminutive 6-1 height average.

Hopefully, but still not sure what players will constitute his first club, the congenial coach, whose forces posted a 24-9 mark and a second place in Big Eight play last year, will probably supplement his team with the likes of ex-Washington All-City aces Cleo Cofield (forward-guard) and Ike McArthur (center); Polytechnic's All-City contributions George Shewl (forward-center) and Bill Simmons (forward-center); another ex-Parrot stalwart John Iles (guard); Vince Rocchi (guard) from Sacred Heart, and Lincoln's John Steddin (forward).

SID PHELAN, veteran Ram basketball coach.

Perhaps a bit skeptical, but merely facing the facts, even though this year's varsity is almost entirely a freshman crop, it could gain immeasurable prowess through playing together throughout this season and would present a good contender for 1959-60 cage honors should the team stay intact during the players' sophomore year.

To date only one scrim has been held with results showing that the college fared most adequately against a highly experienced but slightly rusty Olympic Club five, and although no score was kept Rams Cofield, Shewl and Simmons played admirably.

In due justice to the Winged "O," however, it must be pointed out that the talented amateur contingent had just started training for its rugged upcoming 1958-59 sked and players like Phil Vukecivich (USF), Dick Garibaldi (Santa Clara), Bob Blake (UC) and Dick Tamberg (UC) had not nearly approached their 1957-58 form.

Next Tuesday's Vallejo tilt will be the first in a series of 14 exhibition encounters that will preface the Rams' league inaugural on January 16 against Contra Costa's Comets. There are eight single games on the practice schedule (including clashes with USF, St. Mary's and UC Frosh outfits) and two tournaments (Bakersfield and Modesto) which would add at least six, maybe seven, games to the gruelling grapefruit grind.

Bakersfield will host its annual tournament next Thursday and Friday with the Ram aggregation locking horns with Los Angeles Harbor at 2 p.m. on Thursday. Should they emerge victorious the Red and White would face the winner of the Fresno-San Jose fracas on Friday at 11 a.m. If they win the second-rounder they would play for the championship marbles that same night.

However, should they lose their opening battle they would engage the loser of the Fresno-San Jose affair and subsequently be in the running for consolation laurels. On the other hand, loss of the first two games would necessitate the immediate elimination of the college's five from further competition.

Other entrants in the tourney include the Big Eight's Modesto Pirates and Southern California squads representing Los Angeles Valley, Taft and Bakersfield junior colleges.

In last year's court conclave, the Understanding Of Reds Key To World Peace

By Don Seratti

IT HAS BEEN more than 40 years since Communism was established in the Soviet Union and over 10 years since China and several other countries adopted this system, but even today there are people who sincerely believe that Communism is not to be taken seriously and won't be around much longer. United States foreign policy even reflects this view on some occasions.

Those who entertain the belief that Communism can be written off as a "passing phase" are not being realistic; they are merely adhering to a highly idealistic outlook, and manifest a complete lack of knowledge of the fact of life concerning international relations.

Since prevention of worldwide war in future years is of the utmost importance if the people of the world are to survive, the non-Communist world could best aid the prospects of peace through the adoption of the following ideas:

(1) To understand how the Communist system works and to acknowledge the existence of (though not necessarily approve of) the present Communist governments.

(2) To understand the desires of the common people of the Communist countries.

Many of us constantly use the word "Communism" in our speaking and writing without really knowing anything about the economic system it represents, nor the political systems it breeds.

Divining the thoughts behind every move the Communists make is no simple task, as experienced observers will attest after years of dealing with them. But even a rudimentary understanding of the tenets of their philosophy can enable the West to take a more sensible and realistic attitude toward the Communists than it has been taking.

When the Soviets execute a person whom they consider dangerous (Hungarian freedom fighters, for example), there instantaneously emits from the West a spate of severe criticism. When the Communists take a man's

IFC-ISC Political Convention Names Muller Candidate

By Roy Twitty

Whispered conferences, hurried caucuses, and a soviet-style walkout marked the semesterly held Inter-Fraternity, Inter-Sorority Councils' political party convention as it assembled in Smith Hall to select the candidates it will support in the upcoming elections for Associated Student offices.

Troubled at first by less-than-quorum attendance, the convention gained momentum as fraternity and sorority delegates trickled in during the first hour. In absence of IFC President Terry Chavez, the delegates elected Dick Cottrell, president of Tau Chi Sigma, to preside as chairman.

Rising above two other nominees by a large majority of the secret ballots, Fred Muller was named as the convention's candidate for AS President. Ralph Prior, defeated nominee, stated later that he plans to run for AS President as a non-partisan.

Opposition ticket candidates, the delegates from Beta Phi Beta pointed out, were present at the convention and were voting to choose their own opposition. Other fraternity members pointed out that there seemed to be a definite lack of interest in the proceedings of the convention, as evidenced by the absolute silence of many delegations.

Beta Phi Beta, its delegates disclosed, "has always been against the whole thing." Persons affiliating with an opposition party should not be allowed to choose candidates to run against themselves, they protested.

Fuel was added to the fires in the Beta Phi Beta camp by declinations of persons to accept IFC-ISC nominations because they are running on an opposition party ticket. Cottrell, presiding over the convention, declined a nomination for the presidency of the Associated Men Students on the grounds that he is a candidate for AS President on another ticket.

Arguing for a strong Inter-Fraternity Council, the two Beta Phi Beta delegates questioned Cottrell as to the legality of an executive member of the IFC running on another ticket. Upon hearing that such an action is legal, the two delegates walked out of the convention. They stated later that they "protest against the whole thing. The ISC should be the ISC, and the IFC should be the IFC. That's all there is to it."

Students Get The Bird—200 Lbs. Worth

Turkey dinners will again be offered by the cafeteria in its efforts to participate in the final pre-weekend activities of the college's students. These dinners cost only 65 cents a plate and will be served today from 11 a.m. to "stuffication."

Approximately 450 students are expected to tangle with some 200 pounds of turkey with all the trimmings. The result of demolishing the feast will leave in its wake a group of tired Hotel and Restaurant cooks and helpers, who started preparations for the meal at least five hours before the time the hungry students troop in.

Since sweet potatoes just naturally go with turkey, the trimmings will include plenty of them—string beans or green peas, plus a portion of the 50 pounds of cranberry sauce and a piece of the 60 mince and pumpkin pies will further supplement the diet of the day.

Even with all of these goodies in store, "Cafeteria business is not expected to be any better than usual even for the day before Thanksgiving," Pierre Coste, formerly chef at the Mark Hopkins and St. Francis Hotels and presently the Executive Chef of the Hotel and Restaurant division of the college, declared.

Four Day Weekend Begins Tomorrow

Because of the Thanksgiving holidays which start tomorrow, this will be the last issue of The Guardsman until Wednesday, December 10.

Classes will resume next Monday, December 1, according to Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college.

Club meetings will be the major activities on campus next Friday, December 5, during College Hour, according to the semester schedule of events.

Travelogues of Portugal and Scotland are also scheduled to be shown in S-136 at the same time as part of the college film series.

CAB Sponsors Fund Drive

Club Activites Board members will sponsor a Christmas fund drive here for needy families starting next week and running through Friday, December 12.

Jim Hickey, CAB president, announced that contributions can be made to CAB members who will be identified by arm bands.

Petitions To Run For AS Offices Available For Candidates Monday

By J. Edward Bing

Students planning to run for election to campus offices this semester must file petitions with election commissioner Gene Bunch before midnight, December 11. Petitions will be available at the Deans' offices this Monday, December 1.

Six key positions will be contested at the polls election days, January 12 and 13. They are Associated Student President, AS Vice-President, Associated Men Student President, Associated Women Student President, and Freshman and Sophomore Class Presidents. In addition, 14 seats on the Student Council will be filled by election.

To qualify for candidacy, students must have at least a C-average and petitions signed by 15 students or more. Candidates for the AS president and vice-president offices must have completed 45 but not more than 60 units of academic work; AMS, AWS and Sophomore class presidential candidates must have 30 to 60 units; Freshman class presidential candidates, 15 to 30 units. Seven Student Council members must have 12 to 30 units, and seven must have 30 to 60 units.

New rulings recently passed by the Student Council affect campaign expenditures and petition procedures. Heretofore any student could sign a prospective candidate's bid for nomination. This semester only students of the same class and sex may sign candidate's petitions for offices held only by men, women, freshmen or sophomores.

The maximum amount of money allowed candidates this semester for campaign promotion has been reduced $5 from last semester's allotment. Candidates for executive offices are now permitted a maximum of $25 and other candidates $20 each.

All political parties must file with the election commissioner before 8 a.m. January 12, a list of campaign finances, income and expenditures. Three major political factions have entered the election contest, the Inter-Fraternity, Inter-Sorority Party, Independent Party and Individual Party.

Executive Officers Should Be Given Right To Vote At Council

As it stands now only 15 votes are prevalent in Student Council procedure, those of the seven members each from the Freshman and Sophomore classes and the one recorded by the Associated Student Vice-President.

However, these four executive officers feel, and justifiably so, that it's their responsibility as representatives of large portions of the student body to have a vote on student government decisions.

Early this semester it was moved by one of these executive officers that the right to vote for this foursome would be installed in the AS constitution. Because it was a touchy subject and evidently not favored by the council members, the matter was tabled until last week when it again was brought up for discussion and a subsequent vote, whereby the motion failed to pass.

Many council members feel that the voting privilege belongs only to them, City College's legislative body, and that the executive members do not merit a vote.

On the other hand, the respective presidents feel that their positions should not be looked upon as prestige offices, and that they should have equal representation in council voting.

We advocate the latter movement in that it certainly wouldn't hurt to have a change in council procedure, what with the way meetings have been lengthy and uninteresting of late.

As pointed out by the class presidents, they are of the opinion that their say should carry as much weight as that of the council members. They are quick to point out that although council members are supposedly the representatives of their respective classes, there have never been more than two or three council members present at a single class meeting.

In due respect to the positions held by the executive officers and as a token of appreciation for the fine job they do in the best interests of their respective organizations, an increase in power through a right to vote on council issues would be an excellent step, since the different presidents are much closer to their students than most council members.

This increase in executive power would call for 19 votes on all Student Council matters, not a large enough increase to result in drastic procedure changes, but a good addition which would bring forth much-needed ideas and would do a great deal in improving council-cabinet relations, which have been somewhat dubious as a result of recent poor and one-sided discussions.

On the whole, the only object which is apparently blocking this proposed addition to the AS constitution is the council members' pride, wherein they feel that the legislative body should have the final say on student government matters, leaving the executive officers relatively "powerless."

Perhaps if some of these council members put personal pride aside and instead started looking out for the best interests of the college, they would see the light and realize that four more votes wouldn't in any way take away from their power, but would instead result in a more intelligent voting body. And after all, that's what we're after.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

• Team Praised

Editor, The Guardsman:

Hustle, spirit, and loyalty have combined to produce an aggregation of college athletes who, for the past several weeks, have displayed a will to play clean, hard football.

Football teams don't "just happen." They evolve from the joint effort of several eager sportsmen who practice daily, striving for the ultimate goal of any athletic team: victory.

Team effort is the crux behind any athletic group, and the Ram gridders [illegible] caliber of "togetherness."

Every day for the past eight weeks approximately 45 men have grouped on the college's practice football field at 3:15 p.m., where the 1958 edition of the college football team was born, where it was groomed, and where it reached its peak.

Young college athletes enthusiastically pursued the calisthenics, which ritualistically opened football practices each afternoon.

Blocking and tackling, punting, running and passing, and the countless other details which are needed in breeding a good football team, were drilled into the players. Hard played scrimmages, football's dress rehearsal, followed the regular practices, enabling the team to polish themselves for the next game.

The practice procedure has been an endless quest to gain perfection, and it has been a challenge to every man on the squad, for he has had to work both physically and mentally in availing his individual effort to a team cause.

Well-deserved credit should go to each and every man on the team. They have fought hard each Friday to bring back a victory to the college. We certainly feel that they have made up in spirit, [illegible] down.

Head football coach Grover Klemmer and his assistants, Alex Schwartz and Sid Phelan, cannot be praised enough for their devotion to their duties as football tutors. More than just teaching men football technique goes into coaching. Handling men; that is, to be gentle, yet stern, and to be understanding and patient is also part of the job.

Through the combined efforts of the team, the coaches, and last but not least, the hard working managers, the college has been able to boast, and proudly so, a wonderful 1958 football team.

Jazz Gives Druggists 'Aspirin' Treatment

JAZZ, in all of its forms, got a thorough working-over a few weeks ago when CBS presented the second in a series of one-hour All-Star Jazz shows.

The program was a taped special from the Americana Hotel in Miami Beach, Florida, and was co-emceeded by Bob Crosby and Hoagy Carmichael. Louis Armstrong, Lionel Hampton, and Gene Krupa were the featured performers, among other jazz notables.

The show itself was a mild riot, 60 minutes of unadulterated bedlam.

Armstrong, although a competent man with a trumpet, practically killed himself and his audience when he tried to sing; Les Brown's band played like refugees from a prison farm, and wild man Krupa nearly tore the lid off the hotel when he began beating the drums like a cannibal preparing for an attack.

Highlight(?) of the show was when singer Jane Morgan gave a half-hearted rendition of You Do Something To Me, while the band purposely played out of tune. This was supposed to give Miss Morgan her chance to sing jazz for the first time. The whole effect was sickening.

Crosby and Carmichael had little to do but snap their fingers to the music and take turns introducing Armstrong's jazz and John Cameron Swayze's commercials.

Ironically, the program was presented while a druggists' convention was being held at the hotel. Aspirins, anyone?

Although loyal jazz addicts must have enjoyed the goings-on, the All-Star Jazz shows need a complete overhaul if they are to rise above a distorted, unorganized mess. Another show is scheduled for December 1; let's hope it improves by then.

Probably the most awaited show of the fall season was George Burns' new comedy series, principally because of the many doubts as to his ability to carry a program without Gracie.

The new show finds Burns as a producer, residing for the most part in a Beverly Hills office building. The same familiar cast surrounds him each week, but he now pursues a guest star policy.

The $64,000 Question was finally dropped by CBS, and was recently supplanted by Keep Talking, an anemic off-shoot of the now extinct Pantomime Quiz.

The gimmick of the show runs something like this: two teams of celebrities oppose each other; each must keep cracking jokes until the buzzer sounds, at which time the other team takes over. They must also insert a silly cliche into their stories and the rival team gets points for detecting the particular saying.

As you can tell from the game, it's strictly for the birds—namely parakeets. The program, with Carl Reiner as host, must have been devised overnight by a 12-year-old child. Geritol couldn't help this corny, terribly trite series.

Bella Musica

Entertainment Hits New High On KCSF Shows

Dave Brubeck, Les Baxter, Frank Sinatra or Johnny Mathis are just a few of the pleasant voices that emit from the KCSF Broadcasters' booth and drift into the cafeteria during breakfast or lunch.

The KCSF Broadcasters Club gives a musical show from 7:30 until 9 each morning, named Records at Reveille. Monday, Wednesday and Friday similar music is heard from the mid-day show, from noon to 1 p.m.

Purpose of the club, according to Dave Tipton, one of its founders, is to further the professional interests of the broadcasters and establish mutual relations between club members, faculty, and students.

The club aets to further the professional interests of the broadcasters by promoting their skills through the broadcasts and its processes, programming, traffic management and production. Although the club is not directly affiliated with the educational part of the Radio-Television program here, most of the members take courses ranging from basic speech to announcing.

To further relations with the faculty, the club has sent circulars to all faculty members announcing that their material and announcers are available in performing almost any task related to radio and its allied arts. Included in this is the use of magnetic tape as a teaching aid to recorded sound, music and speeches.

The morning and mid-afternoon programs are put on by the club under the direction of Henry Leff, head of the Radio and Television department and sole instructor in the field.

Participating as disc jockeys in the shows are: on the morning show, Saul Bar, Mondays; George Morf, Tuesdays; Stan Jackson, Wednesdays; Carl Mayo, Thursdays, and Tipton on Fridays. DJ's for the noon show are Mayo on Mondays, Phil Rogers on Wednesdays, and Phil Arenson, Fridays.

Membership as of now is limited to those students currently or previously enrolled in a broadcasting course, but the present constitution is being revised. According to Morf, club president, the hypothetical plan is to open the membership to all students for one semester after which time they will be required to take a course in the field in order to maintain membership.

"This plan will allow students interested in the field, but not yet sure about it, to find out how much they like it and if they would do well in the work," Morf said.

Many students from the organization have gone on to work in the radio field, including Larry Caviella, now working for Radio KEEN in San Jose, and Carter Smith with Radio KRE in Berkeley.

Strictly Gardening

Nelson Doubles As Instructor, Sunday Writer

Writing copy for a newspaper has nothing in common with the heading of instruction in a college horticulture department, or does it? Apparently so, for Harry Nelson, head of the college's horticulture department, has successfully combined the two professions.

In 1951, Nelson began writing articles on horticulture for The Examiner's Sunday edition, Gardening Section, and continues to do so. His qualifications for writing these articles began years ago.

Nelson beeame interested in horticulture before entering high school, and during his high school years, he did landseape gardening. Immediately after high school graduation, he became employed by the Aggler and Musser Seed Company, and taught horticulture at the city schools in Los Angeles.

To attain his goal, a college edueation beeame imperative. He attended not one but several colleges and universities. A few notables are the University of Southern California, University of California at Los Angeles, California Polytechnic, which specializes in trade and industrial education, and San Francisco State College, where he received his degree in horticulture.

After managing the Hallawell Seed Company in San Francisco, he came to the college to head instruction in the horticulture department.

Nelson and his students are currently engaged in preparing the grounds in the circle adjacent to the lower parking lot by the men's gymnasium. They plan to plant 50 different fuchsia plants recently donated to the college's ornamental horticulture department by the Pacific Primrose Gardens nursery in Colma. The collection is valued at between $250 and $300.

When asked what his greatest achievement was, Nelson said, "Meeting and marrying my wife." As living proof of this statement he has four fine children, two boys and two girls.

Shots At Ramdom

By Jack Wellington

THE end of the year holidays seem to have a strange effect on people. Even students find that other students aren't quite as sour-faced as they thought when counterparts smilingly say, "Happy Thanksgiving," or "Merry Christmas and a very Happy New Year."

Although Christmas seems to be the most popular holiday, Thanksgiving also holds a special meaning, especially for those from the snow country. Many memories consist of the traditional food, but the atmosphere seems unreal unless the added attraction of a howling wind and snowflakes outside the home are present.

The most memorable Thanksgiving this writer has ever experienced was one spent in a state penitentiary, not as an inmate, where a prisoner led his fellow convicts in saying Thanksgiving Grace.

Not without its element of humor, Thanksgiving has been an opportunity for a lot of people to smile. Many students with smaller brothers and sisters can understand the little boy who, in conclusion to Grace on Thanksgiving said, "Please, Lord, next Thanksgiving can't we have a turkey with four drumsticks?"

And then, there is the student who gives thanks for passing his midterm exams with a minimum of study, and even less sleep.

Holidays have a special appeal to students. We have yet to see the student who doesn't breathe a sigh of ecstpsy at the thought of freedom for a day.

The initiators of Thanksgiving had it made. The turkey, symbol of the day of Thanksgiving, was plentiful when the pilgrims first celebrated the holiday. If it were possible for them to see today's prices, they might have settled for chicken.

Still, it seems that the only ones who don't enjoy Thanksgiving are the turkeys, as illustrated in the case of the very excitable little farmer, who strode into his yard clutching a turkey in one hand and an axe in the other, stuttering all the while, "T-t-tomorrow is T-T-Thanksgiving." The turkey, looking up at his impending doom, started gobbling, "Now keep calm, don't get excited, let's not lose my head over this."

Clean-Up Problems Grow; 'Dead' Body Discovered In Lab

Imagine the criminology lab at 10:30 one night and one of the custodians about to enter it with the intent of straightening up the place. He opens the door and walks in the dimly lighted room to discover a shadow in the corner—a closer look reveals a human figure, the body of a woman with her throat cut!

The janitor, recovering from the gruesome sight, most likely wonders, "Will these students ever learn to pick up after themselves?" Getting some more light on the subject he discovers the body to be the life-like dummy that the criminology class uses to determine various types of crimes, and this time the joke's on the janitor.

However, and quite seriously, the night foreman of Cloud Hall states that it is very difficult to keep the campus neat without co-operation from the student body. The clean-up problem is worse this semester, not because the students are sloppier, but because of the increased enrollment, he says.

The college, according to him, is judged by its appearanee, and a dirty eampus makes a poor impression.

America's most outstanding public figure today is the national debt.

Rams Cross Country Champs

Patton Cops First Place In Northern California Meet

By Jim Clifford

Paul Patton captured first place and led the Ram cross country team to a 33-point victory in the two-year college division of the San Jose invitational cross country championship meet on the three mile San Jose State course on November 14.

Patton completed the grind in 17:33 to down frosh harriers from San Jose State, Cal Poly, and top runners from Santa Rosa Junior College and Monterey Peninsula College.

Rams Blake Westman, Ken Dowdy, Phil Fortier, and John Thomas finished 5th, 6th, 10th, and 11th respectively, to win, coupled with Patton's initial individual victory, the event's two-year college division title.

The San Jose meet was split into a varsity and junior college bracket with the varsity harriers going the four-mile limit. Squads from San Jose State, Stanford, California, Cal Poly, and the Santa Clara Youth Village participated in the varsity grind. Stanford's Keith Wallace took an early lead and went on to win the four-mile competition with a 21:22 time. San Jose State took the varsity laurels.

Patton's individual honor from the San Jose race added to a list of titles that includes the fastest two-year college time in the State.

Gammas, Phi Delts, Rickey Ross Stay Unblemished In Mural Play

By Nick Peters

Results of fifth round intramural basketball play leave Gamma Phi Ypsilon and Phi Beta Delta topping the IFC league with identical unblemished 5-0 slates, while the independent Rickey Ross Rockets head the CAB standings with an equally unmarked 4-0 record.

Led by the steady all-around play of forward Dennis Shutter, who tanked 17 points, the Gammas' defending titleholders displayed the IFC's best defensive performance, whipping helpless Alpha Kappa Rho (0-5) 44-9, registering a 29-3 score in second half action.

The Phi Delts had no sweat either, sweeping to a 42-31 triumph over Zeta Phi (2-3). Ed O'Donnell's 14 points played a key role in the victory.

Rickey Ross maintained its CAB leadership by squeaking past the Celtics (0-4), 38-36. Rosser Mike O'Brien hit for 13 digits in his team's winning cause.

Other IFC results found the steadily improving Lambda Phi (4-1) five coming through with a 23-20 win over Alpha Phi Epsilon (3-2). Their well-balanced attack featured Jim Murray's 11 markers. Beta Phi (1-4) crawled out of the loop's cellar on the strength of its 23-18 victory over Beta Tau (0-5).

The Recreation Association (4-2) still looking like the CAB's best despite an early season one-point loss to Rickey Ross, slaughtered the previously unbeaten Filipino Club (3-1), 62-34. Filipino Club's Joe Cumagon took scoring laurels with 14, but could not overshadow a superior RA attack.

Entering the winner's circle for the first time, the IRC (1-4) downed The Guardsman (0-5) 43-31. Soccer player Johan Fouladi sank 16 scores for the winners.

Lambdas Murray and Deltas' O'Donnell are deadlocked for IFC scoring honors with 68 apiece and a 13.6 average. Jack Conroy (61 pts-12.2), Lambda and Gammas' Shutter and Rudy Vasquez (60 pts.-12.0) are close behind.

RA's Bob Crenshaw (61 pts.-12.2) holds a slim lead over The Guardsman's Niels Peters (59 pts.-11.8). FC's Cumagon (56 pts.-4 games-14.0) and RA's Al White (54 pts.-10.8) for the CAB scoring supremacy. Rickey Ross' O'Brien has 41 points to his credit in just three contests for a 13.7 mark.

Because of the Thanksgiving recess and midterms, there are no games this week but play will resume on Monday, December 1. With the CAB race virtually sewed up the feature games in December competition pit IFC's Lambda vs. Delta on December 3 at 8 p.m. in the women's gymnasium, and the Gammas vs. Delta on December 8 at the same time in the men's court. The playoff between the CAB and IFC champs will follow on Tuesday, December 9, at 7:30 in the male quarters.

After a seven year absence from the college campus, varsity boxing, coached by Roy Diederichsen, will resume its' pugilistic battles in the 1958-1959 season.

Because of an extremely large athletic program, boxing had to be dropped from the intercollegiate sports program. Handicapped by a small coaching staff, adequate instruction was not available for all varsity sports and boxing received its downfall.

To help rebuild what was once a strong and aggressive boxing team the Associated Men Students will sponsor an intramural boxing tournament Wednesday, December 3, in the men's gymnasium. This tournament is open to all fighters who have not participated in semi-pro boxing. Winners will be invited to try out for the varsity team along with those interested in becoming better boxers.

With an estimated attendance of 85 boxers, a big effort will be taken in the rebuilding process of the college's team.

Last spring's enthusiastic crowd watched Leon Pagaliangan become the 119-pound champ; Chaiphorn Kamoinetr take the 125-pound crown; Orlando Reeinos become the 132-pound division head. The 139-pound division was won by Manuel Chang with Ed Chavez and Charles Fox winning the 146 and 153-pound titles, respectively.

The University of Santa Clara, San Jose State freshmen and sophomore teams, the University of San Francisco, Stanford University and Shasta Junior College are listed as foes for the '58-'59 season.

The Rams began competing in the Big Seven Conference in 1948. In 1948 and 1949 they became the Big Seven Conference Champions.

Thirteen men from the college in the past 10 years have turned pro.

Hungry Bulldogs Victorious In Traditional; Craft's Outstanding Performance Highlights Game

By George Grasso

It was a great all-around Ram effort; but after eight losing years the best San Mateo Bulldog team in their college's history was just too hungry to be defeated, and downed the local eleven 20-12 on Kezar's battlefield last Friday to win the Tom-Tom Trophy.

The fabulous break-away runs of Gene Craft, the reliable receptions of Oscar Donahue, and the power of the big Ram line were not enough to match the hot offense directed by Bulldog qb Gene Tagliaferri. On top of that, the Rams lost three scoring chances, one because of a personal foul which was committed after they had driven to the enemy ten.

Bad luck came fast in the first quarter with an interception. On the second play of the game the Bulldog's number one end, Ted Treu, reached up and pulled a soft pass out of the air to give San Mateo possession on the San Francisco nine. One play later, large, speedy Jerry Scattini pounded it over and the score was 6-0 after 2:25 of play. The point after failed.

Ram qb Don Baikie played the same trick on the Bulldogs early in the second quarter when he pulled a Tagliaferri pass down on the CSM 19 and fought his way back to the three.

That was close enough for Stan Glass, and on the next play, he powered over right guard and into paydirt. The point after failed and it was a tie ball game at 6-6.

The second San Mateo touchdown was a one man show by 192 pound Gene Tagliaferri. A long pass to Treu put him in Ram territory. From the 33, on a quarterback sneak, he bulled his way to the 16. Two plays later, he spun around left guard for nine yards and a touchdown.

Adding icing to his own cake, he passed to Dave Root for the PAT.

The second half opened with the Bulldogs striking in blitzkreig fashion again. Treu returned Spike's kickoff 19 yards to the 45. Two plays later, Tag passed complete to the Ram 38.

And from there, tiny Ralph Garcia, second string quarterback replacing the injured Jerry Scattini at halfback, squeezed over right guard and followed his blocking 38 yards to score. The point after failed and with 2:25 gone in the third quarter it was 20-6.

City College decided to have a try at the blitzkreig method also. Craft took the kickoff on his five and returned to the 31. Baikie's perfect strike to Donahue moved it to the 48. Three plays and a penalty later, the Rams had it on their 17. Then Gene Craft, looking like a man who had lost his hula hoop, daneed over left guard and 17 yards for another 6 points. The PAT failed and with only 4:50 gone of the third quarter both teams had scored. Neither side scored again.

In the third quarter the Rams drove to the Bulldog nine, only to be stopped by a heartbreaking interception. And in the fourth quarter, Craft exploded on a 29-yard run to the San Mateo 3, but another interception turned them back.

Ram Kickers Upset San Jose State 4-3 In Last NCISC Tilt

Scoring four consecutive times in the second quarter of last Saturday's game against San Jose State, the college's soccermen defeated the Spartans by a score of 4-3 at the losers' field in their last appearance of this year's Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference.

The win gave the Rams a final record of 4-wins and 3-losses for a fourth place position in the NCISC's final standings—definitely the Red and White's worst soccer season in the last ten years.

They defeated San Francisco State, Stanford University, the University of Santa Clara and the San Jose State eleven but were downed by the University of California, by the Cal Aggies and by the NCISC's champions-for-the-last-11-years, the University of San Francisco Dons.

Leading last Saturday's victory against the Spartans, who were the first ones to score in the game to take a 2-0 advantage over the Rams in the first quarter of play, were forward Richard Prydz with two consecutive tallies in that all-important second quarter and George "Queña" Salazar, whose fine passing made some of Prydz's plays possible.

Splash Party Climaxes RA's Winter Activities

Climaxed by a splash party and a pot luck dinner on January 10, election week is the major coming event of the Recreation Association. The semi-annual awards social and dance to be held in Smith Hall on January 12 will conclude the RA's activities for the fall semester.

Competing against several representatives from bay area colleges, RA teams took a first in badminton, a second in tennis and archery, and a third in volleyball during the sports day at Hartnell. The match took place early in November, and with five teams entered, only the bowling team was unplaced.

Ernie Nevers of the Chicago Cardinals scored 40 points (6 td's, 4 PAT's) against the Chicago Bears on November 28, 1929.

RAMBLINGS

Vasquez Leads Rams To Top Spot Laurels

RAM track coach Lou Vasquez has a funny way of pulling championships out of the air.

Vasquez, a member of the contempt-for-fatigue school of running, has the unusual ability of being able to lead his upset-happy boys out of the woods and into the light of first place. The magician of the coaching staff, his teams which had been set to come out third, fourth, or fifth, surprisingly came out first.

Last year, after his spring trackmen won the Big Eight and Northern Cal championships, they were figured for at best third or fourth in the State Finals. But when the meet was over, the Rams were 1958 California State Track champions.

Last week, Vasquez pulled the same trick at San Jose. His cross country team, thought to have lacked the depth to go all the way, walked off with the San Jose invitational cross country championship.

For this victory, not enough credit can be given to Paul Patton, who is probably the greatest runner in the history of this college. It's hard to compare a distance runner with past greats in the sprints and hurdles, but we would still have to stick with the above statement.

Coming from high school as a half-miler, Patton last year turned in exceptional performances in the mile and two-mile run. Among his accomplishments was the fastest two-year college mile time in the United States last year at 4:16.3. He has amazing potential, and if he keeps to his brutal training schedule, it's hard to tell just how far he could go.

Patton took first place on the three-mile San Jose State course, and led his team to the 33-point victory. Blake Westman and Ken Dawdy, both reliable veterans, backed him up by taking fifth and sixth. Credit must also go to newcomers Phil Fortier and John Thomas, who came in tenth and eleventh.

Club Cavalcade

Fun, Frolic, Food Stressed After 2nd Midterm Strain

By Kathie Burns

SECOND midterm week has come and gone, and all clubs, fraternities and sororities on campus are busy with pinning, dances, parties and meetings.

The Filipino Club is giving a Thanksgiving dance tonight in Smith Hall from 8:30 p.m. until midnight. All Filipino students are invited and there will be entertainment, contests, prizes and refreshments.

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity's pledges will be initiated December 6 at the annual pledge, active and alumni buffet dinner. Pledges include Bill Devlin, Jerry Griffin, Tom Griffin, Jack Hocker, James Johnson, Roiland Lapelle, Frank Maruyuma, Pete Pedrotti Sr., Pete Pedrotti Jr., Walter Shaffer, Eckart Sellinger, Norm Singer, Joe Tulipano and Kurt Kahler. Several of the brothers attended the fraternities' regional convention at Los Angeles City College and brought home a trophy for having the largest delegation.

Delta Sigma Tau sorority initiated the following pledges into their society: Frances Anderson, Queen Wells, Rae-Jean Williams, Anne Townsend and Burnez Blackshire.

Zeta Chi sorority will serve a Thanksgiving dinner for the handicapped at the Goodwill Industries of San Francisco for their service project. Pledges of the sorority are now working off demerits received during Pledge Week by doing various services at the Red Cross and participating in a car wash. Pledges are also discussing plans for a dinner with a Spanish theme to be held this Sunday night.

Autumn Daze will be presented by the Chinese Student Club this Friday night from 8 p.m. to midnight.

The dance will be held in the Garden Room, 940 Powell Street. Larry Vukovich and his band will provide the dance music.

Tickets, which may be purchased at the door, are selling for 75 cents stag and $1.25 drag with a registration card.

Ram Hoopsters To Face Tough Foes

Phelanmen were edged out by host Bakersfield in a most unhospitable manner, 43-42, after literally "hooping it up" with first and second round victories over Fresno, 64-48, and San Jose, 59-49.

As an added attraction to their Southern tour, the Ram contingency will jaunt to Santa Maria, meeting the home town Allan Hancock five in what may very well be their toughest game of the season.

Hancock's Bulldogs, who are perennially among the top five in national two-year college cage ratings, are not just an ordinary junior college quintet. On the contrary, their starting lineup is made up of Eastern United States All-State prep greats who invariably use the Santa Maria preparatory college as a stepping-stone to UCLA and USC.

This combination of national hoop greats (last year all five starters listed Ohio as home and only three California boys were on the entire squad) undoubtedly assures the best basketball which can be played in two-year college circles.

Last year both teams were entered in the Modesto Tournament, but the Rams lost a chance to meet the Bulldogs for the championship when the highly touted Santa Marians were upset by San Jose's Jaguars in the semis, 77-64. (The Rams went on to cop the crown by whipping the Jags, 64-48, in the grand finale.)

Regardless of the outcome of this three-day trek to the Southland it can be safely predicted that the Ram delegation will more than hold its own against some superb enemy squads, and will return home with at least a great deal of practice and much-needed experience—if nothing more.

The largest crowd ever to witness a modern day athletic event gathered 217,000 strong at Lenin Stadium in Moscow on April 20, 1953, to see the Soviet All-Stars boot their way to a 2 to 1 soccer win over Poland.

Ram's Reward

WARMING UP THE RAM for midterm luck is Diana Schubert as she kisses him for her luck in the past and puts his nose for luck in the future. Several more students tried this method last midterm, and A's and B's come in tests where they expected C's. Now finals are creeping up and the Ram can expect many a pat on the nose from those who want to change their luck. If you don't believe it, why not drop down and give it a try? Nothing ventured, nothing gained and everyone knows that college mascots are lucky.—Guardsmon photo by Ronald Burwick.

H&R Treats 15 Blind Children To Bay Area Tour Of Top San Francisco Sites

By Bill Ideker

Fifteen blind children had a bright spot in their lives last Saturday, when the Hotel and Restaurant Society made a tour around the bay possible for them.

The children were carefully selected in regard to their stability and adaptability by the Children's Blind Center for the four-hour outing.

Various members used their own cars to pick up the children, and took them to Fisherman's Wharf. At Fisherman's Wharf, the group boarded a boat and were given a tour around the bay. Their fare for the boat tour was donated by the Children's Blind Center. Although they couldn't see the various high spots of interests in that area, they did "feel" the atmosphere by the smell of the fish and the wharf in general.

After thoroughly exploring the numerous shops and stores at the Wharf, the gathering next went to Golden Gate Park enroute home. While at the park, thorough use was made of the playground equipment. The merry-go-round proved to be the most popular ride of the day.

Of the 125 members in the society, approximately 15 took part in the day's excursion. Instructor Lawrence Wong, who helps the club in its projects, highly credited Roy Clark and Tom Cokely for the success of the undertaking. Wong said, "It is a worthwhile project because in student activities it is good for the students to think of others and to understand how they live, instead of just thinking about themselves all of the time."

Much of the photography to be shown is taken from Devlin's book, San Francisco Panorama, which was published last summer, and received many favorable reviews. Three of the pictures taken from his book are large murals of scenes taken in San Francisco.

Others to be displayed include those which have been published in such magazines as the California Automobile Association's Motorland, and some taken from English instructor Raymond R. Early's book titled Columbia, Gold Town, published in 1957.

As well as those already mentioned, there will be many on display which have not been published, plus pictures of Mexico and other countries.

One evening, early in December, will be set aside as Open House for night students and others interested in photography.

Vandalism At College Events Forces Double Campus Police Patrols; Reservoir Lot Opens

Police patrols for all major college functions have been doubled in an effort to prevent further acts of vandalism, according to Fred Fitzgerald, Campus Police adviser.

Fitzgerald said at least four policemen will be assigned to patrol parking lots and other campus areas during night time social functions. Previously two patrolmen were assigned duty for these functions.

The police adviser added that increased enrollment at the college and an expansion of the college physical plant warranted a reappraisal and enlargement of the police force.

Fitzgerald also stated that the new reservoir parking lot is open to students of the college by permit only and has accommodations for 800 cars.

Because of the opening of the lot, two more officers of the Campus Police will be assigned to the morning detail.

One officer will be assigned to the gate leading to the parking lot and another will be used for the direction of traffic, Fitzgerald explained.

The new parking area will also be open for Riordan High School students. These students have parking permits of their own and will be allowed to park anywhere in the area that they wish, Fitzgerald continued.

Last Monday Campus Police began handing out tickets to motor scooter owners who were parked on college property without parking permits. With a permit, scooter owners can park anywhere in the student parking areas.

Campus Police Chief William Donahue announced that 1,153 citations had been given out this semester, which is almost as many citations as parking permits.

Sorority Pledges Bow In Presents On December 6

By Ellen Heflin

Transformation of Smith Hall into a winter wonderland on Saturday, December 6, will mark the semi-annual Inter-Sorority Council presentation ball, Crystal Cotillion, according to Ann Thuss, ISC president.

Music by Saul Carson will be played from 8 p.m. to midnight for the exclusive entertainment of sorority and fraternity members, sorority pledges and their dates.

Following tradition, pledges will make their entrance through an arch, be introduced by the president of their sorority, and proceed down the runway with their escorts, where the dance will start with the Presentation Waltz. Corsages will be given to the pledges by the sorority sisters, Miss Thuss said.

The morning of the ball, Lambda Phi fraternity, in charge of the winter theme decoration, will be assisted in set-up by Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity and Gamma Sigma Sigma service sorority.

Attire for the evening will be formal for pledges, cocktail dresses for sorority members, and dark suits, white shirts and ties for men.

Parents of the 65 pledges and fraternity sponsors will be among those who will receive invitations.

Student Council Denies Vote Bid

Power of the vote equivalent to the authority of regular members of the Student Council was denied four officers of the Associated Student President's Cabinet by debated action of the council last week.

Strongly voicing her disfavor in passing the bill, Roberta Kennedy pointed out the objection to licensing council voting authority to the presidents of the Associated Men Students, Associated Women Students, the Sophomore class, and the Freshman class.

Executive officers should not function as the councilmen that were elected to pass on the issues placed before them, Miss Kennedy emphasized. The national president's cabinet, she continued, does not legislate as congressmen. Twelve council members defeated the measure with only two voting in its favor.

Parking space for 800 automobiles is now available in the reservoir area, according to Bill Donohoe, Campus Police chief. Only Associated Student card holders will have the opportunity to use the new parking area. AS card sales are expected to increase, Ann Finneran, Finance Chairman, said, thus adding to student funds. Miss Finneran stated that the cutting of the final issue of The Guardsman will not be necessary if the additional sum of $500.00 is reached.

Improvements to further benefit and beautify the campus were suggested by the Campus Improvements Committee of the Student Council.

United States Must Know Red Motives

life, they are doing so because that man constitutes a danger to their system, a situation closely paralleled by the United States' taking the life of an enemy espionage agent. Communists do not feel any guilt in liquidating political prisoners; they are only protecting the doctrines to which they have dedicated themselves.

For these reasons our diplomats must take a more equanimous look at Soviet actions while engaged in negotiations, keeping in mind the fact that it is highly improbable that East and West can usefully talk together only on the basis of Western values.

The indignation expressed by the West after these controversial Soviet acts can no doubt be moderately useful if properly harnessed into an instrument to make other countries understand our point of view.

But the real prospects for peace lie not in a continuous barrage of negative propaganda nor in a series of closed-door conferences by men on the lofty levels of statesmen. The best chances for peace are in the establishment of contact between the common people of the nations in question, and the subsequent understanding of each other that such contact cannot fail to bring about.

Cultural exchanges are a sign of definite progress in establishing contact, but to arrive at a genuine understanding of each other, the respective countries must reach down to the level of their common citizens.

What will succeed more than all else is a lowering of barriers by each country to permit the "average American" and the "average Russian" to meet each other in both the US and the USSR, not necessarily as Americans meeting Russians but as people meeting people.

No one will have to prod the people of either country, since both have evinced an intense desire to learn more about their counterparts.

For many Americans, traveling expenses present no problem, and if the USSR is beginning to prosper as we are told it is, more Russian people will some day have the means to travel here, be their government willing.

When Americans and Russians are permitted to spend time together on a large scale, away from the scrutiny of their respective governments, they will discover that they have more in common than they had ever imagined.

Twelve Day Vacation Begins Next Monday

Christmas holidays start Monday, December 15, and run through Friday, December 26, Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, announced today.

Classes will be held December 29, 30 and 31, because of a state requirement to hold a specific number of college days annually, he added.

January 1 and 2 are New Year holidays, and classes will resume Monday, January 5, 1959.

Dr. Conlan commented, "In behalf of the faculty and administration of the college, may I take this opportunity to extend to the members of our student body very best wishes for an enjoyable vacation and holiday season, and for happiness during the New Year."

AMS Presents Series Of Boxing Matches At Smoker Tonight In Men's Gym; Parents Invited

Sponsored by the AMS and starting at 7:30 p.m., the event will take a different twist this time as women will be allowed to "invade" a previously male-only territory.

Thus Al Morales, president of the sponsoring organization, has said that all students at the college, their parents and friends, are invited to come and will be welcomed to the smoker.

Admission will be free to AS card holders and 50 cents to others.

One of the night's highlights will be a series of boxing matches staged by the AMS in cooperation with the college's physical education department and its boxing mentor, Roy Diederichsen. Also included in the program will be the presentation of awards to the winning teams of the intramural basketball leagues.

The first bout of the evening will match Ben Vitalis against Godofredo Reyes in the 112-pound class, and the 120-pound championship will match Pastor Amoroso against Ralph Cechettini, a pair of small but rugged fighters.

Leslie Yen will face George Delgado for the 125-pound title, and Larry Dana will tangle with Ben Lanzas to see who will walk off with the laurels in the 132-pound class.

Other matches will have Comer Marshall going against Tom Griffin for the 147-pound championship; Rich Blaettler and Pete Tranchina will vie in the 156-pound class, while the 165-pound championship matches two football players, Al White and Tom Dougherty.

The 178-pound title will have Pete Schwindt facing Herm Clark, and the heavyweight championship will have Niel Jensen and Cliff Lundberg battling it out for the title.

Swift's Essay Altered To Fit Modern Times

By Don Seratti

WRITING in 1729 when Ireland was beset with a drastic dearth of food and an overabundance of hungry children, Jonathan Swift penned a satiric essay entitled "A Modest Proposal."

Dismayed by the failure of other responsible individuals to present any practicable plans to bring the Irish people through the famine, Swift decided to shock them into decisive action by proposing something that would, by its utter ridiculousness, make the people see the value of more useful alternatives. He proposed that certain children of poorer families be eaten.

Today's world is little different from Swift's Ireland, for many Asiatic countries are even more heavily burdened with population excesses. Thus far, the United States has been almost able to ignore the problem of overpopulation, but the rapid rate of our population's growth may some day make it necessary to apply the brakes. The consumption of children proposed by Swift is now hopelessly old-fashioned. Whoever heard of eating children?

If Swift were living and writing in twentieth century America, his "modest proposal" would probably read like this:

"It has become strikingly evident that if the present growth in population continues unabated, our continent will some day be burdened with many more people than are needed in any area for a comfortable existence. The use of violence has undergone numerous tests in past centuries and has proven to be of inestimable value in reducing populations. Keeping this in mind, we can go about limiting our population in the following ways:

"To begin with, we can sell all types of weapons without discrimination, requiring no permit for carrying them. People possessing violent tempers would have no difficulty in procuring weapons and ammunition. To supplement this liberal distribution of weapons, we could increase the number of crime and gangster films being shown in theaters and on television.

"With an increase in violence thus virtually assured, we could facilitate this trend by opening the doors of all penal institutions and allowing the prisoners to return unmolested to society.

"This having been accomplished, the next obvious step would be to discharge from their jobs all policemen, firemen, doctors and druggists. In an era of unrestrained violence, such people would only be in the way. Policemen would greatly hinder criminal activities; firemen would prevent widespread destruction by interfering with firebugs and normal outbreaks of fire; doctors and nurses would be

Beta Tau Presents Mistletoe Mingle

Beta Tau fraternity will present their 18th annual Christmas dance, Mistletoe Mingle, this Friday night at the California Club, according to Howie Zugman, fraternity president.

Dancing at the affair will be from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight to the music of Sal Vance and his Band. Semi-formal attire is called for, with cocktail dresses for the women and suits and ties for the men.

Decorations for the dance will follow the highly unique and highly successful decorations of last semester. The club will be set as a mammoth fireplace, with the band playing from inside. Address of the club is 1750 Clay Street, one block off Van Ness.

Tickets, costing $2.25 a couple may be purchased from any fraternity member, at the entrance to Smith Hall this week or at the door to the dance.

"Since this is the last dance before Christmas vacation, we intend to make it highly successful, and all students are urged to come and join in the fun," Zugman said, adding that free refreshments will be served.

The fraternity will also put up a Christmas tree in the lobby of Science Hall, as has been the custom for the past 15 years.

AS Candidate Petition Deadline Tomorrow

All candidates who have obtained petitions for the upcoming election must submit them to Gene Bunch, election commissioner, not later than 12 midnight tomorrow.

A new ruling states that men and women students can sign only petitions of candidates running for President and Vice-President of the Associated Men and Women Students, respectively.

Freshman and Sophomore students, the ruling includes, must sign only petitions of candidates running for Freshman and Sophomore Class President and Vice-President, respectively.

Yule Concert Tomorrow

Carols, Dancing Features Of 24th Annual Program

By Donn Bernstein

Christmas spirit with a musical flavor will echo across the campus tomorrow and Friday as the traditional Christmas Concert returns to the college for the 24th year.

Scheduled for presentation twice so that all who wish may attend, the show will be presented first in Smith Hall at 8 p.m. tomorrow, according to Robert Morton, choir director. This performance will be preceded by the annual Faculty Association Christmas party in the faculty dining room.

The second presentation will take place in Cloud Hall library during College Hour on Friday. The show will open with the college concert band, under the direction of Meyer Cahn, playing several Christmas Carols.

Highlighting the program will be performances by soloists Theresa Langmade, Louise Vizcaino, David Dickie and Rolland Lapelle. Miss Langmade and Miss Vizcaino are both sopranos and will sing O Holy Night and Panis Angelicus, respectively. Dickie, who is a baritone, will sing The Birth Of A King, and Lapelle, a tenor, will sing Christmas Hymn, I Yennisis Su, Litrosin Apesti (both Greek Orthodox) and Silent Night. Lapelle will be backed by the A Cappella Choir.

Featured in this year's production, Morton said, will be 17 modern dancers, all furnished by the women's physical education department. They will dance to Jesus, Joy of Man's Desiring, and Wassail, and they will be supported by the A Cappella Choir. The dancers are under the direction of Lene Johnson, women's physical education instructor here.

Ave Maria will be sung by a quartet: sopranos Jean Thompson and Virginia Freeman, alto Janet Currie and baritone Andre Brehaut.

The A Cappella Choir, directed by Morton, will sing Adeste Fidelis, Gloria, In Excelsis Deo, We Three Kings Of Orient Are, The First Noel, Hark The Herald Angels Sing, Hallelujah, and as the final number, We Wish You A Merry Christmas.

Morton will conduct the Men's Glee Club in the singing of It Came Upon A Midnight Clear, Cradled All Lowly, As On The Night, and Beautiful Savior.

English Carols, Thy Name We Hail, from The Redemption, and A Mighty Fortress Is Our God will be played by the concert band, directed by Cahn.

Accompanying the soloists and the quartet will be Loyd Carroll. He also will accompany the A Cappella Choir with the processional, Adeste Fidelis.

Soloists and the quartet were trained and will be directed by Florsita Badger, voice instructor here.

Morton had praise for all who have helped to make the production possible, and he said, "Through the combined efforts of Miss Badger, Mr. Cahn, and all participants, we have been able to work out what we think will be a very enjoyable program."

Party System Returning To Campus Political Scene As Hopefuls Campaign On Three Tickets

Independents Offer Harmony, Spirit

Harmony and spirit among Associated Students comprise just two of the long lost attributes which the Independent Party promises to "bring back home again," according to AS presidential candidate Dick Cottrell.

Cottrell heads the ticket of the Independent Party, one of three to return the party system to the campus political scene for the first time since Fall 1956.

"Regardless of what policy changes must be enacted," Cottrell stressed "we shall avail our every last effort toward a cause which we hope will increase student unity and spirit."

The Independent Party jointly emphasizes a strong platform, concentrated by increasing student benefits and welfare. A ten per cent discount in the student bookstore for all AS card holders tops the agenda for consideration should the Independents win next January.

"Our primary objective," Cottrell said, "is in working for the students; to give them the type of college life they want, and to offer our assistance to all college causes, striving for the ultimate in student satisfaction."

Individualist-CAB Deep In Experience

Efficiency through experience, with an emphasis on good leadership in student government, is the credo of the Individualist-CAB Party, Ben Northrup, the party's presidential candidate, revealed last week in an interview.

"All we ask is that the students let us know their problems," states nominee Northrup; "their problems are our problems."

Party platform will revolve around good leadership and experience in student government, continued work on the proposed student union and, an increase in the number of discounts on Associated Student cards. The Fox West Coast Theater pass, which is in effect at the present time and which gives any AS card holder a special discount rate at the Fox and Parkside theaters, was acquired through the initiative and work of Northrup, who announced, "My party will help people who are not in organizations of any kind but have AS cards."

IFC-ISC Promises More Coordination

Coordination of campus activities and unity of purpose highlight the IFC-ISC Party campaign now entering its final weeks.

Fred Muller and Pat Hawkins, candidates for Associated Student president and vice-president, respectively, both said that if elected to office on January 12 and 13 they will work to coordinate all campus activities and improve on projects undertaken by various campus organizations.

Ralph Prior, who lost the IFC-ISC nomination, announced that he will run for AS president as a non-partisan.

Running with Muller and Miss Hawkins on the IFC-ISC ticket are Sam Allen for Associated Men Student president, and Diana Cristofferson for Associated Women Student president.

Freshman candidates for council are Sue Shawl, Evonne Weiss, Bary Solloway, Don Aspand, Warren Downes, Judy Day and Diek Jenkins.

Although there was some confusion at the nominating convention held two weeks ago, IFC-ISC candidates said they have reached complete agreement on their campaign platform and feel they will work in complete harmony if elected to office.

Student Election Enthusiasm Promises Close Ballot Battle

IF PRESENT pre-election enthusiasm and heated competition are indicative of things to come, we may anticipate one of the most successful City College elections on January 12 and 13.

Naturally, the greater the number of candidates running for an office, the better the election will be. At this writing four students had already tossed their hats in the ring as candidates for the Associated Student presidency.

The development of three parties will also play a key role in increasing campaign competition, and perhaps will do its part in giving the elections a "lift," which they desperately need as a result of the poor voting turn-out in recent semesterly elections.

Agreed, keen competition does a great deal of good in any election, but there is no place for unethical or dirty campaigning.

Repercussions of the last national and state elections indicated that a great deal of these "under-the-table" tactics were evident. Should such methods be discovered in our college election procedures, it would only result in embarrassment for the individuals or parties concerned, and subsequent loss of greatly needed votes.

Also, winning of an election by candidates who have used doubtful methods would destroy that certain luster evident when a person earns his office only through decent intentions and honest toil.

After all, "What price glory?" The prime object is playing the game; winning is secondary.

• Who Parks?

Editor, The Guardsman:

I have a few questions which I would like to pose for every thinking City College student: Why should one be compelled to buy a student body card in order to enjoy the privilege of parking on city-owned property such as the campus parking lots and the newly opened reservoir across the street? Are not non-student body card holders entitled to use all city-owned facilities, since this is, in fact, a City College and almost everybody here is, in fact, a taxpayer or a dependent of a taxpayer in and for the City and County of San Francisco.

I, and many like me, do not buy student body cards because: (a) we can't afford it; or (b) we do not wish to participate in school activities; or (c) we are a little apprehensive as to the eventual use of the not too insubstantial sum of $5.00.

Student body card holders have every right to engage in their own exclusive and enjoyable activities, but no student should be deprived of parking space, or a course which now requires ownership of said document.

I maintain that all parking facilities should be open to all students on a first come, first serve basis.

Respectfully,

Ron Pavellas

Traffic controls are drawn by the administration and enforcement of them is delegated to the Campus Police. Classics To Replace Westerns As Top 1959 TV Drawer; Sports Carry Usual Big Rating

NOW that there are only a few more weeks left in December, it seems appropriate to look ahead and preview what's in store for the television viewer in 1959.

New shows scheduled to debut during the coming year include Flight, an anthology dramatic series based on true stories taken from the files of the U. S. Air Force; The Veil, Boris Karloff in tales of the supernatural; New York Confidential, starring Lee Tracy as a crusading newspaper columnist; Adventures of the Seahawk, intrigue with John Howard aboard a Caribbean schooner on top-secret research for the government, and Counterspy, the adventures of counter-intelligence agent David Harding.

CBS spectaculars to be seen include a two-hour production of Ernest Hemingway's For Whom The Bell Tolls, and a 90-minute adaption of Robert Louis Stevenson's Treasure Island, both set for next spring. The Du Pont Show of the Month will offer William Shakespeare's Hamlet in February, to be performed by the Old Vic Company of London in costumes of the 1890's.

The Bell Telephone series repeats The Unchained Goddess in March and is to present The Alphabet Conspiracy on January 26. The series has also booked four live musicals in color to be seen January through April with Harry Belafonte set for the opening show.

CBS is scheduled to air an hour-long documentary on the Jet Age in January, and NBC will present a special film biography of Abe Lincoln in February with narration using the Rail Splitter's own words. For Easter, the latter network plans an hour program with Perry Como and a four-hour spectacular starring Mary Martin on Easter Sunday.

Sports fans will have a feast in January as the Rose, Sugar, Orange, and Cotton Bowls are to be telecast on New Year's Day, and the Senior Bowl on the third and the Pro Bowl, the eleventh. The Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes will be covered by CBS next spring, and the network will also carry the Masters Golf Tournament from Augusta, Georgia, in April and continue the Pro Hockey games through March.

TV movie fans will be glad to hear that more than 700 pre-1949 films have been purchased from Paramount by Channel 5 to be seen beginning in early January. The package includes such hits as the Crosby-Hope Road series, Going My Way, The Palefface, The Great Gatsby, and At War With The Army. Other companies will also be releasing better films to TV, among them La Strada, Citizen Kane, The Razor's Edge, Grapes Of Wrath, and Alfred Hitchcock's thriller, Rope.

As for the new quiz shows, ironically there is only one scheduled: College Quiz Bowl. Set for January 4, this is to be a panel program with college undergraduates as contestants.

Bobbies' Capes Worn Here For Fashion's Sake Stir Londoners

Garment Appeals As 'Rather Nice' To College Instructor

By Pastor Valle-Garay

London's police hollered and the high priests of Scotland Yard couldn't figure out how the devil this thing had happened. "Preposterous," they probably exclaimed at once about the 'hole maddening issue.

Even the most conservative members of Parliament flipped their powdered wigs and with a comment that went something like, "I say, ol' boys, we shan't let this matta go on unnoticed," they readied themselves to protest what has simultaneously become England's latest "crisis" and America's newest craze—British bobbies' capes bought there to be worn here as fashionable objects.

To Melia Furgis, physical education and social dance instructor here, the fad means no joke either since she has turned owner of one of the controversial items.

Tall and stately Miss Furgis, considered by students and instructors as a very smartly dressed faculty member, says that purchasing new, different things in the line of fashions and trying on "unusual looking" indies' apparel is her chief hobby. "A delightful one," she adds.

She was not especially thinking of buying any unusual-looking garment, however, when she entered Joseph Magnin's store the other day. Nevertheless, she walked out of it with her wardrobe augmented by one oil-skinned, wool-lined thing of British police extraction—namely, the official cape the Queen's bobbies wear while walking their beats.

"A gasser!" someone exclaimed as she entered the college's cafeteria last Friday. "Nice and warm," is Miss Furgis' description of the garment which she wears either as a cape or a skirt.

Apparently the former is the general feeling among some fashion-minded people of America. Two thousand of her majesty's capes, her majesty's bobbies' capes that is, were originally bought by American importer, David Selniger, shipped to this country, distributed to apparel stores and put on the market with a written guarantee that they had been worn by the Queen's bobbies. An official police badge, bearing the royal cipher, went with each cape, all for the popular price of $19 plus tax.

The capes were sold before the Yard could say "to whom." Not that they could do a thing about it, their hands being tied completely in this case, for nothing can be done to stop the now famous sale, and the fad doesn't appeal to anyone there.

Seinger isn't planning on stopping it either. He's getting a second shipment of 8,000 capes this time plus, hold on to your coffee, 5,000 of the bobbies' official helmets! Who'll wear these, no one seems to know.

Capes are all right. On occasions they provide for good conversational material ("I haven't seen one of those since I left a London pub in a 'urry some years ago, M'lady," happily exclaimed the British gripman of a San Francisco cable car boarded by Miss Furgis and her cape one sunny afternoon.)

They even cause giggles and murmurs of surprise, joy and fun to the younger generation, especially the high school species, but as Miss Furgis puts it, "Those helmets are strictly for the bobbies." They'll be glad to keep them there, too, unless someone has use for some flower pot-like things around here.

Engineering

A To Z Training Creates Call For Program's Grads

By Roy Twitty

Architecture, electronics and mechanics, from Archimedes to Zeeman, literally the engineering A's-to-Z's, are subjects so thoroughly and competently offered students of engineering here that graduates have been highly successful and are in great demand.

Tenth largest builder of homes in the United States, Andrew Oddstad is a graduate of both the university parallel architecture curriculum here and of the University of California. Oddstad's homes and housing tracts are spread throughout the Bay Area and still are increasing in number.

"Excellence of instruction," Cecil Aggeler, engineering department head, appraised, "is indicated by the success of the graduates." Outstanding laboratories and equipment along with an able staff of instructors who have had considerable experience in the industries, Aggeler added, are two main reasons for the program's success.

Twenty-five engineering instructors make use of not only their own laboratories and equipment, but also the services of the physics, chemistry, and mathematics departments.

Graduate students of this college's lower division engineering courses are highly acceptable to the University of California in junior year standing. Cal's college of engineering entrance tests, also taken by their own students, last year showed that students prepared by this college averaged in the 81st percentile, which is more than three-fourths above average.

Eight curricula, ranging from architecture and electronics to air conditioning and refrigeration, make up the engineering technology program. All eight are accepted by the Engineers' Council for Professional Development, which is the national accrediting organization for engineering programs.

Preparing high-level technicians to work with engineers is the primary goal of the technology programs, however slightly different purposes are sometimes served. One graduate of the civil engineering technology program, Herbert Passerino, is now a licensed land surveyor with a good-sized subdivision in Santa Rosa.

Mystery In C-330

One Peek Reveals Beehive Activity

In Cloud Hall, there is a door bearing the numerals 330 and nothing more. It could easily be the college's closet of skeletons for what little is known about it on campus.

In actuality, this room houses the mimeograph department, and is filled with constant activity.

Activity in a mimeograph department? Everyone knows that all there is to mimeography is just running sheets of paper through a machine.

"Contrary to this belief," states Anna M. Moody, who has been with the college in this department for eight years now, "the mimeograph department is an education within itself."

To clarify her statement, Mrs. Moody explained that she and her co-worker, Albert Ting, who has been with the college for seven years, do half or more of the stencil cutting for faculty use of tests and review material.

"While cutting the stencils," Mrs. Moody said, "I try to answer the questions. It really makes the work very interesting."

Although they never have a dull moment, Mrs. Moody said that the hardest part of any semester is during final examination week. "The time is so limited that when finals end I give a sigh of relief," she added. Her last statement pretty well sums up the action and reaction of every college student finishing finals.

Shorts Or Slacks Inappropriate For Classroom Wear

Fine dress has long been a tradition at the college. Through the years men and women have appeared well groomed and appropriately dressed for their classes.

Recently, though, an increasing number of women has marred that tradition by wearing slacks, shorts and the like on campus.

For the benefit of those women who may not be aware of the tradition or of the regulations concerning this matter, the President's Bulletin, issued weekly to the faculty, carried the following announcement last November 24:

"Any variety of slacks or shorts is not considered an acceptable costume for campus wear by the administration of City College. Women students appearing in such costume will be referred to the Dean of Women's office."

Donahue, Shields, Craft Win All Big Eight And Examiner's All Northern California Laurels

By Jim Payne

All-Big Eight honors were presented to City College gridders Oscar Donahue, L. C. Shields and Gene Craft last week by the office of Big Eight Commissioner Russell C. Azzara.

The trio was also chosen on the Examiner All-Northern California and Big Eight squads.

Donahue, a pleasant surprise to Ram supporters, played prep football at Galileo and later played service ball. As a freshman, he has one remaining season of football eligibility.

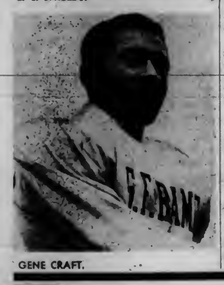
Shields is a repeater from the 1957 All-Big Eight squad and was a proverbial "rock of Gibraltar" as a Ram tackle this campaign. His all-league honors date back to when he was All-City at Polytechnic for two years.

Returning this season after being injured in the first game of 1957, Craft combined speed and power in netting himself a second team assignment after having been named to the second team in 1956.

Incidentally, the November 19 issue of The Guardsman predicted that Shields, Donahue and Craft would win the All-Big Eight honors accorded.

All-stars Donahue, Craft and Shields, along with tackle Pete Morgan, were selected as possible players in the annual East-West Junior College All-Star game on Saturday, December 20, at 8 p.m. in Stockton's Memoriai Stadium.

The first All-Big Eight team as it was released from the commissioner's office:



Ends: Oscar Donahue, City College; William Dahme, Contra Costa.
Tackles: L. C. Shields, City College; Dave Williams, Sacramento.
Center: James Bush, San Mateo.
Quarterback: Gene Tagliaferri, San Mateo.
Halfbacks: Louis Blakely, Sacramento; Ray Heinrich, Stockton.
Fullback: Will Simpson, Stockton.

4 Most Valuable Players Get Nod At Block Banquet

Deserving athletes from football, soccer and cross country were presented with blocks. In addition, each member of the San Jose Invitational champion Ram cross country team was presented with an inscribed cup.

The many guests in attendance included football, soccer and cross country coaches from the San Francisco high schools and several of the Bay Area colleges and universities.

RAMBLINGS

Neglect Of NFL Draft Perils Grid Futures

By George Grasso

BIG BUSINESS is prevented from developing into a monopoly by anti-trust acts. And pro-football (which is very big business) is prevented from developing into championship monopolies by the N.F.L. draft.

It is hoped that by giving the bottom teams first draft choice, they will build themselves up and equalize the league.

Unfortunately, because of hometown pressure and demands on professional coaches, many of them don't have the time to go through this evolution, and resort to trading away draft choices for proven old pros.

Obviously, Pittsburgh feels it is better to have proven players than to take a chance on a college graduate who may not pan out. But in taking a nine or ten year pro, they must face the danger of his retiring, especially if he finds his new surroundings disagreeable.

Trading draft choices seems to be defeating the purpose of the idea. Coaches wanting to save their jobs for a few more years will give up incoming talent and seriously weaken the future of the team. The old pros put a charge in their new squads and may help to raise their final standings for the year. But when they retire, with no new strength behind them, they leave the club in a position far worse than when they started.

Rams 2-2 On Hoop Jaunt

Ram Cagers Edge Vallejo By 45-42 In Season Opener

Utilizing the elements of hustle and heads-up ball handling to their greatest degree of effectiveness throughout the second half, Ram cage boss Sid Phelan unveiled his 1958-59 hoop wares to the public by way of a 45-42 scalping of the Apaches from Vallejo College, December 2, in the men's gymnasium.

Playing no more than mediocre ball throughout the initial 20 minutes, the locals were barely able to contain the hard-hitting offensive maneuvers of Augie Garrido, Johnny Anabo and Jack Smith, who riddled the cans nearly at will.

About the only weapons the locals were able to counter with during this stanza came in the form of the rugged board play of George Shewl, Bill Simmons and Cleo Cofield, combined with the outside shooting of John Iles and the age old veteran Ike McArthur.

Moving into the second half of play, however, Phelan introduced the hustle element in the form of hard-charging guard Vince Rocchi. This was the factor which was eventually to turn the tables on the Vallejans and send the Red and White contingent to Bakersfield sporting an unblemished record.

Iles opened the finale by pilfering the melon from Don Wouda, driving the length of the floor, and laying it into the bucket before being fouled by Jim McManus. Iles retaliated by tanking the ensuing charity toss and the Rams were on their way.

The Apaches were to grab the lead but once more, when veteran Larry Hines made good on a 20-footer to set the count at 29-27. Shewl promptly evened things up on a left hand hook from beneath the bucket, and when McArthur followed with a set from the corner, the Phelan charges were out in front to stay.

Shewl was high for the game with 18 markers, while McArthur and Iles brought home ten and eight, respectively. None of the Apaches were able to break into the higher scoring bracket, Garrido leading the pack with nine.

Meanwhile, the Rams were having their troubles with the Bakersfield Renegades, losing 52-49. Trailing 10-7 early in the contest the college fought back with a devastating 22-point output in the last ten minutes of the half to hold a 29-20 edge at the intermission.

Brilliant hook shots off the paw of center Norm Upshaw carried his Gade mates to a short-lived 37-36 lead at 12:00 of the terminal stanza, but the Rams pulled ahead on a Shewl jumper and were never headed, thanks to a three bucket output by the steady McArthur in the waning moments of the game. Cofield and the 6-6 Upshaw shared the point leadership with 16, while Shewl had 15 board clearers.

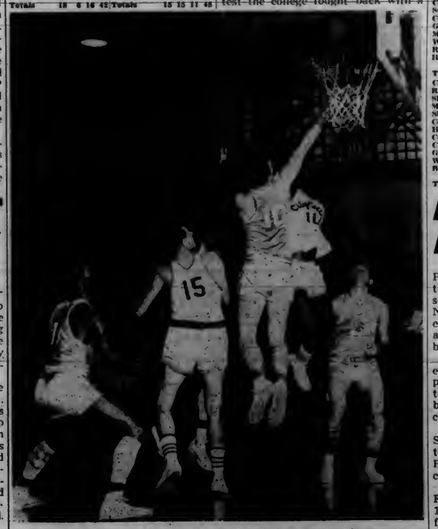
Los Angeles Valley won the Tourney by easily downing San Jose 55-45, while Fresno clobbered Modesto 58-43 for the Consolation crown.

Cofield, who was shooting well at all times, tanked 49 points to lead the Ram scorers with a 16.3 average. Shewl followed with 43 (14.3) and grabbed 46 rebounds while connecting on 21 of 26 charities.

In preparing for their encounter with Allan Hancock last Saturday night the Rams knew that the Santa Maria college boasted of having one of the nation's outstanding cage congregations and that their 6-7 hometown center John Rudometkin (All-Southern California prep last year) was practically unstoppable, but not until the team came into contact with the Bulldogs did they realize how true these claims were.

Despite being "up" and getting "high" for the game from the night before the Rams found themselves in arrears 9-2 before they realized the game started. At the half it was 37-23, ten minutes into the second half 58-39 and at the whistle 75-53.

Rudomelkin was uncanny. He took 11 shots, made 9 and batted 1.000 after 6 tosses from the charity circle while grabbing 16 rebounds.



Notwithstanding, the Rams played admirably and spirited. Shewl, only 6-2, held his own against the big boys with 13 rebounds, and Simmons, the ex-Poly high hero, tallied 20 points—14 in the second half after Hancock established a solid 15-point differenece.

Cofield, Shewl Star As Cagers Take Third In Bakersfield Tourney; Stunned By Dazzling Hancock Artistry, 75-53

By Nick Peters, Editor

An indication that marked improvement is necessary if Sid Phelan's Ram cagers are to be contenders for Big Eight laurels was clearly evidenced by the team's third place finish in a tourney it could have won and its stunning 75-53 loss to a flawless Allan Hancock attack at Santa Maria, both incidents occurring last week.

Posting a 2-2 slate (3-2 overall) after their four-day Southern California trek the Rams will face the UC Frosh Friday night at 6 o'clock at Berkeley. On Saturday they engage the USF yearlings at the same time in the new Hilltop gym.

At the annual Bakersfield Tourney the college's representatives claimed a 69-64 first round victory over LA Harbor's Seahawks despite a sub-par second half performance which nearly cost them the game.

Leading 40-25 at the half on the strength of Cleo Cofield's and George Shewl's combined 21 point output the Rams showed only a 51-45 margin at ten minutes of the second half. However, Cofield and Shewl continued their efficient pace boosting the count to 66-56 with five minutes to play.

Sharpshooting Cofield, who hit 7 out of 11 fielders, was the game's high point man while teammate Shewl garnered 19 (9 for 10 on the foul stripe) and was a board bulwark with 15 rebounds.

Playing with only a 3½-hour rest the Rams made their worst showing in losing to a well balanced San Jose five, 54-43. The fact that the Rams were weary, however, should not be used as an excuse to downgrade a highly spirited Jaguar comeback effort with only a 5-hour break between games.

Jag forward Gerry McDonnell's quick 10 points carried the Joseans to an 18-13 lead ten minutes into the game, but a Ram surge nosed the locals to 27-24 advantage at the break.

In the early stage of the second half there was a complete reversal of form. The Rams resembled a group of rag dolls who had the stuffing knocked out of them. In a 12-minute period after the final half tip-off the Jags raced to a 21-5 spread and with only eight to go it was 43-32 and victory was in the bag.

McDonnell claimed high point honors with 14 digits, closely followed by the Ram stalwarts Cofield and Shewl (16 rebounds), who collected 13 apiece.

With third place at stake the Rams took on host Bakersfield the following night and edged the Renegades 52-49. Trailing 10-7 early in the contest the college fought back with a

Harriers Third In N. Cal Title Run

Despite an individual win by Paul Patton that set a new course record, the Ram cross country team had to settle for a third place tie at the Northern California Junior College cross country championships at Diablo Valley Junior College on November 23.

San Jose City College's Jaguars easily took team honors with 56½ points to down Reedley's 83 and leave the Rams and Diablo Valley, who had beaten the Rams earlier in the season, clinched at 86 even.

Patton, hot off a triumph at the San Jose State invitational meet, won the 3¼-mile race in 16:59 to smash Rudy Garcia's two-year standing course record of 17:56.

Ken Dawdy, Blake Westman, Phil Fortier, and Robin Clements finished 11th, 19th, 24th and 31st, respectively, for the college. Westman had held fourth place through the greater part of the grind, but twisted his ankle with only one-fourth mile to go.

Open For Business—Now Will SOMEBODY Park!

NO MORE than two weeks ago the complaints went—and for more than just a few years—that there was no parking space available from here to Playland for those students whose classes started after 8 a.m. Now that the reservoir has been opened to all, even to those without AS cards, the lot (as photographed at 11:30 a.m.) seems to attract only the attention of those who SHOULD park near Playland—seagulls. —Guardsman photo by David Abrahams.

Parking Permit Restriction Lifted For Reservoir Area

By Paul Malfatti

Students who have not acquired parking permits, for one reason or another, last week were granted reservoir parking privileges free from the wrath of the law for the remainder of the semester by Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here.

At a Student Council meeting, Dean Hillsman announced that if students without permits park their cars in the newly acquired parking lot on the west side of Phelan Avenue, the Campus Police will not issue tickets to them for the remainder of this semester. They will, however, to prevent theft and car stripping, continue to police the area. Next semester those who wish to use the facilities of the area will be obligated to have a permit, Dean Hillsman said.

The dean also asked the members of student government to set an example for the student body by parking their cars in the space recently opened to the college.

Contradicting many beliefs, Dean Hillsman stated, "It isn't as far as it looks." This was not just an opinion but a fact, for the dean himself has used the lot and found that he arrived at his office no later and even earlier when parking in the lot than he had from the faculty parking area.

This action was taken to produce interest and announce to students who park their cars in the street, down by the gymnasiums, and on Marsdon Avenue, where Hurley Village was recently removed to make way for the Arts Building, that they will obtain convenience as well as police protection for their cars by using this area adjacent to Riordan High School.

With the granting of this huge area to the college, parking should cease to be a problem for students, Dean Hillsman declared.

Advertising Dept. Announces Poster Contest Winners

Winners of a poster contest sponsored by the Salvation Army were Henry Rianda and John Harmon, art students here, who were named November 24 from a group of 12 contestants.

"Your Basement Clutter Means Help to Others" was the theme of Rianda's poster, in blue and black lettering with a yellow background. Articles often found in a basement were strikingly brought out in red and white with the seal of the Salvation Army in red in the lower right-hand corner.

Harmon used "Your Throw-Aways Make Work That Pays" as his theme, and also used blue and black lettering. A small boy with outstretched arms offering his Teddy Bear was done in blue on a white background.

William Eckert, head of the advertising art department, introduced a former City College art student, John Henshaw, as one of the judges. Henshaw is now employed with the Dimensional Design Company.

The other three judges were Henry Condeff, art director at Foster and Kleiser Advertising Company; Ed Hass, display artist at Dimensional Design Company, and Captain George Duplain, center-manager of the Salvation Army Men's Service Center.

Following the judging, a luncheon was held in the faculty dining room in Smith Hall for the Salvation Army representative, the judges, and the two winners of the contest.

Nine other students had entries in the contest. They were Leroy Williams, Edward A. Lujan, Raul Morales, William Morrison, John Rhodes, Robert P. Smith, Brian Zingler, Allen Bergeron, and Donald Anderson.

"Finally, if there is still an excess in population, we can dig into our stockpiles of atomic and hydrogen bombs with full intention of using them, and forcing our enemies to do likewise. If this should for some reason fail, perhaps we can locate some rats who are still carrying the bubonic plague."

'Penny Voting' To Elect Sophomore Ball King, Queen

Oriental Magic is the theme for the semi-annual Sophomore Ball to be held January 17 in the Sky Room of the Whitcomb Hotel, overlooking Civic Center on Market between Eighth and Ninth Streets.

One of the highlights of the Ball, George Morf, class president, pointed out, is the coronation of the King and Queen. Beta Tau donates a perpetual trophy to the Queen, and Theta Tau donates the perpetual trophy to the King. Both Beta Tau and Theta Tau are in charge of the ceremonies. Individual trophies will also be presented by the Sophomore Class.

The means of electing the King and Queen will be the "Penny a Vote Method." Coin boxes, each bearing a candidate's picture, will be placed in the cafeteria and in other spots on campus. Each penny dropped into a box will count as one vote for the contestant whose picture is on the box.

Howard Frederic's Band of Gold will provide music for the dance, Morf said. Accompanying the group are Ree Brunell, local recording star, and, in keeping with festivities, a quartet called The Swinging Sophomores.

Appropriate attire, Morf declared, has changed since the previous event from formals to cocktail dresses for women and tuxedos to dark suits for men.

Admission to the dance is by Associated Student card or $2.50 per couple, Morf added.

Committees for the ball are as yet not completed because of a lack of volunteers. As of now, tally, decoration, invitation, dance and publicity committee positions are held by Liz Hogan, Nance Canning and Morf.

CAB's Christmas Drive Ends Today

A Christmas fund drive by the Club Activities Board to collect money for needy families ends its six-day campaign today.

Jim Hickey, president of CAB, stated, "The drive is going very smoothly, but there is always that extra nickel or dime that helps a poverty-stricken family back on the right road; so everyone give big on this last day of the drive."

Several CAB members will be pacing the cafeteria and hallways with milk cartons marked in accordance with the drive. There will also be a number of IFC members helping in this once-a-year collection.

Such organizations as the United Crusade, Community Chest, and the United Church Appeal are to select the families which will receive money orders purchased with the funds collected.

New Location, Policy Ahead For Ramporium

When students return to the college from the Christmas holidays, they will find the Ramporium moved to Bungalow 2, with a change made not only in location, but in policy as well.

"Serve yourself" will be the new technique employed by the store when the transaction of moving is completed. Students may check their books in on a shelf made for this purpose, and then go on about their business and select the books, paper, and other materials of their choice.

Dr. Oscar Anderson said the changeover should increase business for the store by at least 25 per cent.

Mrs. Main, wife of manager Dick Main, again reminded students that the Ramporium is student owned, and that a part of the profit is turned over to the Associated Student fund.

Scholastic Requirements Hot Issue At CJCSGA Conference; All Athletes Need C Average

By Jim Clifford

Scholastic requirements for college athletes became one of the heated issues at the recent California Junior College Student Government Association Conference at Bakersfield.

Ram as well as all two-year college athletes will have to maintain a C average in order to be eligible for next year's contests, because of the outcome of the debate which ran the verbal crossfire of the three-day meeting, in which 64 colleges participated.

The C average requirement is not new; it has been in effect for a year now, but the college's contingent to the conference shed new light on the matter, and almost won their point.

Terry Chavez, who represented the college's athletic interests at the Bakersfield meeting, led the fight against the status quo of the eligibility ruling. Chavez based his attack primarily on the discriminatory aspect of the ruling. His attempts fell short by two tallies in the final vote.

The San Francisco group felt that the ruling was too slanted against one phase of college life. The eligibility requirement holds sway for only athletics—other activities are not subjected to maintenance of an average any higher than what the college demands of any student enrolled there, Chavez pointed out.

Those in favor of the ruling felt that athletes, especially today, are publicly representing their college, and, therefore, should display better than average grades in order to offset any criticism of the college's athletic set-up.

Many delegates opposing the continuation of the measure pointed out that the requirements are a college issue, and should be regulated by each individual institution. Those in favor regarded the topic as a statewide subject and thus dealt with it on that scale.

Dean Ralph Hillsman, himself a star basketball player in his college days here and at UC, feels that the college's grade qualifications should apply equally to all students. "If a student fails to keep up to the standard of the college, he will be dismissed," he stated; "why, then, should we deny a healthy outlet to some athletes if they maintain the college's regular scholastic requirements?"

Season Greetings Highlighted With Club Activities

By Kathie Burns

WITH the four-day Thanksgiving week-end passed and visions of the two-week Christmas holiday coming up, clubs, fraternities and sororities are busy making plans for holiday services and merriment.

Zeta Chi sorority's Christmas service plans include singing carols at Treasure Island, December 21. Other plans, which will provide a full holiday for the members, are the sorority dinner and pinning on December 30 and the sorority Christmas dance, December 27.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority's pledges, Joan Soldate, Helen Lenci, Annette Moquin, Pat Perkins, Sue Shawl and Carolyn Vukasin, recently gave a successful mother-daughter tea at one of the pledge's homes.

The Hillel Foundation has been busy this semester and recently held election of officers. New officers for this club are Helen Oretski, president; Judy Manick, vice-president; Len Froomin, secretary; Marsh Labowitz, treasurer; Gayle Greendorfer, publicity chairman; Lynda Washer and Coral Palansky, social chairmen, and Dick Gushenson, religious chairman. Activities for this semester and next for the club include an ice-skating party and a dance.

Theta Tau sorority's plans for the coming holidays include singing carols at San Francisco Hospital on Sunday night, December 21.

Comedy Hit Currently Undergoing Rehearsal

Rehearsals for You Can't Take It With You, the Little Theater comedy, slated to run January 10, 17, 30 and 31, have panned out better than expected, according to Dave Terry, publicity director for the Little Theater.

"The property department, under Ann Osorno, and the wardrobe section, headed by Virginia Evans, are keeping up with the reading schedule, and we should hold our first dress rehearsal the week prior to the show's opening," Terry stated.

The George Kaufman and Moss Hart comedy, which won the Pulitzer Prize in 1936, will be the group's second production of the semester.

Stan Jackson as Tony Kirby and Maureen Rogers as Alice will share the leading roles in the forthcoming comedy.

The story centers around a wealthy, inhibited family that suddenly throws off the decorum of society and does exactly as it pleases.

The highest recorded shade temperature in the world was 136 degrees F. at Azizia, Libya, North Africa, on September 13, 1922.

The lowest recorded temperature in the world was 90 degrees below zero at Verkhoyansk, Siberia, Russia, on February 5 and 7, 1892.

Music-Loving Burglars Get Big Haul—Over 500 Records

By Roy Twitty

Burglarized and stolen from the music department building, more than 500 records and a Columbia hi-fi phonograph are missing from the college, according to a report made Thursday to Student Council.

Accumulated over a ten year period, the record collection was taken after 10 p.m. Wednesday when Bungalow 6 was locked after evening classes by Bob Morton, music instructor. The theft was discovered the next morning (Thursday) when Meyer Cahn, band director, opened the building at 9 o'clock.

Mode of entry used by the record-fliehers into the building is unknown, according to Inspectors Sarraille and Lawson of the San Francisco police department. The inspectors have requested that any student having any information concerning the record collection theft call them at SU 1-2020.

Police pawn shop details have been alerted, according to Lawson, because people seldom keep the goods they take and generally attempt to dispose of them through pawn shops. Information and descriptions of the records have been teletyped to various parts of the state but as yet there are no specific leads.

Last Tuesday saw amendment of the Club Activities Board constitutional by-laws okayed by the Student Council. Organizations not applying for CAB recognition by the twelfth CAB meeting will be sent a warning notice according to Article I, Sections 3 and 4.

Clubs failing to submit petitions to the CAB by two months after the start of a semester (the CAB's 16th meeting) will be ruled off-campus.

Request to re-establish KCSF as an on-campus organization followed close on the heels of the CAB constitution amendment. KCSF had recently been ruled off-campus for not fully complying with the CAB regulations.

KCSF has now fulfilled the requirements for on-campus recognition, according to George Morf, member of the Broadcasters and Sophomore Class president.

Lee Anderson Research Paper Wins CPA Plaque

Lee Anderson, Publicity Committee chairman and journalism major here, was awarded a plaque last Friday for her paper nominating Sam Brannan, founder of San Francisco's first newspaper The Star, into the California Press Association's Hall of Fame.

Brannan was one of three elected to the CPA's coveted society and his selection was attributed to the excellent research of Miss Anderson, who, through a complete biography, depicted the press pioneer's civic consciousness.

AWS Sets January 16 For Feminine Fling

Date for this semester's semi-annual Associated Women Student Feminine Fling has been set for January 16, according to Kitty Stein, AWS president.

Of special interest at this party is the presentation of the Margaret Dougherty Award, a trophy given to the one of eight sororities on campus with the highest scholastic rating. This honor was attained last semester by Kappa Phi sorority.

The newly elected presidents of Recreation Association, Inter-Sorority Council and AWS are also announced at this time.

Crowning Of Soph King, Queen Highlights Ball This Saturday Night At Whitcomb's Sky Room

Dancing, to the music of Howard Frederick and his Band of Gold, will be from 9 p.m. until 12 midnight. Ree Brunell, vocalist and recording star from San Francisco, will entertain along with a singing group aptly named the Swinging Sophomores.

Special event of the evening will be the crowning of the Soph King and Queen. Voting is being held by the "Penny a Vote" method, with voting boxes located this week in Smith Hall. Each penny will count as a vote for the contestant pictured on the box.

Beta Tau donates a perpetual trophy to the Queen and Theta Tau donates the perpetual trophy to the King. Beta Tau and Theta Tau are in charge of the ceremonies. Individual trophies will also be presented by the Sophomore class.

Price for the dance is free with an Associated Student card and $2.50 for non-card holders. Cocktail dresses for the women and dark suits and ties for the men is the required attire for the occasion.

Morf added that the class has obtained the Sky Room of the hotel for the affair. The hotel is located across the street from the Civic Center, on Market Street between Eighth and Ninth Streets.

Counterpoint

Teachers Hate, Purists Berate Vulgar English

By Don Seratti

HOW LONG has it been since you made a seemingly trivial grammatical error while speaking, such as "It is me," and had someone point a reproaching finger in your direction and say, "You mean, 'It is I,' don't you?"

If you make it a point to speak and write flawless English under all circumstances, don't be insulted by this question. It is directed at those who are wont to commit little grammatical peccadilloes from time to time.

If you are one who is compelled to plead guilty to occasional colloquial lapses, it is safe to assume that you are annoyed no little amount when someone hears your error and hastens to correct it ere you slip again.

Are these priggish preservers of grammatical exactitude to be tolerated, or are they overstepping the bounds of social propriety in pointing their accusing fingers? The view of this writer is that although these extremists are carrying their point too far and may some day be invited to walk a figurative plank, some form of regulation of our English usage must be maintained.

On the opposite side of the fence are those who maintain that "The English language is made by those who speak it," and therefore no one can be criticized for a grammatical error because if everyone speaks English as he chooses, there is no such thing as an error in grammar, diction, or structure, notwithstanding the lam-

Touche! Sophs Out For Revenge Against Profs

Although no member of Morf's gang has as yet shown enough intestinal fortitude to volunteer for duty, he has definitely stated that he will field a team with enough moxie and floor ability to make the "faculty floozies" wish they had taken up gardening as a lifetime vocation.

JOSEPH AMORI, director of placement here, who will be the Master of Ceremonies at today's Engineering Recruitment Day.

Businessmen To Recruit College Engineers Today

By Elmer Milligan

Business, industrial and government recruitment and procurement teams from the bay area will convene here today for the fourth annual Engineering Recruitment Day program, Joseph Amori, placement director here, announced last week.

Forty-four recruitment and procurement officers, representing 25 of the largest firms in Northern California, will meet and interview 123 candidates from the engineering graduating classes.

Initiated in 1954 by the college placement service in conjunction with the engineering department, Recruitment Day brings together the leading business, industrial and government organizations of the San Francisco Bay Area in search for engineering talent.

Activities for the day will start with a breakfast and a short orientation period at 8 a.m. in the faculty dining room in Smith Hall, during which college President Louis G. Conlan will welcome the group and introduce the representatives. Amori will serve as master of ceremonies.

Each engineering graduate will have a choice of ten firms whom he chooses to interview. The interview will last 20 minutes, Amori said.

This is the only college in the west where 25 or 30 firms assemble together at one time. This year, eight new firms will participate in the Recruitment Day program, Amori stated.

"Employers will have the use of a personnel folder, which includes a personal data sheet, five personal rating sheets, and other material to assist the interviewers in selecting the job applicant for possible future employment," he declared.

Among the many recruitment and procurement officers to assemble here today will be two of the college's engineering graduates, Harvey Tom and Milt Spiro.

Tom, who was interviewed last year as an engineering candidate, is now assistant foreman of the electronics assembly at the Ampex Corporation. Before coming to the college, he was an Air Force Master Sergeant. He was graduated from the college last January.

Making a repeat performance this year as a recruitment officer is Spiro. He was graduated from the college in mechanical engineering and is a design engineer at Western Gear Corp.

The following firms will participate in the program:

Ampex Corp., Bechtel Corp., State of California, Department of Public Works (Division of Highways, District IV), California State Personnel Board, Henry Dolger Builder, Inc., Fitzi-McCullough Inc., Hewlett-Packard Corp., International Business Machines Corp., E. O. Lawrence Radiation Labs, Lenkurt Electric Co. Inc., Litton Industries, Lockheed Aircraft Corp., Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (S.F. Division & Area), Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co.

Pan-American World Airways, Rogers Engineering Co., Sandia Corp., San Francisco Brewing Corp., Standard Oil Co. of California, Sylvania Micro Wave Lab., U. S. Forest Service (Calif. Region), Varian Associates and Western Gear Corp.

By Doan Bernstein

Command of the St. Francis Hotel, the dream of any hotel and restaurant major, comes true this Friday as the eighth annual "Operation St. Francis" goes into action.

Twenty-four H&R fourth-semester students and 10 students from other college departments will participate in the yearly affair, at the invitation of the hotel, according to Lawrence B. Wong, H&R placement director. Accompanying the students to the hotel will be President Louis G. Conlan, Louis Batmale, dean of Semiprofessional Courses here, and Wong.

Key positions within the hotel's framework, from general manager through the ranks, including Mural Room captain, purchasing and personnel department managers, executive chef, chief engineer and many other fields, will be occupied by students who will work in close cooperation with members of the hotel staff regularly assigned those jobs.

Wong pointed out that the famous hotel's managing director, Dan E. London, inaugurated this event eight years ago to offer H&R students a realistic and invaluable experience by letting them take the reins and run for themselves a large metropolitan hotel. Wong credited London and David Plant, assistant general manager, for their extreme cooperation and assistance in offering this unequaled opportunity to H&R students.

Selected to sit behind London's desk was William Romney. His immediate staff will be Bill Terry, fulfilling Plant's job for the day, and Charles Ganley, who will be financial manager, a post held by George Love.

Participants in the program will meet at 9 a.m. in the lobby of the St. Francis, and they will be welcomed by London. Wong said. Conducted tours will be made throughout the entire building, thus giving the students an opportunity to observe the functioning of all phases of the hotel. Directly after the tours, students will assume their stations and start the day's work.

"The students will mostly observe," Wong said, "however, they will be afforded an excellent opportunity to gain perception and insight on hotel affairs, and they will handle certain tasks which will be of vital importance to them."

Following a luncheon, the students will continue their jobs until 4 p.m., at which time they will adjourn to one of the rooms where a social hour will take place, and a critique of the day's events will informally be held. Individual department heads will be on hand, as well as all students, to discuss problems and other situations which were encountered throughout the day.

Members from journalism, public relations and photography classes here will work with the hotel's publicity and promotion department, learning the internal operation and over-all method of hotel public relations. Engineering students and a criminology major will also be present, the former working in the hotel's refrigeration plant, the latter assisting the hotel detective.

"The fundamental purpose of the event," Wong added, "is not only to acquaint students with their chosen vocation, but also to give members of the student hotel staff and allied departments pointers on better hotel operation."

Council Debates AS Privileges, Bank, Bermudas

By Roy Twitty

Bermuda shorts, student bank efficiency, and a new outline of privileges of Associated Student card holders, were legislative items requiring action by Student Council last week.

Askanee looks and tongue-in-cheek objections were raised by one student councilman against the wording of a proposed amendment to the AS constitution by-laws. Voted upon yesterday by all interested AS members, the section in controversy states that all Associated Student card holders may attend any AS sponsored event "unless deemed otherwise."

Designed to counter charges of inefficiency in the student bank, results of a recent investigation conducted by the council have been submitted to the college administration. Included with the results were eight suggestions for improvement in banking operations formulated by a special committee and the Inter-Fraternity Council.

Legs of students here are now to be completely covered on campus, in classes, and at all college affairs, according to a resolution adopted by the Student Council last Thursday. Spelling doom for bermuda shorts, the resolution states that men students will wear only slacks in good condition, which has been defined by council as any trousers excluding tattered levis. Women also will be restricted from wearing bermudas.

John Rosso, Jr., Publicity Committee chairman here in Spring '57, was recently injured in an auto accident in Marin County. He is now in fair condition in Marin General Hospital.

Rosso was a member of the graduating class of Fall '57 and was a reporter for The Guardsman. The accident apparently occurred when Rosso lost control of his car while coming up the Waldo Grade, and the car slid down the slope and overturned, trapping him beneath.

Awards Presentation To Highlight Council Dinner

Awards presentation will highlight the Student Council dinner to be held in Smith Hall tonight beginning at 6:30 o'clock. Three surprise awards will be given to two deserving faculty members and one student not connected directly with Student Council for outstanding service. The names of these winners will not be announced until the last minute.

Making its unified stand, the reigning student government will install the newly elected executive officers and turn over their gavels and power.

'Snow Show' Awards To Feature Feminine Fling Tomorrow Night

An invitation is being extended to all women students to attend the Associated Women Student Feminine Fling Ski Fever, from 7:15 to 9:30 p.m. tomorrow, according to Pat Hawkins, AWS entertainment chairman.

In an atmosphere depicting a favorite winter sport, Smith Hall will be converted into a winter resort lodge housing make-believe skiers.

The Viking Sport Center will provide entertainment by means of a fashion show, films on skiing, and instructions for beginners as well as veterans.

Later in the evening, the new Inter-Sorority Council president, AWS president, and Recreation Association president will be introduced.

Refreshments will be served to guests at tables by sorority hostesses.

"The 'fling' will be a stag night for women students where they can get to know each other better, so everyone should come or they'll be missing a terrific opportunity," Miss Hawkins stated.

Rally Set To Promote Coming Basketball Tilt

Helping to get students into the basketball spirit for the opening league game against Contra Costa Friday night, a rally is scheduled to take place that day in the men's gymnasium from 10 to 11:30 a.m. during a double college hour.

Tickets for the game are on sale in Smith Hall by members of the Rally Committee, and buses will provide transportation to Contra Costa for the 8 p.m. event.

Reservoir Parking Lot In Early 1957—Before Asphalt

Students Test U-Boat Jalopies As Dare Devils Enjoy Splashy Sport

By Lee Anderson

The opening of the reservoir as a parking lot has made a really big splash with some fun-loving students . . . especially since the rains came, to quote Somerset Maugham.

To be sure, the water show has been most amusing to many of the students who have a bird's-eye view, from the third floor of Science Hall, of the hot-rod dare-devils as they take to the water, in their souped-up jalopies.

Figure eights, water spray, and coughing motors combine to make the most unusual spectacle near this campus . . . or possibly any other. These mad capers have left many of the onlookers wondering.

One student commented that he thought perhaps the water sport was actually a scientific experiment . . . that the young geniuses were trying to develop a new speed car wash method. This sounds plausible except there is a limited number of open reservoirs in the Bay Area.

Possibly, if they are to be considered as fearless men of science, a new water-proof motor is in the process of being developed. One that will give top performance on land and sea. The new machine could be called amphibious—only it was developed some years ago by the Army.

This astounding news means that the young scientists are years behind the Army. They would undoubtedly have greater success working on rockets. At least, they'd have an even start.

Whatever the reasons may be, as the rains continue, and the far end of the reservoir fills, the fever climbs, and the show goes on.

NO! THIS IS NOT A PICTURE of Hiawatha paddling across Crater Lake to an island rendezvous with Minnehaha; nor is it a hideout for fanatical U-boat captains. It's a shot of our own Phelan Avenue reservoir turned parking lot just one short year ago before the asphalt was laid. Now with the solid bottom, the depth could easily go to two fathoms, which would make it interesting if students had rod through the thus far shallow water again as they did last week.—Guardsman photo by Diane Schubert.

Wider College Representation Achieved With Increased Vote

ELECTIONS here at City College, or for that matter throughout the nation, haven't been very successful in the past as far as the percentage of voters is concerned.

Remedies for this appalling situation have been sought here, but to no avail, since semester after semester the same problem arises and the only interested parties appear to be the candidates themselves, their close friends and a few loyal students who maintain an interest in their college's welfare and leadership.

In this semester's balloting, which terminated yesterday after a two-day appearance, there is a strong indication, however, that times have changed and that a greater percentage of Associated Student card holders have taken an active interest in the elections.

An extensive campaign featuring colorful posters (covering every conceivable empty niche on the campus and completely obliterating one's view through the main windows), public address system publicity, a record-equalling number of 46 candidates, four AS presidential hopefuls, a special election edition of The Guardsman (never done before), the formulation of a three party system, the use of voting machines, and the keyed-up attitude of the aspirants to the 20 vacant offices resulted in one of the keenest and cleverest campaigns ever conducted at Ocean and Phelan.

Even more important though, is the fact that you, the students of City College, will benefit greatly from the ballot session by being assured of a top-flight staff of student government leaders for the Spring 1959 semester no matter who is fortunate enough to win his office.

Does President Need Dictatorial TV Power?

By Dick Dyer

LAST YEAR television hit a new high in popularity, brought fame to new faces and new fame to old faces. But 1958 was a year in which one man was seldom seen — the President of the United States.

The reason for this is the little known but controversial matter of having to pre-empt regular network shows in order to telecast a special message by the President. In Russia, the Soviet leaders may pre-empt any and all programs whenever they desire, but it is just not done that way in the United States.

"I hope the time never comes when it will be," is the view taken by James C. Hagerty, the Presidential Press Secretary, on the subject.

In a recent TV article, Hagerty stated that the President would, of course, pre-empt all networks in case of a national emergency, but that there has not been such an emergency since Eisenhower took office.

Yet TV Guide in an editorial a few months ago blamed Hagerty for not canceling all network shows one September night when the President made his historic Formosa speech. The editors scorned the Press Secretary's decision to carry the speech live on one station only as "deplorable" and "shocking." Many TV viewers also thought that Hagerty was wrong in not insisting that the message be televised live on all networks.

The arrangement with the networks is on a strictly "voluntary" basis, explained Hagerty. He said that the stations are notified in advance, given an idea what the speech is about, and then they are asked to telecast it. "It's up to them to decide whether they want to carry it," he announced, adding that a network has not refused yet.

Occasionally, when all stations carry live broadcasts it is because the network, not the White House, decided that the speech was sufficiently important to telecast. This writer wonders what would happen if the networks did refuse a time spot to the Chief Executive.

Congress, nevertheless, could enact legislation enabling the White House to force networks to relinquish air time when the Administration saw fit. But as Hagerty sees it, "I would hate to see such a law . . . it would be dangerous . . ."

This leads to the problem of exactly how an address by the President should be televised. Hagerty believes the best method is to have one station carry it live and the other two stations show it on video tape later in the evening.

He states that in this way, it saves the networks money, pleases the majority of people, and is shown to a larger audience, besides the fact that a taped re-run is often clearer than a live broadcast.

Concerning the Presidential news conferences, the Press Secretary feels

Carved Initials Latest Twist To Creative Beauty

Initials scratched into the signature of Fred Olmstead, creator of the "Theory and Science" Murals in Science Hall, are a vague recording left perhaps by an alumnus who wished to be remembered.

Man, strangely enough, has always had this urge to record, so others would experience his ideas, thoughts and feeling for earthly things.

From the first age of reasoning to the present he has tried to preserve these inspirations. He has built monuments, chiseled into stone, written books, and even invented a ballpoint pen that writes underwater.

A long, long time ago a cave man picked up a sharp rock and ripped the stone into the wall of his suburban home and, artistically enough drew a reasonable facsimile of an encounter he had had on his way home from work.

He wasn't trying to improve the appearance of his domain, nor was he trying to win a Pulitzer Prize art award. With this crude tool he was trying to get a point across to someone, the communication of which was limited to a grunting vocabulary.

Samples of this cave man art were acceptable during that earlier era. Today, the scratching and scribbling on public properties, particularly works of art, is considered vandalism, and not art. To remove and restore damaged properties is expensive and time-consuming. An appropriation from the School Department funds would be a squeeze on the public through tax assessment. When such a thing happens, everyone is unhappy.

Accordingly, when in 1960, the Arts Building is constructed on the campus, the Rivera Mural, now in cold storage in the men's gymnasium, is to be unveiled and brought to rest in the Arts Building. In the plans for the building, steps have been taken toward the protection of this mural, calling for a protective railing to hold back prospective intruders.

Dr. Oscar Anderson, co-ordinator of Educational Management, feels that this plan may serve with little value. "With a little imagination, one might use the rail as a perch to reach higher," he commented.

Anderson is not too pessimistic about the problem; it is his theory that all colleges are similar to each other. "The underclassmen always follow the examples of the upperclassmen. When the sophomores set the right example, then the small minority responsible for threatening campus properties will dissolve."

Students Show Leadership In Cuban Plot

Rebel Lawyer Stamps Out Long Regime Of Terror

By Pastor Valle-Garay, Feature Editor

Sandwiched between a brand new year of uncertain destiny and a brand new Russian planet going nowhere in particular, a bearded man's ideals reached their goal to take over the world's newspapers' headlines as he freed his country from 25 years of tyranny.

Thirty-two year old Fidel Castro, a graduate of the University of Cuba's school of law, has rid the sugar-rich nation of her long time master and dictator, Fulgencio Batista.

Two years of savage, bloody fighting in the Cuban jungles did it but the end of Batista's reign of terror appeared to justify the revolution and the people's cry was, "Cuba is free again. Cuba lives again!"

Following Castro's coup, scores of political prisoners, among them university and secondary school students, professionals and just plain "enemies" of Batista, regained their freedom and the right to live decently in their own land. They, as well as hundreds of political exiles, can again walk the streets of Havana without fear of being shot, arrested or deported on the spot, according to consular sources in San Francisco.

Some of these people, because of their professional abilities, were appointed to head important posts in the nation's new revolutionary government as soon as they left their jail cells. Others have been hospitalized in order to nurse the tortures suffered while "boarding" in Batista's jails.

Batista himself, born a poor man, has fled Cuba to the haven of all Latin American dictators, the Trujillos-owned Dominican Republic. He took with him his family, his close followers and a fortune of 200 million dollars, very likely acquired while in power.

Meanwhile, Manuel Urrutia, a former judge, has been appointed Cuba's Provisional President replacing Batista. Castro himself, reportedly, does not care for power, yet Urrutia has appointed him chief of the armed forces—a position which, as the situation stands now, no one but the youthful lawyer, so popular with the people, could better hold.

All of Batista's government officials have been fired and the students of Cuba again proved their interest in the welfare of the nation as, once the revolution was over, they momentarily took over the presidential palace demanding that Castro's high command state their new policies. This done, the Cuban students turned over the palace and the University of Havana to the revolutionary government apparently satisfied with the measures the Castro government were going to take in the future.

Castro immediately lifted martial law in Cuba, proclaimed freedom of the press in an almost unlimited manner, and offered free elections within 18 months.

So far, his revolution carries all the promises of a true move toward democracy — something Cuba hasn't known in decades. His overthrowing of the government has been widely acclaimed by the politicians, statesmen and students, especially those of Latin America, as well as those of many other countries of the world.

One thing Castro's revolt accomplished for sure was a total clean up of the corrupt Batista government.

Meanwhile, one can be sure that the students of Cuba will keep a watchful eye on the state of things in the sugar-rich nation. They fought alongside Castro for that freedom and they died with many of his men for it.

Latin students have always played a rather important role in the turns Latin American governments take. One cannot but hope their two years of fighting in the Cuban jungles will prove worthwhile.

Study-er Getting Raw Deal From Library Tourists

By Ellen Heflin

The library, a one time storeroom of knowledge, has been invaded by people who don't use it for its original purpose.

Five general types of people make up the "inhabitants" of the college's library: the "talker," the "snatcher," the "looker," the "fidgiter" and, last and especially least, the "study-er."

The "talker" is recognized, of course, by her voice, which is heard throughout the library. She can't think of a thing to say before she goes in, but, once she's there, any unsuspecting friend had better be prepared.

In close competition with the "talker" is the "snatcher," who is often one and the same person. She is recognized by her swivel neck. Being a little more careful than the ordinary, plain "talker," she's always on the lookout for the "sneaky" librarians who always seem to be around when she has to say something "important."

The "looker" is a strange species. He goes into the library to stare. He stares at everything and anything for no apparent reason other than to make people uncomfortable.

Every now and then he picks out a special victim and stares at her until she is positive that something is most definitely wrong with herself.

She in turn becomes the "fidgiter." Her claim to fame is the forever hair-patting, seat-switching, foot-tapping, and ominous humming. This type of person could be classified as bored if she weren't so frustrated!

The hardest to find is the "study-er." Considered square in some circles because he passes exams and never cuts classes, this final addition to the menagerie is the most affected of the group.

The irony of the whole thing is that in the part of the library where students are permitted to talk, it's very difficult to find any except the study-er.

Film Adds New Life To Age Old Curiosity

Things seen through the microscope are fascinating in the extreme. Tiny specks of life, known as bacteria, have intrigued men since their discovery in the nineteenth century. Now, interested parties can photograph these ofttimes carriers of disease and use the pictures and slides for advanced study and identification.

Zoology 3, microscopy and photomicrography, instruct the student in preparing the subject matter, photographing it and then developing the film. All of this work is done in Science Hall, where the classrooms are located. If prints of the shots are desired, the photography department in Cloud Hall lends its facilities and equipment for the job.

Hard-Hitting Cagers Wind Up Exhibition Schedule With Pair Of Victories During Holidays

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Moving into their final dry run before invading the star-studded Modesto classic, Sid Phelan's hard-hitting Ram cagers came out with the last word in how to win ball games and closed out one of the college's most successful exhibition seasons by way of a pair of dumpings of Riverside College and the Black Panthers of Chaffey on the 2nd and 3rd days of the New Year, respectively.

In the opener, the top half of a joint hosting effort on the part of the locals and the Thunderbirds of Oakland, the Red and White hardwooders found their hands full of nothing but dynamite from the opening tipoff as an all-out Ram effort was not quite enough to contain the phenomenal performance of a fired-up quintet of Riverside Tigers, who riddled the East Bay buckets nearly at will, and left the floor with a slim 27-25 margin at intermission.

Continuing on into the final 20 minutes of play, the second stanza appeared to hold little change over the first. The lead changed hands a total of five times, with Bill Simmons, George Shewl and Vince Rocchi literally trading bucket for bucket with southerners Frank Dixon and Bill Weese.

With nine seconds remaining on the electric scoreboard Weese splashed in an 18 foot jumper to put the Tigers up by 58-56, and seemingly sew up the market for the Angelinos. The Rams had other ideas on their minds, however, and a hurried inbound pass coupled with a time out brought the ball to mid-court with eight seconds remaining.

Simmons was short and to the right on a 15-footer cleared off by Vern Coleman, who, with his back to the can, threw a split second fake to his right, and then riddled the mesh with a right hook which was eventually to spell the complete doom of the Tigers via a 67-63 overtime victory.

Shewl was high for the affair with 18 markers, followed by Simmons and Rocchi with 13 and 10, respectively, while Dixon topped the loosers with eight from the floor for 16.

The T-Birds overcame a bad case of first half defensive jitters which saw Chaffey battle its way to a half-time count of 38-38 to move on to a comparatively easy 87-68 verdict.

The Thunderbirds, bolstered by the infallible shooting of Russ Wickwire and All-Northern California returnee Rufus Hawkins, found little trouble in disposing of Riverside by a 64-47 verdict, and returned to the East Bay campus with little, if any, respect for the southern ambassadors.

The nightcap made It Bay Area all the way, as Simmons and Cleo Cofield teamed up on some of the hottest shooting the week-end had seen, belting out 24 and 14, respectively, to lead their mates to a 65-62 decision that, despite the tight score, was never in doubt at any time.

With slightly over two minutes to play, the red hot Phelanmen were sitting on top of the world with a 64-54 lead that seemed much more than insurmountable to all concerned. Batting no more for victory, but rather to diminish the amount of disgrace, the Panthers put together three successive tallies to set the count at 64-60 with some 33 seconds between them and the showers.

On the final bucket, however, Wally Wakeman was cited for illegally colliding with Sylvester Bruce, the latter calmly tanking the charity toss, and, although Jerry Lenahan managed to find the mark from 30 feet out, the contest was already in the books, and the Rams had wrapped up their ninth victory of the current campaign, against only three setbacks.

Although having lost to San Jose by 54-43 at Bakersfield, as well as to a powerful Utah national basketball at Santa Maria, the only time the locals looked halfway poor had to be when they dropped a 69-49 affair to a tough St. Mary's frosh contingent, after trailing by but one at the half.

Holding impressive wins over such tough outfits as USF frosh and the Cal Blues, as well as having set back Marin, Vallejo, and the UC frosh, to name but a few, Coach Phelan seems to hold the cards in his hand when he says that this club has plenty more on the stick than last year's Big Eight runner-up. Only time and the circuit openers against Contra Costa and Oakland will prove him right or wrong.

RAMBLINGS

By George Grasso

BIGWIGS from the NBA are probing into the San Francisco hills to find out just how much gold is left in California.

The Forty-Niners have been mining the area for quite a while, and recently the Giants set up diggings, which leaves the basketball industry wondering if there are any good claims left. Their most recent sounding out was with a professional league basketball game between Boston and Minneapolis.

By now it is obvious that San Francisco is ripe for professional basketball, and, as soon as it becomes more than obvious, the slow moving NBA must realize this. The numerous financial offers to back a franchise did not seem to speed up their decision, but it should be difficult to ignore the sell-out crowd of 14,000 at the Cow Palace for the professional tilt.

The call of the Pacific Coast sports entertainment dollar is a strong call which cannot be denied.

San Franciscans welcomed home Bill Russell, his teammate Bob Cousey, and the rest of the Boston Celtics, when they took on Elgin Baylor and the Minneapolis Lakers at the Cow Palace last Sunday in the first National Basketball Association contest ever played west of St. Louis.

The Celtics won the overtime thriller from the Lakers in the NBA Western debut by a score of 109 to 106.

Ex-USF star Russell's domination of the backboards made him one of the great stars of the game, along with the incomparable Cousey. Elgin Baylor, West Coast rookie from Seattle University, and currently a Laker, gave a commendable performance, scoring 15 points and getting 18 rebounds.

Shields Harasses East Eleven; West Wins Game 33-14

Facing some of the finest linemen in two-year college football, L. C. Shields, mainstay of the college's line and winner of All-Big Eight honors, continually harassed the enemy passing attack to help lead the Western eleven to a 33-14 rout of the East's best in the third annual junior college All-American East-West game at Stockton on December 20.

Shields, who played both ways in the classic, labeled the distinction of being a member of the West squad as "a great opportunity and honor." Shields felt that every man on the team was worthy of the title "All-American," not simply because of playing skills but also because of cooperation as team players. The teamwork of the Western team was attested by the amount of sustained drives they carried out in their one-sided victory.

The West squad was composed entirely of players from California colleges, while the East was made up of men from 10 other states. Both squads built their attacks around air power, with the West featuring the passing of Santa Monica Junior College's Pat Young, who previously guided his home team to victory in the Little Rose Bowl.

Shields pressured East quarterback Gerry Ripkowski of Del Mar Junior College in Corpus Christi, Texas, throughout the contest. Shields broke through the opposition and forced Ripkowski to fire long before he was ready. The Texas passer completed fewer than 50 per cent of his attempts.

Cofield Stars As Rams Take Fourth In Modesto Tourney; San Jose Wins Crown, 76-70

By Nick Peters, Editor

Losing their last two games, Sid Phelan's Ram cagers still managed to salvage a fourth place finish in the Twenty-first Annual Junior College Basketball Tournament held at Modesto last week.

San Jose staged a brilliant comeback after trailing 68-56 with five minutes to play to upset Long Beach 76-70 for the title.

Unable to defend the title they won last year the college's court contingent can thank Cleo Cofield for making the finals, since it was his 15-foot jumper with one second of action remaining which gave his teammates a 57-57 standoff with Cerritos' Falcons at the end of regulation play in their first round engagement.

Cofield, "the man with the golden arm," sparked a second half rally by scoring all of his 15 points after the intermission. Rebounding from a 33-19 halftime deficit the locals pulled to a 55-55 tie with 21 seconds left. Falcon forward Scott Iverson tanked a two-pointer which forged his mates to a 57-55 lead as the clock showed :05.

With three seconds to go the ball was put in play at mid-court. Cofield took the guard's pass, faked to his right, dribbled into the left corner, shot a jumper from 15 feet which swished through the mesh just as the buzzer sounded, and the hero's mantel was his for giving the college a stay of execution.

Defeat, however, was not in the books as center George Shewl scored 8 out of 11 overtime points for a 68-65 win. Shewl was the game's high-point man with 24 and also cleared the boards 14 times for that leadership.

As a second round opponent the Rams met El Camino's Warriors, 88-78 conquerors of Sacramento in the tourney's inaugural contest.

Another case of first half jitters had the Rams in arrears once more, as the teams left the court after the first half. The Warriors, who trailed 18-13 after 10, checked the Rams with only 7 points in the last 10 minutes of the initial half for a 26-25 margin at the break.

That lead was short-lived as the Rams, behind Cofield's 15 second half points and some tight defense by "Wild Bill" Simmons, Sylvester Bruce and Mel Wilson, plus excellent board work by Shewl and Cofield, swept to a commanding 47-30 lead with eight to go. El Camino could not do much better after that as they dropped a 60-46 decision.

Cofield was the key again with 21 points and 11 rebounds. Shewl followed with 15 markers and led on the boards with 13.

In their semi-final battle the Rams were to face the winner of the Allan Hancock-Long Beach fray. As it turned out, Long Beach outfought the bulldogs 78-64 before a packed house in what witnesses called the greatest basketball game ever played at the annual tournament.

Much to the surprise of the gallery the Rams played a terrific contest against the Vikings from Long Beach and lost out by an eyelash, 51-49, on a three-foot jumper by forward Stan Anderson with one second remaining in a game that saw the lead change hands 19 times and tied 11.

Ten minutes into the game the Vikes displayed a slim 14-13 advantage but a Cofield jumper pushed the Rams ahead, 15-14. Guard Bill Ellis, who could go up with the best of them, pushed a 20-foot jumper down the Rams' throat for 16-15, but Cofield couldn't be outdone so he followed with another jump shot for 17-16. The college's five hiked the count to 23-18, but the Vikes, with Anderson and Ellis leading the way narrowed the margin and with 3 seconds left Ellis sank another of his patented 20-footers to give the Southerners a 24-23 lead at the half.

Starting second stanza action, Cofield knotted the count at 24 all with a charity, but center Diek Markowitz, the tourney's' MVP, volleyed for 26-24. Bruce, who had his finest hour in this game, and Simmons traded buckets with Ellis, Markowitz and forward Stacy Higgins and at the mid-point of the half the battle was tied at 35-35.

At 9:50 Bruce sent the Rams one up with a foul stripe success, then followed with a driving jump for 38-35. Cofield added a charity and Anderson, a thorn in the Rams' side all game, hit two in a row to pull the teams even. Ellis hit a jumper, Bruce tied it, guard Bob Berry put the Vikes ahead with another jump shot, Bruce hit two free throws to tie it once more. Ellis scored another jumper, and Bruce unbelievably again tallied the equalizer on a right-handed hook from the left side for 45-45 with about 1:20 left.

Shewl was fouled by Ellis and made his two shots to put the locals ahead, 47-45. Berry tied it on a drive, but Shewl retaliated with another fielder to give the college a lead for the last time, 49-47. Higgins made it 49-49 with a tip-in and with :18 remaining the Rams called for a time out.

Bruce inbounded to Iles, who found Shewl clear in the right corner. The 6-2 pivot received the ball and, with :10 left, shot a 20-foot set from the corner which hit the rim and was rebounded by Ellis, who called for time out at :08.

Putting the ball in play Coach Charlie Church's plan of attack was to set up Ellis for a jump shot. At :03 the 6-2 guard-forward took a 25-footer which bounced high off the rim into the outstretched hands of Anderson, who wasted no time in throwing the melon through the net for a 51-49 victory as the buzzer buzzed.

Bruce was unstoppable as he contributed 22 points to the Ram effort, while Simmons did a magnificent job on Markowitz—limiting him to a season low of 9 points. On the other side of the ledger Anderson and Ellis tied for high point honors with 16 apiece.

In the battle for third place a cold Ram five was clobbered 64-40 by the Contra Costa Comets after trailing by 23-36 at the intermission.

Guard Bob Van Hook staked the Richmonders to their comfortable margin at halftime as he made 16 of his 18 points in the initial stanza. Tyler Wilbon was a nemesis all night with 16 points scored mostly on 20-foot jumpers a la Elgin Baylor. Simmons was the only Ram scoring threat with 20 digits.

Scoring leaders for the Rams in four games were Cofield (52), Shewl (47), Simmons (46), and Bruce (40). Rebound leaders were Shewl (41) and Cofield (36), Simmons played some excellent defense against the opponents' big men but, except for the last game left plenty to be desired on offense.

Rockets Outclass Gammas To Win AMS Cage Title

Rickey Ross' Rockets, Club Activities Board champions, easily won the Associated Men Students' intramural basketball crown by defeating Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Inter-Fraternity Council titleholders, 64-44, in a contest played last December.

An outstanding effort, although in vain, was turned in by the Gammas' Dennis Shutter as he led his team with 15 markers.

Tied with Phi Beta Delta at the termination of season play with an identical 6-1 slate, the Gammas were given the IFC nod as a result of their regular season 31-28 decision over the Phi Delts. Alpha Phi Epsilon and Lambda Phi also finished in the black with admirable 5-2 marks.

Rickey Ross handily dominated CAB play with the Filipino Club, Recreation Association and Hotel & Restaurant second best at 4-2.

Joe Cumagon of the Filipino Club took CAB scoring honors with 97 points in six games for a 16.2 average. The 5-9 sharpshooter moved away from the field with 41 points in his last two tilts. Phi Delta's Ed O'Donnell captured the IFC point parade with 93 in 7 for 13.3 after leading the pack most of the way.

Hoopsters Clash With Comets, Oaks In Openers

"When the going gets rugged, the rugged get going," is a phrase which might well typify the outlook of Ram cage boss Sid Phelan and his forces as they head for the East Bay to tangle with a pair of the most rugged Big Eight contingents in their circuit openers next week.

Come this Friday at 8 p.m., the Red and White charges invade Richmond to square off with Rudy Hansen's Comets of Contra Costa in a contest which is a must for the local five if they hope to keep astride of the heralded Oakland Thunderbirds and eventually grab the conference flag.

Although the Comets might appear somewhat less than a serious threat to Ram domesticity, their two-point loss to a St. Mary's frosh quintet, which dumped the Phelan charges by 20, definitely sets them as contenders to be reckoned with.

Lacking only the services of All-Big Eight veteran Cornell Green, who is saving his eligibility for major collegiate ball, the Blue and White forces boast one of the strongest front lines in the loop in returning campaigners Lonnie Johnson, Tyler Wilbon and Mike Lafferty. Should Johnson and Wilbon continue hitting the way they have been throughout their exhibition slate, the Rams will definitely find their hands full.

As for next Tuesday night's encounter with the Thunderbirds, the Oaklanders' past record speaks for itself—they are far and away the toughest outfit in not only the Big Eight, but all three Northern California circuits as well.

Boardwise, Ram stalwarts George Shewl, Bill Simmons and Cleo Cofield will have their work cut out for them, going up against the rugged duet of Russ Wiekwire and Joe Johnson.

T-Bird Rufus Hawkins, All-Big Eight returnee, stands as the beginning, middle and end of the Oakland attack. His talents are too numerous to mention. He's the best.—P. O'S.

Ram Basketball Records Show Odd Stats; Shewl Team Leader

Although recording an admirable 9-3 record in practice game efforts, a look at the Ram basketball statistics (not including Modesto's Tourney) will reveal some unprecedented tabulations.

Another unusual statistic finds opponents scoring 30 more field goals than the Rams, but this 60-point deficit is surpassed by the college's 162-100 lead in free throws.

Board supremacy played a key role in many victories. The shorter and more agile locals outmusceled their opposition for a 387-317 lead in rebounds —an average of 5.9 more per game.

The scoring stats:

Clubs Limit Activities After Holidays To Officer Elections, Preparation For Coming Finals

By Kathie Burns

WITH 1959 here, the time has come for writing term papers, studying for finals, and slowing down the mad social whirl that characterizes the New Year and Christmas holidays. Clubs, fraternities, and sororities are slowing down this whirl with election of officers and a limited number of activities this month.

Alpha Phi Omega held its installation banquet recently at the Fort Scott Officers' Club. New officers installed were Gene Bunch, president; Ralph Shouts and Mike Maddox, vice-presidents; Walt Pearce, Walt Schaeffer and Pete Pedrotti Jr., secretaries; Norm Singer, treasurer; Pete Pedrotti Sr., historian, and George Carlino, sergeant-at-arms.

New officers of Zeta Chi sorority, elected after the recent pinning dinner, are Roberta Kennedy, president; Vickie Torni, vice-president; Nancy Canning, corresponding secretary; Linda Rogers, recording secretary; Sorelle Lowe, treasurer; Lynn Gannon, historian, and Joan Lloyd, alumnae liaison.

The college's women's service society, Gamma Sigma Sigma, also held elections for the coming semester. These officers are Liz Hegan, president; Nancy Canning, first vice-president; Jean Melick, second vice-president; Jean Freese, recording secretary; Judy Davidson, corresponding secretary; Joan Roggero, treasurer, and Norah Chaver, historian.

Sixth Army Band Presents Special Concert Friday

One event of this semester's double College Hour, Friday in the college's library, is a concert by the Sixth Army Band from the Presidio of San Francisco under the direction of Chief Warrant Officer Louis Ferraro, according to Robert Morton of the college's music department.

Several numbers will be presented by the 40 to 50 men comprising the band. There will also be special solo numbers with various instruments, Morton added.

Despite delay, hesitation, and debate the program has now been definitely scheduled. Questions as to a possible conflict of dates for the band have been resolved and a special program has been arranged especially for the college. Every student is urged to attend this presentation, Morton said.

11 Art Students Vie For Advertising Scholarship

One of 11 students being graduated this semester as an advertising art major is in line for a scholarship for further art study, according to William Eckert, advertising art instructor here.

Eckert will announce the name of the winner next week.

Library Sets Jan. 21 As Deadline For Books

All books and magazines must be returned to the library by next Wednesday, January 21, according to Irene Mensing, reference librarian here.

During finals week, the library will be open as usual from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and students may withdraw books for overnight use only.

Counterpoint: Standards Of Usage

entations of purists, educators, and interested laymen. This outlook, however, reveals some flaws which will be exposed in the following paragraphs and which may suffice to preclude its general acceptance.

On the other hand, there is a great need for the continuation of general standards which are now observed and which most of us recognize and adhere to. Have you ever pondered what utter chaos would result from a relaxation of our current language restrictions? That is, if English teachers were to stop insisting on proper usage in speaking and writing, and if publishers and editors were to condone the widespread use of unorthodox words and styles in print.

Even today,—with regulation of usage almost taken for granted, we can find evidence of the consequences of a lack of complete uniformity. For example, when an American goes to England he scratches his head trying to divine the meaning of "chemist," "lift," and "tube," for which in this country he would say "druggist," "elevator," and "subway." Even in different areas of our own country we hear words, pronunciations and colloquial expressions we've never heard before.

At the present time we hear of many misunderstandings resulting from various people's different interpretations of word meanings. And the spelling and grammar customs of various sections of the United States are not without their differences, despite current efforts to achieve standardization. It seems, therefore, that those who advocate a relaxation of regulations would bring about much more confusion than already exists.

If teachers, editors and publishers were suddenly to proclaim, "Henceforth, everyone may speak and write English as he pleases," we would find people consciously and unconsciously coining new words to suit their individual purposes but which would be understood by very few others. Everyone might begin to write like William Faulkner, whose style isn't the easiest to comprehend. People from California traveling in New York might not be able to understand the natives and would feel more at home in a foreign country. In short, the ability to communicate successfully would become a virtually lost art.

People who now wish to liberalize our language would probably appreciate its current restrictions if ever the day came when they could not make themselves understood to others.

If we can eliminate the pedantic extremists who pounce on us for the slightest grammatical error and make our lives unpleasant, and if we can come to appreciate the reason why we study English and adhere to certain standards of usage, we may decide that a few rules aren't so bad after all.

Laughs Ring In New Drama

Award Winning Comedy Plays To Jammed Theater

By Jim Clifford

Playing to a packed house, the Little Theater drew an endless barrage of laughs at an appreciative opening night audience last Friday as they presented the zany, prize-winning comedy, You Can't Take It With You, their second production of the semester.

The Little Theater group bounced back and dumped more laughs into the laps of another packed house the next night. The play's publicity director, Dave Terry, warned that those seeking reservations for the showings on January 17, 30 or 31 should make them as soon as possible, "Because tickets are almost gone for the remaining performances."

The story centers around a wealthy stockbroker who feels he hasn't had enough fun in life, and he and his family throw off the chains of conformity and do exactly as they please.

John Rose is cast as Martin Vanderhoff, the retired broker. His favorite pastime is going to the zoo or watching local commencement exercises. Rose, who previously starred here in The Petrified Forest, plays the aged ex-businessman with outstanding clarity.

Virginia Rae is cast as Penelope Sycamore, Vanderhoff's daughter. She paints, writes and attempts other forms of art—but never finishes any of them.

The Vanderhoff home is a refuge of avocational vocationists. The house becomes a combination ballet studio, munitions factory, music hall and printing shop. Old man Vanderhoff has to dodge everyone from the Department of Internal Revenue to G-Men in order to keep his happy group together.

However, all the time the rest of the family is having fun, a subversive in the group, Alice Sycamore, Penelope's daughter, played by Maureen Rogers, has taken an office job and worked her way up to the boss' son.

Alice invites her fiance's parents to meet her family, and this is where the fun really starts. The typical Wall Streeters don't mix too well with the Vanderhoffs; to top it off, both families land in jail and the FBI finally gets into the act.

Alumna Pat Suzuki Earns Important Role In Rogers And Hammerstein Hit

By Anton Norris

Hungry, anxious and impatient are the words used by Time magazine to describe alumna Pat Suzuki's part in the new Rogers and Hammerstein musical hit, Flower Drum Song, current attracting Broadway theatrical crowds.

Upon completion of the Spring 1950 semester she transferred to San Jose State for the remaining two years of her college education.

After leaving San Jose State, Miss Suzuki traveled to New York where she was given a small part in Teahouse Of The August Moon. While on tour with the road company in Seattle she auditioned and won a job as featured singer at The Colony night club. She was such a success that she remained there until the arrival of her big Broadway opportunity.

Also appearing in the show is Larry Blyden, a student of Miss Badger's when she was directing light opera productions in Hawaii.

College Submits Loan Application

An application for the establishment of a student loan fund here has been submitted to the federal authorities managing the new National Defense Education Act in Washington, Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, announced recently.

As yet, there is no set date for a reply on what federal action will be taken on this application, but Dr. Conlan expressed confidence that there will be news before the beginning of next semester.

The loan fund program is designed to give financial aid to college students who plan to become teachers and to those students with a superior capacity in science and mathematics.

Under the terms of the National Defense Act, eligible students may borrow up to $1,000 per year.

Any institution taking a federal loan must contribute ten per cent of the total amount borrowed from the government. Dr. Conlan added that, if and when the government allots the college money to start a loan fund, the ten per cent contribution will be from the Associated Student fund.

Tryouts For Song Girls January 19

Tryouts for the coming semester's song girls will take place next Monday, January 19, from 2 to 3:30 p.m. in Smith Hall, according to Roberta Kennedy, head song girl.

A minimum of ten women will be chosen on the basis of rhythm, spirit, and co-ordination to form a first and second string, so that six song girls will be participating at all sports functions, she said.

The selected women will be required to carry at least 12 units of work, maintain a "C" average, and be an Associated Student card holder. Upon becoming song girls, the women will be accredited one unit as members of the Rally Committee.

Miss Kennedy stated that she expects a large number of tryouts for song girls for she feels that they are a very important and impressive part of sports activity.

Friday Show Presents Best' Film Of Lincoln

Abraham Lincoln's turbulent and interesting life will be the subject of this Friday's film, entitled The Face Of Lincoln, to be shown during College Hour in S-126.

The film is considered to be an outstanding presentation of the life of Lincoln. It has won several awards including Best Documentary Film and an honorable mention in the Cannes Film Festival.

The uniqueness of the film can be attributed to the combination of art with dialogue. While the narrator highlights Lincoln's life, including flashbacks, a sculptor forms a bust of the Civil War President.

that they should definitely be taped so that they may be checked to avoid the danger of a misstatement which might hurt foreign relations.

Hagerty stated that the President enjoys making a TV appearance and that he has overcome the nervousness he had experienced during his first address.

As for the President's attitude toward TV as an informative medium, he watches news reports and occasionally a re-run of one of his own tapes. According to Hagerty, Ike also enjoys baseball, football, a good Western, play or comedy routine. The Press Secretary added that Mrs. Eisenhower is "a real TV fan".

PG&E Models In Cloud Hall Debut

Cut-away models of P. G. & E.'s huge steam, hydro, and atomic power plants have taken the place of the usual photo display in Cloud Hall's gallery.

These skillfully built and detailed models show much of the structure and equipment that goes into producing electric power and transmitting this energy to points of need.

Along with these models is a small collection of photos showing men and equipment in action. From the lowly pack mule to the powerful "Sno-Cats" and helicopters setting poles in mountainous terrain, from complicated transmission stations to huge reservoirs serving dual duty as water storage tanks and recreational facilities, all phases of the company's various activities and equipment are represented.

This compact but impressive display is all a part of today's Engineering Recruitment Day, and the display is designed to show the different types of work available to the prospective employee.

Independents In By Landslide As Cottrell, Finneran Grab Top Posts; 598 Ballots Cast In Highest Poll Turnout Since Spring 1957

DICK COTTRELL, newly elected Associated Student president.

ANN FINNERAN, Spring, 1959, AS vice-president.

Pera, Basso Move Into Soph, Frosh Presidential Seats

By J. Edward Bing

Independent Party candidate Dick Cottrell was elected Associated Student President last week by a landslide majority of votes. Cottrell and three of his party running-mates copped all four key executive positions in one of the most vigorously-contested elections ever held on campus.

The Independent and Individual-CAB parties shared split victories for Student Council seats, and Individual Party candidates were elected to Freshman and Sophomore Class presidential offices.

Cottrell's victory was overwhelming. He received 265 of the 571 votes cast for AS president, more than double the 124 votes cast for Individual candidate Ben Northrup. IFC candidate Fred Muller got 105 votes, and 79 votes were tallied for Ralph Prior, a non-partisan candidate.

Election Commissioner Gene Bunch said the election brought in the largest number of votes in two years. A total of 598 ballots was tabulated, four more than were counted at a similar election last June.

Ted Keller (Indep.) received 294 votes for Associated Men Student President to top Albert Salamanca (Indiv., 164) in that contest. IFC candidate Tony Bartmann withdrew from the college January 9, too late for that party to nominate another candidate.

Arleen Kardoules (Indep.) tallied 209 votes to nose out runners-up Diane Christoffersen (IFC, 162) and Ann Thuss (Indiv., 141) in the closest race of the two-day contest.

Losing candidates were Don Aspland (IFC, 195), Tessa Thomsen (Indiv., 192), Bill Ecker (Indep., 188), Sharon Lebwitz (Indep., 184), Lou Cooper (Indiv., 166), Stephen Ragle (Indiv., 156), and Barry Solloway (IFC, 132).

Registration For Spring Semester Begins February 9

Registration for the spring semester's returning students will start Monday, February 9, and continue through Tuesday, February 10, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

New students will begin registering after 11 a.m. on February 10 through Wednesday, February 11. Spring semester classes start Friday, February 13, Miss Learnard announced.

Arranged on an alphabetical order basis, the pre-registration numbers this semester give an equal chance to students for low numbers and, consequently, early-day registration instead of the first-come, first-served basis formerly used to obtain registration numbers.

The numbers in order of registering time for Monday, February 9, are 1-700 at 8 a.m.; 701-1600 at 9 a.m.; 1601-2600 at 10 a.m.; 2601-3600 at 11 a.m., and 3601-4500 at 1 p.m., with no registration held at 12 noon at any day.

On Tuesday, February 10, the numbers will be 4501-5300 at 8 a.m.; 5301-6100 at 9 a.m.; 6101-6900 at 10 a.m.; 6901-7700 at 11 a.m.; 1-200 (new students) at 11 a.m., and 201-600 at 1 p.m.

Registration numbers for Wednesday, February 11, are 601-900 at 8 a.m.; 901-1200 at 9 a.m.; 1201-1500 at 10 a.m.; 1501-1800 at 11 a.m., and 1801-2100 at 1 p.m.

Thursday, February 5, from 7 to 10 p.m. is the registration date for night courses, with classes beginning the following Monday.

An orientation rally, scheduled for February 9, will feature The Coachmen, currently at the Purple Onion, as vocal entertainment.

Seratti Moves Up As Editor-In-Chief

Guardsman Managing Editor Don Seratti, heading another all-male editorial staff, was selected Editor-in-Chief for the coming spring semester, following a two-hour January 12 editorial board conference, according to current Editor Nick Peters.

Seratti is well experienced in the journalism field, having previously served as News Editor as well as in his present capacity.

Peters will return to the athletic scene as Sports Editor, a position in which he has already completed two semesters.

Other members of the incoming staff include as Managing Editor, Bill Forshay; News Editor, Albert Salamanca; Feature Editor, Jim Clifford, and Staff Editor, Pat O'Shaughnessy.

Elevated to Staff Writer posts are Donn Bernstein and Roy Twitty.

Alumni Open For New Members

All graduating members of the college, or students who have completed at least one semester here, are eligible to join the Alumni Association of the college, according to Douglas Smith, president of the association.

The association's main function is to enhance the standing of the college and of its graduates for any future position they seek to hold, Smith said.

The life-time charge is $10 payable the date of enrollment, or $3 a year for four years. Annual charge for membership is $2 per year.

Those who wish further information can consult Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here, or address a letter to the Alumni Association, City College of San Francisco, San Francisco, California.

Newly Inaugurated Spring AS President Installs 17 Cabinet Members In Initial Session

By Roy Twitty

New Associated Student President Dick Cottrell installed his cabinet appointments last week ushering in the Spring 1959 edition of student government while debate over freedom of speech and press drew the attention of the last on-campus meeting of the outgoing council.

Following the tradition set by past presidents of the Associated Students, Cottrell named his three unsuccessful presidential race opponents to top positions on his cabinet. Advising the new council as to proper legal procedure, the position of parliamentarian was filled by Ralph Prior.

Financial matters concerning all Associated Student funds will be handled by Ben Northrup in his capacity as chairman of the finance committee, while Fred Muller will serve as state information chairman, with the responsibility of collecting and disseminating information of and from the member colleges of the California Junior College Student Government Conference.

Leaders in college affairs as well as in their chosen fields, Cottrell appraised, the new appointees are expected to prove outstanding. Taking oaths of office before the council round-table were recording secretary Pat Hawkins, corresponding and co-corresponding secretaries Marion Bachwitz and Kitty Stein.

Sworn into office before the incoming council were chairman Donn Bernstein, student card sales; Bill Forshay, campus affairs co-ordinator; Albert Salamanca, publicity chairman; Nick Peters, men's athletic commissioner, and Bob Veder, alumni liaison officer.

Newly elected Inter-Fraternity Council president Sam Allen will replace Terry Chavez (whom inside sources have identified as soon to "enter the military service like Fort Ord way") on Cottrell's cabinet. Other new officers will include Don Seratti, publications chairman; Norman Singer, elections commissioner; Gene Craft, awards commissioner; Joan Roggero, rally commissioner; and Ken Kahn, yell leader.

Freedom of speech and the press has been interfered with by the outgoing student council, charged Ann Thuss, as she addressed the group.

Although not wishing to comment before elections, Miss Thuss declared that deprivation of these rights has occurred through council's formulation of a measure denying all elected AS officers the right to publicly support any candidate for office.

H&R's 'Operation St. Francis' Gives Job Experience

Practical experience for 24 Hotel and Restaurant majors was made possible last Friday as the eighth annual "Operation St. Francis" swung into action.

Convening at 9 a.m., the third and fourth semester H&R students commenced to fulfill jobs, ranging from the hotel's general manager through the ranks to stewards and telephone operators. All main hotel jobs were occupied by the H&R majors. William Romney, H&R major from Salt Lake City, took over the number one job as he was General Manager Dan London's counterpart.

Romney commented, "Never have I had such a delightful and worthy experience as working with Mr. London. Not only has this opportunity offered a valuable insight on hotel management, but it has been a thrill to see the overall mechanics of how a large hotel is run."

Tours were given to the students one in the morning and another in the afternoon. Students were taken through the entire hotel, observing many of the rooms, the executive offices, the kitchens and other areas of importance in hotel operation.

Luncheon was served in the California Room at 11:30 a.m. Menus were passed out and students feasted "on the house." After lunch, students returned to their respective jobs.

Members from journalism, public relations and photography classes here were on hand to work with the hotel's promotion and publicity department headed by Miss Elizabeth Bell.

Photographers were shooting pictures of the H&R students on the job while journalists were taking notes on the scene. Public Relations students were busy arranging outside publicity with television and newspapers.

Conclusion of the event was marked with a social hour held in the Cosmopolitan Room where informal discussions were held over the day's activities.

No More 'Free' Use Of Reservoir

Parking permits will be required for parking in the reservoir parking lot next semester, Fred Fitzgerald, Campus Police adviser, announced today.

This semester the policy was to allow any student to park in the reservoir, but a complete reversal in policy is planned for the spring semester.

Fitzgerald also announced the appointment of Richard Gamble as Campus Police Chief for the spring semester. Gamble will replace William Donohoe, who is scheduled to be installed in the San Mateo Police Department on February 1.

Richard Parr was named Assistant Chief to aid the new head man in his duties during the coming semester. Parr will be filling the spot vacated by Julian Cane who is transferring to San Jose State's Police School.

Fred Kern and John Cottle have finished their criminology and law enforcement courses here and are joining police departments in the Bay Area, Kern in San Francisco and Cottle in Larkspur.

Salamanca Wins AS Service Award At Council Banquet

Albert Salamanca, Guardsman staff editor, accepted the award for outstanding service to the college, presented to him by Associated Student President Freddie Hicks last week, during ceremonies held at the traditional semi-annual Student Council awards banquet.

Salamanca was honored because of his exceptional contributions on behalf of the college in the fields of journalism and public relations. Receiving recognition as outstanding faculty members were John Dunn and Sherman Elworthy. Dunn, as adviser to the Rally Committee, availed himself endlessly in generating college spirit and promoting student turnout to all athletic events.

Elworthy's work with the Club Activities Board resulted in their becoming an organized government body on campus. He also initiated the Christmas Service Drive and has devoted much of his time to sponsoring co-educational golf classes.

AS officers were sworn in and short talks were given by both student and faculty leaders. Award keys for the President's Cabinet and Student Council members were presented following the dinner.

Non-Attendance Inexcusable At Future Home Cage Encounters

DURING football season when attendance at grid encounters was nil, we constantly urged the support of the college's playing representatives through an enthusiastic rooting section.

Pleas of this nature were to no avail, however, as past trends continued into 1958 and our Big Eight Conference grid entry again played before sparse audiences and seagulls.

Excuses for this fallacy ranged from "Kezar is too far from City College" and "We don't get out of class until after kickoff" to "It's too cold out there" (Kezar) and "We work in the afternoon."

Granted, many of these claims are justified by certain individuals, but hardly by practically the entire 5,000 plus persons in the student body.

Be as it may, 1958 football is gone and forgotten and, already in the midst of basketball season, we would explicitly like to diminish any thought of a relapse of this nature during the cage campaign.

An incident which occurred in City College's men's gymnasium on January 3, however, makes us skeptical once more.

The gymnasium, just down the hill from Science and Cloud Halls, was the site of a City College-Chaffey and Oakland-Riverside hoop doubleheader.

True, this was during the New Year break and the 200 fans in attendance didn't shatter any records; yet 150 of these faithful viewers had come from Oakland to support THEIR team—and that is a cause for alarm when a team can't outdraw another squad even when competing in its own back yard.

This incident wasn't too important, but it definitely was an indication that the students of City College don't appreciate their athletic organizations.

On Friday at 8 o'clock the Rams entertain Santa Rosa in their first league home engagement. At that time we would like to see at least 300 students from the college, and at all the games after that we should take it upon ourselves to outdraw our opponents by at least 10-to-1.

Finals Demand Increased Efforts Of Students With Low Mid-Term Grades

WITH the semester's end drawing near and finals only one week away, the time has come for most of us to make some very important decisions.

Many, after much deliberation, will decide to change our majors. Others will decide to transfer to another educational institution. Still others will graduate to find employment and occupations which may last a lifetime. The great majority, however, will stick it out at City College and take advantage of the top-flight education given here at practically no expense.

Whatever the case may be, The Guardsman sincerely wishes the students of City College the best of success in all their endeavors and appreciates their faithfulness as readers of our entirely student-staffed publication.

Finals, whose presence always give students a spine-tingling fear, are quite rapidly approaching. Now is the time for many of us to redeem ourselves for falling below the highest standards. A great advantage of the finals system is the fact that a good performance on the term-enders could play a key role in one's grade success, since many of the college's instructors place a great deal of importance on finals (sometimes even 50 per cent) in proportion to the entire semesterly grade.

This consideration on the part of the faculty should make all those who have had mental lapses at one part of the semester or another (including a great percentage of the student body) take part in a reversal of form, hit the books with undivided attention and pick up the pieces which may have been left behind sometime in 1958.

These efforts, if worked at earnestly, could place the individuals concerned back in step academically and play a major part in the improvement of his grade point average—not bad goals to strive for.

Famous Former Coed Makes Film Debut

The Fourth Dimensional Man, another of Hollywood's science-fiction films, will be of special interest to San Franciscans and more so to students of the college who will recognize the famous name of Lee Ann Meriwether on the downtown movie marquees.

Although the Paramount feature will be her first, Miss Meriwether's claim to fame started with her consecutive winning of the titles of Miss San Francisco, Miss California, and then the highest honor of Miss America of 1955. During the preceding period she had attended the college as a drama major with the dream of becoming an actress. She is a member of Delta Psi Omega, national drama honor fraternity.

Had Fun, Will Test

REGARDLESS of the jar in the picture, this is not a commercial advertisement for any coffee maker. What is represented is the studious type of person who comes to the college, strolls around campus, whistles at beautiful girls, smokes cigarettes in the basement, comes to college on a scooter, takes photographs in his spare time, and has a good time during the semester. As a result, he has to "cram-up" all the tough subjects in which he has finals. Jerry Latham, who is the student pictured above, is not this type at all, he just lent himself for the occasion.—Guardsman photo by David Abrahams.

It's All Over... Almost

Fall Semester Gets Red Ribbon View As Students Walk Down 'Finals' Lane

By Albert Salamanca and Pastor Valle-Garay

Finals, that weird word that makes just about everyone shiver and promise to study more now and more than ever NEXT year are not around the corner any longer.

Another semester's practically over—Fall, 1958, for those who still don't know which one yet—and the inevitable exams somewhat make the ensuing vacation, if short, not as well thought of or as much expected as, say, Labor Day, Christmas or New Year's Day in that order.

However, the recollection of the activities carried on campus this fall may ease the tension, bring back some worthwhile memories and/or make some of the people involved frown. Anyway, they have all been tied with a ribbon by now, and here they are.

The college, after summer vacation, did not look the same to the "old timers" of three years ago.

Across Phelan Avenue, and directly opposite Science Hall—a newly-built reservoir occupies what used to be the college's West Campus. Across Riordan High's main entrance—an empty lot, a few broken toys, some trees and a lot of grass are the remaining signs of what was Hurley Village, the veterans' house project, razed to open the way for the next campus structure, the Arts Building.

Otherwise, college life carried on with its almost steady, unchangeable procedure. No rockets to the moon were fired from the campus, the football team didn't win a championship—their Tom-Tom Trophy wound up in the San Mateo grounds—and the Little Theater people continued to excel with their drama productions.

On October 18 pretty Gay Tromson became one-half of the Frosh Ball's cutest couple contest, and elections for student offices took place without revolutions despite the fact that a Latin, Bolivian Albert Salamanca, ran for ASB president.

Things looked equally good at the employment office, especially during the Christmas rush when, according to its director Joseph Amori, "hundreds of openings were available." Things looked pretty good, too, at the International Airport once, when a student delegation headed by AS President Freddie Hicks welcomed not Russia's Mikoyan but shapely Barbara (Huffman) Eden, former student here now starring on movies and TV.

"Wish you were still at City," Hicks couldn't help commenting as he started back to his alma mater to help his subordinates in the nut-so-easy task of lending the destinies and interests of the college's students.

Campus Police were as efficient as always in handling the serious technique of ticket-issuing as well as in stopping the cars-stopping wave that plagued the campus. (By the way, whatever happened to those hundreds of records stolen from the music department, chief?—Never mind.)

Somehow, one can't expect everything to be perfect. Students witnessed (1) again little dreams not coming through — like filling Kezar Stadium, winning a soccer championship, having a strong basketball rooting section other than Oakland's at the home games or a five story garage erected on top of Smith Hall or under the Cloud Hall hill.

The four-day week for students is still out of the question. Al Morales Scampini was NOT elected president of the Associated Men Students because his initials, AMS, are the same as those of the organization and there is no truth whatsoever to the rumors that cable cars will be running up and down the hill in all directions to keep students from getting tired of climbing it every day. No, helicopter service won't do with the management either. Everyone here just "gotta walk."

Altogether, the list of activities could extend until the days are over and the pages of the paper become too short. There were the very good dances and then, there were the bad ones; the hopes of some students to graduate with 30 units and a "C" minus average and still want to go to Cal, Stanford, State or San Jose . . . the tendency of going "international" by having such distinguished visitors as the Hungarian fencing tutor who gave "touch!" demonstrations . . . a famed French horticulturist . . . and such a large group of foreign students that one hears as much Chinese, Iranian, Japanese, Brookiyn and Spanish spoken here as English.

Twenty years from today, though, all these items may not make any difference to anyone around here. . .

In the meantime, it will be wise to tie them up with a ribbon—a red and white one if possible, since those are the college's colors and since one, depending on the results of finals, may use them all over again.

Foresight

MEN prefer Westerns over all other television shows and women favor variety programs, according to statistics compiled by Cunningham and Walsh, an advertising agency, in TV Guide.

This agency has been conducting a study of television in a small New Jersey city for the past 11 years. The city, appropriately named Videotown, is regarded by the experts as a typical American city, reflecting the tastes of the Nation. Consequently, this survey is considered close to infallible.

The statistics show that 76 per cent of the men prefer Westerns. Variety shows rank next, 41 per cent, and then sports, 30 per cent.

Forty-six per cent of the women prefer variety programs and next in order is drama, 39 per cent; situation comedy, 36 per cent, and Westerns, 27 per cent.

It is interesting to note that only 10 per cent of the men dislike Westerns, while 33 per cent of the women dislike them.

The survey further states that nearly everyone in America watches TV for 3 hours and 10 minutes each day, which equals 22 hours and 7 minutes of viewing weekly. This means, according to tabulations, that a person spends 20 per cent of his life in front of the TV set.

Statistics also reveal that housewives watch TV in the mornings for only 1 hour and 10 minutes each week. Yet they listen to morning radio 6 hours and 44 minutes per week.

Getting back to Westerns—6 of the Top 10 shows in San Francisco are oaters, according to the latest ratings. They are Gunsmoke, Wagon Train, Tales of Wells Fargo, Maverick, Hugo Gun—Will Travel, and Sheriff of Cochise, respectively.

Gunsmoke and Wagon are also running neck and neck Trendex-wise across the country and are consistently swamping all other programs. Remember, even Ike watches them, too!

Coming TV shows of special interest: An hour-long Phil Silvers Review with his Sgt. Bilko Platoon and Diana Dors this Friday at 8 p.m. on Channel 5, two Leonard Bernstein programs, one a "Young People's Concert" and the other dealing with jazz this Saturday and Sunday, January 24 and 25; a "must-see" repeat of the Fred Astaire show on February 11; the telecast of the Oscar Awards on April 6, and a 90-minute musical based on Don Quixote to star Jose Ferrer, which is in the making at ABC. Happy viewing!

Scorn For Money?

Students Reject, Neglect Awards

Bohemia is upon us! A supreme scorn for money has engulfed the college. Only one student wants part of the financial aid awarded each year by the college in the form of scholarships.

Individuals, clubs and business organizations have established scholarships here for deserving students. Their purpose is to aid students who have the need for such help and who show good leadership and scholastic aptitude for attaining their goals in life.

These awards, ranging in value from $25 to $125, are free for the taking by any qualifying student, but one does have to apply for them.

Deadline for applying for one of these awards is Thursday, March 26, 1959, but, by applying early, the student is assured that his application is given a thorough examination and not rushed through at the last minute.

All that is necessary for applying is to write a letter containing the prospect's grade point average at the college, goal and means one has for attaining it, and any activities one engages in that show leadership abilities. It is then turned in to Gertrude Norgard, acting dean of women, in S-150.

One of the smaller awards will suffice to buy books for one semester for the average student, so if any one who has been at the college for one semester or more can drive himself to consider using that nasty stuff—money—he should see Dean Norgard right away.

Contra Costans Spoil Rams' '59 Big 8 Debut As Van Hook, Wilbon Spark 52-46 Victory

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Touching off their 1959 Big Eight circuit opener in the back yard of Rudy Hansen's Contra Costa Comets, Sid Phelan and his hustling Ram cage forces saw a gray cloud linger over their hopes of latching onto the loop crown as the polished Richmond gang made use of everything but the apple cider in dumping the Rams by a 52-46 count last Friday.

Phelan's charges, who had spent the greater part of the week preparing themselves for the scoring punch of Mike Lafferty, Lonnie Johnson, and the heralded Tyler Wilbon, found themselves off to a booming start as they outhustled the East Bayers to an 11-8 edge 12 minutes into the opening stanza. It was at this time that Hansen cleared the bench of Bob Van Hook, and with that came the beginning of the end for the Ram forces.

The locals had held Lafferty and Johnson scoreless, and Wilbon was able to collect only four throughout the first 16 minutes, thanks to a phenomenal defensive effort on the part of Bill Simmons. Three was a company and four a crowd, however, as Van Hook was too much for the Rams to contend with—riddling the can nearly at will and enabling his mates to leave the floor with a 21-14 advantage at the break.

Throughout the tail end of the affair Van Hook was still "on", but it was the heavy artillery of Wilbon, who cut loose for 15 markers in the second half, that proved itself the big margin of victory.

Trailing by 39-26, the locals swung into action for all they were worth. Cleo Cofield splashed through a 20-foot jumper, George Shewl clicked on a hook, Cofield came back with a free throw and Simmons found the mark from the side, to set the count at 39-33.

Fired up, the home town boys rallied to the point where it looked as though they might overtake the Comets, but the trio of Wilbon, Van Hook, and old "Father Time" were not to be outdone at the final buzzer.

Although outhustling their opponents all the way, the Red and White undoing has to go down in the books as the result of the Comets' complete domination for the offensive boards, where they came home with 16 grabs as compared to the Rams four.

Wilbon collected 25 markers for the Comets, backed up by Van Hook's 16. Simmons and Cofield led the Rams with 14 and 13, respectively.

RA Sends 3 Delegates To CARICF Conference

Three delegates representing the college's Recreation Association will head discussion committees at the forthcoming CARICF Conference on February 13, 14 and 15, at Asilomar.

The RA was chosen, because of its outstanding work in sports, by San Francisco State College and will be in charge of colleges and schools from the Pacific Coast area.

Outgoing president and vice-president, Sandy Simonian and Linda Ryan, respectively, accompanied by the new president, "Bunny" Tollefson, will attend.

Four-Ball Hawks Battle For Two Guard Positions

By Jim Payne

The two guard positions on Sid Phelan's Ram cage squad are in such an unsettled situation that the four prime prospects for the spots themselves aren't sure of their status from day to day.

Coach Phelan launched the 1958-59 season with Cleo Cofield and John Iles at the guard posts. But at that time Ike MacArthur was at forward. During Christmas vacation MacArthur left the team, and Cofield was switched to MacArthur's spot.

Vince Rocchi, a good shooter and passer who, on occasions, has come in late in the game to spark the team to victory, was elevated to the vacant guard spot. Right on his heels was Sylvester Bruce, a transfer from the U.S.F. frosh, and Mel Wilson, the fastest and best defensive guard on the team.

All during the practice season these four were shuffled in and out by Phelan in an effort to find a good starting guard combination.

This confused situation remained as such until the recent Modesto Tournament, when it was cleared up somewhat.

Bruce finally came into his own and scored 22 against Long Beach. This earned him the number-one spot.

Wilson, the most improved player on the squad, elevated his status with his good ball handling and effective ball-hawking. The other guard position is between him and the steady, excellent shooting Iles.

"The reason we are having so much trouble deciding on the starting guards is because all four men are so nearly even in ability," Coach Phelan stated.

None of the four men thinks of himself as a second-stringer. Each has the self-confidence necessary for a starter —and no one knows who will be starting two weeks from now.

Spring Sports Rosters In Red Carpet Rollout

Sign-ups are being taken today for tennis and golf and start tomorrow for baseball and track in the men's gymnasium.

Organized practice for all four spring sports begins the first day of the spring semester, but individual practice is up to the competitor.

Those interested may obtain information in the men's gymnasium from Coaches Lou Vasquez for track, Lee Eisan for baseball, Roy Diederichsen for tennis and Grover Klemmer for golf.

Top Athletes Keep Ram Tradition

RAMBLINGS

By George Grasso

Editor Ends Term With Swan Song

IT'S THAT TIME of year for the swan song, so let's close the semester with ramblings on the past and next semester.

We attend a college that is unique, or at least unique in the Big Eight Conference. The other colleges in the league, such as Modesto and Santa Rosa, are somewhat centrally located and usually the pride of their small cities. Because they come from one small area, the students all know each other and turn out in large numbers to watch their friends and favorites perform in athletics.

In fact, most of their contests are broadcast over local radio, and the results are awaited by the entire town.

Here, we share the spotlight with three universities and a state college —and no one knows anyone else. Situated in a great metropolis, we draw students not only from all over the county and country, but from foreign nations as well, and the quick turnover is not conducive to togetherness.

Consequently, we get crowds of 50 to 100 at sports activities, despite a 5,000 plus enrollment. This isn't anyone's fault; it's just that in comparison with others, this is a college where many are strangers.

Fortunately, however, even though we have small time crowds, we don't have small time athletes. The college is always a power to be feared, and though winning in an empty stadium isn't as enjoyable as winning in a full one, the win is there just the same.

Last semester was a good one in sports. Next semester will be as good or better.

In the weeks to come, a strong, well-balanced cage team will probably finish second or third in the conference. This is not an ultimatum—with their excellent team play, they could go all the way to the title.

The baseballers show the most room for improvement. They are in need of new blood and may develop it this year.

The tennis team, which went undefeated last year winning the Big Eight Conference title, singles and doubles, should again be strong and bring more glory to the college. The netmen have developed into one of the proudest segments of the athletic program.

Last year's California State Champions, the star-studded track team, has the rugged, consistent power to go all the way again. The return of individual two-year college United States Champions form the strong foundation of a team which was largely composed of freshmen last year.

Things look good for the Red and White. On that final note, we turn the show over to Nick.

Santa Rosa

Bearcubs Invade Campus In Friday Home Cage Opener

By Nick Peters, Editor

Tall timber from the Redwood Empire will invade the men's gymnasium in the form of Santa Rosa's Bearcubs this Friday night at 8 o'clock as Coach Sid Phelan will supply the competition for the Rams' 1959 home cage inaugural.

Possessing a front line whose height average is 6-5 in freshman center Ron Hedin (6-8) and returning first-club forwards Bill Jolliff (6-3) and Don O'Mohundro (6-2), Bob Mastin's baby Grizzlies base a fairly well balanced attack on rugged board supremacy and the bucket-making proficiency of sharpshooting guards Tommy Harper and Bob Davis.

Both all-sport stars at Encinal High and members of the Santa Rosa grid eleven (Harper was an All-Conference quarterback), have made the conversion from the gridiron to the court without much trouble and have been scoring very high. As a matter of fact, Dick Salomon, a first team guard in '58, has been nosed out by the former prep greats but will see a great deal of action.

O'Mohundro scored 20 points in a losing effort against the Rams last season and is helped considerably in the point column by Hedin and Jolliff, who have been averaging about 10 digits per game as well as taking a commanding lead in rebounds to spark the team to an overall 8-6 record, including an impressive win over San Mateo in the league opener.

Ram court strategist Phelan has the utmost respect for the much taller opponents, whom he rates the loop's "dark horse." His starting five for the game will probably be Bill Simmons and Cleo Cofield, forwards; George Shewl, center, and guards John Iles and Sylvester Bruce.

Whatever the outcome this promises to be an entertaining hoop hassle, since the Rams must win convincingly at home to be considered dangerous flag contenders, while the Bruins have hopes of upsetting one of the "top dogs" in their quest for the title.

Posting an 11-5 practice game mark the Rams can attempt to better that slate by winning their lone remaining non-league fray against Stanford's highly-touted frosh contingent in a 6 p.m. preliminary at the Farm on February 14.

Remaining league games include: 1/30, Sacramento at men's gymnasium; 2/3, Stockton at Stockton; 2/6, Modesto at men's gymnasium; 2/10, Santa Rosa at Santa Rosa; 2/13, Contra Costa at men's gymnasium; 2/17, Oakland at men's gymnasium; 2/20, Sacramento at Sacramento; 2/24, Stockton at men's gymnasium; 2/27, Modesto at Modesto; 3/3, San Mateo at men's gymnasium, and 3/6, San Mateo at San Mateo.

Babe Ruth holds the individual World Series batting record, slugging a sizzling .625 in the 1928 classic.

Big Eight Preview

Rams, T-Birds, Comets, Bearcubs Selected To Battle For Conference Laurels In 1958-1959 Competition

(Editor's note: This reporter, while covering the Modesto Basketball Tournament for The Guardsman, realized an opportunity to interview all of the Big Eight Conference coaches who entered their teams in the annual pre-season classic. Teams are listed according to predicted finish in league play, and figures in parenthesis indicate complete practice schedule records including tourney competition.)

By Nick Peters, Editor

SAN FRANCISCO (11-5): Sid Phelan's Rams are our nominee to win it all on the basis of a very efficient defense and a more than adequate scoring punch. Forwards Bill Simmons and Cleo Cofield along with pivot George Shewl are all potential 20-points-per-game shooters. Guards Sylvester Bruce and John Iles, if past records are any indication, can easily become 10 to 15 point performers.

Although comparatively short, Shewl (6-2), Cofield (6-2) and Simmons (6-3) form a highly proficient rebounding trio, who have out-jumped their opposition in practically every game this season. In guards Mel Wilson, Iles and Bruce, the veteran mentor has a good set of ballhawks who are at their best on defense.

Shewl has been the team's leading scorer and rebounder to date with about 13.0 averages in both departments. Cofield, who impressed at the Modesto Tourney, and Simmons are not far behind.

Phelan, whose charges finished second to Oakland in last year's race, figures his club to be in the thick of things with the Thunderbirds and Contra Costa. He says, however, "Don't count Santa Rosa out; they've got a good club and are the league's dark horse."

OAKLAND (10-2): Bill Rockwell's five is quite confident of repeating as the Big Eight's champion. The T-Birds' only two losses have come at the hands of strong St. Mary's Frosh, 52-49 (a contingent which walloped the Rams 69-49) and perennially, potent Allan Hancock, 69-57.

Gone are outstanding 1957-58 performers Ed Donahue, Wayne Olson and Joe Johnson, whose last second fielder beat the Rams at Oakland to virtually knock the locals out of the championship ring; however, returning are All-Northern California guard Rufus Hawkins and rugged 6-5 forward Russ Wickwire—the team's leading scorers over the exhibition grind.

Their 10 wins have been by fairly impressive scores, including two victories over the Santa Clara Frosh, 53-59, and Stanford's Braves, 48-43. Aiding Hawkins immeasurably in these pre-season successes have been 6-5 center Ron Nelson, guard Ron Gower, an All-OAL prep standout, guard Bob Johnson and a returnee from last year's bench—forward Bob Laird. Rockwell occasionally pulls Laird out of the lineup and inserts the versatile Hawkins at forward.

"More depth is the key to this year's club" contends Rockwell, adding, "we should be up there, with San Francisco, Contra Costa and Santa Rosa all the way."

CONTRA COSTA (6-7): Missing All-Northern California pivot Cornell Green, who led the Big Eight in scoring last season, Coach Rudy Hansen apparently hasn't suffered greatly since his 1958-59 team has been bolstered by the return of Tyler Wilbon who was a stalwart of the 1956-57 five. The 6-4 crowd-pleaser was a terror at Modesto, scoring 99 points in just four games, mainly on jump shots of the 20-foot variety.

Also returning are forwards Lonnie Johnson and Mike Lafferty. Johnson, a first-stringer last year, looked terrible at Modesto, but is a much better ball player than his poor showing indicated. Hansen, an eight-year veteran in Big Eight wars, will undoubtably miss the services of his star 1957-58 jump shot artist, 6-3 John Carmelich and hustling guards Wayne Martin and Gerald Pearson. These vacancies, however, have been capably filled by guards Cornell Lacey, John Perkins and Bob Van Hook, who personally spelled defeat for the Rams in the battle for third place at Modesto with a 16-point first half performance.

Opposing coaches can be thankful that 1957-58 freshman standouts Carmelich and Green are not playing as sophomores, as their presence on this year's five undoubtedly would have made the Richmonders one of the top California contingents. Carmelich is playing soldier and Green is saving his eligibility for major college ball.

Hansen credits his squad with having more depth but relates, ". . . We have a long way to go before becoming contenders. It'll be between Oakland and you guys (Rams) for the title."

SANTA ROSA (7-6): Bob Mastin, pleasant Bearcub boss, has three returning first-stringers on his '59 squad —forward Bill Jolliff, guard Dick Salomon and forward Don O'Mohundro. Salomon, however, is being pressured by the Encinal High duo of all-sport performers Tommy Harper and Bob Davis. The center spot goes to Ron Hedin, who at 6-8 is the loop's tallest competitor and a menace on the boards.

As a matter of fact, the Bruins' hopes for the coveted crown rest largely on the club's board supremacy. Harper, an All-Conference gridder, came out late because of football, but in his seven games leads the team with a 15 plus average. Jolliff and Hedin

DAY after tomorrow will be the big day when Fall, 1958, finals begin; just one week later the semester will be over. Clubs and organizations have had a full, swinging semester and just a few odds and ends are left to clear up the books —a few new elections, a few activities, and a few plans for spring.

The Engineering Society recently met and elected new officers for the forthcoming semester. They are Phil Marquis, president; Shannon Lila, vice-president; Roberta Roth, secretary, and Dellas Kresl, treasurer.

New officers for Delta Sigma Tau sorority are Ada Quinn, president; Ellen Young, vice-president; Frances Anderson, recording secretary; Queen Walls, corresponding secretary; Maxine Griggs, historian; Elaine Trufant, sergeant-at-arms; Brunez Blackshire, treasurer, and Verna Brown, dean of pledges.

Delta Psi sorority's new officers for the Spring semester, elected at a recent meeting, are Arlene Nielsen, president; Stevie Tissier, first vice-president; Ginny Hyde, second vice-president; Malene Bohn, recording secretary; Peggy Rahiliy, corresponding secretary; Barbara Dennaston, treasurer; Charlene Asher, historian; Sue Curley, piedge mistress, and Carolyn Heath, publicity.

'GI Bill' Vets Must File Transfer Notice

Veterans claiming benefits under the GI Bill, who plan to transfer to another college at the end of the semester, must file a transfer of benefits application in the veterans counseling office, Robin Dunn, veterans counselor here, announced recently.

Delay in the submission of the application will result in a loss of benefits at the beginning of the semester.

Those veterans who have completed 90 or more (counting the six weeks basic training) and plan to transfer to the college next semester should see Dunn before finals for certain many ills, such as racial discrimination, divorce, a high crime rate, and a dangerously materialistic outlook. And, despite the fact that we already practice mass education to a certain extent, our society is the type in which the aforementioned ills are contagious. These unsavory factors are largely attributable to our relatively uneducated masses, who either have had little formal education or who never appreciated what they did have.

Counterpoint: Mass Education Ra Quality Of Country's Popula

Because of them, life in America isn't as good as it could be.

A more methodical program of maximum chances for education, however, could go a long way toward solving our existing problems.

Exposing a man to at least the prescribed amount of formal education plants some seeds of knowledge in him, some of which admittedly remain latent, but many of which sprout and grow at some time in his life, most often to his great advantage.

Many of us undergo this "growth of the seeds of knowledge" during or soon after our formal period of education, when we constantly become more and more aware of things we overlooked previously. But where educating the masses really proves useful is by a system that allows a man to benefit from advanced education when under normal conditions he would have been consigned to a particular occupation much sooner. (The GI Bill has been a gigantic step in this direction, offering many veterans unprecedented educational opportunities.)

Members of the criminology department's championship shooting team will be awarded a trophy for outstanding marksmanship at the Western Revolver Association awards dinner, to be held at Berkeley's Claremont Hotel on January 31, Fred Fitzgerald, Campus Police adviser, announced recently.

Present at the dinner will be 500 to 1000 representatives from most of California's pistol clubs with Governor Edmund "Pat" Brown as guest speaker.

Rally To Precede Chinese Student Club Annual Ball

Members of the Chinese Student Club will present their Sweetheart Ball Rally at Victory Hall, 827 Stockton Street, Saturday, January 31, according to Virginia Eng, club member.

The rally's main purpose will be the presentation of the women running for Queen of the Ball. Contestants, who will be judged on talent, popularity vote and ticket selling, will present their talent at this time.

Dancing to hi-fi music will also be on the evening's agenda from 9:30 p.m. until 1 a.m. Admission price is 75 cents and tickets will be sold at the door.

Those women running for Queen are Virginia "Jody" Eng, general education major; Verna Jang, secretary training; Celia Wong, general education, Sophie Kwong, general education, and Beverly Chang, X-ray technology. Members of the club who are managing the Queen contestants in their campaigns are Frank Moriyama for Miss Eng; Paul Lee for Miss Wong; Bill Toy for Miss Chang; Gill Hom for Miss Jang and Edward Yarn for Miss Kwong.

The ball itself, the club's annual affair, will be held this year at the Surf Club, 660 Great Highway, south of Sea Cliff, on February 28, according to Miss Eng. Jimmy Blass and his orchestra will provide the dance music, dress will be semi-formal and tickets are $3.50 per couple. Highlight of the ball will be the coronation of the Sweetheart Ball Queen.

Hicks' Extensive Drive Uncovers Three Advanced Ideas To Better Student Government On Campus

Threefold results of one of the largest and most extensive drives in Associated Student government history were announced last week by Freddie Hicks, former AS President.

The drive, which carried Hicks and former AS Secretary Jackie Pera to San Francisco State College, University of San Francisco, and University of California in search for new and advanced ideas to better student government here, was threefold in purpose:

1. Obtain information concerning the possibilities of constructing a student union building on campus.
2. Acquire ways to boost AS card sales.
3. Develop an effective method to inaugurate photo-engraved AS cards.

A student union building would aid the campus social life as well as student government functions, and any campus this size should have one, Hicks stated.

In a recent council meeting, Louis G. Cohlan, college president, pointed out that the construction of the building would cost much more than the AS is prepared to pay at the present time.

The AS President reported that a similar building is being constructed on the University of California campus, but is considered as a million dollar project.

"If the lounge is built, chances are, it will be in the cafeteria. However, the exact time and place of construction are not known," he commented.

Cage Coaches Air Hoop Loop Hopes

trail with around 10 points per. 6-3 center Percy Millett also figures high in Coach Mastin's plans.

Coming through with what he called some "scintillating quotes," the likeable mentor said, "Our club is greatly improved over last season," but added, "Oakland, Contra Costa and San Francisco should be fighting it out for the flag."

SACRAMENTO (10-3): Gerald Anderson's boys looked good in winning the consolation laurels at Modesto and have the potential to upset some of the top teams despite losing two "big men" from last year's aggregation — center Terry Bennett and guard Bill Alexander.

Improvement of their last place finish in '58 is inevitable since, in returnees Bobo Leonard and Jim Williams, the team boasts a torrid one-two scoring punch. Leonard led all the point-makers with 106 markers in four Modesto Tourney games, while the pair have been scoring high all season.

Coach Anderson feels his team "has a long way to go and is pretty much a second division bet." His title choice: Oakland, with Contra Costa and Santa Rosa not far behind.

STOCKTON (9-5): New coach Frank Boyle can't expect wonders from a squad which doesn't have the depth to make it a definite contender. On the other hand, there are some better-than-average players on the club and will give most opponents a good game.

Eddie Davidson and Ben Brenning, the 'Mustangs' top two performers of '58, are no longer with the club, but in the Simpson boys — Willie and Isaiah — Stockton has an adequate bucket attack.

SAN MATEO (2-8): Ray Balsley wastes no time in admitting that his chances in the Big Eight rest on the shoulders of his star 6-5 junior Dennis Marc, an All-PAL performer from Jefferson High. However, the rest of the squad isn't top drawer and the outlook isn't bright for the peninsula players.

many ills such as racial discrimination, divorce, a high crime rate, and a dangerously materialistic outlook. And despite the fact that we already practice mass education to a certain extent, our society is the type in which the aforementioned ills are contagious. These unsavory factors are largely attributable to our relatively uneducated masses, who either have had little formal education or who never appreciated what they did have.

Because of them, life in America isn't as good as it could be.

A more methodical program of maximum chances for education, however, could go a long way toward solving our existing problems.

Exposing a man to at least the prescribed amount of formal education plants some seeds of knowledge in him, some of which undoubtedly remain latent, but many of which sprout and grow at some time in his life, most often to his great advantage.

Many of us undergo this "growth of the seeds of knowledge" during or soon after our formal period of education, when we constantly become more and more aware of things we overlooked previously. But where educating the masses really proves useful is by a system that allows a man to benefit from advanced education when under normal conditions he would have been consigned to a particular occupation much sooner. The GI Bill has been a gigantic step in this direction, offering many veterans unprecedented educational opportunities.)

Plato's idea of an elite to do all the planning for the state is worthy of approbation under totalitarian rule, for the state operates on a "no questions asked" basis, with no dissenting views tolerated because only the ruling body is theoretically capable of determining the people's future.

In a country like ours where the emphasis is placed on the individual the more informed the masses are, the better they can preserve their individuality of thought and still play their role in domestic and public affairs. This situation idealistic in appearance but possessing potential practical value can only come with the advent of a definite program of enhanced educational opportunities for all.

Some students may consider this a waste of time and admittedly, those who are not at all scholastically inclined could be allowed to enter the country's labor force.

For those who remain in school and then college the possibility exists that of all the facts they are fed some will "rub off" on even the unwilling, and eventually create in them an awareness and increased perception they would not have otherwise had.

The man who has been exposed to higher education and has had an opportunity to further develop his mind is more likely to respond to a reasonable request, make more sensible decisions and be more aware of his responsibilities than the man who has never benefited from advanced education. For example, an educated man would think twice before allowing prejudice to influence his views, before making rash decisions, and before neglecting his children's upbringing.

Making an effort to expose as many people to as much education as possible would not, as it may sound, stress quantity instead of quality. On the contrary, such a program would some day elevate the masses to a level of education that the "gifted few" now maintain. This would, in the process, apply constant pressure on the elite to continue to broaden themselves and thereby bring about a more fully enlightened and mentally responsible society.

Grade Average Wins Trophy For Zeta Chi

Presentation of the Margaret Dougherty trophy for the highest grade point average within the Inter-Sorority Council was awarded to Zeta Chi last Thursday at the semi-annual Feminine Fling. Theta Tau sorority placed second.

This semester marked the eleventh time that the award has been given in honor of the former dean of women.

Introduction of the new presidents, Associated Women Students, Arlene Kordoules; Inter-Sorority Council, Arlene Nielsen, and Recreation Association, Bunny Tolefson, was another major highlight of the evening.

Dance This Friday Night To Highlight CAB Day

CAB PRESIDENT Bud Andress reminds clubs of CAB regulations and promotes CAB Day activities slated for this Friday. —Guardsman photo by Gary Ono.

New students will have an opportunity to get to know more about the many on-campus clubs and their activities during Club Activities Board Day this Friday, March 6.

Clubs participating in CAB Day will have information booths set up between Science Hall and Cloud Hall during College Hour, when representatives will answer questions concerning the activities of their organizations.

Climaxing CAB Day activities, a campus-wide dance will be held in Smith Hall. Shower Of Stars is the theme for the dance, which is a sport affair lasting from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight and which features the swinging music of Steve Paul and his orchestra. Paul is a former student of the college.

Admission is free to members of the Associated Students. 75 cents with registration card, and $1 for non-members. Guest bids can be obtained from Dean Gertrude Norgard in S-150. Tickets will also be sold at the door.

CAB Day is not only designed to display the activities, events and purposes of each club on campus but also to familiarize the student with all the clubs and organizations on campus and to encourage him to join the club or clubs of his choice.

Clubs scheduled for representation during Friday's College Hour are as follows: French Club, Hotel & Restaurant Society, California Student Teachers Association, Recreation Association, Alpha Phi Omega, Home Economics Club and Engineering Club. Other clubs have yet to submit their petitions.

Committee members of the CAB for this semester, are Bud Andress, president; Tessa Thompson, vice-president; Kay Curry, recording secretary; Judy Day, corresponding secretary, and Ben Northrip, parliamentarian. The sponsor is Sherman Ellworthy.

The purpose of the Club Activities Board is to coordinate and advise on-campus clubs in their activities. Andress added that all organizations must belong to the CAB and have their charter approved by the board in order to participate in on-campus activities.

Thespians Offer Chekov Comedy Starting Friday

Russian realism inaugurates the opening of the college's Little Theater Friday night as Anton Chekov's last play, The Cherry Orchard, makes its first bow here at 8 p.m.

The play will be presented again this Saturday and, during the next two weekends, at the same times in the Little Theater in the basement of Science Hall. Student admission is by AS cards or $1 for general admission.

Two unusual aspects in this production were pointed out by Director Michael Griffin who also commented, "This is a comedy edged with pathos and full of melodies and themes running together like a musical counterpoint."

One of these changes is the sharing of two major parts by John Rose and Larry Bryggman, who will act the roles of Dohapin, a rich merchant who buys the Cherry Orchard, and Trofimov, an idealistic student.

The second change is an effort to present the psychological situation of the characters by episodic and individual rehearsal with the players acting almost independently rather than co-ordinately.

Leading lady of the cast and a constant performer on the Little Theater stage is Virginia Rae, who was last seen here as Penelope Sycamore in You Can't Take It With You.

Others in the cast of 13 include Maureen Rogers, Frank Stuckey, David Terry, Leah Pashoian, Joann Kreling, Jordy Cooney, Barbara Aubuchon and Bruce Johnson.

Seven members of the cast are also members of Delta Psi Omega, the national dramatic fraternity, while five other members of the organization are active in set design, costume design and construction, including Charles Huntley, Tom Wilson, Jr., Virginia Evans, Jean Carr, and Tanya Solelmani. Griffin added.

Films Shown At Each College Hour

A series of short films of general interest will be presented by the Audio Visual Aid Department during College Hours beginning Friday, Madison Devlin, head of the department, announced.

First in the series will be a film entitled 1104 Sutton Road, a dramatization of productivity and its effect upon everyday "Joe American."

"The array, which was selected for entertainment as well as educational value, will include a stimulating variety of subjects from a technicolor trip around the world to the mysteries of a research scientist's laboratory," Devlin said.

Admission is free and the showings are to be held in S-136.

Subsequent film titles and their respective exhibition dates are Taming A New Frontier, March 13; One Road, March 20, and An Equation For Progress, April 3.

A more complete list will be available at a later date.

Permits Needed To Park On Campus, Reservoir

Beginning this Friday, the Campus Police will issue parking permits needed to park on campus and in the reservoir, during each Friday College Hour at the Campus Police office in C-120, according to Richard Gamble, chief of police.

As of last Monday, the reservoir, with more than 1,000 parking spaces, is open only to those with permits, and Gamble warned students of parking on dirt and unpaved areas, as it is definitely illegal.

Gamble added that 10 students, previously sworn in, have returned, while nine new men will be added to the Campus Police force.

Two Special Jobs Open To Qualified Physics Students

Two special job openings are available to qualified students who have completed two years of college physics, Joseph Amori, placement director here, announced recently.

Applications may be obtained from the college placement center and will be accepted until the positions are properly filled, Amori stated.

These jobs, which are offered by the E. O. Lawrence Radiation Laboratory, are in reserve for two men students who can fulfill the positions of research apparatus operation and digital computer, the placement director added.

The position of research apparatus operator involves the operation of particle accelerators and other complex research equipment. It also requires the employee to work under the supervision of a research physicist.

The job of digital computer is composed of the high speed operation of an electric digital computer and provides for promotion to the position of coder of mathematical problems of the digital computer run, Amori emphasized.

Qualifications for both jobs include a minimum of two years of college physics, and training and experience in the electronics field. The positions will be permanent and prospective employees will have the choice of either swing or graveyard shift.

'C' Average Required For All AS Officers

A reminder that Associated Student office holders must maintain at least a "C" average was issued last week by Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of Student Activities.

Elected Associated Student officers, as well as all council and cabinet members, must maintain at least a 2.0 grade point average during and prior to their term of office.

The value of a student activities program has been questioned by some people, who believe the program should be eliminated, Hillsman said, but such action is not contemplated.

Employers want well-rounded, adjusted people, and prefer prospective employees who have previously taken part in student activities, Hillsman explained.

Card Sales Pass Half-Way Mark; Goal Set At 2300

With the Associated Student card sales goal set at 2,300 this semester, and the half-way mark passed, Dick Cottrell, AS president, announced last week that an all-out effort has been in progress since February 25 to sell 995 more cards. CAB dance this Friday night.

Council, Cabinet, Inter-Fraternity Council, Inter-Sorority Council, Club Activities Board, Sophomore Class and Freshman Class, plus 18 salesmen, are competing for the AS Card Sales awards which will be presented at the CAB dance this Friday night.

A $20 first prize will be given by the student book store to the person selling the most cards. Second prize consists of a $10 award, third prize a $5 award. These prizes are given as credit for anything purchased at the book store.

The following discounts have been added to the list on the AS cards: Stagg Shop, 309 Kearny Street, offers card holders a 10 per cent discount on clothes and a 5 per cent discount on clothes on sale; Fortune Electronics gives a dealer's discount; Brill Electronics, 6100 East 10th Street in Oakland, offers a distributor's discount; Paramount Theaters gives card holders special student rates with the exception of stage shows.

In addition to the aforementioned, AS members are entitled to discounts at service stations, jewelry stores, sporting goods stores, radio supply houses, florists, theaters and photo shops. These and other discounts are listed on the back of the AS cards.

There are many advantages to owning an AS card, Cottrell stated. A card entitles a person to park on campus, and attend AS dances, athletic programs and theater productions without additional cost.

"All organizations that are financed by the Associated Students must have their memberships subscribe 100 per cent to the AS," Cottrell added.

The deadline for compliance with this ruling by those organizations financed by the AS was last Monday. These groups must submit lists containing names of all their members and their membership card numbers, Ben Northrup, AS Finance chairman, warned, adding that failure to comply with this demand will cause an organization's budget to be dropped from the financial list.

Poor Scholarship Disqualifies 854

Of the 854 students who failed to maintain the required 1.5 (C minus) grade point average, 547 applied for readmission to the college, and 435 of the applicants were readmitted.

Readmission was denied the 112 other applicants.

A total of 307 disqualified students failed to answer Dean Brady's letter.

The 435 students who were readmitted to the college must maintain certain requirements to remain on the college's roll this semester. The requirements are relative to each case, Brady pointed out.

Rapid Fire Discussions, Swift Changes, Mark Official Start Of Student Council Activities

By Roy Twitty

Rapid-fire discussions and hurried changes in Student Council and Presidential Cabinet positions marked the beginning of Associated Student official business this semester.

Changes recently made in the council and cabinet positions have refarded student government progress in executive as well as financial issues. The second chief executive of the Associated Students, Ann Finneran, vice-president, was forced to resign her position because of the pressure of college work.

Replacing Miss Finneran as AS vice-president, Roberta Kennedy has stepped into the position chairmaning the social activities at the college.

The Associated Student constitution allows the replacement of a resigning student official with the candidate receiving the next highest number of votes.)

Financial difficulties were anticipated by the Student Council when the AS card sales chairman resigned prior to registration this semester. Economic and academic circumstances, involving transfer to a four-year institution, prompted the resignation, and the position was turned over to Pat O'Shaughnessy, who later also resigned.

Prior to his resignation, O'Shaughnessy termed the registration card sales period as "the worst in the history of the Associated Students." Present card sales chairman Mike Haskell, who is also a Student Council member, stated that card sales as of last week amounted to 1,375. This condition means, he added, that budgets will have to be cut or the council must look for new ways to get additional money.

Hot debate resulted last week when Ben Northrup, Finance chairman, froze the Student Council budget on the grounds that almost half of the participating officers do not possess AS cards. When a few councilmen voiced their disapproval, Northrup called them out of order for inquallifedly speaking before the assembly.

The first budget passed by the council this semester amounted to $728.00 for the Sophomore Class. This fund includes the finances for the Sophomore Ball which is to be held at the Italian Village on May 23.

Four other budgets have been okayed by the council, including a $3,000.00 partial budget for The Guardsman, and $1,000.00 for publicity.

Spring Semester Enrollment Now Under 7000 Mark

Total registration for the present semester is 6,895, whereas total registration for the past semester exceeded 7,000. Of the present students, 5,594 are day students and 1,301 are attending night classes. Returning students totaled 3,923 and re-admittances, those students who dropped their courses or took a leave of absence, totaled 553.

This sizeable drop, Miss Learnard stated, can be attributed to many things, principally that this semester there has been a leveling off of college enrollments.

The number of veterans applying for G.I. benefits has decreased. Jobs are more plentiful in the spring and many students who otherwise would be laboring through textbooks are now working.

High schools usually graduate fewer students in the fall than in the spring, and most private schools in the Bay Area have no graduating exercises in the middle of the school year.

When asked if she could give one condensed reason for the uneven enrollments in the college's past semesters, Miss Learnard replied, "In the 24 years of this college's existence enrollments have never been predictable."

The reason for this is that four-year institutions have a fixed number for the applications they will accept each semester.

Cagers Close Season Vs. San Mateo Friday

Terminating one of their most successful Big Eight campaigns, Sid Phelan's Ram basketballers face relatively weak San Mateo this Friday night at 8 p.m. in the Serra High School gymnasium.

Interested supporters may reach the Serra campus by going down Highway 101 to southern San Mateo, turning left on 20th Avenue and proceeding for about five blocks until reaching the game site.

Coach Ray Balsley's Bulldogs (3-10) feature high scoring pivot Dennis Marc, who has been averaging over 20 points per game, and recently added Idaho State transfer John Condrin, who has injected some life into the usually hapless peninsula five.

Positive Results Stem From Proper Preparation, Attendance

IT IS NEVER too early to begin advising students about the importance of regular attendance at classes and about setting a pace for themselves to coincide with instructors' lectures and assignments.

The dangers of failing to do so are too great for any student to disregard.

As a matter of fact, the early portion of the semester is the period in which a great number of students make or break themselves. There is something about the opening weeks that seems to induce students to take their classwork lightly. Instructors are engaged in preliminary details, books are being purchased, students are dropping and adding courses, and a general air of uncertainty pervades the classroom, lending itself to the numerous pitfalls that students invariably encounter in the early part of any semester.

Most outstanding among these pitfalls are cutting or arriving late to class, paying scant attention to instructors' lectures, and neglecting reading assignments.

Avoiding rather than succumbing to these temptations is especially vital during the early weeks. The students who begin studying only a few days before their first midterm examination usually find that their response has come too late, that they will either reflect their lack of preparation in their tests or will exhaust themselves in a 24-hour a day cramming program to attain average grades.

(A frightening total of 854 students here found themselves in this predicament at the end of last semester and failed to attain a 1.5 grade point average. The upshappy result: they were either denied readmission or placed on strict probation.)

Too often it is during the pre-midterm hours of exasperation and discomfiture that students, in the midst of their feverish last-minute perusals of material, realize that a little less cutting and a little more systematic studying would have kept them from falling behind.

To take another approach, we can also enumerate the positive rather than the negative results that stem from adequate preparation. By keeping pace with classroom assignments, students can go into a lecture with confidence, prepared to assimilate more information and participate in pertinent discussion, thus gaining a clearer view of the subject and making it much easier for themselves when examinations come their way.

Coming CAB Day Enables Students To Examine, Question Organizations

WHEN the college's many clubs and organizations set up their "information booths" in the courtyard on Club Activities Board Day Friday during college hour, students will be accorded an excellent opportunity to examine the offerings and question the representatives of the respective campus organizations to acquire an overall picture of the college's social life prior to joining an organization as the semester progresses.

While scholastic pursuits must be placed above all else in any educational institution, extra-curricular activities are an equally vital part of college life. Most educators are agreed that a certain amount of diversion can prove a worthwhile supplement to, and a relief from, the rigors of note-taking, memorization and examinations. A student must relax sometime, and the college's clubs offer him many ways in which to spend those hours of relaxation.

Clubs often have a particular appeal for the college's many students from out of town. These people, many of whom are in San Francisco for the first time, may find that taking part in the activities of a campus organization can go a long way toward acquainting them with their college, and eventually, their newly adopted city.

CAB Day need not be termed a recruiting drive, for there is nothing compulsory about associating oneself with an organization. The respective organizations are simply showing that what they have to offer may make some students' days at the college more pleasant and rewarding.

Cha, Cha, Cha-Chow

Dancing Seagulls Drum Up Worms

During the rainy, foggy, and dreary weeks that open spring semesters here, there is a phenomenon attributed to a select society of sea gulls that feed on the grassy slopes in front of Science Hall.

The unusual aspect of these flying hobos is the method by which they feed. All the gull has to do to get his meal is beat on the ground with his webfeet and reach down and pick up the worms. The stamping of these ten or more birds of the sea reaches its peak between showers when the grubs would otherwise take refuge in the deep wet soil, but the artificial rain created by the stamping of feet keeps the worms on the surface.

The stamping looks roughly like a Cha Cha without any pause for Cha Cha Cha-ing. By this measure the sea gull defeats the adage that the early bird always gets the worm, for these birds eat morning, noon and night and are so fat that without the aid of the hill where they feed they could not get off the ground.

The scientific explanation for the drumming of the gulls, according to Kenneth L. Hobbs, life science instructor here, has no scientific backing; however, the sea gulls come here to feed on the abundant crop of worms and other small animals, and they do have an odd gait to their walk.

Most of the world's coffee is grown in the equatorial belt north and south of the equator, at heights of between 1,000 and 5,000 feet.

Coed Can Handle Wild Horses, But Skiing's Rougher

By Geneva Warner

First semester student Sandra Sherman, an amateur horsewoman with more than 150 trophies and ribbons to her credit, found that she had to have her registration processed by John Brady, co-ordinator of Student Welfare, because of an unfortunate accident over the mid-semester vacation ca broken leg acquired during a skiing adventure.

Miss Sherman, a transfer from University of California, has had a long career in both riding and owning horses, and one broken leg isn't about to stop her, for this is her third experience with the same type of injury.

She started riding at the age of nine at the Concar Ranch in San Mateo, where she keeps her horse, began showing about seven years ago, and jumping five years back. Jumpers and hunters are the two types of horses used when showing, but Miss Sherman prefers the latter.

Sam McGee, her first hunter and the one on which she won many of her awards, has been turned out to pasture in San Mateo. Her second horse, named Opera Gloves, is a young beauty whom she sold during Christmas vacation. At the present she is looking forward to buying another hunter whom she will call Smirnoff.

Back through the years the record shows that Miss Sherman is a collector of trophies, ribbons and prizes, representing a large amount of sterling. Performance in all types of riding, English, western and bareback, won Miss Sherman the Allen Reits Memorial Trophy in 1955, the first year it was offered. The Lowell Riding Club presented her with the Inter-Scholastic Trophy in both 1956 and 1957 at their yearly horseshow.

Winning in the medal classes at the American Horseshow Association show both in 1956, on Sam McGee, and in 1958, on Reno O'Neal, made her eligible for the Winter Garden in Madison Square Garden, but each year she decided not to attend.

In December of last year, Miss Sherman won her most recent trophy at the Concar Ranch challenge trophies show, taking first place in western riding and second place in both jumping and English riding. She also was awarded the Best Sportsmanship award for that year.

Foresight

By Dick Dyer

SEVERAL years ago when television was in its infancy, programs ranged from mediocrity to downright trash. Today, with TV in its teens, shows range from mediocrity to more mediocrity, although little realized.

Of course there are a few good shows, a handful of informative and interesting documentaries, and an occasional worthwhile spectacular once a month, but what is television between times generally adds up to humdrum entertainment.

Monopolizing the field undoubtedly are the Westerns with nearly 30 different saddle sagas being shown each week. Two thirds of these oaters are of the "adult" variety. This means more dialogue and less gunfire or, better yet, as George Burns puts it, horse operas "in which the Indians are over 21."

Westerns are not alone to blame for TV's anemic condition, although they help considerably. Practically every other show on the air needs a shot in the arm somewhere along the line. Even the majority of new shows are sagging failures as witness the latest Nielsen ratings.

Man With A Camera, a flop from the start, dies this month along with Patti Page, Haggis Baggis, and Behind Closed Doors. Your Hit Parade, George Gobel, Milton Berle, Eddie Fisher and George Burns are all scheduled to disappear by May. The only new program safely in the top ten is The Rifleman.

Business is better than ever for television film companies, what with the big three, Desilu, Screen Gems, and Revue, grossing an estimated $100,000,000 in the current fiscal year, and Walt Disney, $48,500,000, almost $13,000,000 more than he took in during 1957.

Despite the fact that television is a grade A industry, budget and talent-wise with the potential for the same caliber programs, the public is still being fed C quality shows. Reports have it that even a number of Western stars, writers, directors, some producers and Madison Avenue bigwigs are complaining about the routine, filmed shows that are being ground out like hamburger seven days a week.

They want better material, more preparation, longer shooting time and whatever else it would take to get away from hackneyed scripts. This writer feels that viewers should be offered more great plays like the Old Vic's Hamlet, more top documentaries in the style of the Bell Telephone Science series, and more refreshing specials like An Evening With Fred Astaire.

Shots At Random

By Jim Clifford

WE ASKED the [illegible] he'd mind leavi[illegible] fice while we worke[illegible] desk.

"I'm gonna stay. If [illegible] mind," he said.

We put up some futile arguments, but when he hit the editor in the mouth (we have a pretty tough editor, too) we thought we'd better let him stay. As it turned out the stranger was a very interesting personality — once he settled down to polite conversation.

The ill-proportioned six foot, four inch, 135-pound stranger placed his size 16 combat boots on our desk and extended a work-worn hand. Mustering up all the courage we could, we shook his hand, but only after we had grabbed a pair of scissors and kept them at the ready.

"The folks back in Alpine Oak call me Wise Luke!" he told us, "but ya'll can call me Luke if you want to. Luke P. Casper's my full name. The P. stands for Plato. I showed a lota talent around the cracker barrel at the general store, so the town chipped in and sent me to college so I could learn some school-taught philosophy."

Luke took some tobacco and paper. He deftly rolled a cigarette. All was silence for the next two minutes as our rural visitor wrestled with a filter tip. He finally attached the filter to the roll-your-own, took a long puff, blew a ring into the air and said something about "thinking for himself."

We asked him to tell us more about his journey to the big city.

"I'm supposed to go back home," he drawled, "and expound with some more wise sayin's . . . I pretty well used up all the original ones. The City Council sends someone to college every 25 years. The last time they sent a girl, but she upped and got married. She never did come back. They made me sign a contract."

We asked Luke what he thought of college life so far.

"I sure enjoy City College, but I never thought I'd live through that registration day. I think some city-bred teachers are prejudiced against us country folk. Almost every time I went up to select a class they'd say it was 'closed.' Another time I was kicked out of line for wearing my bib overalls, and I had to change and go through the whole thing all over again."

We'll be awaitin' . . . Meanwhile, back to the copy desk.

Anyway, we'll have well-rounded personalities, like the Phi Beta Kappa in Max Schulman's Barefoot Boy With Cheek, who rented a tuxedo to attend the dinner party held by a fellow pal — the one who flunked the college entrance exam, went into the business world and became a multi-millionaire.

Hurley Village Gives Way To Arts Building

By Vicky Aumann

Another example of the fact that the old must give way to the new will be seen when the first foundations for the new Arts Building are laid in the latter part of May.

This area, bare at the present time, was originally known as Hurley Village. Named after Major John J. Hurley, a former instructor at the college, who was killed in action in Italy in 1944, the village was composed of 250 prefab units rented to World War II and Korean veterans. It was constructed by the San Francisco housing authority to provide low cost housing for these ex-GI's and their families.

All expenses were paid by the federal government, who had previously overcome the added difficulty of finding a feasible route to bring the 20 by 50 huts from Livermore, in order to escape the problem of low bridge overpasses.

The veterans lived in the village for almost 12 years and only last year were all the huts completely torn down and cleared away to make way for the construction of the new Arts Building.

Hurley Village, however, is not the only project to have to give way to a new one. As some park in the new reservoir parking lot, few realize that they are riding over a spot that once was almost overflowing with Waves, however, not of the same kind that will one day in the future fill the reservoir.

During the war, the navy leased the property where the two reservoirs now stand from the Water Department and set up in 1942 an induction center for women into the Waves.

There were altogether 19 different buildings, including 13 very large dorms which could hold 1,500 women at one time, plus a big cafeteria, infirmary and auditorium.

In the spring of 1946 the college learned that the Navy was going to discontinue the center. Immediately, officials from the college got in touch with the Navy department and received permission to move to the center in September, 1946, at the same time as veterans started pouring into the college to continue their interrupted education.

Originally scheduled as a temporary part of the campus, it was not until the bond issue of 1948 that enough money was raised to build Cloud Hall, and with its completion, the college gave up the West Campus.

Mermen Again Return To Big 8 Swim Activity

By Vicky Aumann

After a prolonged absence, swimming has at last returned to the college as a major sport.

This will be the first time that Random has had a conference schedule in the sport, and Coach Roy Burkhead showed his great enthusiasm, as well as expressing his delight with the idea.

Burkhead, a professional swimming coach and former head track coach here, has been appointed coach. In 1956 he took over full time instructing duties in the health education department and consequently resigned from his former athletic post to accept the new position. From 1942 until 1946, Burkhead was a physical education instructor in the Navy, and spent much of his time at the San Diego Naval Training Center.

Four teams will be competing against the college and will include Stockton, San Mateo, Oakland and Sacramento.

Although the present team boasts of such stars as Jack Stone, All-City diving champ of 1958; Gene Gayner, All-City backstroke star of 1957; Craig Schwarz, winner of the 50 and 100 meter 130 class of 1957, and Robert Urrea, backstroke, there is still a crying need for more freestylers and sprinters, as well as distance men.

ROY BURKHEAD, former track coach at the college, now in command of the newly formed Ram swimming team.

According to Burkhead, 12 men have signed up thus far, but in order to have a balanced team to partake in college level meets, it should consist of from 15 to 17 men.

Practice is held at McLaren Park from 3-5 Mondays through Fridays, and if there are any potential swimmers at the college, Coach Burkhead would be most happy to hear from them.

Informal meets against teams from Treasure Island and San Mateo are being worked out to get the team in shape and ready for the first conference outing against Sacramento on March 13.

Eight meets are scheduled through March and April, and the winners of the Big Eight Conference will compete in the All-Northern Championships to be held at Watsonville on April 24 and 25. Competing will be the winners from Central Valley, Golden Valley, the Coast conferences and the Big Eight. The emerging champion team will then take part in the State Championships at Santa Monica May 7, 8 and 9.

Net Squad Meets Sacramento Friday

With the loss of the entire 1958 Big Eight Conference Championship team the Ram tennis squad will face Sacramento in the league opener this Fri[illegible] with [illegible] Coach Roy Diederichson announced last week.

The entire team is composed of newcomers with all but three recent graduates of local high schools. The ladder is composed of Fred Botsford, Balboa, No. 1; Jack Bracken, RioVista, No. 2; Paul De Quartro, who attended the college last year but didn't play any competitive tennis, No. 3; Larry Draper, Lowell, No. 4; Hank Seoble, No. 5; Bob Musi, St. Ignatius, No. 6; Sam Hiodl, Balboa, No. 7; Mike Vincent, Lick Wilmerding, No. 8; Lou Cooper, who was in the Army last year, No. 9, and Kent Cummins, Lincoln, No. 10.

In practice matches this season the team has defeated San Mateo High School, 8-1, and lost to Lowell High School, 10-1.

Comets Torn From Unbeaten Ranks By Local Five; T-Birds Also Fall To Red And White

By Nick Peters

Making their strongest bid to win the 1959 Big Eight Conference basketball title, Sid Phelan's Rams impressively bested Contra Costa 62-42 and Oakland 58-49 on February 13 and 17, respectively, in their "must games" at the college's men's gymnasium.

Wasting no time displaying who was boss in the Comet fray the Rams were top dog on the scoreboard after the first ten at 16-11 and didn't let up a bit, hiking the count to 29-20 at the break. Diminutive guard Mel Wilson was at his best during this spree with a lucky 13. Meanwhile, pivot Bill Simmons was doing a yeoman job on Tyler Wilson, holding him to only three fielders out of oh-so-many shots.

Continuing their successful brand of ball the college showed a 41-29 margin midway into the latter half and from then on it was a breeze as the Comets could only muster two field goals in the last ten minutes of play compared to the Rams' 10, and it ended at 62-42, the locals' largest margin of victory this season.

Simmons held a dazed Wilson to 6-all in the first half, while taking scoring honors with 19 in the process. Wilson finished second best with 16, his season's high, and Vern Coleman, Wilson's teammate at Washington High, climbed the boards for 12 rebounds and that leadership.

Against the Thunderbirds the Rams had a little tougher go and it took all they had and then some to down the defending champs, 58-49.

At the start it was anybody's game and the lead changed hands several times before the locals could pull ahead at 12-10 with 9:47 remaining in the half. This type of see-saw competition was evident throughout the half, and at the break the home squad enjoyed a four-point advantage at 27-23.

During the first ten minutes of the second stanza the Birds were pecking at the Ram lead behind the combined 13-point total of Hawkins and guard Bob Johnson. This, however, did not get out of hand as Cleo Cofield showed his mettle under pressure with 11 points while Simmons was collecting three two-pointers to forge the Phelans ahead at 46-36 with 10 to go.

The two teams were fairly evenly matched for the remainder of the game, and at the final horn it was 58-49, with the Rams recording their second win over the Rockwell A.C.

"Big Clee" Cofield tied for scoring honors with Hawkins at 18, Cofield made it a double with board domination at nine.

Baseballers Drop Opener To Indians

Without so much as one day on the practice field, the Ram horsehiders played the Stanford Braves last week and lost 2-8 at Stanford.

The unfavorable weather, which plagued the college's baseball forces for the first two weeks of training, kept them off the practice field and undoubtedly hindered their effectiveness. Stanford, however, had been able to practice in fine peninsula weather and looked as ready as can be expected for the year's first encounter.

Starter Bob Lee, a freshman right-hander, pleased Coach Lee Elsan with four innings of fairly steady hurling for the Rams. Base hits were few and far between for the locals as they were outslugged 12-6 by the Braves.

The squad took infield and batting practice for the first time last Tuesday and figures to be in better shape for future contests. Coach Elsan has scheduled several games with high school varsities to go along with tilts which include Treasure Island, Hamilton Field, and the California junior varsity in a very good practice schedule.—By JIM PAYNE.

Ramblings

By Nick Peters

CELEBRATING Washington's Birthday like they owned the place, Stockton's "redshirts" threw a scare into Sid Phelan's Ram cagers before bowing to the locals, 50-45, last Monday in the men's gymnasium.

It's beyond us how a team like the Mustangs (with an 0-10 slate prior to that contest) can give the league leaders such a close battle. Just one month ago the Rams had to really sweat it out in the Mudville matchbox, barely edging the Stocktons 61-63. And it took a 29-point effort from the slights of Bill Simmons to do it.

It all boils down to the fact that Sid's boys are at their best when the going gets tough and seem to be "down" when a team with an unimpressive record is their rival. In justice to Frank Boyle's Stockton five, we'll have to admit never seeing a more hustling aggregation.

Oakland City College has gone on record claiming a national two-year college defensive record by its 1958 undefeated Big Eight Conference champs, boasting a 48.5 defensive average over the entire season, eclipsing the mark of 49.0 set by Cameron of Oklahoma in 1955. However, a closer investigation of the T-Bird tabulations reveals that the East Bayers allowed 1402 points over a 28-game span for a 50.1 slate instead of the claimed 48.5.

In league play the Oaks did have a 48.5 average on the basis of 679 markers in 14 hassles. If the record is stemmed on that performance, Sid Phelan's Ram cagers are on the verge of tucking a national record under their belt since they have a 46.4 loop defense mark, being scored upon only 557 times in 12 contests with but two remaining games (at press - time) against relatively fruitless San Mateo.

While on the subject of Oakland we feel that it's our duty, in behalf of the Big Eight, to apologize for the uncalled for madman antics of one "Wild Bill" Rockwell, an athletic coach in said league.

What he does on his stomping grounds, the Oakland gymnasium, is his business. On the other hand, when he starts hitting the road with his unethical tactics it's time for a comment. His vigorously protested complaint against a technical foul charge in the last Oakland-City College contest here in our men's gym was truly a sight to behold. (These are the exact words [illegible] Coach Rockwell [illegible] Coach Roy Diederichson announced last week.)

After the disputed call was made, he jumped off his team's bench, marched to the scorers table and voiced some very, crude remarks to students, referees and faculty alike. In a fire-eyed jaunt from the locker rooms to the gym at halftime he pushed a student aside in a war-like march to the players' bench.

No doubt about it the gym was really ROCKIN' WELL with "Wild Bill" Rockwell at large. Hands down, this incident wins our nomination for The Bad Show of 1959!

Modestans Stopped 45-34 As Mel Wilson Leads Cagers To Eleventh Straight Loop Win

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Blazing down the home stretch of a Big Eight cage grind that has thus far been run on a clear and fast track, Sid Phelan's Ram cage charges chalked up their 11th straight circuit win by way of a 45-34 dumping of the Modesto Pirates last Friday night at Modesto, but were still unable to wrestle the loop lead out of the hands of a hungry gang of Contra Costa Comets, who squeaked out a last-minute 61-60 decision over Oakland, on the same evening at the losers' court.

Both clubs remain deadlocked for the league crown with identical 11-1 records.

In the Modesto fray, Hank Jones' Bucs, who marketed a waning game throughout the affair in a desperate effort to keep the score within reach at all times, found themselves off to a quick 4-0 lead, thanks to an 18-foot jumper, followed by a lay-in, both on the part of sharpshooter Don Benner.

The Modestans' dream of upsetting the apple cart on the heralded Red and White machinery proved itself short-lived, however, as little Mel Wilson poured in three consecutive fielders to pave the highway to victory.

Although the Raisin Packers came out with a superb effort in tying up the fearsome scoring punch of Bill Simmons and Cleo Cofield (they counted only 14 between them), the efficiency of Wilson, whose ten point effort in the first stanza accounted for nearly half of the Ram scoring in that period, was too much to contend with, and saw the locals leave the floor with a 22-12 advantage at the intermission.

Throughout the second 20 minutes the Modestans again displayed their slow, deliberate offensive style, relying on the old adage, "They can't score without the ball."

Phelan, though, came out with another successful counter move, inserting his controversial ball hawk Vince Rocchi, whose heads up ball handling and tremendous defensive output proved itself a big factor in bringing home the proverbial bacon.

Flying High

Loop Bosses High In Appraisal Of Ram Scoring Ace

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Bolstering the front line of a highly spirited aggregation of Ram cage artists which seems to pack all the necessary punch to hand head coach Sid Phelan his second Big Eight court crown in three attempts, "Boomerang" Bill Simmons (pictured above) has definitely proved himself one of the most fearsome performers in the circuit, and appears nothing less than a lead pipe cinch to close out the season by way of All-Northern California honors.

Although, in Phelan's own words, "We have no stars on this club—there are five men out on that floor, and every notch in the win column can be attributed to nothing but an all out group effort."

A consensus of other Big Eight tutors seems to point toward the fact that Simmons is the man who packs the silver marbles in leading the Red and White to their terrific 1959 hardwood successes thus far.

In the words of Contra Costa skipper Rudy Hansen, "Simmons is far and away one of the toughest all-around basketball players Sid (Phelan) has produced in his three years at City. His defensive stranglehold on Tyler Wilson (the Contra Costa ace was held to six points in the last Ram-Comet fray) was nothing short of phenomenal."

"Along with Wilson and Rufus Hawkins (Oakland), he's the finest I've yet to see," says Santa Rosa pilot Bob Mastin of the six-foot, four-inch Ram cage artist, while Sacramento boss Gerry Anderson flatly believes, "Stop Simmons, and you've got all Phelan's machinery pinned to the wall."

These are only three, but it seems well apparent by his conference performances thus far that, with San Mateo's Ray Balsley the only coach yet to run up against the former Polytechnic dynamo, Simmons looks to be the biggest problem faced by mentors who push their respective units up against the Ram forces in Big Eight play.

As for Simmons himself, the 19-year-old court whiz, who received AAA "Player of the Year" distinction while performing for Jim Witt in 1956, plans to continue his education at Oregon State College as a General Education major.

Rocchi Leads Rams In Comeback Win

Reserve guard Vince Rocchi came off the bench in the second half to rally a cold Ram quintet to a come-from-behind victory over cellar-dwelling Stockton at the college's men's gymnasium on February 23.

The Mustangs, gunning for their initial win of the league campaign, got off to a fast start and led the Rams by as much as seven points during the first few minutes of the ballgame and held a four-point bulge at halftime, 22-18, largely on the eight-point output of Willie Simpson.

Following the break, Rocchi and forward Bill Simmons took command of the Ram attack and the college squad closed the gap. Rocchi opened the scoring in the second stanza with a layup and the Red and White began its comeback.

Simmons, who had played sparingly because of three personal fouls picked up early in the contest, began hitting, both from the inside and from the outside and finished up with 16 points for the second half and a total of 18 for the night, which made him high point man.—By WARREN DOWNES.

Friday Deadline For 'Mural Cage Entries

Petitions for team participation in the three spring intramural basketball leagues must be submitted to either Director of Athletics Jack Gaddy in the men's gymnasium, Dean of Student Activities Enoph Hillsman in his Science Hall office, or Associated Men Student President Ted Keller in his mailbox in S-140, no later than this Friday, March 6.

Applications may be obtained at the Dean's office or in the men's physical education department.

To be eligible all players must have an AS card for the Spring '59 semester and his card number must be written on his team's application. No team may enter with less than eight signed players.

Membership In 65 Campus Activities Open To Students

By Pat Perkins

SIXTY-FIVE on-campus clubs and organizations are now open for membership for the spring semester. All students old and new are invited to participate in these various clubs, including the International Relations Club, the Broadcasters Club, the Drama Club, the A Cappella Choir, the Band Association and the Engineering Society.

The various on-campus sororities and fraternities are now preparing for the up-coming rushing activities.

Friendship and fun seem to be prevalent factors in the Filipino Club, according to the newly elected officers. The officers are Pastor Amoroso, president; Ben Vitalis, vice-president; Aurora Quintong, secretary; Leclani Blas, treasurer, and Fred Tamayo, sergeant-at-arms.

Under the leadership of President Tony Bartmann, Vice-President Jerry Herrmann, Secretary Konrad von Emster, and Treasurer Barry Solloway, Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity is looking forward to a very successful semester. One of their projects for this semester is the Blue-Book Blues dance to be held March 13.

Planning for their Fireside are the officers of Gamma Kappa Beta sorority. The officers are Sandy Courtemanche, president; Evonne Weiss, vice-president; Mary Kelly, pledge mistress; Annette Moquin, treasurer; Joan Soldate, corresponding secretary; Helen Lenci, recording secretary; Pat Perkins, sergeant-at-arms; Sue Shawl, historian, and Carolyn Vukasin, custodian.

The Christian Science Organization will meet during College Hour this Friday in C-161. A reception will be held at 124 Eastwood Drive at 7:30 p.m.

Deadline for news for Club Cavalcade is each Wednesday at noon in The Guardsman office, S-304.

Semi-Annual IFC Smoker Slated For Tonight In Men's Gymnasium

Fraternities Roll Out Red Carpet For All Interested Men Students

Inter-Fraternity Council members will present their 12th consecutive smoker tonight from 7:30 to 10 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, Sam Allen, IFC president, announced last week.

"All men students of the college are invited to the smoker, which has as its main purpose the recruiting of new members for campus fraternities," Allen said.

The smoker is also designed to acquaint students with the different fraternities and to inform them as to the types of achievements and activities of each organization, the IFC President stated.

Each fraternity will have individual tables on which to display group pictures, trophies, and any other material attached to the organization. Members will be present to explain specific functions of their fraternities and answer any questions which might arise, he asserted.

"Sign ups will take place at the fraternity tables. There is no obligation to a man who signs up for a fraternity. This is only a procedure used by the organization to assist them in contacting the prospective members," he declared.

Allen urged all men students who attend the smoker and apply for admission to a fraternity, to sign up for three or four organizations before making a final choice as to the one they wish to join.

The evening's program will start with the introduction of Ralph Hilisman, dean of Student Activities, and the officers of IFC, followed by short talks from the presidents of the fraternities, Allen said.

Entertainment for tonight will include musical and comedy skits, to be presented by each organization, after which cokes and doughnuts will be served, he added.

The fraternities that will be represented in tonight's smoker are Alpha Kappa Rho, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Alpha Sigma Delta, Beta Phi Beta, Beta Tau, Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Lambda Phi, Phi Beta Delta, Tau Chi Sigma and Zeta Phi Sigma.

Two City College Women Serve As Midway Escorts

Tours of the USS Midway and of the Bay Area, as well as dining and dancing at the expense of the U. S. Navy are being offered to two women students here, according to Joseph A. Amori, director of student placement, as he discussed student job opportunities.

The Midway, an "attack-class" aircraft carrier due here this Sunday, recently held a queen contest conducted by Ensign G. A. Kingston, former Associated Student president here.

The winner of the Miss Midway contest, a girl from Lexington, Kentucky, will meet the Midway on its return to the Bay Area from the Far East, thus commencing a three-day, pre-paid vacation. The Queen's party will include her brother (a Midway sailor) and another enlisted man to serve as escorts for Vicky Aumann and one other woman student chosen from the college.

Calling for dining and dancing at some of San Francisco's "famous" restaurants, the itinerary includes lunch at Fisherman's Wharf, dinner at a San Francisco restaurant, and then a show on Sunday. The Top Of the Mark is on the schedule for Monday, March 9, following a possible sight-seeing tour of San Francisco and the Bay Area.

Serving as a flight officer aboard the carrier, Kingston related that his services for the contest were "volunteered" by his executive and special services officers when they learned that the ensign is from the ship's home port, San Francisco.

Summer employment application forms are now available from the Office of Student Placement located in S-188 of Science Hall, according to Amori.

Eleven H&R Students Divide $2350 In Scholarship Money

Eleven scholarships with a total cash value of $2,350 were awarded to several students of the Hotel and Restaurant division of the college last Thursday.

Among the largest awards were three $250 scholarships given through a trust fund of the late Harvey M. Toy. Those receiving the awards were Jim Wheeler, Charles Katz and Sam Battistone. Peter Coakley was the winner of the Harvey Toy Special Scholarship of $250, and Larry Ernest earned a Harvey Toy Scholarship, also consisting of $250, for his cooking.

Duncan Hines, well known food authority, was the donor of the $250 award going to Sherman Bohn.

Taking a $250 prize was Fred Price, winner of the Arthur Davis Memorial Association, which is given in memory of the late Arthur Davis by the National Association of Meat Purveyors.

George Bertosini was the choice for the equally coveted Executive Steward and Caterers Association Incorporated Scholarship; it was $250 also.

The last award, the G. H. Roberts scholarship of $100, was given to Shoren Fenton. The Roberts Association is headed by Bill Dixon, an executive of Turkey Brand corned beef.

The five Harvey M. Toy scholarships that amounted to $1,250 were made possible by a trust fund of more than $25,000 that was given to City College Hotel and Restaurant Foundation. Tremaine Loud, owner of the Hotel California, is president of the association. The foundation has invested Toy's trust fund in stock; the interest from the stock makes the Toy scholarships possible.

Recipients of the preceding cash awards were chosen by the Scholarship Election Committee which was composed of Wendell Muntz, Carl Rutledge, Lawrence Wong, and several other men representing industry as well as education.

Other scholarships are also available to students in the Hotel and Restaurant Division. The H. Y. Watson scholarship of $200 is given to deserving students who go on to do third and fourth year college work. Also the Statler Foundation awards a $2,500 scholarship for students who go on to a third and fourth year of college or university work.

Information is now being sent to the college about a possible $3,000 award to be given by Stanley Korman for students who train in Australia.

Tentative plans are also being made for a possible award of different utensils needed in hotel and restaurant kitchens for students. If this plan develops as expected, Wearever Aluminum will be the donor.

Men outnumber women 25-1 in the Who's Who In America. The youngest of 50,645 celebrities listed is actress Margaret O'Brien.

Guardsman Sets Coming Editions

A tentative schedule for publication of 14 issues of The Guardsman this semester was determined last week at a meeting of members of the Publications Board, according to Don Seratti, board chairman and Editor of The Guardsman.

The Guardsman's tentative dates of publication after today are Wednesdays, March 11, March 18, March 25, April 1, April 8, April 15, April 22, April 29, May 6, May 13, May 20, May 27 and June 3.

The board is responsible for all printed matter distributed on campus, with the exception of administrative material. All printed matter to be distributed on campus must be submitted to the board in accordance with certain regulations.

Any organization or campus group intending to publish material for distribution to students on campus must have the master copy and the distributed copy approved by the board chairman, Seratti stated.

Failure to comply with the rules will result in cancellation of the copy by the board chairman. All posters to be displayed on campus must also be approved by the chairman before being posted, he declared.

Eligible Students Urged To Join Honor Society

Students eligible for membership in Alpha Gamma Sigma were urged to join immediately by William Richardson, adviser to the scholarship honor society, in order to enjoy special benefits afforded its members.

The society is open to all students who, during the previous semester, completed 12 units or more, and attained a minimum of 42 grade points with no less than a B average exclusive of physical education.

Student Material Needed For College Literary Magazine

Original contributions of students are now being accepted for possible publication in the college magazine, the Forum, which will be put together by the Forum Club, which meets during College Hour every Friday in S-257.

All types of writing and literary style and form are encouraged. Short stories, short one-act plays, essays not over 1500 words (serious or humorous), criticisms of books and authors, current interest articles, poetry, light verse can be submitted to Catherine Connolly, Forum adviser, in C-331-A, or to any member of the Forum Club. Especially welcomed are translations from other languages or original compositions in any language, as well as humorous or satirical material.

With April 1 set as the deadline for all contributions, manuscripts should be typed double space on 8½x11-inch paper, Miss Connelly said, adding that ideas for artwork or cover design can also be submitted to the Forum office.

Material to be published is chosen by a group of 25 to 30 readers. All students who want to read for the club are invited to attend the meetings during College Hours.

Tentative publication date is June 1. Free to members of the Associated Students. Forum will be sold for 50 cents to other interested parties.

Future plans for Forum Club meetings include discussions, recordings by Dylan Thomas, poetry reading to jazz and classical and oriental music. Club officers have not as yet been chosen, and this club is temporarily operating as a committee with Alexander Klimenko and William Forshay at its head.

Forum magazine first appeared in 1937 in mimeographed form and later evolved to its present printed form.

Program Signups To Start Monday

Applications for appointments for next semester's program planning will be taken in S-160 beginning next Monday, March 9, Waddington Blair of the counseling department stated today.

Blair also stressed the desirability of applying for an appointment on the day assigned, according to the schedules listed below.

Students whose names begin with T to Z, inclusive, Monday, March 9; A to C, inclusive, Tuesday, March 10; D to H, inclusive, Wednesday, March 11; I to M, inclusive, Thursday, March 12; N to S, inclusive, Friday, March 13; and beginning Monday, March 16, anyone may make an appointment.

Students who fail to apply for appointments on the day designated will not be permitted to do so until Monday, March 16, Blair warned. Counseling will begin a few weeks later, but registration numbers will be issued in the order in which students make their appointments in the counselor's office.

Observation

Appearance No Criterion For Individualism

By William Forshay

OUTLANDISH costumes, weird parties, suicides, and newspaper notoriety have brought to public attention a small group of non-conformists known to most as the "beatniks." Often these rather pitiable creatures are extolled as the only true individualists in America and this poses a problem. What is an individual and what is a conformist?

Before attempting a definition, it is wise to see who is using these names and labels and whether they are used as epithets or symbols of regard. Generally, visitors to our country and even our own educators have used the word conformist as though it meant something roughly between idiot and communist.

Such notable visitors and critics of the American scene as Bertrand Russell and our own John Dos Passos have consistently berated us for our "mass-produced culture," our standardized educational methods in which "even the most stupid can graduate from secondary school if he can just stay around long enough," our monotonous sameness in food, habits, and clothing, and our concept of education as a "memory process rather than a thinking process."

Some of our educators deplore and at the same time set teaching standards for the "mass mind," the "average" and our psychologists repeatedly point out the gang effect of American life which has a definite similarity to the banding together of cavemen for mutual protection. As parts of a trend, all branches of science have combined to tag, label and categorize the trend in isms, ists, and epithets. Conformists, or people who conform, are called sheep, cattle, the group, the gang, the ingroup, and so on ad infinitum et ad nauseam.

Webster defines conformity as a "state or quality of being in agreement, harmony, etc., congruity" and to many, this seems admirable. What, actually is wrong or evil about being like your friends? What is the harm in being in harmony? Is it true that the American people are in harmony? THIS should be news to everyone.

The harm, of course, is mental in that in seeking to attain an average which doesn't put too much of a strain, we lose part of our potential.

However, it is the people who are average in most ways who have the real problem. Somewhere along the line they deviate ever so slightly from the "norm" set up by themselves for their group and they try desperately to conceal this deviation. Often, the method used is like that of a boxer trying to cover up when he's been hit; a wild striking out of the left hand towards others who are more different in order to draw attention away from themselves.

On the other hand, there are those who so desperately desire to be different that they will adopt almost any fad or fashion in order not to be classed with the "herd" or the "squares" as they classify society. Still, they too conform to the standards of their select group to the same extent that the so-called "squares" conform to their group.

Where then are the true individualists? They are in colleges and often in high schools all over the nation. They are the instructors who preface their lectures with the statement, "Students do not have to believe what I teach, only learn what I teach."

These instructors abound at all institutions of higher education where teaching has not solidified into a mass of factual memory work based upon premises daily being disproved.

Believing as they do in the ability of any college student to learn to think for himself, these instructors labor tirelessly to overcome the trend toward constant acceptance and create a new trend toward reasoned and thought-out objection to or acceptance of any new doctrine and most of the old ones.

Setting examples themselves by the way in which they accept and reject new ideas, these teachers and professors stand out in the true Websterian definition of an individualist as a person who thinks and acts independently. Students who follow their example will find new vistas of education and understanding opening before them without the bugaboo of class or social acceptance hanging as a dark shadow over their heads.

Council Votes 'Rainy Day' Fund To Supplement Federal Grant Of $10,000 In Educational Aid

By Roy Twitty

Rainy-day funds previously used as the Associated Student emergency reserve finances were set aside last week by Dr. Oscar Anderson, college controller, with the approval of the Student Council, to supplement a federal money grant that will be loaned to needy students here.

Establishing student loan funds at institutions of higher learning throughout the nation, the federal government recently appropriated $48,500,000 under the National Defense Education Act, passed during the last session of Congress.

Each college and university applying for the Defense Act money is apportioned an amount the government feels expedient to give, provided that the college add an amount equal to one-tenth of the total sum alloted.

Requesting nearly $60,000 of these defense funds, the college has received $10,201 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1959. Adding to this money, the Associated Students will contribute $1,209, bringing the total to exactly $11,500.

Hoping for several more years of grants under the defense act, the college will lend the money to approximately 30 students per year, but not exceeding $1,000 per person, Anderson asserted. Loans of not more than $50 per month will probably be the policy of the college until more funds are acquired.

Good scholarship and a definite need for financial assistance form the basis for granting the loans to needy students, Anderson announced as he addressed the Student Council.

Scholarship requirements probably will call for at least a "B minus" average. Economic need of an applicant under 21 years of age will be based upon a statement of assets signed by the students' parents.

Eligibility of students applying for the loans will be determined by a working committee consisting of four or five faculty members from applicable areas in the college, and students involved in AS government. Included on the committee are Dr. Louis Conlan, president of the college, and Dick Cottrell, president of the Associated Students.

Payment of the loan money to eligible students, excepted by the college to number between 20 and 30 per semester, will be made monthly.

Following majority approval of the loan program, the council returned to routine business.

"Finances are coming along quite nicely, and we might even have money left over," Ben Northrop, Finance Chairman, reported. Some organizations, however, still are not 100 per cent card holders, he continued, and they will not receive funds until all members possess cards.

Three positions on the President's Cabinet changed hands last week from student officials who did not return to the college. Sworn into office were Bruce Littman, Parliamentarian replacing Ralph Prior; Walt Pierce, replacing Norm Singer who resigned the post of Election Commissioner under doctor's orders; Josh Willens, Awards Commissioner replacing Gene Craft, and Deanne Gutierez, cards sales chairman.

'D-H' Programming To Begin Today

Students in the D-H alphabetical group should report to the counseling office, S-160, today for appointments to plan their Fall semester 1959 programs, according to Waddington Blair, counselor here.

Pre-registration numbers have been equally divided into five alphabetical groups on the following days: T-Z, Monday, March 9, (past); A-C, Tuesday, March 10, (past); D-H, today; I-M, Thursday, March 12, and N-S, Friday, March 13.

Beginning Monday, March 16, students may apply without regard to alphabetical division; however, adherence to the above schedule and making early appointments each day will result in early registration numbers, Blair declared.

In order to avoid confusion, students should be aware that the object of pre-registration week is to allow them to receive registration numbers and to make appointments for next semester's program planning—not for the program planning appointment itself.

Blair emphasized that once appointments have been made they must be kept by the students as scheduled, or prior to the time of appointment, canceled and a new one made, either in person or by telephone through the counseling office.

Those who fail to follow this procedure will have to accept numbers for a later registration period, he warned.

Alpha Sig's Blue Book Blues Set For Friday Night

Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity will continue a tradition started in 1947 when they present their annual spring semester dance, the Blue Book Blues, according to the organization's president, Tony Bartmann.

The dance will be held on Friday, March 13, from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight in Smith Hall. Admission will be $1.75 per couple and the dress semi-formal. Steve Paul's band will furnish the music.

Highlighting the evening's activities will be the announcement of the woman chosen as the Sweetheart of Alpha Sigma Delta. The Sweetheart will be chosen by the active members of the fraternity and will be presented with a perpetual trophy with her name engraved thereon.

The Sweetheart contest had its beginning in 1954 and has become a Blue Book Blues tradition, Bartmann added.

Immediately following the announcement of the Alpha Sig Sweetheart, the drawing for the door prize, a 1950 Plymouth convertible, will be held.

The dance tickets will be numbered and one-half dropped into a bowl. The Alpha Sig Sweetheart will then draw the winning number.

Deadline For Dropping Courses Set For April 1

Petitions for dropping courses should be submitted on or before the April 1 deadline, according to Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator, Division of Instruction. There have been no changes in the curriculum at the college this semester, except for the climination of the nursery school assisting course.

A tentative list of summer session classes will be available on April 1, and only courses with an enrollment of 20 or more will be open. Students requesting certain summer session courses may consult their counselors for information concerning registration and curriculum.

'Orchard' In Full Bloom

OUT OF THE UNHAPPY PAST of Madame Ronevsky comes the tutor of her dead child, as John Rose, playing Trofimov, asks, "Don't you remember me?" Virginia Roe in the lead role clasps his hands and breaks into tears as Frank Stuckey playing Epihodov and Joann Kreling as Varya look on.

Chekov Comedy Slated For Four More Showings

By Daniel Toal

Anton Chekov's Russian comedy, The Cherry Orchard, initially presented last Friday and Saturday evenings at the college's Little Theater under the direction of drama sponsor Michael Griffin, is in full bloom with performances scheduled this Friday and Saturday nights, and March 17 and 18, starting at 8 o'clock.

The play, set in early 20th century Russia in a province approximately 100 miles from Moscow, presents an aristocratic family situation during the arrival of the bourgeois era in Russia, and the family sees its aristocratic standing slowly declining because of mounting debts.

At this time they must decide either to sub-divide their cherry orchard and lease the land, or enter a common cannery business in order to save their estate. Family tradition, individual ability and human emotions enter the situation and in turn bring about the climax.

The situation of the play is based on Chekov's family background and realism plays an important part in creating the proper atmosphere. Although classified by the author as a comedy, it has at times been presented as a tragedy, much to his dislike.

The necessity for exactness in character in order to convey the correct meaning was emphasized by Griffin, and special merit was given to Dave Terry who portrays Firs, an elderly and sage servant of the family. Terry, a veteran performer of the college's theater, gives his finest performance, Griffin stated.

No production is complete without the assistance of the technical director, Griffin added. This duty was carried out by Charles Huntley with the aid of Tom Wilson, assistant technical director; Jim Robinson, property man; Dave Terry, set designer, and John Rose, music director.

Music Department Schedules Jazz Band Contest, Choir Performance

Catering to all categories of music lovers, the college music department's activities for this semester will range from a jazz band contest to an A Cappella Choir concert.

Robert A. Morton, director of the choir, stated that, besides the ever-present need for good tenors, the choir also welcomes additional sopranos and basses.

"No experience is needed," Morton said, "just the ability to sing well and learn rapidly."

Applicants are still being accepted to the choir, which now has approximately 40 members. Officers for this semester are Clifford Cebard, president; Margaret Baxter, vice-president and Jean Thompson, secretary-treasurer.

The choir will also make appearances at the University of California and at the 23rd annual commencement here in June.

Officers of the Men's Glee Club, which will sing at San Jose State College in April, are Allen Wendell, president, and Neal Pace, secretary.

Meyer M. Cahn, director of the college band, has also announced a full list of events for the band. The pep band will continue to play at rallies and games, and the concert band will present an evening of symphonic music on Friday, May 29, in the library. Concerts are also scheduled for the humanities classes.

3 Merchandising Students Honored

Three top awards were presented to five merchandising students here at the recent ninth annual convention of the Future Retailers of California according to Elizabeth Helseth, adviser to the Merchandising Club.

The convention was a meeting of high schools and two-year colleges in the state, and a coed merchandising major was also elected to the position of State Treasurer for the organization.

The Miss Retailing trophy was awarded to Sylvia "Katie" Shields, who is presently employed at the Fairbanks and originally from Anchorage, Alaska. This contest was based on a job interview situation, and entrants were judged on appearance, personality and their future plans for a retail career.

Robert Tiedeman, who works for Western Industrial Supply Company, received the Mr. Top Salesman award and was judged on his ability to sell men's accessories.

A trio of coeds won the Display Trophy, all of whom are on the Display Committee here. Those receiving the honors were Vivian Bays, chairman; Barbara Prongos and Cynthia Lawrence.

Sixteen merchandising majors from the college attended the banquet and ball, held at Rickey's in Palo Alto, along with Miss Helseth. San Jose City College was host for the event

Program Changes Result In Even 2000 Exchange

Two thousand courses have been dropped and 2,000 courses have been added here to date, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

Miss Learnard stated that the total number of program changes is about the same as the last three or four semesters. However, she urged that students be more careful in the future when planning their programs in order to avoid needless confusion.

Cloud Hall Library Open From 8-4:30 For Student Usage

Information concerning subjects ranging from accounting to zoology may be conveniently obtained between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. every day of classes in the college's Cloud Hall library, according to Irene Mensing, reference librarian.

Capable of accommodating as many as 700 students at one time, the library is stocked with 50,000 books. Open-stacks, a circulation desk, a reserve reading room, a periodical section and a reference department are all easily located.

In the "open-stacks" students are permitted to locate books which may be checked out for a period of two weeks. The books may be checked out at the circulation desk with presentation of the student's registration card.

At the circulation desk are located the books, magazines, and pamphlets which may be used for one or two hours or overnight and throughout weekends. In the reserve reading room bound volumes of magazines for library use only, are housed.

Unbound magazines and current newspapers, which may be charged out for overnight use, are found in the periodical room. In the reference reading room such reference material as atlases, bibliographies, encyclopedias, yearbooks, college catalogues and The Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature are readily obtainable.

Student Comments May Help Improve College Procedures

MANY TIMES in the past, and again during this young semester, we have observed students in the process of commenting on some aspect of the college.

Such comments are quite natural on the part of the students; a certain alertness and an awareness of what is going on around them are characteristics one looks for and expects to find in any student body. And although there are many exceptions at this college the above mentioned qualities are for the most part in evidence here.

Some students voiced their opinions on the college in general, while other remarks are restricted to a certain facet of the college, such as the cafeteria, registration procedure, the library and The Guardsman.

Of the many comments we hear during the course of each semester, quite a few are suggestions for improvement of the college in one way or another, implications that things aren't running quite as smoothly as they could be.

We like to see students showing an interest in their college, but in most cases, criticisms voiced or queries raised don't go beyond the ears of the listener. Thus, although the speaker might be nursing some genuinely useful ideas, they are doomed to obscurity unless he discovers a means of finding campus-wide recognition.

The means available to every student here who has something to say is the Ram's Horn, a letters-to-the-editor column that The Guardsman reserves for anyone who takes time to put his ideas about the college on paper and submit them.

The Guardsman will accept and consider for publication in the Ram's Horn letters from any student of the college. Letters, which should be brief to allow publication of as many as possible, may be submitted to The Guardsman office, S-304.

If the comments we hear around the campus are an accurate indication, potentially useful ideas are constantly being generated in many students.

By finding an outlet in the Ram's Horn, these pertinent questions could be answered to the asker's satisfaction, and students' observations could prove worthwhile to the college in general and even bring about a change the initiator never imagined was possible.

Students possessing such ideas are invited to see for themselves what the written word can accomplish; we hope to see a host of "guided missives" on our desk tomorrow morning.

The Fine Art Of Dentistry

THE THREE "CHARMS" above were the handiwork of former dental student Marcia Bernstein. Miss Bernstein created the art work with the various tools used in inlay casting. She later extended the dental art to men's tie clips.

Former Student Finds New Use For Dental Equipment

Marcia Bernstein, former dental student here, under the direction of Ruth Inskipp, dental assisting instructor, used her knowledge of dentistry in a most creative fashion which has not since been copied by any students.

As she was casting inlays, part of the dental work, she had an idea that the same principles could be applied to making variously shaped heads. This idea was later extended to making men's tie clips and charms which could be used for bracelets.

A figure is carved from a block of wax. This takes skill because the figures are very tiny. The figure is then invested (put in a ring of plaster) and baked in an oven at about 1290 degrees Fahrenheit. The gold inlay is heated until red hot, after which centrifugal force molds it into the invested ring of plaster.

Miss Inskipp expressed enthusiasm over the progress made by her student. Such practice, she explained, helps in dental training. Miss Bernstein is now working with an orthodontist. Other methods frequently used in dental training often include carving figures with a dental drill to gain proficiency with that instrument.

Observation

By William Forshay

EXAGGERATED CLAIMS, super-sales pitches, hour long television movies that stretch to two hours with commercials, the "hard-sell," the "soft sell," the "funny sell," plus the recent publication of several books similar to The Hidden Persuaders — all of these bring to focus the question of American business integrity.

Basically, integrity is honesty, but in a business sense more is implied than actually stated. Webster defines it for example as "moral soundness, freedom from corrupting influence or practice, especially, strictness in the fulfillment of contracts."

This last point is the one where our businessmen so often fall down and where, as a result, the first parts are also in question.

Few people realize that when they buy something, sign a business agreement, or do business in even so small a way as buying a cup of coffee from a vending machine, they are initiating a contract with whatever business is accepting their money or trade.

Furthermore, the contract is two-edged. They have to pay the price agreed upon, and the dealer has to deliver the goods he promises.

One way to entice customers (feminine particularly) is to advertise a sale. This is (supposedly) a mass reduction of prices on one or several items through oversupply, fire, a change of season or whatever other reason can be dreamed up. Primarily, it is intended to make money.

Some of these "sales" are actually fraudulent. For example, almost everyone has seen these GOING OUT OF BUSINESS, FORCED TO VACATE, and other such sales where the owner is going out of business when he dies or where he'll vacate his profitable location when the building burns down.

One such outfit downtown advertised a "free" bottle of "imported French perfume" for every visitor. The gimmick was the "import tax" of 20 dollars which had to be paid for this "free" gift which smelled like violet toilet water.

Another gimmick is the contest that seems so easy that any moron could win it, such as counting diamonds or beads in a small square which is mailed to your home on a postcard. Everyone is a winner here though the prizes are generally fourth prizes of 50 dollar diamonds. This still sounds good—but . . .

This writer, investigating one of these contests through the Better Business Bureau, found that the profit is made here by (1) persuading the winner to have the stone mounted in an expensive setting sold by the store, or (2) in the fact that the store can declare any diamond in the store to be worth 50 dollars. An underpayed part of the advertising blurb adds that you cannot receive the stone unless you do have it set. (Continued next week.)

H&R Dept. Gets Students From Foreign Lands

By Vicky Aumann

A Frenchman who hates to cook and a Japanese, the eldest of 11 children, are only two of the many overseas students enrolled in the Hotel and Restaurant Department this semester.

Paul Lorda, 21, from Basque, France, describes himself as an itinerant veteran of the French Army in Algiers.

Although uncertain as to his future plans in the hotel and restaurant profession, there is one thing he is completely certain of. "I don't like to cook, but it is necessary to learn all the different parts in the profession," he said.

At the moment, Lorda is working in a French restaurant downtown to gain further experience. His present position: cook.

Another Frenchman, Bernard Le Coq, 21, from Paris is also in his first semester at the college. Explaining his reason for coming to the U.S., he said that in Europe very strong ties exist between family members and, in most cases, sons have to follow in their father's footsteps.

Le Coq's father is a doctor, but he has no interest in this profession and hopes to graduate in Hotel Management. After his two years of study here, he intends to continue at Cornell University, Ithaca, New York.

Le Coq likes America a great deal but he does have one complaint.

"In the U.S. everything goes too fast, and I can't see how the people here find the time to do anything," he said.

The Japanese student is 21-year-old Akihiko "Micky" Shibata who previously had worked for five years in the Daichi Hotel in Tokyo. While working there he first heard of the opportunities offered at the college, and at the beginning of this year he received a special four-year visa to study and work in the United States. Shibata hopes to complete two years at the college and then work in a "modern American hotel" to further enrich his already extensive experience.

Altogether 55 new students have enrolled in H&R courses this semester, including one from the Philippines and one from Switzerland.

Collegiate Citizens Steal News Banners

COLLEGE STUDENTS have recently stolen the spotlight, for a little while anyway, in the news.

Governor Brown is steadfastly opposing moves to hike tuition at California State colleges. Proponents are urging increases on grounds that college students today can afford the move. Brown claims those pushing the increase base their reasoning on the number of cars they have seen on college campuses. The Governor retaliates with the employment figures of students working their way through school. (Gee, It feels good to be important.)

Even more interesting is the recent Twentieth Century television show. The two-part documentary, Generation Without A Cause, makes one stop and ponder the opinions of the older generation in regards to the younger.

Last Sunday collegians were called "frustrated, conformists, and complacent." Senator Fulbright claimed the average college man or women radiates the indications of impending doom. He points out that over-contentment caused the fall of the Roman Empire. This is, in his thinking, the college students' trademark.

LUKE CASPER, our philosophical friend from Alpine Oak, thinks we should join a cause and pacify the older folks. Luke feels that parking meters are one of the biggest causes of frustration.

"We oughta' get together and sign a petition for the repeal a' them things. Last week I was downtown gettin' some store-bought duds, and I was a'watchin' the time close so I wouldn't overpark," Luke related.

"But one time I let it slip by me. I was tryin' on some a' them Ivy covered pants with the funny belts, and I remembered about the meter. So I runned out and put in a nickle. Everybody was a'laughin' and pointin' at me. Then I realized I hadn't any pants on. Now that's what I call frustrated —and plenty embarrassed. Yes, sir, I'm all for the gettin' rid a' them things."

"If they all want a cause we'd better hurry up and give 'em one," he said.

After "expounding" a bit more he left the office . . . with his Ivy Leaguers on backwards, of course.

REALISM IN MOVIES . . . For those who insist on it. On location in Spain for the filming of Solomon And Sheba, one of the scenes called for the villain to sneak up and stab the hero. The bad guy was sporting a full length robe and it brushed one of the torches that lined the wall of the temple. Result: one-in-a-lifetime shot for the photographer, great publicity for the film and the hospital for the actor. The producers will keep the scene intact.

JOHN MARTINEZ relates a chuckle he received last Saturday. He asked a friend what his major was. The buddy, who flunked Math 51 twice, stared ahead for a moment, and then turned to Martinez and said: "The way things are going now I should get a degree in Math 51."

SAN MATEO'S Student Council recently invited the Alpha Phi Epsilon drill team, the Marching Hornets, to appear before their student body. Alpha Phi President Tony Lopez, his chest stuck out with pride, offered a suggestion for the college's other groups to band their talents together in a variety show for the student body here.

I said to a girl the other night: "Do you girls really like conceited men better than the other kind." And she said: "What other kind?" — Samuel Johnson.

Crosby Extravaganza Magnificent Fiasco

BING CROSBY, Hollywood's most familiar face, made his second and last appearance on television this season in an hour-long musical variety show last week.

The first few minutes of the program, in which Bing belted out a rousing new version of Old Man River, seemed to indicate that the rest of the show was going to be as good. Unfortunately, it wasn't.

His guests, James Garner and Jo Stafford, were replacements for Frank Sinatra and Rosemary Clooney, but added little to the program because of the below par material and stale songs given them. One section of the show was devoted to trite chatter, with "Maverick" playing it overly coy, while another segment found Garner atop a huge wooden rocking-horse, singing a Western ballad. This would have been ideal for Roy Rogers, but Garner just can't sing.

Dean Martin, well-oiled as ever, dropped in "unexpectedly" on the festivities, did a take-off on his own singing style, and after more coy chatter, vanished.

Crosby's no-talent sons, Philip and Dennis, ridiculously introduced each number with special lyrics set to the tune of the Children's Marching Song. Anyone notice that Dennis was wearing one of his dad's most expensive toupees?

It must have cost more than all the scenery combined, for there were only a few piles of cheap lumber in the background. As far as that goes, the producers should have saved their limited money because the show was an all-around waste of time.

And as for Crosby's attitude toward unfavorable critics: "I guess people . . . expect just too much."

EMPTY SADDLES in the old corral — Gunsmoke, TV's most successful show, is to be buried in boot hill at the end of the spring season. After the usual summer re-runs, it will be permanently replaced by Skagway, an Alaskan-located adventure series.

One may wonder why CBS is dumping their biggest hit in favor of a "dark horse." Frankly, so does this writer. Gunsmoke's rating was practically unsurpassable. Since its debut in 1955, it has been beaten only twice, in June, 1957, by Danny Thomas and in January, 1959, by Wagon Train.

The only apparent reason for replacing it is the fact that star James Arness' five-year contract expires this June and will not be renewed. Why? Possibly the network sees the handwriting on the wall and feels that sooner or later Westerns will lose their popularity. Maybe CBS is worried about another Wagon Train upset of 42.7 to 38.4 in the Nielsen ratings. Could even be that the network believes that after a long rest the series can be revived and made more powerful than before.

Nevertheless, Arness hopes to start his own production company and make a comeback by the fall of 1960. Until then, Gunsmoke is scheduled for at least a 365-days vacation, beginning in September.

RETURN OF THE CREATURE — Out of the smog and into the fog steps, you guess it, Doh Sherwood. The old Navajo Kid has ended his Saturday night program and is leaving Los Angeles and coming back to the Bay Area to do live TV.

His new weekly half-hour show, to be called Sherwood As Is, begins Thursday, March 19, on Channel 2, supplanting Bud Foster's Coaches' Bench. Don's program will have the usual format: a girl singer, a combo and more interviews with controversial personalities (like Marie McDonald?).

San Mateo's Marc Undisputed League Scoring King With 347; Simmons Sixth, Cofield Ninth

By Nick Peters

Cornering the market on practically all Big Eight offensive departments, Dennis "The Menace" Marc, College of San Mateo's freshman pivot, rampaged through the 14-game 1959 league season by scoring 347 markers for a 24.8 average to wind up as the loop's unchallenged point king.

A graduate of Daly City's Jefferson High, where he won All-Northern California honors last season, the 6-5 sharpshooter nipped, by one, the 346-point total recorded by Stockton's Eddie Davidson last season thus making him the second highest single season scorer in Big Eight history.

Had he not encountered the college's Rams in his last two games he conceivably could have cracked the 366 standard set by Modesto's Milt Kane in 1956.

Going into the final pair he had 317 digits in 12 games—a 26.4 clip. At that rate he would have eclipsed the record, but was "held" to 30 points by the locals and Kane remained mesh monarch by 17 markers.

With one season of league eligibility left, Marc, who hit for double-digits in all his games—reaching his season high of 34 against Modesto, tallying 31 points four times and surpassing 20 on 11 occasions—has a good chance of erasing the mark in 1960.

Runner-up to "The Menace" was "The Shuffler," Contra Costa's prime offensive weapon, who hit for 330 points and a respectable 23.6 while recording the season's highest single game total—36 against San Mateo.

Bill Simmons (210-15.0) and Cleo Cofield (187-13.4) were sixth and ninth in league scoring, respectively.

Andrakin Shoots 69 In Golf Win

Ram golfers emerged victorious over Menlo and San Jose Junior College in a pair of pre-season matches at Sharp Park last week.

Nick Andrakin, number one man for the college, shot an impressive 71 against Menlo, and a torrid three under par 69 against San Jose to set a seasonal low mark for the squad.

Playing a two-point per man type match the Ram duffers dumped Menlo 8½ to 7½ and edged by San Jose 9½ to 8½.

Mike Andrakin, Nick's brother, played in the number two spot in both matches and carded an 81 against Menlo and a 74 against San Jose.

Highlighting the ladder beside the Andrakin brothers are returnee Larry Barr, number three; and John Stedin, number four.

Capital City Hosts Ram Big Eight Swim Debut

After successful practice meets against San Mateo and Treasure Island, the college's swim team will take part in its first league battle against Sacramento this Friday.

For the first time in 17 years, the college will have a swimming team entered in the Big Eight Conference.

Sacramento will host the meet with the first event, the 440-yard medley relay, scheduled for 3:15 p.m.

Ted Williams, at 40, became the American League's oldest bat king when he belted .328 for the laurels in 1958.

Wet Track, Loss Of Vets, Further Cinder Problems

Hindered in its training by rain, and with few returnees from the team which won the state title last year, Coach Lou Vasquez nevertheless feels that his Ram track squad, bolstered by many newcomers and brimming with enthusiasm, will give a good account of itself in its first practice meet against the San Jose State College Frosh next Monday at San Jose.

Some of the newcomers are sprinters John Smith, Alex Ellis and Ed Tank, last year's All-City high school 100-yard champion, hurdlers Leroy Wise and Ed Moliso, quarter-miler Jim Payne, half-miler Steve Barnett, milers Tony Vance, Pickens Rodgers and Jim Dennis, two-milers Al Orlovitz and Norm Johnson, who have shown impressive strength and stamina in early workouts. Field event men are shot-putter Don Briemle, broad-jumper Jess Searles, and high-jumpers Othello Carr and Ralph Mathis.

Coach Vasquez urges all men interested in trying out for the track team to report to him as soon as possible to draw equipment and begin training.

Following is the complete schedule:

March 14—San Jose State Frosh at San Jose.
March 21—Big 8 Conference Relays at Modesto.
April 2—Modesto and Contra Costa at Modesto.
April 11—U. Frosh and Oakland at Berkeley.
April 17—Stockton and San Mateo at Stockton.
April 24—Sacramento and Santa Rosa at Sacto.
May 2—North, Cal. JC Relays at Santa Rosa.
May 9—West Coast Relays at Fresno.
May 16—Big 8 Conference Finals at Sacramento.
May 23—Trials North, Cal. JC Finals at Fresno.
May 30—State Meet (Cal. Relays at Modesto.

'No More Track': Patton

Receiving a severe blow, the college's track team learned that Paul Patton, 1958 State mile champion and record holder, would not compete during the '59 season.

Patton feels that his schedule, which calls for classes until 4 p.m. plus an evening job, would not allow him time to properly condition himself for athletics. He revealed that he hopes to return to competition next season.

Marc, Wilbon Head 'Dream Team' Five

WITH the State two-year college basketball championships scheduled for Long Beach this weekend and a thrilling 1958-59 Big Eight cage campaign just behind us we feel quite appropriate in distinguishing the league's men from the boys—our All-Conference choices.

Selecting five outstanding players out of a group of 40 or 50 good competitors always leaves the writer wide-open for controversy, but nevertheless we stick our head in the proverbial noose and choose a quintet which, in our opinion, has performed most steadily game after game in the 14-tilt loop sked.

First of all, it would be hard to keep the likes of Dennis Marc (San Mateo) and Tyler Wilbon (Contra Costa) off anybody's "dream team." The two high scoring front-liners have both been averaging close to 23 points per game, are better-than-average rebounders, can shoot from just about any position and can record a good game no matter the opposition.

The other front-line spot goes to our own Cleo Cofield, who has not particularly been the star in any single Ram game, but has been going at a steady clip all season, both on the boards and in the scoring column.

Guards spots on this elite aggregation would be ably manned by Rufus Hawkins (Oakland) and Tommy Harper (Santa Rosa). Hawkins was the backbone of a good Thunderbird squad and showed some improvement over his play in 1957-58 for which he was unanimously named to the All-Northern California five and also grabbed Player of the Year plaudits.

Freshman Harper did a remarkable job while converting from the grid-iron (where he won Conference honors) to the hardwood and contributed a great deal in giving the Redwooders a potent club which spelled defeat for much of its opposition.

Combining this fearsome five as a single unit of destruction, provided they maintained their present scoring averages, it would seem a phenomenal 99 points per 40-minute game—and if that ain't burning the nets, we'll eat our beret!

As a second team, which would merely tally "only" about 75 digits a game, we'd pick Jim Hatchett (Oakland) at the pivot spot flanked by Ram Bill Simmons and Willie Simpson (Stockton) at forward. Guards would be Bobo Leonard (Sacramento) and John Condrin (San Mateo).

Squelches will come from Simmons admirers who will insist that he should belong on the first five. Granted, most coaches and metropolitan writers will have him up there, but for our money he couldn't tie the others' shoes for consistency. When Simmons is "on" they don't come any better, but on more than one occasion (he hit for only 12 against Santa Rosa in a pair) he's had his troubles and proved to be just dogmeat for the enemy.

There you have it. Our 1958-59 All-Conference five and a 10-man supporting cast. If you don't agree, I'll put my five against yours and bet on it!

Brute Force Prevails In AAA Title Hassle

Still on the subject of basketball we'd like to voice an opinion or two about the recent Academic Athletic Association (AAA) battle of giants for the local prep round-robin cage title.

The setting was perfect. It was the last day of the regular season and 5,000 fans jammed Kezar Pavilion to watch highly favored Washington (7-0) take on perennially strong Polytechnic (7-0), winner of 27 straight league frays under the likeable Jim Witt.

Prior to the initial tip there was an air of security over the Eagles with their talented and slightly overrated Steve Gray leading the pack. This contest, as it later turned out, clearly illustrated that an extensive amount of over-confidence may easily lead to the downfall of a team. And on that day that air of assurance crumbled and Washington met his Waterloo.

Washington's Eagles were the picture of finesse, with a highly polished finish, while Poly's Parrots represented brute force, rugged aggressiveness and an extreme desire to win. As it turned out, when the polish ran up against the brute force the luster got smeared (57-42), and was literally rubbed out to a point where it won't let fans forget that an athletic contingent with a great deal of heart can more often than not upset the apple-cart on a ball club that relies simply on talent without employing that needed drive which often means the difference between victory and defeat.

Upset: Cagers Lose 41-40

Rams, Comets Both Surprised Via 'Do Or Die' Buckets; Cage Loop Closes In Final Deadlock

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

The old saying that "Fools make feasts which wise men eat" saw its hour of practical application last Friday night as the final buzzer of the Ram-San Mateo Big Eight wind-up faded into the murky, peninsula hills, bemoaning one of the greatest upsets in the entire history of Ramdom: Sid Phelan's boys appeared to have "blown" the conference crown by way of a last second 41-40 dumping at the hands of "insignificant" College of San Mateo.

SID PHELAN, Ram cage boss.

There is another saying, however, which reads: "A friend in need is a friend indeed."

For, over a hundred miles away, in the little town of Santa Rosa, another set of culinary bandits were hard at work breaking up an equally important Big Eight championship feast; this one honoring Rudy Hansen and his frisky gang of Contra Costa Comets.

Although the Bear Cubs' big upset performance had to be attributed to a complete team effort, it was the work of All-Conference nominee, Tommy Harper, who splashed in a pair of field goals and a free throw in the last nine seconds, that sent the East Bayers to the guillotine by a 59-56 count.

As neither Santa Rosa nor the Mateans were able to put the pilfered goods to championship usage, the Comets and Rams were shipped to the USF field house last Monday night for the playoff affair, a situation which both Phelan and Hansen might well remember come next Thanksgiving Day.

In the peninsula scrape, a torrid shooting output on the part of Vince Rocchi, who piled up nine of his ten points in the first six minutes of play, saw the Rams with a comparatively easy time of controlling Coach Ray Baisley's crew and, further aided by the exceptional board play and ball handling of Cleo Cofield, leave the floor with a 23-14 advantage after the first 20.

In the tail end of the battle, though, it was an entirely different story. Bolstered by the rugged board work of the highly touted Dennis Marc and the red-hot shooting of Johnny Condrin, the Bulldogs began to chew away at the Ram lead until, with 27 seconds remaining, they had moved within a single marker of knotting it up at 40-all.

Ram Nine Given 12-5 Buc Belting In Practice Tilt

Lee Elsan's Ram baseball forces came out on the short end of a 12-5 score in an abbreviated and informal practice tilt against Balboa High School last week.

The contest was called in the sixth inning because of darkness.

With approximately 35 hopefuls looking for berths on this year's squad and only 17 uniforms available, Coach Lee Elsan allowed everyone a chance to prove his worth, but no Ram wore a uniform.

Now 0-2, the Rams displayed a definite lack of power. This came to light when in two games the only real smash was a triple unloaded by catcher John May in the Balboa game. The locals were outhit by the Bucs 8-6.

Elsan, who is still experimenting in an effort to find a winning combination, seems more concerned with his weak pitching staff than with the ineffective hitting.

He is going with his only experienced hurler, Bill Simmons, as his number one starter, with a newcomer, Chuck Carroll, presently lining up as his number two man. Bob Lee has caught Elsan's eye more than any other pitcher, but will probably be used only in relief. There are several unproven chuckers working for the one remaining relief spot.

JV Cagers Pile Up Impressive Record

Led by two high scoring ballplayers, Wilson Williams and Nick Krikorian-tz, the Ram Junior Varsity basketball team has piled up an impressive 8-1 record this season under the guidance of Coach Alex Schwarz.

The JV's wins have been over some of the local high schools and a few of the Bay Area's service clubs while their sole loss came at the hands of the S. F. Marines.

One of their wins came over a two-year college varsity. San Benito's cagers were handily defeated by the college's JV's early in December.

The team is composed of Tony Hobbs, Don Levy, Williams, Krikorian-tz, Claude Smith, Dave Nigel, Charles Pickens, Don Kennedy, Mike O'Brien, Bill Kelly, Carl Mitchell and Bob Ross.

Due to a late start the team didn't have as many games as Coach Schwarz had planned, but next year there will be a full schedule.

Courtmen Pitted Against Bulldogs

San Mateo, one of the league favorites this year, will battle the Ram tennis team this Friday at Balboa in the Rams' second Big Eight match.

The Rams, who lost seven of their top competitors from last year's championship team, will be out to see just how strong they are. Should they come out with a victory, the season could be very successful, since the Bulldogs were picked to be among the conference leaders, along with perennial champion Modesto and Oakland.

In their league opener last Friday at Sacramento the Rams shutout their hosts, 7-0. Fred Botsford downed Panther Don Detemmin in the feature, 6-3, 6-1, and the number one doubles match found Botsford and Jack Bracken waxing Determan and Ron Scates, 6-1, 6-1. Other Ram singles victories were recorded by Bracken (6-3, 6-3), Larry Draper (8-6, 10-8), Hank Scobie (6-3, 0-6, 6-2) and Mike Vincent (6-0, 6-1). Draper and Scobie handily won the second doubles competition, 6-2, 6-0.

35 Organizations Suffer Financial Distress From Lag In Card Sales; Only Eight Budgets Passed To Date

Insufficient funds, a lag in Associated Student card sales, and budget requests from 35 separate AS-supported organizations have contributed to the financial walloping suffered by Ben Northrup, AS Finance Chairman, pictured at right.

With only $20,000 to work with, Northrup is forced to cut all budgets on an equal basis; however, he stated that the organizations will receive an additional sum if card sales increase.

To date, approximately eight budgets have been passed by the Student Council, including a partial one of $3,000 allocated to The Guardsman for publication of 14 issues of the college newspaper.

The executive budget was frozen because of the fact that all Student Council and Presidential Cabinet members do not possess AS cards, Northrup stated.

The decrease in AS card sales this semester could have resulted from the constant changing in the position of AS Card Sales Chairman. Two appointed salesmen resigned from the post, leaving the job to the AS President and his Cabinet, Northrup said.

Card salesmen sold 1,600 cards, which fell about 700 short of the proposed goal of 2,300 for this semester.

Competing for the sales awards were seven organizations. Student Council, Cabinet, Inter-Fraternity Council, Inter-Sorority Council, Club Activities Board, Sophomore and Freshman Classes and 18 individual salesmen. Awards were presented last Friday at the Club Activities Board dance.

Florists Plant 500 Flowers In Pattern Of Letters CCSF

Almost 500 flowers will be planted by the floriculture classes in a pattern that will form the letters C. C. S. F. at the corner of Ocean and Phelan Avenues, according to Harry E. Nelson, department head.

Nelson added that the main purpose of the planting project is to identify the location of the college.

This display will then become a permanent feature of the campus grounds.

The idea of such an undertaking was first proposed by Raymond Milani, who is in charge of all San Francisco public school grounds.

Actual planting and care of the display will be the responsibility of the floriculture classes. A total of 145 santolina chamaecyparisus will be combined with 350 mesembryanthemum floribundom.

Nelson also stated that the planting is already in progress and that the flowers should be in full bloom by June.

Greenhouse Site Of Florists' Dinner

An Italian dinner highlighted the Spring Open-house festivities held at the ornamental Horticulture Center last night, according to Maryhope Cummings, instructor of retail floristry here.

Local retail florists, wholesalers and growers from the Bay Area attended the open-house program, the purpose of which is to train future employees and acquaint the florist industry with the activities being performed at the college.

Prior to the dinner, the guests viewed the facilities of the Horticulture Department as the retail floristry students demonstrated window displays and the different kinds of work done in the florist business.

Literary Magazine Calls For Writers

Writing students are once again reminded that material is still needed for Forum, college literary magazine. Also needed are typists and readers who will select material on a point basis, and prepare it for publication.

Meetings of the Forum Club are open to all students interested in writing or reading for the club. Membership is not required for submission of material.

All types and styles of literary work are welcome, and deadline for submission of all material is April 1. Manuscripts must be typed and double-spaced on 8½ by 11 inch paper.

Applications For GI Bill Benefits Exceed Last Fall

To date, approximately 900 new veteran students have applied for compensation under the Korean G.I. Bill. This number is 200 below that of last semester; however, as all applications have not yet been received by the veterans office, the total of 900 is still tentative.

According to Robin Dunn, veteran counselor here, 1,000 veteran students of last semester have returned to the college. These returnees, not including new applicants, constitute approximately one out of every five students enrolled here.

Percentage-wise, Dunn claimed, veterans who complete two years of study here and who receive their degrees generally hold their own with non-veterans. The principal reasons for this are the compensation received and the maturity brought about by military service.

CAB Prepares For Spring Festival

With another successful Club Activities Day and dance behind them, CAB committee members are now concentrating all their efforts into the planning and staging of the Spring Festival, to be held early in May in the Cow Palace.

Clubs who failed to send representatives to the fifth meeting of the CAB which was held March 3, are now on a 30-day probationary period. This means that at this moment these clubs have no voting powers at CAB meetings.

The Recreation Association, Chinese Students Club, Collegiate Christian Fellowship, Filipino Club, Hillel Foundation, Home Economics Club, International Relations Club, Alpha Phi Omega, KCSF, Broadcasters Club, Veterans Association, Le Cercle Francais, Men's Glee Club, Hotel and Restaurant Society and Pick and Hammer are the only clubs who have sent regular representatives to all CAB meetings this semester.

28-Member Committee Organizes Rally Affairs

Open to all interested students, Rally Committee meetings are held Mondays and Wednesdays from 2 to 3 p.m. in Smith Hall, room 108, John Dunn, faculty adviser for the committee, recently declared.

At present, the committee consists of 28 members with officers as follows: Ann Thuss, rally commissioner; Jimmy Poulos, treasurer; Jean Melick, secretary; Ellen Young, ticket sales chairman; Ken Kahn, head cheerleader; Rose Thomas, head song girl; Joan Toggero, publicity chairman; Osa Holm, in charge of equipment; Sam Allen, in charge of marquee, and Beverly Moore, who is Entertainment Chairman for rallies.

H&R Society Opens Semester With Big Format For Future

A multitude of projects is being ushered in by the Hotel & Restaurant Society for this semester, according to Bob Stammer, the organization's president.

A liquor demonstration will be given to some 40 students of the Hotel and Restaurant division by the Fleur De Lys restaurant on March 18. Students, all over 21, will be taught how to make some of the better known mixed drinks.

Southern California will be the setting for the annual spring trip (March 30-April 7) taken by fourth semester students. Eight students, who are elected by their H&R colleagues as well as various faculty members, will be given this opportunity to see first hand, the operation of some of the finer hotels in the state.

Biggest activity for the society this semester will be the annual dinner given in the honor of the California Northern Hotel Association. All members of the Hotel and Restaurant division will participate in the affair.

First and second semester students will wait on tables, with third semester students in charge of food preparation, and fourth semester students handling the programming, and responsible for the over-all operation of the affair, Bettosini is general manager of the annual event.

Bringing an end to this year's events for the division will be the traditional dance for the graduating students. This year the dance will be in the Hotel Mark Hopkins' Room of the Dons; dress will be semi-formal, with hours slated as 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Sophomore Ball, 'Slave' Auction, Featured By Pera

The big thing on the sophomore agenda, Miss Pera said, is the Sophomore Ball to be held at The Village. The Sophomore Class has rented the entire place and will be able to accommodate 1,200.

Also planned is a "slave auction" presented in coordination with the Rally Committee. Six top student body officers, the deans, and the members of the administration will be "auctioned off" for a day. The money received from this will go into the Sophomore Class scholarship fund.

A date for the dance has not yet been set but Johnny Vaughn has already been signed to furnish the music. The theme of the dance will be Polynesian or Hawaiian and tickets will be $2.50 without, and free with, an Associated Student card.

A Sophomore King and Queen will be crowned at the dance and Miss Pera stated that she hopes all fraternities, sororities, and clubs will submit candidates' names.

Working with Miss Pera are Vice-presidents Jean Thompson and Roy Twitty, Recording Secretary Ann Thuss, Corresponding Secretary Eleanor Villanova, and Treasurer Bob Tiedeman.

Permits Available Each Thursday

IS YOUR CAR THE TARGET FOR TODAY? Ticketing and targeting are two of the jobs of the Campus Police force. The above photo shows what may happen to students who fail to get their parking stickers for on-campus or reservoir parking. Times for obtaining permits were recently changed as noted in the story at right.

Because of a rush for parking permits, students may obtain them not only during College Hours but also every Thursday from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. in C-120, Fred Fitzgerald of the criminology department here, said today.

A team trophy was recently awarded to the Sharpshooter Pistol team of the Campus Police, in Oakland, where matches are held the first Sunday of each month.

The four-man team took first place in the compound meet against the United States Coast Guard, U. S. Army Reserve, Ford Ord No. 3, Stanford Research, Richmond Police Department, and Oakland Army Team.

The four men, scoring the individual points, are Ralph Brown, team captain, 264 points; James Olson, 254; William Donovan, 248, and Richard Gamble, 245. The counting of these individual scores gave the team a total of 1,011 points.

Professional Photography

Topnotch Camera Work Stays In Cloud Hall Exhibit Until Friday

By Peter Burr

Taking advantage of a lucky break, Madison Devlin of the audio visual aids department here, has managed to snag some 50 top award winning photographs between displays in the Northern California competition of the Professional Photographers of America for a limited showing at the college.

The competition, which is nation-wide, is designed to include professional work in all the multitudinous fields of photography such as industrial, commercial, advertising and portrait art as well as the more specialized baby, animal and wedding photography. Points won in the competition go toward the acquiring of the title "Master Photographer" of which Northern California boasts 17 in a national total of 200.

Gracing the walls of faculty alley in Cloud Hall through this Friday, the collection, in color and black and white, includes work by such well known Bay Area artists as Carl and Emily Romaine, De Genaro, and Douglas Mack.

To the casual "between classes" observer, there exists an opportunity to see an exhibition of stature and diversity; to embryo professionals in the college's photography department, a chance to utilize a trained critical eye.

To the student, interested in the appearances of the world about him and seeking to satisfy the vague curiosities of an opening mind, a collection of this type is more than just another showing of photography. It is a step on the long, hard road to aesthetic maturity in which beauty becomes an integral part of life.

Other artistic scenes include one symbolizing America's industrial potential as glistening copper tubes shine in measured rows, and another depicts the outdoor craze as a juicy piece of beef sizzles on a barbecue grill.

For the amateur and the professional, there is something worth seeing waiting in faculty alley.

Club Cavalcade

Organizations Draw Up Plans For On-Campus Activities

By Pat Perkins

DANCES, contests, and service projects seem to be prevalent on the agenda of the various on-campus clubs this semester.

The successful sponsor of the Sweetheart Ball, the Chinese Students Club, is urging all interested students to attend the club meetings during College Hour in C-266.

Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority recently completed its first service project for this spring. A valentine party was given for 45 underprivileged girls at the Youth Guidance Center. The sisters enjoyed the games, prizes and refreshments almost as much as the children did.

Deanna Guiterrez, secretary-treasurer of the Merchandising Club, recently won the title of Emporium Sweetheart Queen. Miss Guiterrez, who is on the executive training program at The Emporium, was backed by Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity.

There will be a meeting of the Hillel Foundation during the College Hour this Friday. Everyone has been invited to participate.

Highlighting the International Relations Club's program of activities are plans for a model United Nations. Student delegates from several two-year colleges have been asked to take part in this project to be held on May 9. The officers of the club, Mario Gutierrez, president; Felicity Beard, vice-president; Nelly Sosa, secretary; Jose Bian, treasurer, and Olga Tourkoff, historian, urge all interested students to join the IRC. The meetings are held every week in C-238 during College Hours.

Any organization wishing to sponsor girls for the Miss San Francisco beauty contest can send the names to David Abrahams or Jerry Lathom in C-126.

A "much-needed" meeting of the California Student Teachers Association will be held this Friday during College Hour in C-269.

St. Francis Site Of Semi-Annual Freshman Affair

Dancing to the music of Steve Paul and his orchestra, the Freshman Class will hold its semi-annual Frosh Ball, Moon Mist, Friday, March 20, in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel, according to Bob Basso, Freshman Class president.

The ball, from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight, will feature during intermission the Ambers, a local singing group. The affair is to be semi-formal and admission is by an Associated Student card or $2.50 per couple.

Highlighting the evening will be the Cutest Couple Contest in which several judges will select the couple who look the best together. Winners of this contest will be awarded trophies and flowers donated by Beta Phi Beta and Alpha Phi Epsilon. To be eligible as contestants, at least one of the partners must be a freshman.

Heading the various committees for this project are Steve Ragel, publicity; Roberta Roth, rallies, and Margaret Alvaro, Cutest Couple.

Basso, together with his other officers, Evonne Weiss, vice-president; Roberta Roth, corresponding secretary; Serge Tschernisch, recording secretary, and Larry Feldman, treasurer, promised that this will be "an evening full of fun and entertainment."

Music Lovers May View SF Symphony As Ushers

Music lovers will have an opportunity to attend the Cosmopolitan Opera, the San Francisco Symphony, and individual performances by Jose Greco and Marian Anderson at no cost by volunteering to serve as ushers for the performances.

Four ushering passes will be given out for each performance. Students desiring these passes must be in Dean Gertrude Norgard's office at 8 a.m. on the morning of the performance. The passes will be given out on a first come, first serve basis, according to Dean Norgard. The recipients of the passes are expected to be present for their duties one hour and 15 minutes before the performance.

Passes will be available for all regular performances of the symphony.

Steve Paul's Orchestra, Cutest Couple Contest, Ambers Vocal Group Featured At Frosh Ball

Rhythms of Steve Paul and his orchestra will create appropriate color for the theme, Moon Mist, at the Frosh Ball this Friday in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel, according to Bob Basso, Freshman Class president.

Dancing will last from 9 p.m. until midnight. The Ambers, a local singing group, will change the beat during intermissions.

Appropriate attire for the occasion will be suits for the men and cocktail dresses for the women. All Associated Student card holders will be admitted free, and those without AS membership must pay a fee of $2.50 per couple.

Taking over the spotlight for the evening will be the Cutest Couple. A panel of several judges will select the most attractive couple, one of whom must be a freshman in order to win.

The couple chosen will be presented with trophies donated by Beta Phi Beta and Moana Loa orchid leis from Hawaii donated by Alpha Phi Epsilon. Joe Fitzpatrick and Anthony Lopez, presidents of Beta Phi Beta and Alpha Phi Epsilon, respectively, will make the presentations.

Under the leadership of Basso, the various committee heads for this project are Roberta Roth, tallies; Margaret Alvaro, Cutest Couple, and Larry Feldman, publicity.

With the aid of Mary Perry and Edward Rogers, faculty sponsors for this function, Basso, as well as other Freshman Class officers Evonne Weiss, vice-president; Miss Roth, corresponding secretary; Serge Tschernich, recording secretary, and Feldman, treasurer, promises that this will be "an evening full of fun and entertainment."

Activities for the freshmen in the future have not as yet been decided, Basso said, because concentration has been primarily on the Frosh Ball since it is the biggest social function of the class.

UMOC Contest Starts March 30

Ugly Man On Campus posters have again returned to the campus bulletin boards, heralding the annual UMOC contest sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega fraternity.

UMOC is a national affair held each spring by the various chapters of the fraternity for the purpose of raising money for activity scholarships.

Any club, organization or society on campus, or off, may sponsor a candidate. Gene Bunch, president of the Alpha Phi Omega fraternity, stated.

March 30 to April 3 has been designated as the week for voting. Pictures of the contestants will be displayed about the campus and students, by penny votes, can vote for their favorite "Ugly Man." The contestant having the most penny votes will be proclaimed the Ugliest Man on the campus and will receive his award at a dance to be held April 3, which will climax the week's activities.

Contestants should be chosen by appearance, Bunch said, but many of the entrants sponsored by clubs under the direction of Alpha Phi Omega chapters have used various forms of theatrical makeup to assure their success as an ugly man. This decision rests with the contestant himself and is not necessary for entering the contest.

The Ugly Man contest has always met with success in the past, Bunch explained, principally because the money collected is for a worthwhile cause. Students who receive the scholarships are chosen by their scholastic standings and financial needs.

Shutter Bugs Find Miss S.F. Contest A Prized Assignment; Forms Pour In

David Abrahams and Jerry Lathom, present Guardsman staff photographers, were informed by Bob Sherwood, publicity director of the Miss San Francisco Contest, that they have been selected to be in charge of all the publicity pictures for this year's beauty contest.

Already they have taken several shots of the many contestants vying for the title and as more applications pour in, their task may prove to have "never a dull moment."

Final judging will take place at the handstand in Golden Gate Park on Sunday, May 24, and an estimated 10,000 people are expected to turn out to watch the judging.

Any women students wishing to enter the contest may send their names and addresses to Sherwood at 333 Pine St.

Pre-Registration Appointments Now Open To Students

Students who failed to make pre-registration appointments on the dates prescribed last week may report to their counselors for appointments now, according to Waddington Blair, counselor here.

Counseling appointments made this week will result in students receiving later registration numbers than they would have received if they had applied on the "preference" dates.

Pre-registration week ended with the N-S category last Friday. Each day last week approximately more than 500 students took advantage of the pre-registration period and received registration numbers and early counseling appointments for next semester's program planning.

Blair re-emphasized that appointments made must be kept as scheduled, or that students should cancel their old appointments and secure a new date by informing their counselors in person or by telephoning the counseling office at the college.

Two Coeds Win Bank Of America Business Awards

Winners in the Bank of America Junior College Business Awards program, two top-ranking business department students here were named to receive awards of $100 each, Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, disclosed last week.

Judged on the basis of scholarship, personality, and extra-curricular activities, the recipients of the two awards are Beatrice Wong and Jackie Pera.

Chosen as the foremost student in her field, Miss Wong is majoring in business administration. Miss Pera was selected as the top-ranking student whose major field of study is in the secretarial division.

Selections were made by a committee of business department faculty members, who judged the candidates on extra-curricular activities, both within and off the campus, as well as on scholarship and personality.

Following summer school at the end of this semester, Miss Wong plans to finish her studies here this fall. A member of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, she is a straight "A" student. Working as an income tax adviser for an insurance agency, Miss Wong hopes for future employment with an accountant.

Graduating this semester, Miss Pera is the president of the Sophomore Class and is active in college affairs. Desiring future secretarial employment with a large hotel or in a law office, She has studied business since graduation from junior high school and received an earlier Bank of America award for outstanding high school work.

Presentation of the cash awards will take place in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel during the business awards banquet on April 17. Members of the business department faculty, Gertrude Norgard, acting Dean of Women, and a college administration staff representative, will look on.

Bank of America sponsorship of this statewide program, in which nearly 60 two-year colleges participate is in its third year, according to John H. Becker, manager of the Business Awards Program Encouraging business students to complete their college programs and promotion of interest in industry as a career are the purposes of the program.

Fullerton Choir In College Hour Concert Friday

Portraits In Sound is the theme of the Fullerton Junior College's A Cappella Choir concert, scheduled this Friday during College Hour in Cloud Hall library.

The traveling entourage, under the direction of Francis Helvey, who is well known in Southern California music circles as an able and gifted chorus master, will present a wide range of music in a program which includes modern as well as classical numbers.

With a complement of 60 A Cappella singers, 16 madrigal singers, the conclave attains a versatility that makes vocal arrangement of works on the grand scale possible while still permitting a well balanced rendition of more sensitive music designed for the salon.

The group, which was well received at the college two years ago when appearing before a full house in the men's gymnasium, is composed of young singers studying for a musical career and some who are just musically inclined and who possess good voices.

This is an annual trip for the choir, which gives performances from one end of the state to the other.

Admission to the concert is free, as is admission to the coming college band and choir concerts.

Gamma Sigma Sigma Begins Easter Drive For Children Of City And County Hospital

"Give a quarter, a nickel or a dime, so a child's Easter will be a happy time," is the slogan used by Gamma Sigma Sigma, the college women's service sorority, as they promote their Easter Drive.

The drive, which aims to collect money to buy Easter baskets, grass, candy and eggs, is under the direction of Nancy Canning, vice-president of the sorority and chairman of the Easter Drive.

All sorority members will be carrying decorated milk cartons where students may put their contributions. The cartons will be located throughout the college campus and posted at the doors of the cafeteria during the fund drive.

"Students interested in contributing can locate the fund raisers easily because they will all be dressed alike and will be carrying milk cartons decorated like bunnies," Liz Hogan, president of the national sorority, said.

Proceeds from the drive, which has a goal of $100, will go to children in San Francisco City and County Hospital. There are about 30 children who, through sickness or injury, will not have much of an Easter, according to Miss Canning.

The drive will last one week, commencing today through March 26. Contributions may be made each day during the drive from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

If the drive proves successful, it will be inaugurated as an annual affair. The Easter Drive is one of the monthly projects undertaken by Gamma Sigma Sigma. During February, the sorority's project consisted of a Valentine party given to 45 underprivileged girls at the Youth Guidance Center.

AS Card, License, Reg. Required For Permits

In order to obtain a permit to park on campus and in the reservoir, students must have their registration license and Associated Student cards available when applying for the permit, according to Richard Parr, deputy chief of the college's Campus Police.

Students requesting a permit may receive one during each Friday College Hour or every Thursday from 10 a.m. to 12 noon at the Campus Police office in C-120.

By this time last semester more permits had been issued than this semester. According to Parr, more than 1,000 permits have been issued since mid-February.

Students are warned that parking overtime in the green zone on the ramp is illegal; only ten minute parking is allowed between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m. Violation draws a $2 citation from the Campus Police.

AGS Enrollment Now 126; Dues Payment Urged

By Daniel Toal

Rising enrollment in Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college's scholastic honor society, has reached a total of 126 this semester, according to William Richardson, society adviser.

The only disheartening point, according to Richardson, is that of enlisting active membership; only 36 have paid the $1 semester dues to date and are considered active members.

At the society's first formal meeting recently, the following members were selected as officers: Gaynor Abbott, president; Nancy Canning, vice-president, and Tom Murphy, secretary-treasurer.

Plans have been made to transmit important and interesting information to all students with the aid of William K. Mayo, dean of instruction, April 24, and Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction, May 29, in C-232.

Richardson reminded students that those who have completed 12 units or more and attained at least 42 grade points with no less than a B average during the previous semester are eligible for membership.

Entering freshmen who are members of the California Scholarship Federation are also eligible for associate membership.

The society is affiliated statewide with other two-year colleges which have organized AGS chapters, and membership indicates a scholastic ability desired by all colleges and universities.

Membership in the society qualifies students for early registration and participation in extra-curricular tutoring by which they can earn extra money while attending college.

The coaching policy is now in full swing with society members being called upon to aid students in classes ranging from algebra to zoology. The fee is usually $1.50 to $2 an hour plus carfare.

Care, Determination Typify Way To Successful Education

THE WEEKS a student spends making the transition from high school to college or university can be considered the most important of his academic life, for what he does or fails to do in this period quite often establishes a pattern he will follow through to graduation or to a more abrupt cessation of his formal education.

We cannot overemphasize the significance of this transitional period in a student's life, especially in view of the many individuals at this college who are in the throes of difficulties arising from not being aware of the vast differences between high schools and colleges.

A noted essayist recently explored the nature of problems that commonly confront college students. He concluded that a lack of adequate information about college life and the subsequent failure to adapt themselves thereto account for the ill fortune of the majority of students who fail to complete their education.

The majority of first semester students here who can be seen each year groping for an answer to their academic problems usually reflect a lack of thorough preparation for college, or, as is often the case, a lack of guidance on the part of educators or parents.

If we were addressing an audience of potential college students, we would simply urge them to inform themselves of college curriculum and plan their preparatory programs accordingly.

Advising those who have already entered college is not so easy; but there is a promising solution for these students, too.

The "late-comers" must inform themselves of the requirements their educational goals demand as soon as possible after entering college, and adhere strictly to the program they have set up as the quickest means of erasing their deficiencies and qualifying for entrance to a four-year college or university.

Making up secondary school subject deficiencies and preparing for a major at a four-year school stimultaneously, necessitate a heavy work load and demand a great deal of application to studies and occasional curtailment of off-campus diversions. Students are often heard asking themselves, "Is it worth it?"

We think it is. And we feel that the students who respond to the challenge, complete their education, and eventually make a successful career for themselves, will agree that their success can be ascribed largely to the semesters in which they put their noses to the grindstone and decided not to take the easy way out.

Since the advent of two-year colleges, more and more ill-prepared students have found it possible to remove their scholastic deficiencies and continue to a higher institution.

Students As Well As General Public Mourn Passing Of Scholarship Donor

NEWS of the recent death of Judge William Denman, onetime chief judge of the Ninth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, has no doubt saddened a great many San Franciscans with whom he worked. But Judge Denman's passing also has had a special effect on many people at this college, for it was he who initiated the Denman Scholarships which have benefited so many needy students here during the past 20 years.

Judge Denman was the son of James Denman, founder of San Francisco's first free public school. In 1939, in memory of their father, the judge and his sister, Mrs. B.F. Cheatham, set aside $250 per year to be awarded in scholarships to women students of this college who were graduates of San Francisco public high schools. These have since been known as the James Denman Scholarships.

The results of Judge Denman's generosity and interest in this college can be seen in the students and former students here whose educations have been advanced by his scholarships. We have indeed lost a genuine friend and a champion of the cause of education.

Foresight

By Dick Dyer

TELEVISION advertising in this country is a billion dollar business. Last year advertisers spent $1,360,000,000 on video commercials, virtually half of what it cost the Union to finance the Civil War.

Despite the enormous sum paid out for time spots and programs, the amount fades into insignificance when compared to the $3,379,400,000 spent by the general public for the cost, upkeep, repairs, electricity, and installation of their TV sets in 1958.

However, the advertising business is flourishing as never before.

According to governmental statistics, 84 per cent of all private homes have TV, and there is not an area in the United States in which television is not available. Consequently, the sponsors can peddle their products through an enormous medium in order to reach the public better, which brings us to that despised monster, the commercial.

Let's face it, most commercials are pretty bad; in fact, they're terrible. The worst of these atrocities usually involves "doctors" in white coats, beakers of acids, diagrams of intestines, cough medicine that tastes as good as ice cream syrup, pills floating around in the stomach, and the most nauseating of them all, the "thinking men" of today.

When the commercials aren't terrible, they are either too loud, too long, or too close together. The California legislature is now considering a bill aimed at independent stations which would keep ads ten minutes apart and limit them to two minutes in length. Too bad the policy of Austrian television doesn't rub off on the networks. That policy insists that no ads may be shown after 9 p.m. and that an advertisement be shown no more than five times daily.

Although viewers dislike the commercials, evidently a large number of Hollywood stars have an affinity for them, especially when such actors are well-paid for their testimonials. Wild Bill Elliott, a while back, received a flat $200,000 for pushing cigarettes. The McGuire Sisters are to get paid $250,000 for making six filmed commercials and a series of radio spots for a soft drink company.

Apparently a testimonial by a well-known personality seems to move the merchandise as witness the fact that even Eleanor Roosevelt is pushing margarine for Lever Brothers.

Then, of course, there are those celebrities like Alfred Hitchcock, Arthur Godfrey and Don Sherwood, who delight in poking fun at their sponsor's product.

According to Hitchcock, ". . . a knock is as good as a boost," and he has evidence to prove it.

Godfrey tore up his sponsor's script on the air one day and immediately afterward, 110 women rushed into a nearby store to buy the product in question. However, when Sherwood tried to get in this act of free speech, his sponsor went off the air and out of business, and poor Don went to Los Angeles.

Nevertheless, commercials are here to stay. The only consolation is that they couldn't possibly get any worse than they already are.

A woman will flirt with anybody in the world as long as other people are looking on.—Wilde.

Observation

LITTLE BUSINESS may cheat the customer in small ways but it took "big business" to really organize the bilk brigade and make a science of trimming the consumer until, like a lawn, he is cut as often as his "green" is "long" and sometimes before he might grow more even appeared.

Despite the statement of the president of one of our major stores, at a meeting of the Better Business Bureau, that "the chief advertisers of today are solid, stable business organizations" and that "truth in advertising is good for business," it is these same big outfits who persist in advertising half-truths or ignoring truths in their ads and in perverting the meaning of "public trust" and "reliability."

Examples are many and often disheartening, such as "3 Rooms of Furniture—No Money Down," but the furniture falls apart after two years or just about the time for the last payment. Or, big insurance companies who adjust their rates according to each other rather than to loss ratios per numbers of policy-holders.

Bilk Brigade Synonym For 'Big Business' As Consumer's 'Long Green' Is Trimmed

Some furniture stores (right in this city) adjust their interest rates according to the credit ratings and residence status of their buyers so that a soldier who brings his family here often has to pay as much as one and one-half times the value of whatever he happens to buy.

Nor are the purveyors of our drinking and smoking materials exempt from this Machiavelian adaptation where "the ends (money) justifies the means (dishonesty)."

Careless of the grave possibilities of cancer, a cigarette company says it has the "thinking man's filter," but what does he think about? His funeral? No, the vital and searching question is which filter with its thousands of tiny "filter traps" does the most or least to impede his receiving a tar-y taste sensation.

Liquor, in answer to increased demand, is falsely labeled "ten" or even more years of age and peddled under names of brands that haven't even been in existence that long.

Food dealers come in for censure when a bill has to be passed in any connection as "imposing" between 90 per cent cream in its composition" and just such a bill was recently passed in England.

Even these are but minor examples when the question of corporation or multiple big business ethics and their relationship to the public welfare is considered.

With the attitude that the public welfare is their own and that the public must somehow be coerced into a continued extensive buying program, they have come up with a two-way "planned obsolescence" program which keeps people buying things they don't need or shouldn't need repeatedly, and this will be the subject of our next column.

Thespians Lead Double Lives

Little Theater Actors Construct Own Lighting Effects, Props As Do-It-Yourself Bug Steals Scene

Actors are not only actors but carpenters, seamstresses, designers, and electricians in the Little Theater, where the sets are designed and constructed and even the music rearranged and taped by the personnel participating in each production.

Modernistic do-it-yourself motifs even extend to the office of Michael Griffin, drama director. Ornamented with its startling yellow, green and orange walls, its masks, scrapbooks and cabinets containing makeup, wigs and pictures, this room appears to be a confusing yet appealing hideout for the dramatists.

The most fascinating room is S-19, which is called The Shop; it's hard to believe, that a few years ago this huge room, where most of the theater toil takes place, was nothing but a dirt floor.

Here stands all the equipment necessary for the Little Theater to continue productions—a shop smith, a radial saw, a drill press and a grinder. Hundreds of tools, hardwares and "hell boxes" which contain mixtures of screws, can be found in the high cabinets in The Shop.

The recording room can certainly be called a do-it-yourself project. From a kit, students built an FM and AM radio, which picks up, anything off the two tape recording machines and the two turntables which, also, have been reconstructed to fit the theater's purposes. Both former and present students can also be accredited for the creation of the intercom system and speaker.

With all this, there is still more to come. Upon entering the Little Theater, the foyer, decorated in brown, red and black, has also been designed by the thespians. Because of the limited space, drapes in the foyer conceal the light room.

Here students make their own parts, such as light dimmers, funnels which they call "snoots" and lenses for the spotlights. It is even equipped with a telephone for communication "with the outside world."

The lighting setup could easily be called a work of art. It is completely student-designed and student-installed; a switchboard operation, which consists of two light controls, came in a packaged assembly.

Shots At Ramdom

By Jim Clifford

FROM our war correspondent . . . Mike Chofre, on leave of absence from the college to serve with Uncle Sam's Army, informs us that he had the esteemed honor of going through basic training at Fort Hood, Texas, with the greatest weapon the US military has ever possessed . . . Elvis Presley. (Nobody would start a war if his life were in jeopardy. Every teenager in the world would take up arms and storm the Kremlin.)

Chofre claims that E.P. was quite different from what he expected. He calls the star a "really great guy" and mentioned that Presley bought a color television set for the enlisted men's barracks, purchased plane tickets for his outfit, and saw them leave for home to spend the Christmas holidays—while Presley stood duty. Ah, yes, it's nice to see a spreading of the wealth now and then.

This statement was "too far out" for Rudolph and he said, "You mean if I say something is 'right' I'm 'wrong'?" The jet-age Plato, hot under the collar by this time, said, "That's right." Luke Casper has to meet this guy.

Big Eight Playoff

Rams Show Big 2nd Half Spurt To Drub Comets

By Nick Peters

Eagle-eyed Vern "Very Cool" Coleman, with the tide of the game in his command, converted three personal fouls into six consecutive free throws, as he played the lead role in the Rams' 62-53 comeback victory over Contra Costa's Comets in the Big Eight championship playoff March 9 in the University of San Francisco gymnasium, giving his mates the right to represent the conference at the State finals in Long Beach.

Trailing 28-25 at the half, the locals fought back to a 42-41 lead with ten to go; then Coleman went to work. The former Washington High All-City stalwart was fouled with the Rams ahead 44-43, made two charities for 46-43, went to the foul stripe once more and again sank two one-pointers for 48-43.

After a field goal by Comet guard Cornell Lacey, who kept the Richmonders in the thick of it with eight markers in the last ten minutes of play, another violation brought the game's hero back to the line where he proceeded, under extreme pressure, to calmly bucket another two for 50-45 as the clock showed 5:55.

At this point Rudy Hansen's boys were transformed from an organized ball club into a group of panicky cagers, using every means to try to steal possession from the confident Phelan Avenue five.

Not letting up a bit, the "City slickers" added 12 to the Comets' 8 and it ended up 62-53, sending the thankful Rams to possible laurels in Southern California and transporting the dejected Comets back to their Richmond campus.

In first half action Bill Simmons and Cleo Cofield, the college's two All-Conference possibilities, kept the Phelans in the ball game with a combined total of 15 points as they had a difficult task on their hands in "containing" the heralded and high-scoring Tyler Wilson to 12 digits during the first 20.

Early second-half play found the Comets maintaining their slim lead on the strength of three spectacular 18-foot jump-shots on the part of Wilson. With 12:55 left in the contest the adrenalin took effect as Simmons hit two fielders and Sylvester Bruce a pair of charities to put the Rams in front to stay, turning the high-flying Comets into "falling stars."

Scoring leader for the game was the sensational Wilson with 21 points and his team's rebound leadership at 10. Coleman was high for the college with 20, his most outstanding college output, and also was the top board man with 13.

This marked the fourth "crucial" 1959 meeting between the two Bay Area rivals. In early January the Comets belted the Rams 64-49 for third place in the annual Modesto Tourney. Later that month the Richmonders came out on top in the college's initial league tilt, 52-46, giving them undisputed loop leadership at 2-0.

A February engagement in the college's men's gymnasium found the Rams knocking the Comets from the unbeaten ranks via a 62-47 trouncing, giving the two teams a share of the coveted crown.

Cofield Lauded By Phelan As One Of Loop's Top Performers

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

As Ram basketball fans glance back upon what has definitely proven itself to be one of the most successful cage seasons in the college's history, it seems unlikely that any could possibly overlook the tremendous value of Cleo Cofield to the club.

Cofield has shown his wares not only as one of the most valuable board men in the league, but as a top scorer as well. He placed ninth in the final conference scoring standings, having totaled 187 points.

In the opinion of head basketball coach Sid Phelan, the "Big C" is of as much value to his 1959 Big Eight co-champion contingent as any other player on the team, despite the ideas of a fair number of sportswriters and fans.

Cofield, who stands 6-3 and weighs in at 210 pounds, played his prep ball under Phelan at San Francisco's Washington High School, and intends to continue his educational endeavors at San Jose State.

Past performances of this veritable dynamo speak for themselves, and seem to leave little doubt that Phelan has quite a number of things at hand to back up his above statement. In the Modesto pre-season tournament, it was his jump shot, with one second remaining in the opening round contest against College of Cerritos, which tied the score, enabling the Rams to pick up the marbles in overtime.

Carrying his share of the Red and White banner through a rugged Big Eight Conference grind, "The Unstoppable," as he has often been tabbed, remained just that, and sent many opposing coaches home crying in their proverbial beer.

It was in the March 9 championship play-off against Contra Costa, however, that the real value of the "Big C" showed itself for open appraisal. As the final buzzer of the USF War Memorial Gymnasium proclaimed the Rams as the best by a 62-53 count, it seems likely that Comet Coach Rudy Hansen will long remember his terrific 13-point performance and outstanding rebounding display.

The Ram sharpshooter is, as yet, undecided as to whether he will return to the campus for another season of Big Eight court action. Should he not return, his incomparable performances will certainly be missed by all hands. .

Ram Cagers Stunned By 51-50 In First Round At Long Beach Tourney; Last-Second Shot Rolls Out

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Bay Area clubs saw themselves quickly eliminated from the State Championship Basketball Tournament by way of a trio of first round dumpings last Thursday at Long Beach, as the hosting Long Beach Vikings went on to pick up their second consecutive crown as the best in California.

The disastrous annihilation of the northerners saw its beginning in the curtain raiser of the opening round, as the co-favorite Jaguars from San Jose City College were set on their heels, 63-61, by the Ventura Pirates. College of Marin later lost to Santa Ana, 64-54.

It was in the 6:15 affair that Sid Phelan's gang of CCSF Rams stepped onto the floor of the Long Beach Pavilion to run into the most stunning bolt of lightning since last season's 64-48 Big Eight dumping at the hands of Contra Costa—they were shoved out the back door by a slightled contingent of Comets from Paiomar College of Escondido, by a 51-50 margin.

Behind the red hot shooting of Cleo Cofield, who splashed through four field goals in the first five minutes of play, the locals pushed themselves out in front by a comfortable 11-4 margin early in the contest, and it looked as though the stage was set for the "big one" on the following evening between the Rams and the winner of the Long Beach-Allan Hancock fray which was to follow.

A bucket riddling sharpshooter with the moniker of Jack Wombolt had other ideas on his mind, however, and as his torrid shooting teamed up with the spectacular board play and defensive work of 6'5" Dave Springer, the gap began to close.

The Red and White forces still managed to leave the floor with a 30-27 advantage at the half.

Into the second stanza, the Comets came to life and fired up the attack that was to eventually carve the epitaph on the Ram tombstone.

Now all but completely unstoppable, they ushered the scoring punch of Joe Benac into their offensive front, and, elated over the poor showing of the heralded Rams throughout the first 20 minutes, deployed a defensive unit that would have made the Great China Wall look like a picket fence.

Wombolt and Cofield began trading bucket for bucket, and Mel Wilson and Vern Coleman gave everything they had to slam the door in the southerners' faces, but the offensive power of Wombolt and Benac, bolstered by the defensive output of Springer was too much to contain, and the Comets crashed into the lead at 37-36, nine minutes into the final half.

It was at this point that the roof began to cave in. Benac cashed a jumper from ten feet out, "muzzled" one in from directly beneath the basket, and Wombolt added a pair of free throws to set the margin at 45-38 before Sylvester Bruce was able to throw a small spark on the locals' hopes with a driving lay-in through the middle of the rugged Paiomar defense.

All Big Eight pivot Bill Simmons, who had seen the coldest night in his career, tossed in his contribution with a twisting jump shot from eight feet out that moved the Rams to within three points of the equalizer, at 45-42. Paiomar then called for time with 3:12 remaining.

Feigning a stall pattern, the Comets easily broke Benac and Wombolt free for a pair of tallies. Wilson and Cofield countered with twin driving jumpers from the top of the key, running it to 49-46. Benac then splashed in the final Paiomar marker of the evening to extend the Comet bulge to 51-48.

The spoilers from Escondido, with but 58 seconds now remaining, moved into a desperate stall, producing a wild defensive effort on the part of the Rams to get their hands on the basketball. Coleman tied up Wombolt at midcourt, producing a jump ball at the center circle.

The locals controlled the tip, the result of which saw Mel Wilson drop through a fielder from inside the key to bring the count to 51-50 with 32 seconds remaining.

Benac was fouled by Rocchi as a last resort for possession, but failed to make good on his charity toss. Simmons cleared the boards and the Rams called for a rest to check the strategy with Phelan.

Working for the big one, Coleman attempted a 15-footer with seven seconds remaining, but Springer hauled in the rebound for the Comets, and it looked as if the whole show was in the books.

Coleman was not to be put down in his failure to bring home the bacon, however, and as Springer hit Barry Cunningham with a down court pass, he moved in to steal the ball and set the stage for what had to be the biggest heartbreaker in the entire history of Ram cage efforts.

With but three seconds remaining, Phelan screamed for time out, but, amid the complete pandemonium that had broken loose, a hand grenade could have been discharged unnoticed, and none of his charges were able to hear him. Cofield took the ball and, booming across the floor like a wild stallion, put up a shot so perfectly executed that no words can explain why the melon chose to roll gently off to the right and fall to the floor as the buzzer sounded.

Long Beach battered down Hancock and Paiomar in apple pie order and went on to wrap up the tourney by dumping Santa Ana, 75-67, in the championship contest.

All that can be said on behalf of the Rams is that they were led to Long Beach by the right hand of Lady Luck, and sent home by her left.

RAMBLINGS

Cagers Reprieved By Bear Cub Five

By Nick Peters

UPSET handed the college's cage forces a death sentence as they were surprised by San Mateo's supposedly inferior Bulldogs 41-40 on March 6; however, Lady Luck was a concerned spectator giving the locals a stay of execution, as Santa Rosa came through in sterling 59-56 fashion against Contra Costa, making the Rams and Comets cotitlists in the 1959 Big Eight Conference with 12-2 records.

This reprieve did not come early enough to prevent the Rams and all their followers from getting a shock of the greatest proportion, which apparently was just what the doctor ordered as Sid Phelan's troops soundly trampled the Richmonders 62-53 in a special playoff to determine the league's entry at the State finals in Long Beach.

A good lesson can be, and probably was, learned as a result of this unpredictable basketball turnabout, since not even the staunchest Bulidog admirers could have believed that their team, with a meager 2-11 mark in loop play, could come up and defeat a team like the Rams, which was on at every championship threshold with a 12-1 slate.

Even the greatest teams are susceptible to upset (a word dreaded throughout the sports world, but one which no one can escape) and the college's court aggregation is no exception—it simply proved that it wasn't a world-beater and that it was only human.

Not having any spectacular scorers (on only five occasions did the college's players hit for over 20 points in a league game as compared to San Mateo's 13, Contra Costa's' 12, Sacramento's 11, etc.), the Ram successes can be attributed to a high degree of balance among the players' ability.

Bill Simmons and Cleo Cofield had some great moments, but weren't infallible; Mel Wilson was a stalwart on defense, coming through with some brilliant plays in key wins; Vern Coleman never played better than he did in the playoff last week; Vince Rocchi often supplied the spark which resulted in come-from-behind wins, and last but not least, the team's not-too-long bench played a more-than-adequate brand of ball when called to duty. This banner year must be attributed to a superior all-around team —the '58-'59 Rams. Nice going, fellas!

Plaudits must also go to the Rally Committee and the faithful student backers whose faces we saw at all the games. A member of the faculty, John Dunn, wins our vote as the most enthusiastic Ram backer. He didn't miss a game. If students who showed up at the games watched him giving forth with a hoarse bellow, it would have put them to shame. No doubt about it, he was the greatest.

Shifting to a position on the ball club which is greatly underestimated, we cannot help thinking that Sid Phelan is the greatest coach that ever sprouted a grey hair on the Big Eight battlefields.

After following and admiring Phelan's tactics through two outstanding seasons we often laugh when thinking how many high scoring teams bow the brunt of the casual coach's defensive strategy.

It was not uncommon to see a ball club which had been averaging close to 75 points run up against Phelan's wizards and, win or lose, be held to 50 points. The opponents more often than not blamed their mistakes and claimed "off" days after fruitless performances against the court master; but closer observation would have revealed a vacuum-tight defense, a Bay Area trademark administered by USF's Phil Woolpert, Cal's Pete Newell and the college's Phelan—all specialists in the art of point prevention.

Although the first two have already been acclaimed nationally we confidently predict that under similar situations a gent named Sid could have come through with flying colors.

Another point in his favor is the fact that he comes up against aggregations whose rosters are filled with supposedly brilliant out - of - state standouts, and invariably winds up giving them a tough ball game with his home-grown products—all from the San Francisco high schools. And our city isn't noted for producing the greatest cagers.

If nothing else, one has to respect Phelan's record, the best lifetime mark in the conference. No doubt about it, he's one coach who, with the right breaks, could become a winning court boss with a major team. When, and if that happens, it couldn't happen to a nicer guy.

Mold this talented coach, an excellent all-around team and a group of faithful supporters into one unit and there you have it—City College's 1959 Success Story!

Tracksters Set For Heavy Competition In Circuit Relays

Taking advantage of the recent good weather by staging hard daily workouts, and sharpened by last Saturday's practice meet with the San Jose State Frosh, Coach Lou Vasquez' cinder squad journeys to Modesto this Saturday to participate in the first running of the Big Eight Relays.

Events will be the sprint medley, distance medley, 440, 880, two-mile and shuttle hurdles. Open events to be contested are the high jump, broad jump, pole vault, shot-put and discus, as well as the 120-yard high hurdles and 100-yard dash. Medals will be presented to the first two placers in all running events and the first three in the field events.

Composition of the college's relay teams will not be set until Friday. Field event men definitely entered are discus thrower Mike Reid, shotputter Don Brienle, broad jumpers Jess Sirles and high jumpers Othello Carr and Ralph Mathis.

Comets Meet Netters In Friday Court Clash

The Comets from Contra Costa invade Golden Gate Park Friday to take on the Ram netters in a Big Eight Conference match.

Contra Costa should fall before the Ram power, which has developed into a strong contingent since the beginning of the season.

The remaining league meets are at Stockton, April 3; Modesto, April 10, at Golden Gate Park; at Oakland, April 17, and at Santa Rosa, April 24. The conference championships will be held in Sacramento on May 1.

Practice matches are scheduled for Burlingame; Menlo-Atherton, March 31, there; Portland, April 2, at Golden Gate Park; San Jose; San Francisco State, April 10, at State.

AMS Plans Pin League

Adding another cog to his intramural sports wheel, Associated Men Student President Ted Keller has recently appointed Don Carr to the office of chairman of the newly formed AMS bowling league.

The league will be handicapped, and all interested parties are advised to check with him this Friday during College Hour, in S-111.

An active kegler for the past five years, Carr has shown his interest in promoting the sport by making arrangements with the general manager of the Park Bowl in order to secure students a good deal both in service and in price.

Charity Drives, Pledge Luncheons Follow Firesides

By Pat Perkins

WITH all of the firesides over, the various sororities on campus are now planning their pledge luncheons or dinners.

Phi Beta Rho sorority recently held a canned food drive for the needy families in the city. Two teams were organized within the sorority, team A and team B. Six hundred ten cans of food were brought in by team A, while the losing team was close behind with 600 cans. The winners were given a pajama party sponsored by the losers.

New officers for this semester are Ingrid Holberg, president; Anita Cardini, vice-president; Diana Robinson, corresponding secretary; Pam Gardella, recording secretary; Linda Block, treasurer; Mareen Keyes, pledge mistress; Vicky Vivas, sergeant-at-arms, and Marcia Arevalo, historian.

At the last Student Council meeting Deanna Gutierrez was appointed Associated Student Card Sales Chairman by AS President Diek Cottrell. Miss Gutierrez is secretary of the Merchandising Club which meets during College Hour in S-258.

Collecting Easter baskets for the children at the San Francisco hospital is Gamma Sigma Sigma's service project for this month. The drive starts today and will last until March 25.

Making plans for their pledge luncheon are the members of Gamma Kappa Beta sorority. The luncheon will have a "roaring twenties" theme.

Everyone is invited to attend a lecture on Japanese poetry during College Hour in S-257. The lecture is sponsored by the Forum Club.

Busily planning for their Spring Fever dance are the officers of Gamma Phi Epsilon fraternity. The officers include Don Malvestiti, president; Fred Muller, vice-president; Frank Mateo, pledge master; Don Asplund, treasurer; Larry Whistler, secretary, and Garry Torres, sergeant-at-arms.

The International Relations Club has announced that 21 two-year colleges have been invited to participate in a model United Nations on Saturday, May 9. The club recently attended a lecture on Chile given by Alena Bronc.

April Fool's Deadline For Dropping Courses

Students who intend to drop a course must do so by Wednesday, April 1, before 5 p.m., according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

She stated that any student concerned should see his counselor in order to obtain the required forms and proper signatures and then file his petition in the registrar's office.

Miss Learnard stressed the importance of meeting the deadline and urged that students follow the procedure as early as possible so that all necessary signatures may be obtained.

Final Performances This Weekend Of Chekov's Comic View Of Russia

Mixed audience reaction to an intricate plot is the manner in which Michael Griffin, drama director, described the reception of the Little Theater presentation of The Cherry Orchard during the opening performances.

Final presentations are scheduled for this Friday and Saturday evenings, starting at 8 o'clock.

Although the core of The Cherry Orchard's plot is understood by most of the audience, the finer points are only realized by those who are able to recognize the esoteric connotations, Griffin declared.

Explaining the revolutionary type presentation of the show, Griffin remarked that the panorama of the scenes makes it difficult at times for the audience to recognize the major point being emphasized and tying into the trend of the plot.

To reduce this difficulty, many of the basic principles and mannerisms of stage presentation have had to be sacrificed or altered in order to focus the attention of the audience on the primary point, he admitted. These changes were made lest the audience become too absorbed in the accompanying counterpoints. The complexity of the scenes is diminished by this method—as well as through continuous reference to the major points in later scenes.

The last time this play was presented in the Bay Area, Griffin recalled, was in 1954 and the same difficulties were encountered. Again it was the underlying connotations that made it difficult for everyone to grasp the idea, and only a few were able to follow the plot completely.

Turning to the performances of the actors, Griffin stated that The Cherry Orchard was by far the best production at the college since he assumed the position of drama director. The deep feeling and association of identity by each member of the cast has been responsible for the fine character presentations and reality of situations.

A full house opening night and requests for future reservations have been the general trend of attendance at this performance, and if enough requests warrant it, a matinee performance will be scheduled to enable persons whose other commitments prevent them from attending to come.

Card Sales Fall $3050 Short Of Goal

Gerth, Ghirardelli, Pera Win AS Top Salesman Awards

A total of 1,690 Associated Student cards have been sold as of last Wednesday, according to Deanna Gutierrez, AS Card Sales chairman.

The goal for this semester is $11,500, of which $8,450 has been received. Thus the AS is shy of $3,050 or 610 cards for its goal, Miss Gutierrez stated.

During the period February 13 through March 6, students from seven organizations, Student Council, Cabinet, Inter-Fraternity Council, Inter-Sorority Council, Club Activities Board, Sophomore Class and Freshman Class, plus 18 salesmen, combed the campus, striving to convince students of the advantages of owning an AS card.

At the CAB dance, held March 6, awards were presented to the highest individual card sellers; Paul Gerth with a total of 197, Steve Ghirardelli with a total of 95, and Jackie Pera with a total of 89.

A $20 first prize gift order good at the Ramporium was offered by the AS to the person selling the most cards. Second prize was a $10 order, and third prize a $5 order.

Each organization competed against the other for the AS Card Sales plaque presented to the group selling the most AS cards.

Proceeds received from the card sales are used for the benefit of AS members. Miss Gutierrez stressed that benefits include the operation of the athletic teams, the band, drama productions, and other activities.

Some of the advantages of owning an AS card as listed by Miss Gutierrez are parking on campus, admission to dances, athletic events and drama productions without additional cost. A list of discounts from local merchants appears on the back of each AS card.

A 50 per cent discount on corsages is being offered to AS card holders at the Podesto Baldocchi Florist Shop, located in the St. Francis, Fairmont and Sheraton-Palace Hotels.

Miss Gutierrez was appointed to the position of AS Card Sales Chairman by Dick Cottrell, AS President, after three other chairmen resigned. She is the first woman to hold that position.

Poor Organization Responsible For Card Sales Lag—Northrup

By Elmer Milligan

Poor organization in the Associated Student card sales department is the depressing factor that has paralyzed card sales this semester, according to Ben Northrup, AS Finance chairman.

"The lack of proper organization in the card sales department can be accounted for by the constant changing of persons in the position of AS Card Sales Chairman and the lag in card sales," Northrup said.

Four students have been appointed to the position of card sales chairman since the new student administration took office last January.

The first two students resigned, after which Dick Cottrell, AS President, appointed Mike Haskell as temporary chairman until a permanent chairman could be sought. Cottrell appointed Deanna Gutierrez to the post two weeks ago.

Northrup stated that card sales should increase, predicting that students who don't have parking permits and are illegally parking their cars on campus will purchase an AS card to avoid being given citations. He added that if card sales increase, the AS budget will be balanced within a short period.

Of the 35 organizations here that have submitted budget requests, eight were passed by the Student Council.

A breakdown of the expenses allocated by the Finance Chairman included the following: Sophomore Class, $728.00; Dean of Men, $32.78; Dean of Women, $25.00; Guardsman, $3,000.00, partial budget; Publicity, $1,000.00; Freshman Class, $656.50; Basketball Team, $613.00, and Rally Committee, $497.50.

Many of the budgets were delayed, Northrup said, because of several defects that were found in the fund requests submitted to the finance committee.

"Some organizations and their sponsors have a tendency to double the amount of money they really need. After making a detailed and careful study of all the budgets, the finance committee found that some groups needed only one-half of what they asked for," he declared.

Because of a limited amount of funds, Northrup is cutting all budgets on an equal basis. In an endeavor to give the organizations exactly what they need, he is making appointments with their sponsors and conferring with them on how the [illegible] should be cut.

Art Building Bid Due For Approval

Contractors' bids, the final procedure prior to construction of the new Arts Building on Marston Street, will be submitted for approval on March 25, Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, said last week.

When the actual construction of the Arts Building starts, a daily parking site for many students will be closed, eliminating all parking in that area, Conlan added.

Bids for the job will be reviewed and if one is acceptable, inasmuch as it stays within the appropriation made by the Board of Education, actual construction of the building with its little theater and 24 classrooms will begin soon after March 25, with completion expected within 18 months.

Included within the same appropriation and also to be considered in the bids are the planned additions to Smith Hall, including an enlargement of the snack bar, a new athletic stadium and additions to the men's and women's gymnasiums.

Soph Class Meets Friday

Miss Pera added that the date for the Sophomore Ball, which will be held at The Village, has been set for Saturday, May 23.

Accommodations for 600 couples have been made by Miss Pera and her committee.

In 1957, 6,000 mail carriers were bitten by dogs.

Rally Committee Gets Budget, Free Bus To Long Beach

By Roy Twitty

Disputes among members of the Associated Student executive committee arose last week as the Student Council considered and passed seven more budgets, bringing the figure of total-money-spent to approximately $9,300.

Causing the most consternation, one of the first money issues on the agenda of budgets last week was the Rally Committee request for finances, which was cut from $2,800.00, which some observers termed "probably padded," to $1,497.60.

Funds paying for the bus that transported a 39-person cheering section to the state basketball championships in Long Beach last week will come from the Rally Committee budget, which was partially passed to cover this expense.

Totaling $800, more than $20 per bus passenger was requested from the AS for meals during the two-day excursion, but this grant was denied. Covering the expense of the bus, a partial budget of $497 was passed after the council decided to consider the remaining portion of the budget at a later date.

Only persons belonging to the Rally Committee and who have supported the teams at games should go to the Long Beach game on the bus, Ann Thuss, speaking for the Rally Committee, told the council last week. This proposed restriction was voted down, however, and the bus seats were made available to Student Council members as well.

The basketball team, which flew to Long Beach last week-end at an expense of $421.40, requested a total of $863.00 from the AS. This total amount, however, was reduced to $613.00 because the team recently brought in $100 by playing at USF, and has won $150 for being picked for the state championship play-offs.

Following the Rally Committee and basketball business, the subsequent budgets passed by the council include $656.50 for the Freshman Class Ball; Recreation Association, $549.29; the Block SF awards dinner, $250.00; track team, $2,018.53, and the tennis team, $381.10.

Resort Owner To Offer Positions For Employment

Selected applicants for summer resort positions will be personally interviewed on April 17 by Harry Smith, managing owner of the Crater Lake Resort, Joseph Amori, placement director here, announced last week.

Smith will visit the college in search for qualified students to work this summer at his resort in Crater Lake, Oregon.

All interested students are urged to come to the placement center now to be interviewed and screened so that they may be considered for possible employment when the resort owner arrives, Amori explained.

More than 40 different job openings were listed by Amori, ranging from cooks and waiters to front desk clerks. Other positions include: room clerks, storekeepers, boatmen, busmen, truckmen, salesgirls, cashiers, food-servers, maids, kitchen helpers and pantry-men.

Applicants with experience in camping are preferred for outdoor jobs, which require students to indulge in building camps, hiking and horseback riding.

Loans Available To Qualified Students

Students who have an outstanding scholarship record and are in need of financial aid are urged to consult Dean Gertrude Norgard or Dean Raiph Hillsman in S-149 for specific information about applying for a government loan.

Student loans will be provided through the National Defense Student Loan Act which was passed during the last session of Congress.

A total of $10,291 was allotted the college by the government of which the Associated Students contributed $1,209, or approximately one-ninth, to bring the total available to students to exactly $11,500.

Loans will be available up to $400 a year to students with at least a B— average and are in definite need of financial assistance.

Eligibility of students will be determined by a committee of four or five faculty members and members of the student government.

Repayment of the loans will begin one year following the completion of a student's higher education at an interest rate of three per cent.

Students who decide to become teachers or who plan a career in the field of science or mathematics will be given special consideration in paying back their loans. Future teachers or scientists will have to pay back only half of what they borrowed.

Lively Arguments Stir Council Over Meal-Money Allocations; Partiality Charged To Members

By Roy Twitty

Meal-money requests included in budgets recently submitted to the Student Council livened discussions with charges of partiality and unfairness on the part of some council members.

Baseball was first on the business of budgets reviewed by the council last week with a money request that was originally $1585.25. This figure was reduced by Finance Committee Chairman Ben Northrup to $1330.75 by eliminating part of the budget requesting 30 warm-up jackets and allowing money for only 18.

Discovering a discrepancy in the amount needed for new baseball caps, the council tabled the baseball budget until such time as the error could be corrected. Submission of the corrected budget took place last Thursday, however, one council member called for vote by secret ballot. The council then passed the budget of $1396.05 with three negative votes.

Golf team money, the most argued item on last week's agenda, was the next piece of business considered by the council. Originally asking for $772.00, the golf budget was cut to $583.33 with $120 for meals. Speaking against the budget, Fred Marwedel, member of sophomore council, stated that meals for the golf team is an unnecessary expenditure.

Standing up for the golf team, Northrup asked Marwedel if he had ever played a sport in the past; if he had, Northrup added, he would realize the importance of meals furnished at matches away from home. Turning to the council, Northrup praised the golf team for the recognition it has brought the college.

Asking if it is fair to pay for football team meals and not consider the golf team needs, Northrup stated that if a golfer represents the college in competition he is certainly entitled to a meal. Since the Student Council is allotting $200 for its own dinner, Northrup added, it is unconceivable that it can reject the golf request.

Cutting out $138 for a match that was to have been attended in Fresno, the council okayed a budget of $455.53 by a vote of five for, six against, and four abstentions. The abstaining votes were counted as votes "for" the prevailing side, raising the total number of votes in favor of the measure to nine.

Allotment money for the Student Council expenses closely followed the golf team argument. Requesting a total of $1931.16 to cover student administration expenses, the council was berated by Sam Allen, Inter-Fraternity Council president.

"I don't see how you can pass this budget with money for meals since you have just spent 15 minutes arguing over whether or not the golf team is entitled to eat on AS funds," Allen said.

Student Council Adopts New Code Of Dress

Proper clothing regulations for all campus functions were released recently by Ted Keller, Associated Men Student president.

A new code has been adopted by the Student Council concerning proper dress for the college's men and women when attending classes and college-sponsored dances.

Improper attire for men on campus, according to Keller, includes dirty, washed out jeans, bermudas or beachcombers. Proper dress is defined as a sport shirt or sweater and slacks. (The definition of slacks includes all neat-looking pants.)

Dance regulations have been divided into three classifications with a different style of dress for each event. A sport dance requires that all men wear a shirt, tie and sports jacket, while women wear appropriate sports dress.

Informal dance attire consists of suits for men and party dresses for women. The costume dance dress has been defined as any costume suitable for the occasion.

Applications For 7 Scholarships Due Tomorrow

Deadline for seven of the scholarships offered this semester has been set for tomorrow, and students who have a good scholarship record and are in need of financial aid may consult Dean Gertrude Norgard or Dean Ralph Hillsman in S149 for detailed information.

A letter of application is required, stating reasons for financial need, future scholastic goals and an indication of any leadership ability in outside netivities.

The Dr. A. J. Cloud Scholarship Award is being offered to one or more students each year. This fund was established by the faculty of the college in honor of the late Dr. Cloud, first president of the college.

To be awarded to an outstanding graduating woman student is the Margaret Dougherty Scholarship, established by the Faculty Wives' Association in honor of the former Dean of Women.

In memory of the renowned botanist and horticulturist, Alice Eastwood of the California Academy of Sciences, the San Francisco Garden Club provides an annual purse of $100 to be awarded to the outstanding student or students majoring in floriculture.

Available only in the spring semester is the Graduating Class 1958 scholarship, established by the graduates of 1958 and offered to one or more students.

The Academy of Advertising Art, San Francisco, offers a summer Art Scholarship to one student majoring in Advertising and Commercial Art. This scholarship is designed to further the art training of a worthy student seeking a professional art career.

The Square and Circle, an organization composed of Chinese professional women, has made available two scholarships annually of $125 each to be awarded to two Chinese - American students.

The Chinese Students Club is offering two scholarships valued at $50 each, available to deserving Chinese students.

Forum Acquires New Face, Shifts Deadline

Numerous requests have caused shifting of the deadline for submission of material to Forum magazine from the original April 1 date to Friday, April 10, Catherine Connolly, Forum faculty adviser, revealed recently.

Selection of a new cover for the college's literary magazine took place last week. It is on exhibit in the upper right hand corner of the third floor showcase, opposite S-300.

Poetry enthusiasts and other writers are invited to read their own work at future Forum Club meetings held during Friday College Hours in S-247, club member Alexander Klimenko declared last week.

Suitable for the magazine are short stories, essays, plays, translations, critiques, poetry and any other type or style of college level material.

Entries can be submitted to Miss Connolly at C-331 or to any member of the Forum Club. They must be typed, double-spaced, on one side of standard size paper. Readers to select and prepare the material for publication are still needed.

Coming Events Eye-catcher

SERVING AS AN ILLUSTRATION that the old must give way to the new is this scene taken last week at the college's marquee near the Ramporium book store. Bill Devlin (on ladder) and Jim Johnson, members of Alpha Phi Omega national service fraternity here, provide striking proof of the aforementioned adage as they remove a Frosh Ball sign to make space for an announcement of the Ugly Man Contest which is now in progress on the campus. The marquee was donated to the college by Alpha Phi Omega. People wishing to advertise major on-campus events on the marquee may do so by consulting John Dunn, Alpha Phi Omega sponsor, at his Smith Hall office.

Ball To Climax Talent-Loaded Ugly Man On Campus Contest

Climaxing the vote for Alpha Phi Omega fraternity's Ugly Man On Campus contest, scheduled for five days starting next Monday, will be a dance on Friday, April 3.

Students can vote for contestants whose pictures will be displayed about the campus by contributing pennies, dimes, or nickels for the contestants of their choice. The proceeds will be used for activity scholarships, an annual project of the fraternity.

Maury Wolohan's five-piece band will play at the dance, the time of which is 9 p.m. to 12 midnight. During the second intermission, the winner will be announced and first, second and third prizes awarded.

Deemed a worthy cause, the Ugly Man Contest has been a success in past years. Scholarships are given to students with high scholastic standings and who are in need financially.

Gene Bunch, president of Alpha Phi Omega, announced last week that five "uglyites" had already entered the talent-loaded race, and expressed hope that at least 20 will enter.

Luke P. Casper, a philosophy student here, is pegged to enter as The Guardsman write-in candidate. Casper was chosen as the Ugly Man on Campus at Alpine Oak Union High School in 1956. He went on to the state finals, but a healthy suntan gained while working on his father's alfalfa ranch kept him out of the contest.

Ken Kahn, a hotel and Restaurant major, won the contest in 1958 with a total of 15,233 votes. The 1958 UMOC race netted $316, which went to the scholarship fund. That year the Ugly Man was presented with an Ugly Man Mug, a medal and the perpetual trophy. The contest saw 11 students vie for the title.

Student Benefit Blood Drive Goes Into Third Year

Grim battles between life and death have ended on happy notes for many who have been aided by the college's annual Tau Chi Sigma - sponsored blood drive, scheduled to begin April 29 with a proclamation by Mayor George Christopher.

Any student who donates a minimum of a pint of blood may withdraw an unlimited supply for his personal use during any one series, under a special account set up at the blood bank. The donor may make withdrawals up to eight pints for any member of his family in any one series.

Those who have received this "gift of life" include John Rosso, Jr., a former student and member of The Guardsman staff here.

A member of Bruce Littman's family has also been helped through this cause. Littman is now Associated Student Parliamentarian and member of the President's Cabinet.

Joseph M. Jacobsen, faculty member here, had blood contributed to a close friend, while the wife of faculty member George Muller owes her life to college contributions.

In the two years of the annual drive, more than 100 pints of blood have already been put to use.

Deadline For Dropping Courses Set For April 1

Any student who still intends to drop a course may do so by next Wednesday, April 1, before 5 p.m., according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

She stated that any student concerned should see his counselor in order to obtain the required forms and proper signatures, and then file the petition in the registrar's office.

College To Play Major Role In UC Teacher Program

Intern - instructors preparing for junior college teaching will be provided experience by City College this summer in cooperation with the University of California, Dr. Louis Conlan, president of the college, announced last week.

Selected because of its excellent facilities and summer session strength, the college will play a major role in the new UC cooperative approach to preparing highly qualified two-year college instructors, according to Conlan and Dean William Brownell of the School of Education at the University of California.

Preparing the new instructors for full teaching assignments in one of the 11 Bay Area two-year colleges, regular instructors here will join with the UC staff and consultants from other cooperating colleges in the UC graduate internship program in teacher education. All cadet teaching and related summer seminars will be held on this campus.

Following screened selection and summer preparation here, the new teachers will be supervised by the UC staff and the respective colleges to which they are assigned during the fall internship semester.

The intern will be eligible for a Junior College Credential upon the recommendation of the University of California at the close of the semester next fall.

UC selection this spring and assistance in placement is followed by the summer program here, President Conlan said. The internship program staff is stressing academic preparation as indicated by the requirement that all applicants possess Master of Arts degrees in the subject fields, maturity and readiness for teaching responsibilities.

To finance this new junior college program for the next three years, a grant has been awarded to the University of California by the fund for the advancement of education.

The program follows three years of successful and comparable experience in preparing high school instructors.

April Fool!—No Paper Scheduled Wednesday

Budgetary problems and the Easter holiday this Friday have forced cancellation of the originally scheduled Wednesday, April 1, issue of The Guardsman, according to Publications Board Chairman Don Seratti. The next issue will be Wednesday, April 8.

Seratti expressed concern over the many posters which have been placed on campus without Publications Board approval. Negligence of this nature in the future will result in immediate removal of the unapproved signs, he warned.

Board regulations provide that the chairman must check all posters for neatness and accuracy.

Green Thumbs Open Spring Season With Landscaping, Flower Show

By Robert Paelni

Blooming, budding, bustling, and with an obvious lack of spring fever, the vigorous activity apparent in the floriculture department here keynotes the beginning of the spring planting season.

Foremost among the green-thumb projects with which the floriculture classes are concerned is a plan to develop the hillside that borders the student parking lot below Smith Hall.

In disclosing this plan, Harry E. Nelson, department head, revealed that the desired effect is that of an arboretum, that is, a display in which a variety of trees and shrubberies, gathered from all over the world, will be shown.

Another upcoming event of importance to the floriculture classes is the annual Oakland Spring Garden and Flower show. The college, one of the few two-year colleges that will enter floral displays, will compete with many large universities and professional groups.

Last year the college took first place and in previous years has always been among the top ranking entries.

Plans for this year's display, not entirely complete at the present time, call for an impressive patio scene, including a moon gate, hanging planters, and trees and shrubbery circling the entire area.

Scheduled for Friday, April 17, and Saturday, April 18, the show will be held in the Oakland Auditorium. The first day of the exhibition will be devoting to the judging of the entries.

Counseling Department Offers Extensive Help To All Students

EXISTING for the sole purpose of assisting students with their various academic and personal problems, the college's counseling department offers such an extensive range of services that we hope no student here fails to avail himself of these services when he expresses doubts about his future program or misgivings about his academic standing.

Counselors play a natural role in the life of a college, for the services they offer are designed to overcome the difficulties and answer the questions that arise in the minds of almost all students during their academic life.

Take for example the student who is relatively unacquainted with the various facets of upper division work at the college or university to which he intends to transfer. He can usually find information about curriculum and requirements in the bulletin disseminated by that institution; but he may want to know more about his future college and how it differs from others in general policy and other matters not so easily found in official publications. This is where a counselor can, by drawing from his or her general knowledge of academic life, provide the student with facts that will give him a more comprehensible picture of the institution he wishes to attend.

The counselor can also be quite helpful in interpreting the various requirements and the nature of certain courses which may not be perfectly clear to the student.

When a student's grades are not up to par, a counselor can quite often ascertain his potential ability and give valuable advice on whether he would do better either to drop a troublesome course or expend more effort. Such advice given by a counselor scarcely ever fails to make the student's semester a more profitable one.

The matters we have dealt with, plus many others, will be raised numerous times each day in the counseling offices as programming appointments begin here soon, and despite the help a counselor can invariably render in these matters, it must also be remembered that the counselor is not to be regarded in the same light as a person stationed in an information booth.

On the contrary, a certain amount of responsibility lies with the student when he visits his counselor. He should prepare himself for his interview so adequately that he can outline his desires and know what questions will be pertinent to the matter of program planning.

By relying on his counselor for assistance and going into an interview prepared to discuss his future program, a student can indeed reap the greatest possible benefits from the college's helpful and competent counseling department.

TV Specials Range From Tops To Flops

By Dick Dyer

TELEVISION network executives have been wracking their brains for years in an attempt to find a solution to the problem of mediocre programming. Today they have found it, or at least they think so.

What is their solution? Specials, formerly called "spectaculars." Although the "spectacular" was first conceived by the president of NBC six years ago, it never really caught on until now. Today's spectacular-specials range from one hour to two hours in length, and feature superstars and super-budgets.

A 60-minute special costs about $300,000, a 90-minute show over $400,000, and a two-hour production anywhere from $500,000 to $700,000. The most expensive single show televised to date was the 120-minute, $825,000 production last fall of Wonderful Town, which starred Rosalind Russell.

Sponsors who usually pick up the tab for budget-busters like these, find it more desirable than paying $2,000,000 for a series of 39 weekly half-hour shows and 13 summer repeats. Such sponsors, like Rexall, Hallmark and Edsel, prefer to have one major program a month which will coincide with their seasonal advertising campaigns.

Most TV executives feel that specials should be kept at a minimum for two reasons. First, because of the difficulty of pre-empting regular programs, and secondly, because of the costs involved in producing extravaganzas. In fact, NBC added up its March schedule and found that its 11 specials amounted to a record-breaking $4,000,000.

These extravaganzas, with their huge budgets, possess all the potential punch for providing the viewer with superior entertainment. But ironically these programs generally fall into two categories—colossal triumphs and expensive flops—with the vast majority of specials classed in the latter category.

Fred Astaire, nevertheless, hit the peak in "spectacular" entertainment. He must be happy to find that virtually every critic and viewer raved about the show, which is pretty unusual these days. The program also received two Emmy awards for merit and will undoubtedly be rewarded with an Emmy come May. On top of this success, Astaire was paid a total of $450,000 for his fee and re-run royalty. How happy can you get?

Others are not so lucky. Even the Old Vic Company's Hamlet was blasted for being badly butchered, one-third of the play being deleted, and numerous soliloquies cut in half. While Playhouse 90's For Whom The Bell Tolls was a much better attempt at adapting a great literary work to TV, mainly because it was done in a two-part three-hour production.

Despite the fact that it was a special, Peter Pan, which achieved 66.1, the highest Trendex rating in television history, most "spectaculars" are merely run-of-the-mill or worse. As one TV advertising executive sees it: ". . . lack of frequency and larger budgets are no guarantee of quality . . . specials from now on . . . must be real blockbusters." Let's hope so.

Students Train For Space Race

Three-Unit Course Offered In Lunar Probe Tactics

By Roy Twitty

Sputnik, Explorer, Discoverer, Vanguard, Atlas, astronautics, lunar-probe vehicles, outer-space, are all terms that were considered ten years ago to be too science-fictionish to be taken seriously.

Space - exploration terms such as these are not only a part of every-day conversation today but are included in instruction here at the college in a course outlining man's attempt to leave his parent planet Earth.

Open to all interested students, the three-unit course includes topics ranging from survival in space and space-psychology to the firing, tracking, and components of existing rockets, according to Dr. Louis Berman, astronomy department head.

Artificial earth satellites can be viewed at the college regardless of weather conditions and no regard need be given to the time of day—simulated satellites, that is. Recently purchased at the cost of $50, a satellite projector has been installed on the small Spitz star projector in the college's planetarium.

Construction of satellites and their vehicles is no light task, but requires the combined skills of thousands of persons, from theoretical physicists to engineering aides and technicians. A single company is not allowed to build completely an entire satellite or rocket because of governmental fears that security leaks might occur.

Space project and satellite work is divided among many subcontractors, some of whom are never told how their products are to be utilized. Several of these subcontractors, especially in the field of electronics, are located south of San Francisco on the peninsula, and hire many of their employees from the immediate area.

Technical-field graduates from the college are now working for peninsula firms, including such companies as Lockheed, General Electric, Ampex, Hewlett-Packard, Varian, Eitel-McCullough, and Litton, according to E. Mark Sheldon, instructor of electronics here.

Employed as an electronics technician with a Lockheed research team in Palo Alto, James Hatchel builds classified electronic prototypes and performs close - tolerance measurement checks.

General Electric, another leader in missile research, has hired Richard Lawless to work in the transistor miniaturization department located in Tempe, Arizona.

New Mexico is the location of Paul Semidberg, working for SANDIA, an organization affiliated with the University of California Radiation Laboratory at Livermore, California.

Three engineering draftsmen, Bob Clement, James Duggar and Richard Sites (all graduates of the mechanical technology program here) are working on a highly classified space project with SANDIA in Livermore.

Technicians may not do the overall planning for an engineering project such as guided missiles, but they have large quantities of design detail for which they are held highly responsible, according to Cecil Aggeler, engineering department head.

Tradition

They Claimed It Couldn't Happen; Soph Coed Did It

At the conclusion of student elections here last semester, Jackie Pera, woman politician, broke through the tradition stipulating that a man fill the post of Sophomore Class President. For the first time then in the college's history, "the weaker sex" triumphed politically and settled in a man's bailiwick.

"Politics is a man's world." Miss Pera commented recently, "but women can penetrate it." As the number one objective in her election campaign, she pinced determination on top; she believes it was the key to her success and recommends it to other women politicians.

Miss Pera first became interested in student government at Washington High School, giving active service as secretary and later as vice-president. "There was a certain amount of work involved," she declared, "but on the other hand, it was a lot of fun." Miss Pera claims she likes meeting other people and strongly feels this is one of the main attractions of her position.

With foresight, the woman executive believes that in the not too distant future, the college will elect a representative of the fair sex as President of the Associated Students.

Miss Pera isn't too far off course in her prediction, as the early '40's and relatively close years have found women filling the executive posts.

For one example, back in the Spring of 1941, Associated Student President George Myers received the ever-familiar message from the War Department requesting his presence. Disheartedly, he turned in his resignation and turned the gavel over to the college's first woman president, Mary Frances Malone.

• Trio Rejects 'Lineup'

Editor, The Guardsman:

The unnecessarily rigid procedure for admission into the CAB dance of March 16 was, in our opinion, handled in a manner not befitting the standards of student organizations at City College.

The fact that both student cards and registration cards had to be displayed and punched for unpaid admission was only secondary to the embarrassment and avoidable inconvenience caused by the tedious checking of driver's licenses, selective service cards and other identification, even to the comparison of handwriting techniques.

To allow such proceedings to become habitual would be an admission that we cannot conduct ourselves as college men and women.

Shots At Ramdom

By Jim Clifford

RUMBLINGS from the head-shrinking set . . . A movie entitled Feelings Of Rejection was shown in Psychology G7 last week. The flicker started with a young lady sitting across a desk from a doctor, who had the usual understanding expression on his countenance. The girl looked completely lost and rejected.

An announcer's voice queried, "Why does this girl feel rejected by her friends and family? Why doesn't she mix well with other people?"

Rich Krall claims some wit in the back row had an answer even before the announcer finished the last line. "She's got halitosis," the interloper said. Well, it's better than no breath at all.

TO ENTER OR not to enter . . . That's the question that has Luke Casper in a quandary.

Some students want to enter Luke in the Ugly Man on Campus contest . . . speculating that with his kisser like philosophical rube, a freshman here, can't lose. This gives the boys a sure chance to gain some easy money. The only trouble is that they haven't convinced Luke that he is a sure thing, and he doesn't want to risk coming in second best.

LUKE: "Talent has its duties."

He put the situation this way:

"It would be a great honor," he said, "to be chosen the ugliest man at City College. I know I'd have a heap a' competition 'cause I seen a' lot a' ugly guys aroun' here. I think I can win, but I'd sure hate to come in second or third.

"Gee, it sure would be nice to win and maybe go on to the Mr. Ugly Man of the Universe contest. But if I lose this here contest think a' what a disgrace it'll be to the folks back in Alpine Oak.

"I can hear 'em now—'Luke, you let us down. With your talent you shouldn't a' lost.' Why, they'll accuse me a' throwin' the contest. I'd never be able to hold up my head in the general store again."

We tried to convince him that he had nothing to fear from his city-bred competition. We patted him on the back and told him there wasn't a man on the campus who could come close to him for sheer repulsiveness. He looked ahead, threw back his shoulders, and walked forward mumbling something like, "A man has gotta make decisions," or "Talent has its duties."

Anything That Costs Money Is Bank's Concern

Anything that costs anything is of direct concern to the bank, according to Carl Anderson, accountant.

"What doesn't these days?" Anderson continued. "The bank, initiated with the start of the college, has grown from a small office handling only a few accounts to a major part of the college that today has 150 accounts. It's the financial center of the college."

Located in Smith Hall, the bank is under the administration of Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator, Division of Educational Management, and in addition has as its other staff member Frances Sullivan, cashier.

Among the long list of important functions and services performed by the bank are selling Associated Student cards, handling the funds of all campus clubs and organizations, and selling tickets to all student activities.

Banking hours are 8:45 a.m. to 11:10 a.m. In the afternoon the bank office is opened from 12:01 p.m. through 2:10 p.m.

Accountant Anderson added that he was very pleased with this semester's student administration and found it very co-operative.

Rams Split Stockton Pair 5-17, 11-9 As Nine-Run Frame Salvages Nightcap

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Bringing up the curtain on their 1959 Big Eight Conference campaign in comme ci - comme ca fashion, the sometimes hot, sometimes cold diamond forces of Lee Eisan split a double-header with the Stockton Mustangs last Saturday afternoon at Stockton, 5-17, 11-9.

In the opener, a disastrous affair which saw the locals completely obliterated by a 17-5 count, the Mustangs took full advantage of five Ram errors in the first three frames while battering starting pitcher Charles Carroll for half a dozen safeties to move out in front 8-0, before the Rams could push across their first tally in the top of the fourth.

At this point the margin proved itself too much to be overcome, and the game was called at the end of seven, the laurels being handed to the Stockton gang.

The delegation which represented the Phelun Avenue plant in the second half of the twin bill, however, seemed anything but the hapless contingent of forces which had stumbled helplessly through the opening affair.

Led by the phenomenal pitching of All-Conference basketball star Bill Simmons, the Ram turned a pair of walks and a single up the middle on the part of John Bagatelios into a first inning tally, and held on to wrap up the show with an 11-9 triumph.

Simmons quickly struck out Rich Rierson and Dave Swimly, followed it up by forcing Herb McKenzie to fly neatly to center in the last half of the frame, enabling his mates to forget their admittedly poor showing in the first game.

Although the Red and Blue forces managed to move temporarily into the lead at 3-1 in the bottom of the second on a walk to Dave Williamson, a single by Gino Martucci, and a loud four-bagger from the bat of Les Boggiano down the left field line, their lead was to be short-lived as the Eisan charges glued together an unbelievable nine-run scoring effort in the fourth, which was to spell the complete undoing of the Mustangs.

Tally after tally crossed the plate as Stockton hurler Ron Vaccarezza passed out base hits as if they were going out of style. The stocky Mustang chucker was relieved by Swimley midway through the amazing slugfest, but it was to no avail.

DiMartini, who had opened the scoring festivities, closed them out in colossal style with a booming 375-foot home run to right center, and the Mustang execution was completed.

FIRST GAME	R	H	E
Rams	900 101 1—	3	11

Diamond Forces Call On Slugging Quartet Of Returning Veterans To Provide Circuit Victory Artillery

As the Ram diamond forces of Lee Eisan move into their second round of Big Eight competition, facing the San Mateo Bulldogs in a nine inning affair this afternoon at San Mateo, they will once again lay a big stack of the blue chips on the loud bats of returning veterans Mike Warnock, Johnny May, Gene Russo and Roy Tripaldi.

Leading the pack with one of the most fearsome sticks in the circuit, catcher May, the sole Ram able to climb aboard last season's All-Big Eight roster, while hauling in All-Northern California honors as well, should again prove himself the ace in the hole of Eisan's offensive attack.

LEE EISAN, Ram baseball coach.

Aside from his proved ability as a hitter, May is also regarded as one of the sharpest defensive backstops in the league, not only because of his powerful throwing arm, but with respect to his quick thinking and overwhelming field moxy as well.

Holding down the "hot corner" at third base, Tripaldi, in the opinion of many Ram diamond fans in the know, is the boy who was nothing short of robbed when the "experts" saw fit to select their 1958 conference all-star nine. Although tearing into the horsehide at a .425 batting clip, Tripaldi was cast in the role of "Orphan Annie" when the candy was passed out and was forced to settle for a ridiculous second team nomination.

In the words of Eisan, "Trip" is one of the finest infielders he has seen in his two-year stay as Ram diamond skipper.

Warnock, although definitely no power hitter, has been slapping out singles for Capitol Glass in the San Francisco Winter League at an astounding .407 clip, and should prove himself the Richie Ashburn of the conference.

Still plagued with a pair of aching shoulder muscles picked up nearly six weeks ago, Warnock has been having a rough time with his fielding, but the pesky outfielder says he feels that he'll come around in a week or so, with the help of daily whirlpool treatments.

Rounding out the quartet of returning lettermen, Elsan's seventh place performers of last year might well have bettered their league position had hard-hitting shortstop of '57 Russo been aboard the roster.

The veteran Sacred Heart scrapper has improved himself to such an extent that the Major League scouts, who once shunned his talents as being unworthy of consideration, have now opened their eyes to the fact that he could well develop into a top prospect for the cash and carry sport.

RAMBLINGS

By Nick Peters

(Editor's note: Guardsman sports reporter Pat O'Shaughnessy accompanied the college's basketball team to the State finals in Long Beach. After their shocking 51-50 loss to Palomar in the first round the Rams decisively enplaned for San Francisco where by O'Shaughnessy saw an opportunity to record the players' reactions toward the untimely setback. His interview follows.)

AS THE AFTERMATH of what had thus far proved itself to be a successful seasonal basketball output on the part of the Ram eagers was dropped to the pit of morbidness by Palomar College of Escondido in the opening round of the State Tournament, the consensus among the competitors themselves seems to point but one way: "Everybody played his heart out but me."

In the words of Vern Coleman, the workhorse of the boards in the disheartening affair which saw the locals fall short of advancing to the second round by a single point, the entire responsibility of the defeat rests on his shoulders.

"I took the bad shots and threw away the passes that beat us," he says, adding that if there is anyone who says he has played a worse game that person is an out and out liar.

All-Conference pivot Bill Simmons was short and to the point in his estimation of the fiasco, simply saying, "It was the worst night I ever had."

"I had no drive in me at all," says scrappy guard Vince Rocchi. "I wanted to get in there and fight, but I just couldn't pull myself up to it. It's a good thing Sid (Coach Phelan) took me out, or we'd have lost by 20."

Hard-charging guard Mel Wilson and sharp-shooting floor man Sylvester Brince seem to be about equal in their self criticism: "Instead of waiting for the 'big one,' as Sid said, we threw up the bad shots, they (Palomar) cleared the boards, and when that happens how can you expect to win?"

Cleo Cofield, however, although coming out with one of the finest efforts of his sparkling cage career, closed out the season with the greatest burden of misery of any member of the losing delegation. It was he who was chosen by the fickle finger of fate to put up the last-second shot that, had it broken the mesh, would have spelled the difference between victory and defeat.

In the words of the "Big C," "They all fought like tigers to get the ball and give us one last chance to pull it out. They came up with it and then I let 'em down by missing a stinking 15-footer."

The story goes a lot deeper than the opinions of these competitors though. Every one of them played his heart out to carry the Ram banner over the final hurdle and return to the Bay Area with the coveted State crown, and the words of Coach Phelan held nothing but praise for every last one of them.

"Losing is as much a part of the game as the ball itself," he said, "and they wouldn't be the grand gang of kids they are if they didn't feel that the responsibility for the setback rested on their shoulders alone as individual competitors. We can only hope that this will be of some value to them after they have left our plant to make a go at living a successful life."

Golfers Whipped By SM In Opener

Unusually high winds and a rough, hilly course plagued the Ram golfers as they fought a close bitter battle with San Mateo, although losing 5 points to 10 in the first of the Big Eight matches, March 13.

The next league match for the Rams is set with Contra Costa at Sharp Park on Friday, April 13.

The Peninsula Golf Club was the site of the season opener, where it was a six stroke difference between 10 men which settled the final outcome.

The San Mateo number one artist, Dan Jones, medalist for the meet, fired a 4 over par 76, winning 2½ points, which edged out Nick Andrakin, top man on the Ram ladder, while Larry Barr, the Rams', second man, carded a 77, two strokes under his opponent, Ralph Huber, who bagged 2 points. After the first foursome, the Bulldogs walked all over the locals point-wise, thereby making their victory decisive.

Squad Coach Grover Klemmer claimed that what made this match worthwhile was the fact that the opposition's total average score for its team was an even 79, while the Rams averaged an 80.3.

AMS Intramural Cage Program Underway With 21 Clubs; CAB, Independent, IFC Loops Formed

By Nick Peters

Twenty-one teams, all with title aspirations in their eyes, have kicked-off the spring semester's Associated Men Student intramural basketball program this week under the capable leadership of Jack Gaddy, the college's Director of Athletics.

Because of the large turnout of independent ball clubs, as well as the regular entry from Club Activities Board and Inter-Fraternity Council-sponsored organizations, there will be three leagues in competition: the CAB, IFC and the new independent loop.

Games will be played in the men's and women's gymnasiums on campus with the CAB clubs battling it out on Mondays, the IFC aggregations clashing on Wednesdays and the independents meeting on Thursdays.

Tip-offs will take place at 7:10 p.m. and 8:10 p.m. First half action will terminate at the half-hour for a 10-minute intermission. The second half will be played from 7:40 p.m. (or 8:40 p.m.) until the end of the hour. There will be a total playing time of 40 minutes with no time outs except for injury.

Contrary to past procedure referees will be supplied and paid for by the AMS. The only responsibility on the teams themselves will be to leave the gymnasiums quickly after the last game so that the janitors may lock up without delay and that they give 48 hours notice to Gaddy should they decide to postpone their game.

Violation of the latter will demand a $3 fine from the negligent ball club for the payment of the officials' fees. Cancelations will not be replayed unless their outcome would have a definite bearing on the final standings.

Discus Ace Reid To Toss Shot In New Power Role

Looking over a track squad which is weaker in weight events than it has been in the past several years, Coach Lou Vasquez is counting heavily on points in the discus and shot from 20-year-old Mike Reid.

Reid, who has never put the shot in competition, is picking up the iron ball in an effort to add points in the college's relatively weak shot field.

A 147-feet plus discus heaver, the well-built, blond-tressed Reid should definitely be one of the best plate men in the state, according to Vasquez.

The six-foot, 215-pounder (pictured below) has one year of competition behind him and is sure that this year of experience will aid his versatility by adding the shot to the events in which he will compete.

Speaking of the discus, Coach Vasquez commented, "Mike is an extremely hard worker in an event in which hard work pays off."

If hard work is an indicator of success, Reid can be expected to be close to the top of the heap come State meet time.

Newcomers Lead College Netters

With the Ram newcomers playing like veterans, the college netters are rounding into top shape and will supply tough opposition for the league favorites, Modesto and Oakland, Coach Roy Diederichsen announced recently.

Fred Botsford and Jack Braeken, the number one and two men, respectively, have gone unbeaten in league play so far this season, and Larry Draper and Hank Scoble, number three and four men, are improving.

In their next league match the college team meets Stockton at Stockton on Friday, April 3.

San Mateo was the first crucial match for the Rams this season and the Bulldogs fell before the local team's fine display of strength, 6-1. The match might have ended in a shutout for the Rams had not one of the college's players developed a bad leg. Winners for the Red and White were Botsford, 6-3, 6-2; Braeken, 6-4, 6-4; Draper, 6-1, 6-0; Scoble, 4-6, 7-5, 6-4.

In the doubles the combination of Botsford-Braeken was successful, 6-2, 6-2; while Draper and Scoble were victorious as they smothered the Bulldog combination, 6-1, 6-0.

Cindermen Place Third In Big Eight Relays With 45¾

Winning two firsts, four seconds and three individual thirds, the college's trackmen took a respectable third behind host Modesto (61¼) and runner-up Oakland (49½) in the first running of the Big Eight Relays with a total of 45¾ points.

Weightman Mike Reid was top dog in the discus with a toss of 146-11 and the college's two-mile relay squad (4-880's) of Tony Vance, Ken Dawdy, James Dennis and Piekens Rodgers won their event.

Jess Sirles collected two seconds in the broad jump (23-0) and high jump (6-0) and also competed on the second place 440-yard relay team (4-100's) with Al Jenkins, John Smith and Ed Tank, who also took runnerup honors in the century.

Coach Lou Vasquez' defending champs open their league season against Modesto and Contra Costa on Friday, April 3.

Semi-Annual Block SF Banquet Set For June 2

With an active membership of 33, the Block SF Society is working toward its semi-annual banquet to be held on June 2, sponsor Alex Schwarz announced yesterday.

Officers for this semester, who are award winners in many different sports, are Bob Ross, president; Mike Warnock, vice-president; Carl Mitchell, secretary-treasurer, and Josh Williams, athletic representative.

Meetings are planned for April 10, April 24, May 1 and May 29, with all block winners urged to attend the meetings, at which 45er movies will be one of the features.

Possible $1000 Prize

A $1000 cash award may be offered by the Sports Center to anyone bowling a perfect 300 score, and a special rate of $1.25 per week league charge (three games) has shown itself added incentive for keglers here who are interested in the Associated Men Student bowling league, according to Don Carr, league chairman.

Concerning the size of the proposed circuit, Carr stated that nearly 50 keglers have thus far expressed a desire to participate. Other interested parties are advised to meet in S-111 this Friday during College Hour.

Big Eight Records Set By College's Mermen

Laurie Hansen, one of the most promising swimmers on the Ram squad, set two conference records and helped create another in the first Big Eight Conference meet at Sacramento March 13.

Hansen clocked 3:03.1 in the 200 butterfly and 2:56.9 for the 200-yard breast stroke.

The third Ram record was posted by Gene Gaynor, Bob Urren, Hansen and Craig Schwarz, 4:59.6, in the 420-yard medley relay.

Roy Burkhead's crew invade the San Mateo City Pool next Friday at 3:15 p.m. and Hansen, Gaynor and Schwarz are expected to give the Bulldogs some tough competition.

Midterms Have Little Effect On Club Activities

By Pat Perkins

IT SEEMS midterm exams have not affected the extra-curricular activities of the various clubs around the campus.

Aloha will be the official greeting at Theta Tau sorority's pledge luau to be held this semester at Forest Hill Lodge.

Roughly ten hours of music per week is piped into the cafeteria by the Broadcasters Club. This club, which was founded two years ago, trains students for the broadcasting field as well as getting the latest in music and college news across to the students.

All Chess Club members, and potential new members are welcome Tuesdays and Thursdays from 3 to 5 p.m. for instruction and practice in C-114. The club also meets during College Hours, according to the officers, who include Anne Girard, president; Ronnie Homerez, vice-president, and Irving Warner, secretary.

Delta Psi sorority held its luncheon for rushees last Sunday at the Mark Hopkins Hotel. The sisters are also planning a picnic with Zeta Phi Sigma fraternity on April 5.

UMOC is coming! Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity is urging everyone to vote for his favorite "ugly man" by dropping pennies in the various containers located around the campus.

Attending a conference at San Francisco State College in the near future is one of the activities the California Student Teachers Association has planned for this semester.

With a new deadline for literary and poetry compositions, the Forum Club expects an additional flood of entries. All persons interested in reading for the group are invited to attend meetings in S-257.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 o'clock in The Guardsman office, S-304.

Spring Festival Set For May 15

Preparations are underway for the coming Spring Festival to be held Friday afternoon, May 15. Highlighting the event will be the King and Queen contest, the parade of floats, and various club booths; a dance will follow for the remainder of the evening, Bud Andress, Club Activities Board president, stated.

Names of two contestants for the king and queen of the festival are to be submitted by individual clubs here, and the winner will receive trophies. The judges of the contest will be Ocean Avenue merchants, faculty members and CAB officials.

The parade will start in the afternoon, from Junipero Serra Boulevard and proceed down Ocean Avenue to the Cow Palace. Floats will be made by each of the clubs, and some financed by neighboring merchants.

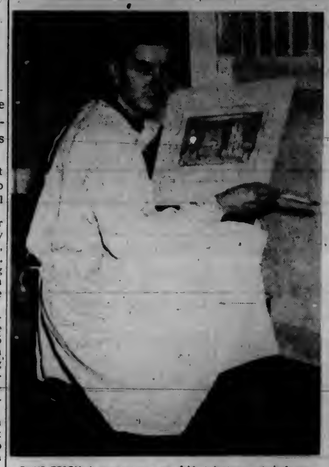
Trophies will also be awarded to the best decorated float, booths and the club whose counter makes the most money.

Andress added that the theme of the festival has not as yet been chosen, but there is still one day left before entries are closed.

Fashions Spotlight Jr. League Meet

Styles ranging from the drab, bulky World War I Yeomanette uniforms to the smart, comfortable service apparel of today, highlighted the March 13 general meeting of the Junior League of San Francisco.

The meeting, which was open to the public, convened in the Peacock Court of the Hotel Mark Hopkins, and was attended by council members Sue Shawl and Vicky Aumann.



Peacetime activities of women in the armed services were outlined by Captain Winifred Quick, Assistant Chief of Naval Personnel for Women and Director of the WAVES, and Colonel Margaret M. Henderson, USMC.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services, better known as DACOWITS. It was established in 1951 by the Secretary of Defense, and is a national women's committee of 50 private citizens, who advise the Defense Department on matters relating to women in the services, recommend legislative measures utilizing the capabilities of these women, and increase public acceptance of the concept of military service as a facet of good citizenship.

Song Girl Tryouts Set

Tryouts for song girls for the fall semester will be held on Wednesday, April 1, in Smith Hall from 2 to 3 p.m., according to John Dunn, adviser to the Rally Committee. The judging for the positions will be done by this semester's song girls. It will be based upon showmanship, originality and spirit. No previous experience is necessary.

'Orchard' Run Extended

Favorable Reviews, Large Audience Response Create Demand For Extra Performances Of Russian Comedy

Large, enthusiastic audiences, favorable reviews and the actors' own willingness are factors which were taken into consideration when the decision was made to extend The Cherry Orchard run another weekend, according to Michael Griffin, drama director here.

"We feel the show is good and we want to provide the opportunity for those theater-goers who haven't caught the performance to see it; therefore, the show has been extended until the weekend of April 3," Griffin said.

Carolyn Stull, Oakland Tribune drama critic, gave The Orchard a highly favorable review. Individual actors were commended highly, particularly John Rose, Virginia Rae and Dave Terry.

The play is drawing a full house every week, Griffin indicated. Many people have come from all over the Bay Area to see the performance. A group from Bancroft Junior High School (consisting of 14 students and six advisers) recently came from San Leandro to view the performance. The children, who have I.Q.'s of 135 and over, not only enjoyed the play but also understood the subtleties, Griffin said. They were considered to be one of the best audiences in some time, according to the actors.

The group toured the Little Theater after the show and found the lighting and sound systems as well as the general atmosphere backstage to be fascinating. All in all they felt the trip to the college to be a success, and expressed interest in the Drama Club's next presentation.

During College Hour last Friday, the club was visited by mime and pantomime artist Ronald Davis, who was a classmate of Marcel Marceau.

Davis gave a brief performance and talk and then answered questions from the group. Davis has been very active in giving other demonstrations around the Bay Area to other little theater groups.

Annual AWS Tea, Fashion Program Set For April 15

Spring and summer frocks dominate a wardrobe of many different styles and shades to be featured at the annual fashion show and tea, sponsored by the Associated Women Students Wednesday, April 15, from 3 to 5 p.m. in Smith Hall.

Arlene Kordoules, AWS president, added that every woman student is invited to view the fashions being displayed through the courtesy of Livingston's Dress Shop.

Approximately 12 women from the various organizations on campus will model everyday casuals to dressy formals, all in keeping with the college woman's budget. Sun suits as well as tailored outfits will also be included in the presentation.

Models do not necessarily have to belong to a club or sorority in order to be eligible to model. Members of the AWS will do the choosing. As yet, definite selections have not been made.

The AWS members describe this event as "April Showers," a theme which they consider is appropriate and fitting at this time.

Invitations have been sent to senior girls in the 30 high schools, public, private and parochial, here in San Francisco.

"It has not been determined whether there will be any entertainment as yet, but every effort is aimed toward this goal," Miss Kordonles declared.

Committee heads are yet to be elected for this function. A meeting is to be held and appointments will be made accordingly.

Other AWS officers under Miss Kordoules include Beverly Jones, vice-president; June White, secretary, and Carolyn Heath, treasurer.

Tour Of Unique Maritime System Set For College Hour Film Series

American Shipping, a guided technicolor tour of America's great inland waterway system and the ships that ply the inland routes, is the scheduled College Hour film series presentation for this Friday, in S-136.

One of the unique maritime systems of its kind in the world today, the intricate network of water transport in the Great Lakes region carries 85 per cent of the iron ore produced in the United States to the mills and is the main route of commerce for the northeastern states and Canada.

The documentary, sponsored and produced by the American Steamship Lines, pictures the immense yet well ordered operation of a waterway system that covers 292,670 square miles, passing the ships through such everyday engineering miracles as the Soo Locks which carry Great Lakes shipping around the rapids of the St. Mary river.

"The American Inland waterway system is the largest fresh water body in the world and the history of its shipping and growth of commercial enterprise is an important part of the historical American Westward Movement of the early 19th century," Madison Devlin of the sponsoring audio-visual aids department commented.

Bach Passes Available

Obtainable tomorrow, ushering passes for the San Francisco Symphony and combined Stanford and San Jose State chorus presentation of the Bach Mass in B Minor will be given out at Dean Gertrude Norgard's office, S-150, starting at 8 a.m.

Students wishing to serve in the capacity of ushers for the performance must be at the Opera House on Good Friday at 3 p.m., an hour and 15 minutes before the 4:15 curtain time.

Semester College Hour Events Listed

College Hours will follow the time schedule set last September, 10 to 10:40 a.m., every Friday that classes are in session, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here.

Events scheduled for this semester are as follows:

March 27: Holiday, no College Hour.

April 3: Ugly Man On Campus Rally, Faculty Association Meeting.

April 10: Student-Faculty Speaker Program, Club Meetings, Variety Show Rally.

April 17: Inter-Fraternity Council Pledge Games, Faculty Association Meeting.

April 24: Club Meetings.

May 1: Student-Faculty Speaker Series, Club Meetings, Jazz Band Concert.

May 8: Double College Hour—Blood Drive Rally, Faculty Association Meeting.

May 15: May Festival Rally, Faculty Association Meeting.

May 22: Election Rally.

May 29: Student Speaker Series, Club Meetings, Band Concert.

June 6: Final Examinations, no College Hour.

Observation

'Obsolescence' Economically False Theory

By William Forshay

INSIDIOUS and corrupt are mild words when applied to the largest single factor contributing to our present inflationary economy—"planned obsolescence."

This Cerberus-headed monster with its three false premises seems to guard the gate to an economic heaven rather than the mythological hell.

Yet, as time and propaganda have been united to form attitudes, the American people, almost without exception, have been proselytized to the following of a doctrine called "keeping up with the Joneses" until it almost seems to belong to our way of life.

The raison d'etre of this purely modern creation is the initial premise that has long since been over-emphasized. This is the idea that, since this is a capitalistic economy, the public must buy continually. True on its face, this concept now has an addendum made by business "and we know how to MAKE the public keep buying."

Commonly recognized and even accepted is the "partial repair" or "timed wear-out" system where the goods we buy have a set program of shop visits ostensibly for the purpose of keeping the mechanism in perfect order or where there is a definite frequency planned for parts failures and replacements.

(One television repairman—whose name we withhold to protect the guilty—stated that three-fourths of all TV repairs are needless.)

For some reason, it never seems strange to U.S. buyers that foreign cars seem to last indefinitely without major repair bills, costly overhauls and expensive parts replacements once every six months after the first year of ownership.

Still, this is an "accepted fact" and as such is obvious.

More subtle, sneaky, and invidious is "prestige" obsolescence which annually sends people with a two-year-old car or washer or other major appliance rushing to the merchants to get the latest model which has all those "wonderful improvements" which make the "American way of life" so "rich and satisfying."

Failure to recognize and fight the push in these tactics causes a refrigerator which makes "round ice cubes" and drops them in a pan "automatically" to appear so desirable that people buy it even if their one-year-old model has not yet begun to fail apart from the "planned" step.

Possibly even more ridiculous and undoubtedly as profitable is the constant revolution in clothing styles. Not only do we have a time limit on our cars, appliances and homes, but, we also submit to the idea of an annual refurbishment of our wardrobes. If we fail to buy, the "prestige" gimmick brings pointed references to our social acceptability.

Against the person who does maintain his right "not to buy" and "not to be in style," a subtle and constant campaign is directed. Often, in the lower middle classes of our "classless" society, people react to the idea of a foreign car by saying, "I'm UnAMERICAN to buy foreign-made products when AMERICAN products are so much better."

Or, if a person just will not own a television set (otherwise known as a time - consumer), "What, you don't have a TeeVee? You must be crazy!" To a non-smoker, "But it's so relaxing . . ." and so on endlessly without logical reason. Business knows that emotion rather than logic controls the average buyer and his purchase.

Two parts of the overhaul needed in our present economy are a slowdown in buying and a refusal to be pressured by advertising or status considerations. Business owes to the consumer products of enduring integrity which will last at least as long as foreign counterparts and (idealistically) as long as possible. Unnecessary and costly checkups should be eliminated and only truly vital maintenance set up.

Even more necessary is the need to re-orient our thinking to an honest necessity question on all purchases. The "It's too much trouble to complain" idea should be replaced by a rigorous critical sense that is willing to inform the businessman of defects in his service or product. False advertising should be ruthlessly exposed and the Better Business Bureau strengthened and supported.

CJCSGA Conference To Convene April 11 At Modesto; Several Student Problems On Agenda

By Alex Sokoloff

More than 400 delegates from Northern California two-year colleges will meet in Modesto Saturday for the 24th semi-annual meeting of the Northern Region of the California Junior College Student Government Association Conference.

The CJCSGA will be divided into ten major workshops, each of which will discuss its own problems and bring to light new ideas while solving them. Workshops at this conference will delve into the fields of student government, campus activities, publicity, state information, finance, current problems, men's athletics, women's athletics, and constitutions.

Chairmen for the workshops will be appointed by the CJCSGA president's planning board from letters submitted by the participating colleges.

A recent achievement of the conference was the official recognition of the Supreme Court's ruling on segregation in public institutes of knowledge.

A delegation from the college proposed a measure last semester which would ban anyone with a grade average of less than "C" from organized sports activities in all of the California two-year colleges. "This would assure taxpayers that their money is being spent on edueation and not on the furthering of athletic careers," according to Diek Cottrell, president of the Associated Students here. The measure, however, was defeated at the state conference.

Cottrell said that in the past, delegations from the college to the conference have always been well-versed in the necessary parliamentary proeedures and well-informed in the topics that were discussed.

Members of this semester's delegation are Cottrell, Mike Haskell, Pat Hawkins, Roberta Kennedy, Sue Shawl, Ted Keller, Sam Allen, Judy Ray, Ann Thuse, Albert Salamanca, Bill Ideker, Nick Peters, Josh Williams, Vicky Aumann, Bruce Littman, Fred Muller, Ben Northrup, Paul Bondshu, Jackie Pera, and Bunny Tolifson. Advisers to the delegation are Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, and Sherman Elworthy, Club Activities Board sponsor.

The CJCSGA conference was first held in 1947 to create better student government relations among the colleges as the main purpose for its inception, according to Hillsman.

This is accomplished by giving the different colleges an opportunity to work together on mutual problems. The participating students at the regional conference examine the recommendations and amendments brought before a general assembly, which decides on what topics will be forwarded to the State Junior College Conference. The State conference will be held at Long Beach, May 7, 8 and 9.

Casper Exposed As Ballot Box Stuffer

A special announcement from the Chairman of the Ugly Man On Campus Committee today disqualified contestant Lucius P. Casper for stuffing the ballot cans with Confederate money. Casper had previously announced his victory before his "vote-getting" method was discovered.

Casper, when reached for comment, wore a disheartened, snaggle-toothed smile and told Guardsman reporters, "I guess I shoulda known better but I musta hin reading too much of that Mack-i-a-velly, an' he sez that the end justifies the means. It shore wouldda made th' folks back in Alpine Oak happy to see me win but I guess I can run again next year."

The real winner of the contest was unavailable for comment.

Men's Glee Club To Attend Annual Music Festival

Sixteen voices strong, the Men's Glee Club of the college will travel to San Jose City College on Friday to participate in the annual Northern California Junior College Music Educators solo and small ensemble vocal festival.

Robert Morton, faculty adviser to the college's glee club, commented that the gathering, which will include groups participating from 12 other colleges in the Northern California area, takes place over the afternoon and evening hours giving the singers a friendly opportunity to hear and compare the various techniques which a festival of this type offers.

"It is not a competitive affair," Morton said, "but simply a means of getting together to compare notes and progress."

Morton further stated that when the new arts building is completed in the fall of 1960, the following spring will see the festival being held at the college.

Prizes Awarded To Cutest Couple

Glamorizing the evening at the Frosh Ball, March 20, the Cutest Couple stepped into the spotlight and climaxed a highly successful event, according to Bob Basso, Freshman Class president.

Mary-Ann Lochi of Kappa Phi, and Don Malvestiti of Gamma Phi Ypsilon, captured first place in the contest. They were crowned by Basso.

Both winners were judged on the basis of personal appearance and poise. Miss Lochi, a high freshman, is 18 years old and a merchandising major. Malvestiti, a graduate of the college, majored in electronic engineering.

More than 200 couples attended the dance and witnessed the crowning.

Student Opinion To Decide Question Of Night Owl Use Of College Library

Plans are in operation this week to circulate a questionnaire which will allow students to decide the issue of evening hours versus the status quo in the college library, according to Arlene Kordoules, Associated Women Student president.

The questionnaire, which will be placed in the main foyer when completed sometime before Friday, will include blanks for such pertinent information as the desirability and the practical end of opening the college library during the evening hours. "The results of the questionnaire will have a decided bearing on the ultimate decision of the administration," Miss Kordoules stated.

She explained that the idea of extended library hours bordering on the proverbial "midnight-oil" territory of examination conscious students has long been pregnant in the minds of administrators, the students themselves, and any number of "night owls" who seem to do their best work in an "after hours" atmosphere.

IRC In Market For Pen Pals

Recruitment of "pen pals" to correspond with students in Osaka, Japan, "The San Francisco of the Orient," is the foremost task currently confronting the college's International Relations Club.

During his recent trip to Japan, Mayor George Christopher obtained a list of some 120 students from the University of Osaka who are interested in beginning a pen pal exchange with Bay Area students. The names of these students have since been turned over to the college and the International Relations Club, which is spearheading a drive to start a program of letter writing with students of what has been called San Francisco's "sister city."

"Such an exchange of letters would in the long run be of great benefit to the United States," Mario Gutierrez, president of the club, explained. "These Japanese students have shown in their enthusiasm of such a letter exchange that they are interested in learning more about America and her people from persons their own age."

"This is a good chance for students of the college to communicate with a foreign university and get the truths of American life across to those who will eventually be the leaders of Japan," Gutierrez added.

Another aspect of the pen pal program that deserves notice, Gutierrez declared, is the value these letters have to Japanese students who are learning to speak English. Through these informal notes they are aided in the study of the English language and are able to learn its idioms and colloquialisms.

Letter exchanges have already taken place with other countries, Gutierrez said, but never on this large a scale. He stressed that it was not compulsory to be a member of the International Relations Club in order to join the pen pal program. The list of Osaka students can be found in S-186, the office of the club's sponsor, Joseph Jacobsen.

In another development, Gutierrez disclosed details for a model UN which will examine the question, "Why we should change the UN." More than 20 two-year colleges have been extended invitations to send delegates to the meeting tentatively scheduled for Saturday, May 19, in Cloud Hall. The session will also be open to spectators.

The International Relations Club has a membership of 55 persons, representing 19 countries. Gutierrez made it clear that he would like to get more American students into the club, and would welcome any student who would like to attend the meetings held during College Hours in C-258.

VOLUME 48 SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA — WEDNESDAY, APRIL 8, 1959 NUMBER 5

Plaque Dedication In Honor Of Dr. Cloud Set For Friday

Dedication of a new plaque in memory of Dr. Archibald J. Cloud, first president of the college from 1935-1949, will take place during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., this Friday in the foyer of the library.

The plaque, made available through the funds of the Club Activities Board, will be placed in the library under the portrait photograph of Dr. Cloud, whose death occurred in 1957.

The picture itself has been in the library since 1954 when Cloud Hall was dedicated. It was presented to the college in 1949 by the CAB group of that year, in honor of President Cloud's retirement.

A tribute, made by the late Dr. Monroe E. Deutsch, former chancellor of the University of California, at the Cloud Hall dedication ceremonies in 1954, is engraved on the plaque and reads as follows:

"It is particularly fitting that this library should be called by the name of one who for many years devoted himself to the instruction of great works of English literature. This building will bear the name of Archie Cloud and remind each successive group of students of the man who securely laid the foundation of this college. He assuredly deserves this recognition."

Participants at the dedication ceremony will include President Louis G. Conlan, Dr. Oscar A. Anderson and John J. Brady of the college's administrative staff; Dr. Alfred Tapson, president of the Faculty Association; Associated Student President Dick Cottrell and several student officers here. Dr. Conlan will deliver the dedication speech, and Bud Andress, CAB president, will preside.

The dedication ceremony is a prelude to National Library Week which begins Sunday, April 12. With "Wake Up and Read" as a slogan, its aim is to show the importance of libraries.

Schedules For Summer Session Now Available

Schedules for the summer session of 1959 are now available in the office of the registrar here, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

The last day for programming with counselors will be June 4. Registration closes and instruction begins on Monday, June 22. There will be two days for final examinations, July 30 and 31.

Interested students may obtain a program from their counselor, and veterans must file a copy of their program with the veterans' office.

All students wishing to attend the summer session must report to the registrar's office between May 11 and June 4 to fill out a registration book. Then one must confirm his registration on June 18 in order to attend classes beginning June 22.

New Officers To Be Added To Force

Arrangements are being made to swear in approximately ten men in the Campus Police force sometime within the next three weeks, according to Fred Fitzgerald of the college's criminology department.

The force has issued 1100 parking permits and approximately 750 citations to students here this semester. The department is still behind in the number of permits issued as compared to this time in 1958 when 1300 permits had been given out.

Fitzgerald has come to the conclusion that students at the college must be obeying the traffic laws enforced since there has also been a decrease in the number of traffic citations issued.

Drivers were warned again against parking overtime on the circle drive in front of Selenee Hall, and anytime on the delivery ramps of any campus building.

The sharpshooter pistol team will be out for another team trophy on Sunday, April 19, when it will compete against Sacramento State College.

AWS Tea To Offer Variety Of Spring, Summer Fashions

By Margaret Alvaro

Plans are now being completed for the semi-annual Associated Women Student tea and fashion show slated for next Wednesday, April 15, from 3 to 5 p.m. in Smith Hall, according to Arlene Kordoules, AWS president.

Senior girls from the 30 high schools—public, private and parochial—in San Francisco are to be the honored guests at this function.

The purpose for the tea and fashion show is to enable the graduating high school seniors to become acquainted with the college, its faculty and students, according to Gertrude Norgard, acting dean of women and adviser to the AWS.

New spring and summer frocks dominate the wardrobe which will be displayed by 12 models. Each of the women, to be chosen from the various organizations on campus, will display four outfits of feminine elegance in a variety of color collections.

Everyday casuals, sun suits, dressy formals, as well as tailored outfits in keeping with the college women's budget, will be included in the presentation.

Models, wishing to purchase any of the fashions they wear, will be allotted a 15 per cent discount on each outfit, Miss Kordoules said.

Light clouds of angel hair, colored umbrellas, and pink cherry blossoms make up the decor, which will be used in promoting and carrying out the theme, April Showers. Each sorority is donating 1200 blossoms for ornamental purposes.

Invitations are being sent to all AWS card holders, but other women students as well are invited to attend. Admission is free.

Since there is no intermission, the fashion show will continue for approximately 45 minutes, after which refreshments will be served.

Chairmen for the committees are as follows: Carolyn Vukasin, decorations; Carol Heath, food; Diane Del Bon, models and clothes co-ordinator; Arlene Nellson, serving; Karen Glovo, invitations; Beverly Johns, name tags; Gamma Sigma Sigma and the Recreation Association, clean-up; and Miss Kordoules, publicity and programs.

Aside from the fashion show and tea, the AWS, along with the Hotel and Restaurant Society, are encouraging a can drive for the benefit of the Canon Kip Community House. This was discussed at the last AWS meeting, March 31, and plans are in process to see that the goal is reached. Miss Kordoules and Dean Norgard completely favor the idea and expressed the opinion that this would be a good opportunity to perform some social work for the community.

Another of the AWS projects for this semester, Miss Kordoules added, is the attempt for the opening of the library in Cloud Hall in the evenings to all students for studying purposes. Women students will give full support to this venture and hope to achieve it.

Ugliest Man On Campus . . .

Luke Unveils Glorious Past

With shouts of "I throw my beret into the ring" and "In the words of Coolidge, 'I choose to run' (sic)," Luke Casper entered the Ugly Man On Campus Contest last week, captured first place, and revealed one of the most laurel-filled pasts of any ugly man in the college's history.

Before coming to the college this semester to study philosophy, Casper ran an Ugly Saloon in Alpine Oak, Montana, his hometown. In 1956 he was elected the UMOC at Alpine Oak Union High School. Following his victory he was entered in the state finals, but a healthy sun tan, gained during the summer while working on his father's farm, kept him out of the state-wide finale. "With that tan, I just couldn't make the grade."

"The fog here took care 'a the tan," he said, "so I had no worries there. An' besides, I took some a' my own original brand of agly pills and tried some a' my Granma's old tricks like face nailfiling, line placin', nose stretchin' and hair-in-unsightly-places grower. I couldn't lose," was the manner in which he described his conquest of the UMOC contest.

Are Collegians Being Pampered By Paternalistic Faculty?

HAVE colleges become too paternal? This challenging question has been raised in several recent college and university newspapers throughout the country and has been treated in the Associated Collegiate Press' Parade of Opinions.

Maintaining that no question possessing so many ramifications and breeding so many divergent opinions can be considered fully answered, we offer one more set of replies to the following questions concerning student welfare which have been raised in various student newspapers.

"Should parents receive news about their child's progress in college?"

Before answering this question we must pose another—should anyone studying in college be referred to as a child? Substituting words with less juvenile implications—sons and daughters, for instance—for "child," we shall then proceed to reply that parents should be informed about their son's and daughter's progress only if they request such information.

On paper (though unfortunately not always in practice) a student who has reached the college level is expected to guide his own scholastic destiny as he prepares for subsequent assumption of responsibility in the field he will enter upon graduation. One easy way to accomplish this is through a feeling that his elders have granted him an almost unqualified amount of trust and confidence.

A college which maintains too close a relationship with a student's parents can quite easily detract from the student's confidence. If he is not granted a large measure of personal and academic freedom by the time he enters college, his chances of developing into an independent-thinking individual capable of making weighty decisions is indeed negligible. The college should, therefore, withhold contact with parents until the parents express a particular interest in their son's academic progress.

"Should professors take attendance or give quizzes to see that everyone keeps up with the subject?"

In state- and city-owned colleges, it is, admittedly, an instructor's prerogative and duty to take measures to insure that he is not wasting his time or the taxpayers' money on "professional 'C' students" and "hangers-on." It would appear that the circumstances should dictate the extent of these measures.

Returning to the confidence-building facets of a college's aims, however, we must again maintain that the veritably conscientious students will in the long run profit from and thrive on the trust placed in them by their superiors, while the heads of the hangers-on will roll when the various forms of academic guillotines are put into working order each semester.

Conclusive views regarding the merits or shortcomings of paternalism in college may be formed by considering its detinition: "The principle of governing a country or group of employees in a manner suggesting a father's relationship with his children."

If we are to regard college students as children, paternalistic treatment would be indeed justified. But the endless examples of college students manifesting characteristics of adulthood through their keen observations and accomplishments presents graphic evidence that their potential can best be realized by giving them ample room in which to develop.

Late Arrivals Annoy Theater Audiences

DURING a recent evening performance by the college's drama group in the Little Theater, the play began as scheduled and the audience, reasonably enough, anticipated an evening of uninterrupted entertainment.

Shortly after the opening curtain, however, the audience was rudely disturbed by a seemingly endless number of late arrivals, who somehow always manage to produce a most untimely creak in a floorboard or provide a certainly unwelcome screen between the players and their audience.

Besides contributing to the discomfiture of the audience, the latecomers also can disturb the routine of the players on stage, who require and deserve the most favorable types of working conditions.

It is hoped that the college's Little Theater staff, which is considered "big league" in every other respect, will follow the lead of other theaters in the area and request that late arrivals wait until intermission before taking their seats.

. . . Challenge To Photo Bugs

UMOC 'Kisser' Cracks Lens

The on-campus habitat of this ubiquitous breed is the Cloud Hall photo studio where a humming, hive-like activity takes place in a dramatic aura of the unexposed on the verge of creation.

In this concrete redoubt lie the tools of the photography craft. Hot klieg lights standing helter skelter in a tangled maze of electric cord throw brilliant beams and form graceful shadows on the composed features of a young girl's smile as the photographer, head buried in the black shroud of the veaerable old view camera, takes a bearing.

One of the most important of these tools is not, strangely enough, a piece of equipment but the abstract use of time, the second and its fractions thereof. This value, coupled with beams of light through the little pieces of glass called lenses which sometimes run into the hundreds of dollars, imprint the desired image on the film which may be fast film, slow film or color film.

With the specialized demands of modern commercial advertising, photography has taken huge strides in advaneing the experimental into an accepted norm almost overnight. It is a rapidly changing profession, its only tradition being the recognition of ability in the "good picture."

The college's movie camera crew, presently producing flieks for the audio visual aid department, antieipate the day when the movie camera will work in conjunction with the college's broadeasting and drama departments.

One of the recent challenges to the photography department was in finding a lense capable of forming an image of Luke Casper, UMOC candidate, without breaking. This problem was solved in true form when a brownie box camera was found who didn't know any better.

Dream Comes True

Coed Here Gets VIP Treatment On Midway Tour

"I dreamed I had breakfast at the Fairmont, lunch at Fisherman's Wharf, a chat with Nat "King" Cole, and dinner at Ernie's," sounds like the familiar strains of one of America's best known commerciais . . . or the daydreamings of a foriorn coed.

Two weeks ago this dream became a reality for Vicky Aumann, a blonde, China-born Russian coed from Australia, when she was selected a member of "Miss Midway's" entourage.

It all began when Joseph A. Amori, director of student placement, received a note from former Associated Student President Al Kingston, who is presently an Ensign aboard the USS Midway. The ship's 3500 officers and men held a queen contest, and Kingston's services as public relations officer for the contest were "volunteered" by the Midway's executive and special services officers when they learned that the ensign is from San Francisco, the ship's home port.

Kingston asked Amori to provide two women students to take part in the celebration as members of the Queen's party. Amori chose Miss Aumann and Sunny Bjorkman from San Francisco State College.

The first day started bright and early with a 7 a.m. breakfast at the Fairmont, after which all the ladies were presented with orchids sent direct from Hawaii. The party then proceeded to Alameda to meet the Midway, an "attack-class" carrier, which was due to arrive in the Bay Area later that morning after a seven months' cruise in the South Pacific and the Orient.

The coronation of Miss Midway, 1959, Phyllis Cox from Lexington, Kentucky, took place aboard the aircraft carrier. Then the party separated into two groups for a triumphant procession through the city, riding in flashy, convertible, sports cars.

After lunch and a tour of Fisherman's Wharf, the Queen and her court took the eable ear to their hotel, where they prepared for the evening's entertainment.

The group dined at Ernie's, the famous restaurant, and then the party adjourned to enjoy a few hours of tears and laughter with Victor Borge.

The next day proved just as exciting. It ineluded a complete tour of the ship and the United States Naval Air Station at Alameda, lunch aboard the carrier, and a ride in the captain's gig from Alameda to Hunters Point.

In the evening, on the way to dinner at the Tonga Room, a chance meeting and chat with Nat "King" Cole added another extra thrill to Miss Aumann's dream come true.

One-Eyed Monster As Viewed By Futurites

Two thousand years from now an archeologist will probably make the most startling discovery since the Rosetta Stone when his pick sinks into the door of a time vault located in what once was Washington, D. C.

Undoubtedly the center of attraction for the scientist is a small wooden box concealing primitive-looking instruments behind a small plate of glass. The ditch-digging Ph.D. remembers his high school history and how it told of the manner in which the house-dwellers of the twentieth century discovered electricity. He looks on Ben Franklin's find as we look on the caveman's conquest of fire. "Obviously," he says to himself, "this machine must have run on their crude electrical energy."

The newspapers (like the poor, the newspapers will always be with us) carry the story under banner headlines the following day—reading something like this:

Peter Pickanshovel, a noted North American archeologist, broke through the crude protective doors of a primitive dwelling in the old meeting place of the United States tribe, one of the Big Four tribes of the early space age, yesterday and discovered what is likely to be the greatest archeological find of our century.

Pickanshovel estimates that the dwelling was constructed around 1959. It contained numerous essentials of primitive life, paramount among them a small wooden box used as a communications media by the prehistorie house dwellers. The scientist believes that the entire civilization revolved about this small box, leading him to think that it had a deep-rooted religious significance.

The media was called "Television," and he feels that, outside of food and drink, the small box was the most important thing in a barbarian's life.

Along with the device, he discovered books on the use of the box and a sending machine for the transmission of "programs" or "shows," as they were called. The time vault also contained numerous samples of these "shows."

The "shows" were viewed by some of the world's leading scientists yesterday, and as nearly as they can ascertain, primitive man was fascinated by "shows" that featured men riding on the backs of beasts and shooting at each other—not with rays but with crude weapons which shot small pieces of metal; death was seldom quick but rather slow and agonizing.

Pickanshovel feels that this appealed to the house-dwellers' lustful urge to kill. Further proof of this was offered in the forms of "shows" between two semi-naked men who struck each other with padded fists until one combatant was either beaten to the ground or covered with blood. Another featured 22 men, all clad in armor-type clothing. The 21 bigger men would attack what appeared to be the smallest and then pounce upon him until he was completely helpless.

All "programs" had frequent interruptions by scantily-dressed, sensuous young girls, or rough tattooed men who would entice the viewer to buy the commodity that produced the "show."

Because records in the vault show that the girls and men were highly successful, Pickanshovel is of the theory that this was more of an order than a request, leading him to feel that the media was controlled by a religious or political sect.

Earp Rides Pedestal Despite Clay Feet

WESTERNS have become the most popular of all television shows. Eight out of the top ten programs are oaters. What is it about them that appeals to the vast majority of viewers?

It could be their authenticity. But then just how authentic are they? On TV, Marshal Wyatt Earp as portrayed by Hugh O'Brian is a dashing, dedicated lawman with integrity and scruples. He always wears fancy clothes and is consistently seen blazing away with his Buntline special.

The famed marshal of Dodge City, Kansas, reorganized the red-light district and then demanded a big fee for protection. Whenever he collected a fine, Earp always kept a percentage of it for himself. What's more, Wyatt dressed like a pilgrim, wore a shaggy moustache and looked like Luke Casper.

Nevertheless, The Life And Legend (mostly legend) of Wyatt Earp is number eight in the Nielsen ratings.

Even many of the outlaws of 1869 weren't the stalwart gunmen that they are depicted as being, in 1959. Jesse James, who allegedly robbed the rich to help the poor, kept every penny for himself. Blaek Bart, the road-agent-poet, always carried an empty shotgun and never shot a man.

Could it be the stories which cause the Trendex ratings to rise? Maybe But Western writer Frank Gruber firmly states that there are only seven horse opera plots and that all others are merely off-shoots of the basic themes. Dale Robertson, who makes $1,000,000 from TV each year and is ranked by experts as the best horsemen in the business, believes that "adult" Westerns are phony. As he sees it, "All that conversation is just a cheap, underhanded way of making up fer the lack of a good story."

No matter what the answer, Westerns still reign supreme and there are still more to come in the future. Despite the fact that Cimarron City, Restless Gun, and Gunsmoke are almost certain to get the axe in the fall, virtually every other Western program is here to stay—at least for another 39 weeks.

HAVE-GUN — WILL-SHOOT — A Pennsylvania husband, mad at his wife for turning off Have-Gun, Will-Travel while he was enjoying it, jumped up, grabbed his loaded revolver and took a shot at her. Guess it's just a question of monkey-see-, monkey-do.

Johnny May's Slugging, Golden Arm Prove Fearsome Barriers Against Ram Big 8 Opponents

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Holding down the home plate forces behind the 1959 Red and White bid for the coveted Big Eight diamond crown and an invitation to the State Championship eliminations at Coalinga, hard-hitting catcher Johnny May and his golden arm should prove themselves as two of the more rugged barriers which Ram opponents will have to break through in order to come out on top of the Eisan charges in the coming circuit frays.

Although the generally hard sticking May has seen himself off to a sluggish start in the thus far young campaign (one for six in three outings), his heads-up field generalship and buggy-whip right arm have consistently proved to be thorns in the side of his adversaries.

Now returning for his final season of diamond competition on the two-year college level, May was the sole performer on last year's seventh place delegation to be selected for All-Conference honors. To this he added the distinetion of being named the top backstop in the northern section of the state.

Still regarded by the experts as nothing less than a einch to return to both mythieal rosters at the close, of the present eampaign, the big sticking eatcher has chosen to shy away from other competitive sports and devote his off-season aetivity to the East Bay bush eireuit, where he slapped 'em out at a respectable .325 clip for the Hustead's All-Star nine.

In regard to the versatile toois which earried him on to the heralded All-Big Eight contingent, May not only eiosed out the '58 pennant ehase with a sizzling .398 elip at the piate, but sent a total of 16 would-be base steaiers to the gallows with the snap of his golden arm, and compiled a .984 fielding average, all over a total of 14 official conference outings.

Concerning his future plans, May has by no means disearded the overwhelming possibility of a professional baseball eareer, but, rather than make the mistake of so many competitors who showed great potential in their collegiate years and yet failed to "pan out" in the cash and earry sport, the Ram backstop has definitely decided to complete the scholastic work required for his bachelor degree at San Jose State and then make his bid for a go at pro ball.

Ram Cagers Honored

Three members of Sid Phelan's co-championship team were awarded honors on the official All-Big Eight Conference teams as released recently by the league's Commissioner of Athletics, Russell Azzara.

High scoring all-around performers Bill Simmons and Cleo Cofield were on the first club along with Contra Costa's Tyler Wilbon. Santa Rosa's Tommy Harper and Oakland's Rufus Hawkins.

Mel Wilson, the college's scrappy playmaker-guard, was awarded a second club berth.

Intramural Loop Booms Into Third Week Of Action

After two weeks of Club Activities Board play, the Hotel and Restaurant Society, looming as the loop's best, and the Campus Police are tied for first with identical 2-0 slates.

Pivot Sam Battistone's consistent point proficiency has carried his H&R mates to two easy victories over the Filipino Club (1-1), 45-18, and The Guardsman (0-2), 66-35. Campus Police's unblemished mark has been gained at the expense of The Guardsman, 38-34, and Alpha Phi Omega (0-1), 32-17.

In the CAB's best battle to date the Filipino Club (1-1) edged out the Recreation Association (1-1) in a see-saw thriller, 36-34, behind Steve Espejo's strong 18-point output. The International Relations Club lost its only effort, dropping a 50-20 decision to the RA.

Inter-Fraternity play leaders after one round include Phi Beta Delta, Beta Tau, Lambda Phi and defending champ Gamma Phi, all boasting unblemished records via opening round victories.

Miraloma Club "A" and Miraloma Club "B" share the Independent lead after respective victories over Keki-Kanes (56-27) and Frisco Kats (38-31).

Linksmen Drub Pirates In Conference Outing

Reeling back from their first Big Eight setback, the Ram linksmen effectively trounced the Modesto Pirates picking up 10½ of the allotted 15 points on Mareh 20 at Harding Park.

The next assignment for the locals will be against Santa Rosa Friday, on the opponent's course.

Number one man, Niek Andrakin, fired the lowest card, 75, pitted against Pirate Bob Terfel's 78, while the rest of Coach Grover Klemmer's squad averaged a score of 78.

In the Northern California Collegiate tournament at Pasatiempo in Santa Cruz Marcb 26, 27 and 28, the Rams placed tenth in a field of 39 in team medalist scores, and Eiden Davies, utilizing a 9 handicap, placed in the individualist first flight competition.

Simmons Hurls Horsehiders To 8-5 Win Over Bulldogs; Porous Defense May Prevent Title Bid

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Still suffering from a severe case of the early season "bobbles," the 1959 Ram diamond forces managed to coast home on a pair of four-run innings to turn back San Mateo by an 8-5 margin last Tuesday on the Peninsula.

Although considered a weak sister delegation, the Bulldogs pushed across a tally in each of the first two frames, taking full advantage of a pair of timely errors on the part of an over-anxious Ram infield.

Then trailing 2-0, it was in the top of the fourth that the locals eame into their own to fire up the first quartet of runs that was to prove itself the inspiration behind the second conference win against one setback.

With two down and the bases full as the result of a pair of walks and a hit batter, shortstop Roy Tripaldi delivered in the eiutch with a line shot up the middle. Skip Redman lost Gene Russo on four balls, and Paul DiMartini singled sharply to right to drive in another pair of tallies.

Although the Bulldogs picked up another run in their half of the fourth and added two more in the eighth, as Johnny Condrin delivered four for five at the plate, the southerners were unable to compile enough fuel to contend with the four-run Red and White output of the fifth, and fell short by three markers at the end of nine.

Although rapped for a total of nine hits, Ram hurler Bill Simmons, who struek out six while walking but two, saw one of his better days on the hili and also batted three for four.

Score by innings:	R	H	E
RAMS 000 410 200	8	9	0
BULLDOGS 110 100 200	5	9	3

Vasquez Is Billed As Champ-Maker In Track Circles

By Al Orlovitz

Every coach's goal is to have his team win a state championship. Coach Lou Vasquez attained this goal last year when his Ram einder squad, displaying tremendous power and depth, garnered the coveted title.

Vasquez is known in local track eircles as the champ-maker, because of his ability to bring out the best in his charges. A ease in point is his development of Paul Patton who started last season as just another good miler.

However, by season's end, under Vasquez's guidance, Patton sprung the surprise of the year when he upset the form chart by sprinting to victory at the state meet in the record time of 4:16.3, the fastest clocking by a Junior College miler in the U. S.

A strong proponent of vitamin-mineral supplementation for athletes, Vasquez feels that optimum nutrition aids athletie performance in much the same way high quality fuel contributes to the effieiency of a racing car.

LOU VASQUEZ, highly rated Ram track mentor.

For his runners he stresses interval training, a method in which the athletes run a set distance, usually a quarter of their raeing distanee, alternately slow and fast. The fast portions of the run are always done at raee pace or faster, thus accustoming the runner to the tempo of the raee and teaching his pace judgment. Vasquez also advocates light weight-lifting to strengthen tendons and ligaments, particularly for field men.

His "secret" though, seems to be that he conditions his athletes mentally as well as physically, convincing them they are eapable of achieving times and distances they had previously thought beyond their ability.

Already rated one of the top coaches on the coast, his winning squads are living testimony to the effieiency of his training methods and coaching genius.

Ram Netmen Set For Friday Clash

With the entire squad in top shape, Coach Roy Diederichsen's netmen will face Modesto this Friday in one of the crucial matches of the current Big Eight Conference season.

On March 20 in Golden Gate Park, Contra Costa was ernshed by the local raeket squad, 6-1, in a conference match. In the number one singles match Fred Botsford defeated Mike Kaiser, 6-5, 6-1; number two man Jack Bracken rolled over Tom Butler, 6-1, 6-3; Larry Draper overwhelmed Darwin Bremer, 6-1, 6-0, and Mariano Musni beat Brian Miller, 7-5, 4-6, 6-3. In the doubles matches Botsford-Bracken obliterated Kaiser - Butler, 6-3, 6-0, and Draper-Scoble dumped Bremer-Allan, 6-1, 6-0.

Schwarz Lone Winner As Mermen Defeated

Lone victor for the college, at the second Big Eight Conferenee swimming meet against Stockton on March 20, was Craig Schwarz, in the 50-yard free style.

The Mustangs won nine out of ten events, swamping the Rams 65-23.

Roy Burkhead's squad is expected to face its stiffest competition when it engages Oakland City College's power-packed team this Friday. The Thunderbirds will be paced by Gary Heinrieh, one of the best young performers on the West Coast, who only a few weeks ago broke two national junior college records.

Matched against Heinrieh will be Laurie Hansen in the butterfly and either John Rosenberg or Rieh Bruhns in the 220-yard free style.

Crystal Ball Reveals Yankee-Giant Series

RAMBLINGS

By Nick Peters

Jones, Sanford Vital Cogs In SF Flag Bid

MAINTENANCE work at 16th and Bryant, Charlie Harney's construction crew working overtime at Candlestick Park, Mayor George Christopher winding-up his rusty wing (inactive since April 1958), the smell of roasted peanuts, exhibition game boxscores ereeping into the dailies, and the Winter chill turning into the thaw of Spring all lead up to one conecntrated thought—"PLAY BALL!"—and believe it or not, we are again confronted with big league baseball after seemingly only a "few days" layoff since the '58 World Series.

At the sound of that familiar verberation this Friday night in St. Louis a chain reaction will follow whereby 400 players from 16 major league teams will start wheeling the apple at each other in an effort to earn a spot for their club in the Series—the ultimate in professional baseball achievement.

This diamond activity will not be limited, however, to these 400 lustrous proponents of the game, but instead will start the eranking of arms and the swinging of bats for countless thousands of others partieipating in the minors, Babe Ruth, semi-pro, prep, college, two-year college, American Legion, Pony, and Little League loops—all equally important constituents of the game called baseball—America's national pastime in every sense of the word.

Prognostieating once again after a successful '58 Yankee-Brave foreseast we are inelined to believe that it'll be the same ol' Damn Yankees (who else?) faeing our own SAN FRANCISCO GIANTS in this October's Fall Classie.

Cunning barter methods which have brought flingers Sam Jones, Jaek Sanford and Billy Muffett into the loeal fortress are the primary reasons for a Giant pennant prediction. Add Johnny Antonelli, Mike McCormiek, Al Worthington, Curt Barclay and Stu Miller to that trio and you have quite a formidable pitching corps—a department in which the Giants sadly faltered in '58.

This solid hurling coupled with the long-distance terrorizing power attack, featuring Orlando Cepeda and Willie Mays, should win out, if the defense holds up, the sophomore jinx doesn't set in and the three potential 20-game winners come close to that figure.

PITTSBURGH'S PIRATES, a team which won 22 more in '58 than in '57, should offer the greatest opposition to the Candystiek eiouters. Principal Buc assets who'll make many enemy elubs walk the plank before the season is over are a healthy Ted Kluzewski, the all-.300 hitting outfield of Bill Virdon, Roberto Clements and Bob Skinner and a fine hill staff built around ironhorse Bob Friend, Vern Law, Ron Kline, George Witt and newly-acquired Harvey Haddix.

A deal sending slugger Frank Thomas to Cincinnati left the Pirates with only two real power hitters, and they both play the same position, leaving the Murtaugh-men at a great disadvantage in this category. Kluzewski will be battling it out for first base with homer-hitting Diek Stuart, with the winner carrying a large share of the RBI produetion on his shoulders.

The defending champion MILWAUKEE BRAVES' chances for a repeat will depend on the ability of Fred Haney's two aging mound aces, Lew Burdette and the National League's best, Warren Spahn. If age ereeps up on these stellar performers the Wisconsins could well drown in their own beer.

Lack of a good bench and the major vacancy left by Red Schoendienst's absence will deter the Braves' progress unless green pitchers Carlton Willey and Juan Pizarro can piek up the slack with sensational outputs. Ed Mathews, Hank Aaron and Wes Covington are the team's best, but Aaron is the only sure performer on the squad, as Covington has a triek knee and Mathew's average has been going down, down, down in the past few years. Catching is the best with the two Del's—Crandall and Rice—and recent acquisition Stan Lopata.

Rounding out the first division will be the LOS ANGELES DODGERS, making a comebaek after their flop finish last year. The old Ebbets Field gang of Gil Hodges, Carl Furillo and Duke Snider still has a few base hits left and with ex-Cardinal Wally Moon in the lineup, the Bums will have additional punch. The "Dook" especially will find the shortened right field distanees to his liking and if the right-handed hitting Furillo and Hodges master the art of "serceno" there'll be good times in the old town once more.

Second division leaders will be CINCINNATI'S REDS, who are beginning to assemble a Murderers Row a la 1955 when the Ted Kluzewski - Gus Bell - Wally Post - led Reds belted a record tying total of 221 round-trippers. In acquiring Del Ennis from the Cardinals and Frank Thomas from the Pirates the Scarlet Sockers again have a devastating crew of boundary-beiters, as '58 vets Frank Robinson, Jerry Lynch, Wally Post, Ed Bailey and Gus Bell are also handy with the homer weapon.

The trading of hill aee Bob Purkey, good all-around third baseman Don Hoak and top-flight reserve backstop Smokey Burgess for Thomas has weakened all these departments and if pitchers Don Newcombe, Brooks Lawrenee and Joe Nuxhall don't come through with peak performanees the Reds have had it. A team with power and little else.

Sixth place should just about be eeiling for the ST. LOUIS CARDINALS, who gave up their best starter and reliever to the Giants in pre-season trades. Pitching is poor with Larry Jaekson and Vinegar Bend Mizell the only potential "big winners." A man named Musial, though, is still around and he'll let the other clubs know it as long as he's able to lift a bat.

Aside from Ernie Banks, the National's Most Valuable Player in '58, the CHICAGO CUBS haven't got much and, although looking good on paper with over-the-hill sluggers Bob Thomson, Walt Moryn, Dale Long, and Alvin Dark having good years last season, the Cubs will only escape the cellar because their Philly brothers haven't an MVP. Pitching is young and could suddenly blossom into a healthy crank erew, but it isn't likely.

Dismal is a generous adjective when explaining the seemingly fruitless plight of the PHILADELPHIA PHILLIES, a team with aging veterans and a not-too-productive farm system. Almost a lead pipe einch to be shoveling the coal the Quaker City boys have a few bright spots in a still tough. Robin Roberts, young slugger Harry Anderson and a bat king named Richie Ashburn.

Organizations Preparing For Hell Week, AWS Tea, Dance

By Pat Perkins

INSTEAD of the recent hot weather slowing down the activities of the various on-campus organizations, it seems to have inspired a new batch of spring activities.

April Showers is the theme for the AWS tea, which will be held next Wednesday in Smith Hall from 2-5 p.m. The pledges from the various sororities will serve the refreshments.

Readings for critical analysis begin next Monday for The Forum Club. Club members may drop in at the Forum office to read and grade all of the material that has been submitted. "It is hoped that a representative sample of collegiate writing from the entire campus will be included in this year's Forum," Bill Forshay, chairman pro tem of the club, stated.

Gamma Sigma Sigma service sorority will be in charge of the table-setting and clean-up for the AWS tea and fashion show.

Preparing for pledge week are the sisters of Gamma Kappa Beta sorority. A surprise birthday party was given for Sandy Courtemanche, president of the sorority, at Sue Shawl's home recently.

Meeting in C-219 during College Hours is the Political Discussions Club.

Last Saturday the members of Beta Tau fraternity visited the college's former dean of men Edwin C. Browne, at his cabin in Santa Cruz. The brothers cut and piled wood for Browne and were rewarded with a delicious dinner cooked by Mrs. Browne. The officers for this semester are Jim Meyers, president; Wally Hayes, vice-president; John McKown, treasurer; Dan Durest, correspondence secretary; Dick Zingmark, historian; and Ken Averell, custodian.

To top off Hell Week Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity will present a dance entitled Spring Fever.

Block SF President Bob Ross has announced a meeting of all members in C-245 during College Hour. Forty-niner movies will be shown.

Popular Demand Holds Chekov's Play Over For Final Weekend

Held over and still held over is the reply the Little Theater is making to popular demands for the continued showing of Chekov's Cherry Orchard comedy, according to Michael Griffin, drama director.

"Good houses and good publicity as well as fine reviews are three of the principal reasons for the continuance of the play," Griffin stated and added, "plus the enthusiasm of the players and the support of the Associated Students."

The final two performances of the play will take place this weekend with an 8 p.m. curtain. Admission is by AS card or $1.00.

To help publicize the last two performances, a special dinner of Russian cookery is being prepared tomorrow in the cafeteria with the cooperation of the H&R department. Costing only 85c cents, the menu, written in both Russian and English, will feature Russian soup, entrees, vegetables, salads, breads, drinks and desserts prepared by Chef Pierre Coste.

JOANN KRELING plays the role of Varya in The Cherry Orchard.

In addition, as "Cherry Orchard Day" is greeted, Russian music will be piped into the cafeteria with the aid of the KCSF broadcasters club.

Council Sponsors 'Slave Auction' At May Festival

By Roy Twitty

"Slave auction" sponsorship, the passage of seven budgets, and the petition of the Individual Club for on-campus status were the high points in Student Council legislation during the last four meetings.

Second in the order of budgets, the Rally Committee request for $1729.38 consumed more time and caused more disagreement than any other single piece of business presented during the two-week period. The disagreement was due primarily to a section of the budget providing sweaters and skirts for 10 song girls and 10 cheer leaders.

Discussion of the rally budget was halted at one point by Dick Cottrell, Associated Student president, for the purpose of appointing two council members as researchers into the pro's and con's of the money issue. The purpose of the researcher appointment is the elimination of unnecessary debate by the council and speedier legislation.

Speaking in favor of the Rally Committee money request, Bill Ideker stated that no further discussion was necessary. Bob Tiedeman, voicing a negative stand, asked how the Rally Committee dare ask for costumes in addition to transportation money given them by the AS.

Denting the rally money request by more than $400, Tiedeman's speech brought the total down to $1300.88, which was passed.

Additional budgets okayed by the council last week include $265.50 for the intramural basketball league, which is being sponsored by the AS for the first time; $548 for the swimming team; $1054.88 for The Guardsman, which will supplement the funds on hand, allowing 13 issues to be published; and $450 to cover commencement expenses of AS members, and $440 for the AWS.

Failing to comprehend the purpose of the college handbook, the council prolonged debate over the publication's budget of $750 until Cottrell tabled the issue.

Sponsorship of a "slave auction" at the May Festival will be undertaken by the Student Council and the proceeds will go to the Sophomore Class. Chairmanship of the project will go to Jackie Pera, Sophomore Class president, who first conceived the idea.

Approval of the Individual Club as an on-campus organization has been postponed indefinitely. Presented by CAB President Bud Andress, the club's acceptance has been overlooked for two meetings.

Hi-Fi Concert To Resume Monday

High volume, high fidelity tape recorded classical concerts will be resumed next Monday and every Monday thereafter after a lapse of almost a semester, according to drama technical director, Chuck Huntley.

Complaints last semester of "noise" from the unsoundproofed offices above the Little Theater caused the shutdown of the music lovers' College Hour concert corner.

"The resulting compromise of a 5 to 6 p.m. Monday gathering, when the building will be all but empty satisfies everyone concerned and gives us much more latitude," Huntley said.

Monday's concert hour will comprise the first half of the Toscanini Omnibus album, the second half to be given the following Monday.

All music presented is taped from records and FM broadcasts by the college's drama department.

All Forum Contributions Due On Friday

Staff Seeks More Satirical Writing, Short Prose Pieces

A cover has been chosen, but no editors as yet for the 1959 Forum, according to William Forshay, acting chairman of the club.

Drawn by Ronald Castellon, an advertising arts student, the cover depicts a group of students around the Ram. Done in a new technique, it departs from the usual abstract designs used in earlier years.

Only two days remain in which to submit material to the Forum before the April 10 deadline, club member Alexander Klimenko warned this week.

"Desperately needed" for the literary magazine are all kinds of prose such as short stories, essays and satirical dicussions which can be turned in to Sponsor Catherine Connolly's office, C-331A, or given to any member of the Forum Club.

Also needed are critiques, translations, poetry, plays and other types of student work on a college level. Any type or style of writing will be accepted for consideration.

All entries should be typed double-spaced on standard sized paper and turned in not later than Friday. Selections to be published in the magazine are to be made by readers who will judge all material on an impartial point basis.

Two weeks ago, numerous requests caused the deadline to be shifted from April 1 until the new date, April 10. This change was also made so Luke Casper, a philosophy student here from Alpine Oak, would be able to finish his philosophical writings. When asked if these writings would be in prose he answered, "Prose, what's that?"

Art work for use in illustrating stories can still be turned in to Miss Connolly at her office.

Although editors have not been selected as of yet, Bill Ideker, who is acting as advertising manager and also is a Guardman reporter, said that ads are being sold as well as can be expected at the present time. "The magazine is expected to have more ads than ever before," he stated.

Future plans for the Forum Club, which meets every College Hour in S-257, include a lecture Friday on the criticism of literature in general and particularly for the Forum.

Managing editor of The Guardsman, Forshay will deliver the talk which will be followed by a general discussion.

At the April 3 meeting, the poetry of students Forshay, Klimenko, Ellis Lumpkin, Eyan Li, Michael Osbourne, Eugene Mattingly and Stanley Church was read.

The Forum presents representative literary work of students throughout the year. It had its start as a mimeographed sheet in 1937 and later evolved to its present form.

Many former writers for the magazine are now active in outside fields of writing and dramatics.

Scholarship Required For Candidates Seeking Associated Student Offices

Potential candidates for student offices during the fall semester of this year will have to comply with the rules and regulations set forth in the constitution of the Associated Students.

Roberta Kennedy, vice-president of the AS, emphatically stated that before anyone may be considered for any student office, he must have and maintain a 2.0 grade point average or better. Five executive officers and many members of the President's Cabinet were disqualified and forced to resign at the beginning of this semester because of failure to fulfill this requirement.

In addition to the scholarship requirement, interested students must carry at least 12 units of college credit, prior to and during their term of office, if elected.

To run for freshman membership in council, prospective candidates must have completed 12 units and not more than 30. For sophomore members of the council one must have at least 30 and no more than 60 units.

For those students vying for Freshman Class President, the rule calls for at least 15 units, with a maximum of 30. Sixty units is the limit for Sophomore Class President, with a 30 unit minimum requirement.

For the two highest executive offices of the college, the President and the Vice-President of the AS, one must have a minimum of 45 units and a maximum of 60 units.

Most candidates for student offices belong to some political party. The three main parties here are the Independents, Individualists, and the IFC-ISC.

Observation

Would Some Power Grant Our Brothers Themselves The View That They Give Others

By William Forshay

WOP, Okie, Kraut, Hunkie, Half-breed are only a few of many examples of prejudicial semantics which help form value judgments and also reveal actual thought concepts toward others.

In a short essay titled The Reconstruction of Hidden Value Judgments, Felix S. Cohen, a lawyer and philosopher, shows how language is an index to adopted values and absorbed prejudices.

Most of us fail to realize that word choices in verbs, nouns, adjectives and adverbs, label things and persons in ways that tend to form a hearer's opinion and, if he is trained in listening semantically, will also tell the extent of our preferences, prejudices and personal opinions.

Further, there is also a tendency to base part of these value indicators on personal relationships with the individuals or groups concerned. This is called the "use of 'we' words and 'they' words" in which the "they" words generally receive a lower classification. It might be called the difference between "we are sinners" and "they are sinners."

Using the "we" implies a shared condemnation but that things aren't too bad since we're all in the same boat. "They are sinners" implies, however, that "we" are not and that "they" can go to hell and we'll just watch. Also, when evil is done to us, "they" do it and when "we" do something, it's usually pretty good.

A verbal example might be a friend who is trying to persuade or help someone to do something. We might say he counsels, assists, demonstrates or cooperates. If we have no feelings about the subject or the persuader, we might take the neutral viewpoint and say he aids, acts in concert, recommends and asserts. But, and here is the tone of prejudice creeping in without the speaker's awareness, if the person is disliked or the project is distasteful, it will be said that the person incites, alleges, conspires and abets.

Adjectives also give strong impressions here and they are irregular almost as a necessity. As Bertrand Russell so aptly compared the value-weighted adjective, "I am firm, you are obstinate, he is a pig-headed fool."

A better comparison might be our hypothetical friend in a fight situation who runs away. WE might call him discreet. If we do not know the runner from such a situation, we might call him cautious. But, if we knew and disliked the person, he is cowardly, yellow, or traitorous regardless of the circumstances.

Our nouns for the campus law enforcement personnel also reveal the trend to eulogistic, dysiogistic and neutral thought. Eulogistically, they are officers; neutrally, they are policemen, and dysiogistically they are "cops." (This is an increasingly popular term!)

Readers may form their own list of words and measure the content of what they hear if they wish an accurate index to the prejudices of others. Self measurement is a more important goal, however. A good test, according to Dr. Cohen, is that of asking ourselves whether we would apply the terms we use regarding others and their actions to describe our own actions or ourselves.

Third Blood Drive To Begin May 7

Technicians from the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank will come to the college Thursday, May 7, and Friday, May 8, to supervise the third annual blood drive, Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here, announced last week.

Sponsored by Tau Chi Sigma fraternity, the drive functions to collect donations to add to the college's account at the Blood Bank for use in case of emergencies, Hillsman stated.

An account has been set up at the Blood Bank from which any student who donates a pint of blood can withdraw an unlimited supply in one series for his own personal use. The donor may also make a withdrawal of up to eight pints in one series for any member of his immediate family.

All college personnel are asked to support the blood drive. Students under 21 who wish to donate blood must have their parents' written consent, the dean said.

June Christy, pop singer, has been asked to appear at the blood drive.

Council Opinion Splits Over Handbook, Band Allocations; Club Constitution Approved

By Roy Twitty

Splitting the Student Council in opinion, the issues of money for the college band and the student handbook budget, along with the acceptance of the Individual Club constitution dominated last week's council legislation.

Tabled during a meeting two weeks ago, the band money request of $623 was reviewed by two researchers from the council by direction of Dick Cottrell, Associated Student president.

Taking a positive stand, council member Bill Ideker pointed out that no member of the council during the previous meeting was in favor of the band issue; however, no one present is a member of that organization.

Speaking against allocating the band such a large sum of money, almost twice the amount usually granted, Ferd Marwedel stated that only 18 out of 30 band members meet AS membership requirements. The council cannot legally okay an activity's budget unless all members of the organization are AS members.

Idealistic in its point of view, this is a budget of hope and not of despair, Meyer Cahn, band instructor, emphasized as he defended the band budget before council. Cahn stated that he wants a good band at the college; however, results from past efforts have been so discouraging that he had thought of quitting.

Allowing additional transportation and meal expenses for members, the band budget would encourage more good musicians to take part in the activity. The allotment request also asks for money to tour local high schools to recruit new band members.

Asked how the money given the band from Spring Festival gate receipts is used, Cahn explained that these extra finances go into a special fund that is drawn upon when AS support is not given. "I don't need this money (the AS budget), but if you want the band for extra-curricular activities you'll have to pass it," Cahn continued.

The issue was tabled by Cottrell until the second meeting following the northern regional student government conference, which took place last week-end.

Passage of the student handbook money request last Thursday followed the Tuesday discussion of the band budget. The $750 handbook budget will finance printing, photographs and photo-engraving. Purchase of the plates has been planned by George Mullany, handbook adviser, thus allowing publication each semester instead of the present policy of yearly printing.

Hotly debated, the final piece of business conducted last week was the acceptance of the Individual Club constitution.

Spring Fever Dance Set For Friday At Local Rowing Club

Spring Fever, not that scholastically fatal disease but a dance by the same name, will be held Friday night at the San Francisco Rowing Club, according to Fred Muller, president of the sponsoring Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity.

Dancing is to begin at 9 p.m. and will continue until midnight. Proper dress for the occasion will be suits for men and cocktail dresses for women. Music for the dance is to be provided by the Steve Paul orchestra.

Budding Spring being the dance's theme, the club and its colorful patio overlooking the Bay waters will be decorated with festive greenery.

Refreshments will be served to all present and balloon drops will enliven the proceedings. Admission has been set at $2 per couple.

Joe Welch is in charge of the decorations. Jerry Riley, vice-president of the fraternity, and Frank Mateo will also assist in making this springtime event a fun-filled success. "A good time will be had by all," according to Muller, who stated that last year the Gamma Phi Ypsilon dance was a hit both financially and fun-wise.

Tickets may be purchased from any member of the fraternity, and any organization wishing to purchase a block of tickets may do so at the college's bank.

Panoramic Film Views Slated For This Friday

California's Sierra Nevada Kings River, the "El Rio de Los Reyes Santos" of the Spanish Conquistadores, is the subject of the College Hour film series scheduled for Friday in S-136.

Pictured in the film will be views of the United States' first large underground power house as well as panoramic vistas from an altitude of 8000 feet which were made possible by construction projects in the San Joaquin Valley and Sierra Nevada.

Twelve Models To Show Latest Coed Fashions At Women's Tea Today

Seniors From 30 SF High Schools To Be AWS Guests

By Margaret Alvaro

Twelve models will be featured in the semi-annual Associated Women Student tea and fashion show today from 3 to 5 p.m. in Smith Hall, according to Arleen Kordoules, AWS president.

Fashions to be witnessed portray the latest in spring and summer wear and are in keeping with a college woman's budget. Each model will make four changes of outfits, each time displaying feminine elegance in styles of various color collections.

Women who will serve as models today are Delfina Alderta, International Relations Club; Karen Bluechel, Theta Tau; Sandy Courtemanche, Gamma Kappa Beta; Gretchen Davis, student body; Maxine Griggs, Delta Psi; Nancy Hanes, student body; Liz Hogan, Gamma Sigma Sigma; Joan Lloyd, Zeta Chi; Mary-Ann Luchi, Kappa Phi; Diane Robinson, Phi Beta Rho; Diane Wilson, Delta Sigma Tau, and Isabella Lim, Chinese Club.

Everyday casuals, sun suits, dressy formals and tailored outfits will be included in the presentation. A 15 per cent discount will be granted to each model wishing to purchase any of the fashions she wears.

Invitations have been extended to senior girls from the 30 public, private and parochial high schools in San Francisco, who are to be honored guests at this function.

The purpose of the tea and fashion show is to enable the graduating high school seniors to become acquainted with the college, its faculty and students, according to Gertrude Norgard, acting dean of women and adviser to the AWS.

Members of the AWS, as well as all other women students here, are welcome to attend, according to Dean Norgard. Admission is free, and those enrolled in 3 o'clock classes will be dismissed in order to view the fashion show.

Light clouds of angel hair in combination with colored umbrellas and pink cherry blossoms make up the decor and set the scene for the theme, April Showers. Twelve hundred blossoms have been contributed by the sororities for ornamental purposes.

There is no intermission, and the fashion show will continue for approximately 45 minutes, after which refreshments will be served by sorority pledges who will be excused from their 2 o'clock classes. Dean Norgard confirmed.

Summer Job Openings Range From Cool To Exotic Lands

Selected applicants for summer resort positions will be personally interviewed here Friday by Harry Smith, managing owner of the Crater Lake Resort in Crater Lake, Oregon, Joseph Amori, college placement director, announced last week.

During the months of April and May, recruitment officers from six western states and Texas, Canada and Alaska will visit the college in search of qualified students to work this summer.

Resorts, camps, lodges, national parks, and business establishments head the list of job opportunities available this year.

The openings are to be found in a wide variety of activities and extend from Alaska in the north to Mexico in the south.

The job opportunities include assignments as cashiers, salesgirls, maids, front desk clerks, storekeepers, room clerks, boatmen, busmen, truckmen, camp supervisors and assistants, cooks, waiters, foodservers, kitchen helpers, pantrymen, camp directors and counselors.

Particularly needed are students who are majoring in physical education, community leadership, social welfare and education. In these divisions, employment is offered to those who have had a great deal of training in photography, music, drama and swimming.

Outstanding applicants with experience in business administration and public relations are in demand as tour leaders, Amori stated, adding that qualifications include good appearance and leadership in student activities.

Also being sought by Amori are students who can display skill in the composition of leather products, purses, jewelry, floral decorations and primitive materials. They must have the ability to draw, paint and sketch cartoons, he said.

Horticulture Dept. Promises Flowery College Initials

A floral display forming the letters "C.C.S.F." at Ocean and Phelan Avenues will be sprouting by June, according to Harry E. Nelson, head of the horticulture department.

Consisting of almost 500 santolina chamaecyparisus and mesembryanthemum floribundom—or in more recognizable terms, iceplants—the display should be visible by early June and in full progress by the time the fall semester starts in September.

Under the care and responsibility of the horticulture classes, the short-stemmed iceplants will, with the formation of the letters "C.C.S.F.," advertise the location of the college as well as beautify the campus.

It was "full steam ahead" on another green thumb project, the horticulture society's entry for the quickly approaching Oakland Spring Garden and Flower Show, scheduled for Friday and Saturday in the Oakland Auditorium.

A riot of color, including Blue Dutch Irish, red tulips, white Lillies of the Valley, a green lawn and striking Chinese red circular moon gate is planned for the display, an impressive patio scene. Accenting the area will be several large, round, hanging planters, a shade tree and a modern coffee table.

Through the combined efforts of all the horticulture classes, this year's display will be entered in competition against many larger universities and professional groups. A first place award was won last year, and in past exhibits the college has always been among the top entries.

Judging of the entries will take place on Friday, after a formal opening of the show by Governor Edmund G. Brown. Saturday the exhibit will be open to the public.

20 Colleges Invited To Attend IRC's Model UN

Extending invitations to more than 20 two-year colleges, the International Relations Club is completing details for a Model United Nations to be held in Cloud Hall on Saturday, May 19.

Students who are not members of the International Relations Club may also participate in the discussion if they apply at the club's office, S-186, at least two weeks before the session.

Spectators will also be allowed to attend the proceedings.

Soviet Rules Stifle Classroom Noise

Experiment In Russian Methods No Go In US Education System

By Bob Pacini

Strict, stern rules of conduct, taken from the Soviet Union's code of behavior for Russian students, were followed recently in an experiment by Beverly Pasqualetti and the students in his introduction to teaching class.

Obtained by Dr. Glen T. Goodwill, superintendent of schools at Santa Monica, on a recent tour of the Soviet Union, the 20 rules of behavior were published in the March issue of the California Teachers Association Journal.

Included in the harsh, exacting list of commands Russian students must follow are orders to "Greet all teachers with a polite bow"; "obey all instructions of teachers without question"; "avoid coarse expressions, smoking and gambling."

In addition, students of the "Big Red Schoolhouse" must rise when the instructor enters the room, take accurate notes in class and present them to their parents and have with them at all times their student record book.

Pasqualetti disclosed that the reaction from his students was favorable and commented on their co-operation in following the rules in class.

He took particular notice of the astonishing silence that prevailed at all times and the complete lack of smiles on his students, adding to the realism of the experiment in drab, stark Soviet educational methods.

Pasqualetti expressed the opinion that such a set of rules for American schools would be of little value, because of the wide range of teaching methods throughout the country. In addition, many of the rules that Soviet students live by are practiced daily by American students without regarding them as demanding standards that must be followed without deviation.

H&R, AWS Combine Efforts In Can Drive To Start Next Week

A can drive to aid needy families at the Canon Kip Community House in San Francisco will be sponsored during the week of April 20 through 24 by the Associated Women Students and the Hotel & Restaurant Society here.

Arlene Kordoules, AWS president, and Peter Coakley, H&R Society president, asked students to co-operate by bringing as many canned goods as possible and thus help contribute their share to this cause. All cans should be brought to the cafeteria, the library, or the entrance of Science Hall, where they will be piled up for display until the end of the drive.

Canned goods preferred are those which constitute a main course. Several kinds of goods preferred include soups, pork and beans, spaghetti, fruits and vegetables; however, all goods received will be appreciated, Miss Kordoules added.

Fraternities and sororities will participate in the drive and are confident of outstanding response from rushees.

Knowledge, Not Grades, Best Measure Of Student Progress

FIRST midterm grades have been in the books for a considerable time now, and we suspect that for every expression of a student's satisfaction uttered on the campus, there can also be heard one of disapproval.

Students who feel that one or more of their grades leaves something to be desired fall into two distinct categories: (1) those who knew their classwork was not up to par; and (2) those who applied themselves diligently to their studies and honestly felt that their test results and grades were not an accurate measure of how much they derived from their courses.

Senior college students can look back on at least a dozen years of striving to attain outstanding or at least respectable grades. Conscientious ones have at times sacrificed all other interests in order to bring home "a good report card" or to attain a high grade point average. In short, the scholastic side of a student's life is geared to his grades, and he is usually judged on the basis of them.

Just how important are grades to the student? Are they the sole measure of his ability? Or are they perhaps barely an "adequate" measure which should not be the focal point of a student's education?

Open discussion of these questions is not frequently heard on campuses, probably because the belief that a student is only as good as his grades has been too long established to be challenged.

In spite of this belief, which has become almost a tradition, students who receive grades lower than they honestly believe they deserve should not be overly discouraged nor feel that they are not top-caliber scholars. On the contrary, they should ask themselves just how much their grades mean to them. They should then ask themselves whether the knowledge they derive from the courses in question isn't more lastingly important than the grades.

The case of the extremely grade-conscious student is often a most pathetic one. If he receives what he considers a disappointing grade, he loses all faith in himself as a student and goes into a state of utter dejection. On the other hand, a student who considers grades less valuable than knowledge will not be so adversely affected by an unsatisfactory grade; he will judge his progress during the past midterm period on the basis of what he learned, and if he feels that his low grade is actually an adequate reflection on his performance, he will resolve to work harder.

Unfortunately, formal education of an extensive nature cannot be conducted on the basis of the aforementioned suggestions, with students being judged on how much they derive from each course. An appropriate criterion must be used to gauge students' progress and relative performances; the administering of exams and awarding of grades seems to be the most appropriate.

It should also be admitted that students who must meet certain qualifications for readmittance, honor society recognition, upper division acceptance or higher degrees, must place their grades above all else in importance for the moment.

Adoption of the theory that lasting knowledge outweighs grades does not mean that grades are to be disregarded. We cannot overemphasize that students should try to attain respectable grades at all times. But when they receive what they consider genuinely unwarranted grades on certain occasions, it is time for them to reflect on what knowledge they have gained and to see if that knowledge doesn't have more meaning for them than the grades they expected to receive.

Students should concentrate during the semester on what they are able to derive from each of their courses, and on how much they should learn in order to convince themselves that the course has been profitable. They should see how the knowledge they gain can be applied to their other classes, to their everyday lives, and to further educational pursuits.

Many students who attempt to satisfy themselves in this manner will come to the conclusion that the grades they are awarded in their classes will often be little more than dry ink in yellow-paged archives a few years hence, while the knowledge they are able to assimilate and remember in the same classes will remain with them and may some day shape their lives.

Beasts Say No Lack Of Beauty Here As Interest In Miss SF Contest Wanes

Ramdom Claims Three Holders Of Coveted Crown

By Peter Burr

Lack of interest in the upcoming Miss San Francisco contest by the college's women students has been of grave concern to campus Casanovas who follow this sort of thing with a unique interest of their own.

The deadline for contest entry is Friday, and so far there has been no indication of a forthcoming entrant from the college.

An unexplained apathy on the part of campus organizations to stir up a lively participation may be one reason behind the empty echo to the call to arms.

"After all," said Dick Cottrell, Associated Student president, "Notre Dame has George Gipp, the Big Ten had Max Shulman and Harvard produced Lennie Bernstein. The college claims three Miss San Franciscos."

According to the Beasts, self-professed "seasoned observers" all, there is certainly no lack of beauty at Ramdom. Far off in the distance, the A Cappella choir can almost be heard softly singing "old school" songs as they point with commendable pride and no little nostalgia to the days when the college was turning out such eminent successes as Lee Ann Meriwether who went on to become Miss America of 1955; Barbara Huffman, winner of the 1951 title, presently working in television, and the 1952 winner Jan Darlyn, who became one of the now famous Goldwyn Girls.

Sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, the contest will offer the winner a $100 cash scholarship, gifts from local merchants and entry in the Miss California pageant at Santa Cruz.

Unlike the usual one-shot beauty contest designed for the moment, this contest is encrusted with the tradition of years and has been as much of a Ram tradition as any affair at the college. The prestige gained by winners has encompassed far more than actual material reward.

The careers of former Miss San Francisco candidates and winners can be followed in almost any of the varied fields of the entertainment world. To quote an old adage, once a name is thrust into the public eye, the opportunity for a truly talented person is increased a hundredfold.

BARBARA (HUFFMAN) EDEN, former student here, who won the Miss SF contest and went on to celluloid fame in TV-land.

Further information can be obtained by consulting Cottrell in S-140.

HEADING THE LONG LIST of the college's beautiful coeds is shapely Lee Ann Meriwether, who captured the Miss San Francisco crown and went on to win laurels as Miss America of 1955. Annually known for its lovely entrants in the local contest, the college seems slated for a beauty drought this year unless campus coeds overcome shyness.

Same Old 'Jazz' In TV Gangster Series

By Dick Dyer

DETECTIVE and crime shows on television have come up with one of the most ingenious "gimmicks" ever devised to attract and hold the viewer's attention. Namely, the Jazz score.

First conceived by Count Basie for M Squad's theme, the "gimmiek" was next employed to the hilt by Peter Gunn. Soon more shows began to follow suit. The trend has become so fashionable that now every private-eye program has a jazz theme, score or both.

Yet all this concern over the jazz phase has seemingly caused the programs to neglect the most important ingredient of all: a good plot. Lee Marvin, star and half-owner of M Squad, believes the answer to a good mystery series lies in high quality scripts and first-class production. But he also adds that generally the standard budget of $40,000 per episode won't allow it. Consequently, "TV film is doomed to mediocrity," according to Marvin. And so it goes.

The Thin Man, based on characters created by Dashiell "Sam Spade" Hammett, lags far behind the old MGM motion picture series. Peter Lawford and Phyllis Kirk, as the husband and wife sleuth team, are constantly bogged down in talky, trite and tedious situations. Even a good theme doesn't help this one.

Richard Diamond (Dick Janssen) sort of straddles the fence, as does Meet McGraw (Frank Lovejoy). Here the central heroes prove more interesting than the so-so stories written around them. The only difference with Pete Kelly's Blues is the fact that it's set in the roaring 20's and has likewise tunes from that era.

Perry Mason and 77 Sunset Strip probably come closer to perfection than any of their competitors. Both programs are excellently produced, with good performances, generally well-written stories and fair themes to boot.

On the other hand, Ellery Queen and The Lineup are jazzless and about as mediocre as they come. Lee Phillips, the fourth "Queen" on TV, looks like Peter Gunn, Jr., and is terribly miscast, and the scripts, production and acting are miserable. The Lineup is routine, uninspired and dull. The only redeeming feature of the show is the stock footage of San Francisco.

Coming attractions: Bob Hope, Jack Benny, Ginger Rogers and Jerry Colonna star in a 60-minute special tonight at 9 o'clock on Channel 4, and Playhouse 90 presents a drama of the 1945 Nuremberg war-crime trials starring Claude Rains and Melvyn Douglas at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow on Channel 5.

Unique Spiders On Display In Science Hall

Rarely in the history of the college has there been a science collection so unique as the one currently being exhibited on the third floor of Science Hall.

The display is dominated by five local tarantulas, which were caught by Bruce Firstman, science instructor here, on March 14, in the hills just southwest of Stanford University; it has been visited by scores of curious students who were amazed by the intriguing spiders and their activities.

The bite of the tarantula is not dangerous, although it can be momentarily painful. Any bite starts the possibility of secondary infections due to bacteria. However, the Eurypelma tarantula is a docile and easily tamed spider and will usually not bite unless provoked.

They are interesting not only because of their size but because they are anatomically the most primitive of the spiders.

Nocturnal in habit, they emerge from their dens at night to catch their prey, which consists mainly of beetles and small birds.

Compared to other arthropods, tarantulas seem to rank the highest in intelligence.

Lazy youth brings needy old age.—Italian proverb.

Current College Clowning Season Features Crazy Crazes, Fantastic Fads, Fun Galore

By Jim Clifford

ONE of the Ugly Man On Campus contestants, adorned in as unsightly a costume as possible, asked a member of the English department for a contribution toward helping him capture the '59 UMOC honors. The instructor replied, "I'm sorry, but I don't think it democratic to show a preference. You all seem to possess the necessary qualifications."

THE COLLEGIATE silly season is in full swing and telephone booth stuffing heads the list of this year's crazy crazes. Jammin' 'em in seems to have started at one of the South African universities, swept up to Europe, where even the straight-laced British schools found cricket momentarily losing headway to the fad, and then finally to the U.S.A.

The Ivy League schools held the championship for a time, until local universities uncrowned them. Even an all-female school in the southland gave it a try. But the most clever scheme of all was the one pulled by a local grammar school—they used a larger booth and, coupled with the small stature of the seventh grade participants, stole the title.

This fad doesn't seem nearly as ridiculous as some of the past silly season exploits. A few years back the big folly was gold fish eating.

None of the seasons have yet produced a stunt as constructive as the college's old Sadie Hawkins Day race, in which all eligible bachelors had to head for the hills with the coeds in pursuit. An alumnus claims one of the instructors was caught in the tide and had to run for his independence—maybe that's why it was dropped.

Rams' Bid For Circuit Crown Braked As Pirates Gain Split In Crucial Twosome, 3-5, 6-1

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Over-toiled and hard-boiled all the way, the diamond forces of Lee Eisan put together 16 of the finest innings they have seen throughout the current campaign last Saturday afternoon, but were still able to salvage only a split in the twin-bill with Modesto, dropping the first, 5-3, while bringing home the bacon in the nightcap by a 6-1 count. This puts the Rams in a shaky position as far as winning the conference flag is concerned. With a 3-3 won-lost record they are now a full pair of games behind the league-leading Oakland Thunderbirds.

The amazing point of the whole show, however, lies not so much in the loss itself, but in the fact that the Modestans had no more business coming out on top than Paddy Lee had being in the horse room when the whistle blew. They were unable to pick up more than four hits in the affair, while the Rams doubled that figure.

The difference resulted when a pair of Pirate blows (both triples) arrived exactly when they were needed the most, while the Rams pounded out bingles as if they were going out of style for the majority of the contest, yet were unable to get a man as far as third when the chips were down.

The Pirates chiseled in with their first pair of tallies in the fifth on a booming triple to left center by Jack Goodwin following a walk and a Ram error.

They added two more in the ensuing frame as a pair of bases on balls preceded Bobby Hobbs' three bagger to deep left. Although the Rams were able to counter with two in their end of the fifth, the lead could not be overcome and another loss was in the books.

Throughout the second fray, the Red and White forces looked more like the powerful club they are, and the booming bats of Paul DeMartini, Roy Tripaldi and Johnny Bagatellos teamed up with the better-than-average chucking of Bill Simmons to put the locals out in front to stay by a 3-0 count at the end of the first two.

Grades Dim Hopes Of College Golfers

Ram hopes for a conference golf title were dimmed somewhat recently when number one man, Nick Andrakin, was declared scholastically ineligible for the remainder of the season.

Against Contra Costa's Comets April 3, the new crew leader, two-year veteran Larry Barr, showed that he is quite capable, holding his card down to a 77 and taking all 3 points in his individual match, while the rest of the locals completely cut the flare off the Comets' tail destroying them 11½ to 3½ in their third Big Eight Conference clash.

With a two-game winning streak under their belt they move into a tangle with Oakland on Friday at Tilden Park.

Coach Grover Klemmer stated that Oakland's home course is "the most narrow, winding, hilly, stream-crossed links that we have to play on this season, and it will be a true test for the skill of our boys."

Awards Main Topic Of Block SF Meeting

Block SF awards were the main item discussed by the athletic society at its meeting last Friday during College Hour.

Members of the society discussed whether letter winners should wear their awards on sweaters or on jackets. When the group had completed this problem they turned to the issue of how much meaning, if any, the block has to those who receive it.

Oakland T-Birds Swoop To 65-57 Cinder Triumph

By Jim Payne

Fresh from victories over Modesto and Contra Costa two Saturdays ago, the college's track and field team tackled the powerful Thunderbirds from Oakland last Saturday on the University of California's Edwards Stadium track and were defeated 65-57 in a triangular meet in which the California freshmen also participated.

Overton Williams, flashy Oakland freshman, sprinted 10.0 and 21.6 in capturing the 100 and 220. His teammate Sam Perry, easily the best hurdler in the conference, also doubled with 14.7 and 23.6 clockings over the sticks.

Othello Carr, who won the broad jump in the triangular against Modesto and Contra Costa, led a San Francisco sweep in that event with a 22-4½ against Oakland.

High jumper Ralth Mathis, also a winner two weeks ago with a leap of 6-3, had to settle for a three-way tie for first among the Rams' George Fields and Thomas Hatchett of Oakland at 6-2.

Two-miler Piekens Rodgers recorded an all-time personal best when he won the eight-lapper in 10:09.7, after plaeing third in the mile. Jesse Sirles won the pole vault at 11 feet and Mike Reid won the discus with a heave of 139-3.

Coaeh Lou Vasquez is impatiently awaiting the eligibility of quarter-miler Mel Wilson, who clocked a 49.9 relay lap in praetice recently. Wilson has a unit deficiency which is in the process of being corrected. There is a possibility that he will be eligible to run on Saturday at Stockton when the Rams tangle with Stockton and San Mateo in a triangular.

Scores of last Saturday's meet: Oakland 63 1/6, San Francisco 60 5/6, Cal Frosh 28.

Yankee Balance Will Bring Repeat In AL

RAMBLINGS

By Nick Peters

BATTING .900 is quite a feat in any league, but when it's done in the majors there is more significance to the accomplishment.

There is only one competitor in the pro circuit who can claim that honor and he's a man from Glendale, California, named Casey Stengel, who pulls the strings of baseball's most successful organization — the NEW YORK YANKEES.

This .900 mark wasn't an overnight effort, but instead was the product of ten years of cunning management. In the decade from 1949 to 1958 the Gothams won nine American League pennants and seven World Series from their senior circuit rivals, an incredible record.

There is no reason to predict an overthrowal of such a prosperous regime, therefore we assume that the Yankees will again represent the A.L. in the Fall Classic come September.

Yankee domination cannot be attributed to one major strength, but instead to the fact that there aren't any great weaknesses. Great management, outstanding performers and the Yankee uniform itself have been given as the prime reasons for the Manhattan monopoly, but we feel that the unparalleled results have been attained through a large, and always available, source of monetary power, which has been able to purchase, or barter for, players nearly at will.

There isn't a single department in which the Yankees are so much better than their rivals, but they are close to the top in all. And, if someone pulls up lame, the Yanks have that looooong beneh which provides a capable performer at a moment's notice.

Featured performers are, of course, the potentially great Mickey Mantle, aging World Series hero Hank Bauer, versatile Elston Howard, Yogi Berra and infielders Andy Carey, Gil McDougald and injury-riddied Bill Skowron.

Perhaps the greatest Yankee attribute is the depth of the mound corps, as Bob Turley, the league's best in '58, Whitey Ford, Bobby Shantz, Don Larsen and Ryne Duren are the nucleus of a tough slab staff, with plenty of other "big names" also available.

After watching the Red Sox and Indians in a March exhibition series at San Diego we can understand that if anyone is going to knock off the Yanks from their perennial pedestal these two teams have got the guns to do it, and actually look better than the champs on paper.

BOSTON'S RED SOX should take second if their potential-laden pitching staff finally comes through. Good seasons on the part of Tom Brewer, Frank Sullivan, Dave Sisler, Ike Delock and the club's promising young chuckers Bill Monboquette, Ted Bowsfield and Frank Baumann could send the flag to Fenway.

Hitting is no problem as Ted Williams, Pete Runnels, Jackie Jensen, Frank Malzone and newly acquired Vic Wertz form a very potent stick crew.

It looks like age might have finally caught up with Williams, the greatest drawing card since Babe Ruth. After two decades of giving opposing pitchers and managers a pain in the neck, he is beginning to receive a dose of his own medicine, as the pain in the neck he acquired in spring training could choke off his efficiency, limit his contribution and, perhaps, drop the Hubbers a couple of notches in the final tabulations.

CLEVELAND'S INDIANS are another team loaded with able hitters, but stand to suffer if Herb Score doesn't make his awaited comeback. There really isn't much depth on the mound, especially since the trading of top relievers Don Mossi and Ray Narleski to the Detroit Tigers for supposed sparkplug Billy Martin.

Initial-sacker Vic Power, catcher Russ Nixon and heavy-hitting outfielders Minnie Minoso and potential homer champ Rocky Colavito form the devasting bingle brigade.

DETROIT'S TIGERS will round out the first division and with some luck could go all the way. The pitching is superb with Yankee-beater Frank Lary, Jim Bunning, Paul Foytack, Billy Hoeft and newly-acquired firemen Mossi and Narleski.

The top-flight outfield of Al Kaline, Harvey Kuenn and Charley Maxwell is one of the loop's best. The addition of ex-Senators Rocky Bridges and Eddie Yost was a step in the right direction as it plugged up a faltering inner defense.

Consistently taking second at season's end, Al Lopez' CHICAGO WHITE SOX seem to sneak up there every year without a healthy batting attack, relying mainly on the sound pitching arms of hurlers Dick Donovan, Ray Moore, Early Wynn and Billy Pierce.

We feel that the power shortage evident on the squad combined with the aging of the fingers will finally spell a poor season for the Windy City boys. Catcher Sherm Lollar, the A.L.'s best backstop in '58, is the top slugger and the only other really consistent hitter is peppery Nellie Fox, the loop's keystone ace. Speed, which is the Chisox's main forte, could again provide the fuel to miraculously send the Sox close to the top.

The BALTIMORE ORIOLES, who possess the league's best pitching aside from the Yanks are a good bet for sixth place, but don't have any really heavy hitters except for ex-Mission High ace Gus Triandos, who belted 30 round-trippers in '58. Bob Nieman, Bob Boyd and Gene Woodling are all good hitters, but don't provide the power necessary for a real strong contender. Rookie outfielder Willie Tasby could help remedy that problem, as he has a "can't miss" label on his jersey.

Known to many as a Yankee farm club and to others as the Bob Cerv A. C., the KANSAS CITY ATHLETICS cannot expect to finish higher than seventh because their pitching isn't strong, their quality of ballplayers leaves a great deal to be desired and their farm system isn't harvesting any talent. Aside from fence-buster Cerv and inconsistent sluggers Heetor Lopez, Harry Simpson and potential great, Roger Maris, the A's have little else.

Roy Sievers, a reliever named Diek Hyde, and diminutive 1958 "Rookie of the Year" Albie Pearson are the individuals who keep the perennially tail-end WASHINGTON SENATORS in operation.

Cookie Lavagetto's outfit is in a yearly rut because it has been trading proven quality for a flock of promising youngsters who have yet to make the grade, the lone exception in the past few years being the pint-sized Pearson. It is really unfortunate that Sievers' slugging talents cannot be exploited with a better ball eluh.

Hyde is a real tough reliever and, as a matter of fact, the Yankee magnates have been tempting Cal Griffith with huge sums of money, but apparently the Nat mogul has wised up and figured that you can't win games with cash and, eventually, maybe in '59, the Capitol clouters may escape the depths of the cellar and emerge into the brightness of seventh place.

Bosox, Indians Offer Greatest Opposition

H&R Society, Gamma Phi, Phi Delts, Miraloma Club A's Top AMS Mural Basketball Leagues

By Nick Peters

Clobbering Alpha Phi Omega (0-2) with comparative 45-22 ease, the Hotel and Restaurant Society gained undisputed possession of first place in the Club Activities Board league with a perfect 3-0 slate after the third round of Associated Men Student intramural basketball.

Campus Police (2-0) drew a bye leaving them a half game back in second place, but in the fourth round play last Monday night the H&R whipped the protective agency to just about cinch first.

Dave Nigel, Pete Winkler and Al White tallied 17, 16 and 15 points, respectively, to lead their RA mates to a 68-45 decision over The Guardsman (0-3) in their third-rounder.

Also at 2-1 the Filipino Club swept to a 48-33 decision over the International Relations Club (0-2) behind Joe Cumagun's 19 markers.

Defending champ Gamma Phi Ypsilon looks like the team to beat again this season in the Inter-Fraternity Council loop. In trampling Lambda Phi (1-1), 54-25, as Dennis Shutter bucketed 17, the Gammas displayed the power which carried them to victory last semester.

Phi Beta Delta, Fall 1958 runner-up, remained tied with the Gammas at 2-0 with its impressive 48-25 recording against Beta Tau (1-1). Don Malone and Gary Schonwasser, with a 25-point combine, paced the Deltas.

In other IFC battles Kappa Rho (1-1) outlasted Beta Phi (0-2), 34-31, behind Bob Mitchell's 13 markers and Alpha Phi Epsilon (1-1) crushed Zeta Phi (0-2), 40-26, on the strength of Larry Morgan's 14-point output.

Miraloma Club "A" kept its Independent league leadership with a 44-35 triumph over the tiny Lucky 5's (0-1). The clubbers, with Wilfred Gasper hitting 20, were no match for their more inexperienced opposition and emerged with a 2-0 mark.

Thirteen point efforts on the part of Al Belton and Chuek. Flewellen carried the Frisco Kats (1-1) to a one-sided 44-23 win over the Keki-Kanes (0-2) in the other Independent hassle.

EACH INTRAMURAL LEAGUE will have its "Special" games within the next two weeks. The CAB'S HER SOCIETY appears to have its loop's title sewed up, but the strong and well-conditioned RA may have something to say about that when the two clash on Monday, May 4 in the men's gymnasium at 7 p.m.

In the IFL favorites GAMMA PHI and PHI DELTA meet next Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the men's gymnasium with the winner probably picking up all the IFC marbles.

The Independent championship probably won't be decided until the last week of action when MIRALOMA "A" locks horns with MIRALOMA "B" on Thursday, April 22, at 8 p.m. in the men's gymnasium. The winner of that one will have that likely berth in the top spot AMS round-robiner.

Scoring leaders in the CAB are The Guardsman's NICK PETERS and the H&R's SAM BATTISTONE. Peters' 21 point second-half output against the RA gave him 55 markers in three games for a 17.3 average, while Battistone's 8-point effort against APO lifted him to 51 digits and a 17.0 average.

The two are tied for the field goal lead with 23, RA's scrappy AL WHITE is tops at the charity stripe with 8 for 10 and 80 per cent, while the Campus Roller's CHUCK PRANDI maintains the best average with 36 points in two for 18.0. Peters has also recorded the highest individual total with 25 against the RA.

Phi Delta's ED O'DONNELL is out to regain the scoring crown which he won last semester. He leads the IFL point-parade with 38 markers in a pair for 19.0, but is closely followed by teammate DON MALONE'S 36. The former leads in fielders (14) and has also turned in the loop's only 20-point game, while the latter is free throw leader with 8 out of 9 and 88 per cent.

WILL GASPER, ace point-getter for Coach LEE VASQUEZ 1958 state track champs, heads the independent loop scorers with 20 points in two contests. He leads in field goals at 12 and is the only player in the league to hit for 20 points in a game.

Runner-up CHUCK FLEWELLEN has 24 in 2 and also is unstoppable in the one-point department with 10 for 10 and a sizzling 100 per cent. HYLIN WALLACE has a 17-point average in one tilt for third leadership.

THE GUARDSMAN'S loss to the RA was that organization's 11th straight defeat in intramural competition. The boys on the squad, apparently not bothered by the embarrassing performance, claim that "you can't win 'em all" and "you can't beat consistency."

Thunderbirds To Host Rams Friday In Court Crucial

By Warren Downes

Oakland's high-flying Thunderbirds will host the Ram netters in a Big Eight Conference tennis crucial this Friday.

This will be the toughest match of the season for both squads. The T-Birds retained their top men from last year's highly placed team and they have gained valuable assistance in some first year men who have moved the veterans down the ladder a couple of notches. A striking example is that last year's number one man is number three this year. One of Oakland's wins this year was a 5-2 trouneing of highly-rated Modesto.

For the Rams, Fred Botsford and Jaek Bracken foun a powerful one-two punch that will be hard to beat, but these two will need plenty of help from the number three, four and five men to cope with the T-Birds.

In the conference match with Stoekton the local netsmen romped over the Pirates, 5-2. Botsford easily won the number one singles by obliterating Frank Francois, 6-0, 6-1; in the number two singles Braeken swarmed over Frank Guaeagnold, after dropping the first set, by 3-6, 6-4, 6-1.

Doubles competition found the Ram eombinations too much of their foes as Botsford-Braeken smothered their opponents, Francois-Hinkley, 6-0, 6-0; while Draper-Mattison won over Guanagnold-Rodges, 3-6, 6-4, 6-1.

Conference Swim Title Up For Grabs At Sac'to Friday

Roy Burkhead's mermen head for the Big Eight Conference championship meet at Saeramento Friday, and due only to lack of numbers (there are only seven on the team) the college's swimmers will be foreed to the sidelines during several events.

Although forced to forfeit two events, the Ram aquatic team managed to roll up 25 points in their third conference meet of the season against San Mateo.

Gene Gayner breezed to victory in the 200-yard baekstroke and helped the Rams mark up the 400-medley relay title. Craig Sehwarz, the college's dash star, was narrowly defeated in both the 500 and 100-yard free style.

This year's meet will be unique, because four other two-year college squnds are very closely bunched in the fight for top honors, and, according to Burkhead, the winner can be anybody's guess.

Nine swimming titles and one diving crown will be decided from about 75 swimmers and divers representing Saeramento, San Mateo, Stockton, Oakland and San Francisco.

The Dog-Faced Butterfly is the unofficial insect of California.

Thespians Begin Rehearsal For Inherit The Wind, Drama Of 24-Year-Old 'Monkey' Trial

Inherit The Wind, first produced in 1955, will replace the highly successful Cherry Orchard on the Little Theater's agenda. Opening night is Friday, May 15, with an 8 o'clock curtain time.

Essentially the play revolves around the celebrated Scopes trial of 1925 in Dayton, Tennessee. The proceedings featured a clash between the fiery statesman William Jennings Bryan and Clarence Darrow, famed criminal lawyer. Scopes was prosecuted for teaching Darwin's theories on evolution in classrooms.

LEAH PASHOIAN has captured the difficult role of Melinda Blair in the forthcoming Little Theater production of Inherit The Wind.

Bertram Cates is the schoolteacher being prosecuted by Matthew Harrison Brady in the play. Unable to afford a lawyer, Cates directs his plea to a midwestern newspaper which in the interest of fair play sends Henry Drummond to defend him. On trial is not only Cates as an individual but supposedly the whole country and its right to think freely.

Inherit The Wind will be presented in the area style. The audience instead of just listening and watching will take an integral part in the action. The players must influence and emotionally affect the audience so that it will react in a predetermined manner.

Members of the cast are Larry Bryggman as Matthew Harrison Brady, John Rose as Henry Drummond, Saul Bar as Rev. Brown, Leah Pashoian as Melinda Blair, Ann Heile as Mrs. Brady, Virginia Rae as Mrs. Krebs, Jordy Cooney as the Mayor, Frank Stuckey as Tom Davenport, Charles Bevincourt as Howard, Jim Robinson as the Judge and Bruce Johnson as H. G. Hornbeck.

Board Votes Arts Building Contract

Construction contracts for the erection of the new Arts Building, as well as the additions to Smith Hall and the gymnasiums, were awarded April 7 to building contractor Louis C. Dunn Incorporated, Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, announced last week.

Awarded by the Board of Education, the contracts call for construction to begin in approximately one month; completion of the project is scheduled for the spring semester of 1961. The new Arts Building will be located north of the campus on the site of the former Hurley Village.

Housing 24 classrooms, as well as 10 art and music laboratories, the new three-story structure will include a Little Theater and a closed circuit educational television network.

Two Instructors Here Awarded Study Grants

Summertime study grants from the Summer Institute Program of the National Science Foundation have been received recently by two instructors in the college's life science department.

Charles Stewart has been accepted to study animal and plant ecology at the University of Wyoming from July 20 to August 22, and Jules Fraden plans to spend six weeks from July 6 to August 14 at Claremont College in Southern California.

The grants are designed to expose recipients to recent advances in biological sciences and to strengthen the subject matter competence of science and mathematics teachers.

Observation

Man Vs. Society Wins Few Legal Victories

By William Forshay

INDIVIDUALS pitted against their society often attract sympathy, always attract publicity and seldom attract legal victory. Three recent cases illustrate this point but they also raise the pertinent question as to where the rights of society end and the personal rights begin.

One of these cases involves a San Francisco girl who "made good," went to Hollywood, made a hit in the film world and suddenly quit. Sob sisters of the movie press condemned her departure as "thoughtless, ungrateful," comedians jeered at her, and her "friends" failed entirely to understand the statement she made that she had not found "happiness" in the artificial jungle.

The second case is that of a poultry farmer who tried to fight a restrictive and discriminatory price and product control by raising wheat above his government allotted acreage.

Fined almost into bankruptcy, this American farmer finally sold his farm and now plans to migrate to Australia with his family in search of agricultural freedom.

A third and more immediate case is that of urban redevelopment in this city where a few individuals are defying the city by their refusal to move from condemned buildings.

Several variations on a theme of force are being played here ranging from economic to physical to journalistic. The end result has already been foreordained owing to recent decisions of the U. S. Supreme Court concerning "eminent domain." They will have to move.

These three cases are all different, but in one respect they are the same. Somewhere along the line, the desire of an individual has come in conflict with the desires of a majority. This seems to mean that these people who are out of step are wrong according to those who hold that the majority should rule in a democracy. However, the facts are not all in yet.

In the first case, the majority is the movie-going public and, in the words of one of its self-appointed spokesmen, the actress "owes a duty to her public" and, incidentally, to her art. Leaving the question of movie artistry as a moot point, the question of duty is primarily an individual concept and if the individual does not feel that the duty is obligatory, then the duty does not exist for the that person and is therefore unreal and not binding.

Ezra Taft Benson himself admits that the quarter century of farm supports have been unrealistic and expensive in the wheat program as well as others. This support does not help the case of the farmer we mentioned, however. Still, public opinion, expressed in a governmental rescript voted upon by only 13 per cent of the voters concerned in a referendum from which the rest were barred from voting, does not seem an expression of democratic will and by its very nature, of doubtful constitutionality. The abrogation of the right of "due process of law" in this case where the farmer had no trial, or even a formal hearing and yet found that a portion of his bank account was seized, is a clear violation of the Fourteenth Amendment.

In addition, the letter of the law was broken but not the spirit, since the farmer had no intention of placing his grain on the open market in competition with other farmers but only of feeding it to his chickens (which is logical since the price of feed is supported and thus remains at a high level while poultry and egg prices fluctuate according to the laws of supply and demand).

'Ugliest' Title To Warren

Hotel And Restaurant Entry Wins On Luke Casper's Disqualification

By Jim Fudoff and Dick Dyer

Ugliest Man On Campus is now the proud title held by Charlie Warren of the Hotel & Restaurant department.

Warren captured first place with $95.69, and second and third places with $56.04 and $54.23 were won by Tony Bartman and KCSF's Narendra Jhaveri, respectively.

Runners-up in order of votes were Bob Righetti, Dave Vargo, Jim Rigney, Cleofus Coffield, Bob Basso and Bob Tiedemann.

The disqualified Luke P. Casper, however, was presented with the booby prize (a free beauty treatment at one of the local salons) because he showed up in costume wearing his own face. Casper commented to the press that he will not avail himself of the treatment for fear that he might lose his "only claim to fame."

Of the original 16 loathsome entries, nine finished in the final tallies. "The results of this year's contest," stated John Dunn, faculty supervisor of the contest, "prove that it was not just a popularity race, as was the case in the past."

In the last week of the contest, numerous stunts were performed by the entries. They roamed the campus, wearing lavish makeup, jingling money cups, and collecting all the penny votes they could attract. Dress for these monsters ranged from nightshirts to bare chests.

A familiar entry was Bartman, who, led by a different coed each day, paraded about Smith Hall with a mottled green and brown complexion. His black locks and bloodstained nightshirt won him a second rating and an egg shampooing minus the shampoo.

The Green Monster, better known as Righetti, claimed he would swallow two live goldfish if his votes totaled $30 or more. He came close to it and finished by drinking most of the water in the bowl.

Warren, the contest winner, became known as "The Creature from the Kitchen" during the heetie days of the campaign. Stripped to the waist, a silk stocking over his head, he met the final opposition during a recent College Hour, at which he offered to the highest bidder a chance to play Easter Bunny and use him (Warren) as the egg.

The close race for the crown poured in $397.33 in votes into the scholarship fund, for which the contest was originated. Other stunts put on by contestants were cherry pie battles and water splashing events. The contestants' enthusiasm made this year's UMOC contest a memorable one, especially for the Ugly Man.

Warren won two free chicken dinners at Bill and Stan's Coffee Shop, a purchase order at Macy's, and $5 in merchandise from Paul's Wilshire Station.

Zany Activities Lead Hell Week Pledging Pranks

By Pat Perkins

PLEDGE WEEK is again upon the campus. The zany activities of the fraternity and sorority pledges have once more enveloped the college.

Hazing of pledges to the various sororities will be postponed for today only in order that the future sisters can serve at the AWS fashion show and tea to be held in Smith Hall from 3 to 5 o'clock.

To complete Pledge Week, Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity will present its Spring Fever dance Friday night.

Beta Tau fraternity held its last rushing function on April 7. The affair was a banquet at the San Remos restaurant. The after dinner speakers were Ralph Kirk and Robert Hopson.

Veneto's was the site for Zeta Chi's pledge dinner held on April 2. The officers of the sorority are Roberta Kennedy, president; Vicky Toruno, vice-president; Sorell Lowe, treasurer, and Nancy Canning, secretary.

Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity will conduct its second consecutive charity drive to collect funds for the needy and handicapped, according to Anthony Lopez, president. The drive, which began Monday, will end this Friday, and the proceeds will be given to a local charity.

A canned food drive sponsored by the AWS and the Hotel & Restaurant organization will be conducted next week. The food will be sent to the Canon Kip Community House.

Readers and potential critics are invited to read and discuss representative samples of college literature submitted for inclusion in this year's Forum magazine. These judges may get in touch with Catherine Connolly, sponsor of the yearly magazine, in her office, C-331A. Miss Connolly will arrange for the time of the reading.

Marksman Team Wins Trophy At Recent Match

Another team trophy was awarded to the marksman team of the Campus Police at the Oakland pistol matches April 5, according to Fred Fitzgeraid, criminology instructor here.

Scores of the individual men are as follows: Richard Gamble, 257; William Donovan, 250; Frank Mateo, 253, and Jim Olsen, 250. The team total was 1010 out of a possible 1200.

UMOC Contest Granted Use Of Makeup Classes

Surprised and pleased at the enthusiastic reception accorded the "truly ugly" Ugly Man On Campus contest this semester, Michael Griffin, drama director, offered the services of his makeup classes for next year's contest.

"This is good practical experience," Griffin stated, "and my classes will make the most of it. It is seldom that you can let the imagination run as freely in makeup application as in the making of an individual into a completely horrifying character. Many of my makeup artists have often requested an opportunity to create a Jekyll-and-Hyde monster, but all too often their creation dies on the makeup room floor in bundles of soiled towels full of grease paint."

Griffin disclaimed credit for Luke Casper's features and commented, "I don't believe I could make anyone up to be that horrible!"

Forum Entries Now Being Judged; Distribution Date Set For June 1

Students who have agreed to read and judge entries for Forum, the college's annual literary magazine, are expected to report to C-331A beginning today. Hours and days are Tuesday and Thursday from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. and on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays by arrangement, according to Catherine Connolly, faculty adviser.

Entries for possible publication, which were to be turned in by last Friday, must now be judged and edited. Judging will be on an impartial point basis.

"All the material must be read by as many readers as possible to assure the fairest selection of the best work submitted," Alexander Klimenko, a committee member, emphasized.

A cover recently drawn in a new non-abstract technique by Ronald Castelion, an advertising arts student, was selected for Forum, which will be published and distributed June 1. Obtainable at the bookstore, the magazine will sell for 50 cents or presentation of an Associated Student card.

Meetings held in S-257 during College Hours have featured ideas designed to spark interest in literature.

Last Friday, William Forshay, chairman pro tem of the club, delivered a talk on the evaluation of literature. This was followed by a general discussion.

Undergraduate Award To Former Business Major

Gerald P. Severeid, a transfer student from here to the University of California recently, won the Undergraduate Honors Award from the School of Business Administration.

Severeid in his first semester at the university maintained a 3.2 grade average on a 4-point scale. He attended the college for a year as a business major, recording a B average in his studies. Anka Perisich, his business instructor here, said of him, "He was always conscientious and highly motivated to do well in class."

Severeid was graduated from St. Ignatius High School here in the city, and attended the University of San Francisco for a year before coming to the college.

Weidman's Research Reveals Grads Make Good

Recent research by W. Merle Weidman, engineering instructor in the college's architecture department, into the knotty problem of two-year college efficiency in producing students capable of continuing university level work in upper division courses, has revealed that the college stands high in academic achievement as evidenced by the performance of its transfers to the University of California.

A survey, taken by Weidman, of the college's transfer students at UC's College of Architecture, disclosed that from a total enrollment of 609, 71 or 12 per cent made the honors list. Of this 12 per cent, 10 per cent were former City College students. This was achieved from a relative minority of 35 former students, or 5.75 per cent of the total enrollment.

Weidman found that about 20 of the 71 honor students entered UC directly from a high school, the remainder 51 being students who transferred from other colleges and universities.

CLIMBING OUT OF HIS "BEADIE-EYED" monster is Merle Weidman, architecture instructor who recently proved the proficiency of the college's graduates and has been consistently proving the worth of small cars with his two-year-old Messerschmitt KR-200. Weidman also has a "big" car since he's a family man. It's a Volkswagen!

Friday College Hour Features Faculty-Student Coffee Clache, Comedy Skit, 'Bermuda' Film

Informality is the keynote this Friday when the Faculty-Student coffee clache is revived to highlight a full program of College Hour activities.

According to John E. Hare, faculty chairman of the coffee hour, tables will be set up in the flagpole court to produce a sidewalk cafe atmosphere conducive to conversation, with signs placed at each table to denote the instructor and his particular department. Hare added that this will give the interested student, coffee cup in hand, an opportunity to share ideas with instructors, ideas not ordinarily brought up in the classroom.

JOHN E. HARE, Faculty-Student coffee hour chairman.

"It is also an opportunity for students majoring in one field to see and hear both faculty and students in related fields," Hare said. "For example, a photography major would possibly have an important question or two to ask of an instructor in the art department; an engineering student, although specializing in one form of engineering, might enjoy exchanging information with a chemistry instructor."

Sponsored by the faculty-student relations committee, a novel institution in itself for a non-resident college, the idea is a variation on the resident university faculty tea where a number of students are brought together to chat informally and to "pick one another's brains" in friendly repartee.

To liven things up even more, the college band will be in attendance for a brief period before things get started, and a faculty skit will close the affair, Hare added.

In a cooperative effort between students and instructors, the original comedy skit will be presented. Designed as a vehicle to demonstrate proper counseling methods, the ten-minute affresco act will feature such thespians as Alex Schwarz, men's physical education instructor, in the role of a bewildered freshman, and student performer John Rose as a helpful, friendly counselor.

In addition to the coffee hour and club meetings, the college film series will offer a travelogue entitled This Is Bermuda in S-136 during College Hour.

The film, which was made last year, features scenic shots of the island and shows many of the different modes of transportation taken by tourists in Bermuda, which include the bicycle, horse-drawn carriage, and least of all, the automobile.

Party Affiliation Urged As Details For Voting Given

Details concerning the election of student leaders for the Fall 1959 semester were outlined by the new election commissioner, Pete Pedrotti, Sr., last week.

Pedrotti, a law and business administration major who is extremely interested in politics, urged candidates running for any office to affiliate themselves with one of the three parties on campus, rather than trying to run alone.

Petitions for office will be available to prospective candidates in the Associated Student office, S-149, before the first of May.

The election commissioner's job entails checking over all petitions for offices; arranging for ballot machines from the city election board, and controlling the polls on the two election days, May 25 and 26.

Pedrotti is the third student this semester to have been appointed to this position. Norm Singer, the first commissioner, was forced to resign because of poor health, and the second appointee, Walt Pearce, is now working full time as a salesman.

Interviews Set For 150 Prospective Graduates

Forty-seven business, industry, and government recruitment and procurement teams, representing the leading employers in the Bay Area, have been invited to participate in the Fourth Annual Business Graduate Recruitment Day program here on Wednesday, May 13, Joseph Amori, college placement director, announced last week.

One hundred and fifty prospective graduates, after being carefully trained and selected by the business department staffs, will be personally interviewed by official recruitment teams from various branches of business, industry and government.

Engineering, Science Talk Offered Friday

Advances in science and requirements for various schools of engineering will be the main topics of discussion when guest speaker William K. Mayo, dean of instruction, speaks at Alpha Gamma Sigma's meeting in C-222 during College Hour Friday.

Urging all members of the honor society to attend, Sponsor William G. Richardson added that anyone interested is welcome to attend the meeting.

Members are requested to pay their dues as soon as possible, Richardson warned. Although at least 200 are eligible to join this society, only 140 students are now members.

All students are eligible to join if they completed at least 12 units last semester while maintaining at least a B average. Eligible students who wish to join may apply to Richardson in S-143.

Complete records for use in transferring and employment opportunities are included in the benefits for members.

250 Pint Goal Set For Blood Drive

In order to obtain much-needed blood, a drive will be held here at the college May 7 and 8, according to Dick Cottrell, president of the Associated Students.

Technicians from the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank will supervise the drive, to which all students, faculty members, employees and alumni of the college are asked to donate.

Sponsored by Tau Chi Sigma fraternity, the drive will serve to increase the college's account at the bank. Anyone donating a pint may withdraw up to eight pints in a series from the bank in case of a family emergency. More than 100 pints were so used by students and college personnel last year.

According to Cottrell there will be a double College Hour Friday, May 8. Refreshments will be served to donors and the best available entertainment will be on hand to lend a gay air to the drive. Singer June Christy has been asked to make an appearance.

This year's goal has been set at 250 pints. Of these, 30 will go to Veterans Memorial Hospital in Yountville. Another 60 will be given to the San Francisco Civil Defense.

Besides the sponsoring Tau Chi Sigma fraternity, many other faculty and student groups are helping to make this drive a successful one. Dick Hinckle has been appointed as chairman of the drive. George Scarborough and Jack Derry will serve as co-chairmen.

Trophies will be awarded to the fraternities, sororities and clubs donating the most blood.

Washington High Alumni Lead In Enrollment Here

Next in order are Lincoln with 484, Balboa with 366, and Lowell with a total of 360.

Other school totals include the following: Galileo 286, Polytechnic 281, Mission 238, Benjamin Franklin 169, Commerce 21, John O'Connell 18, Continuation 11, Samuel Gompers 7, Girls High 1, San Francisco Unified School District 24, private schools 643, other California schools 918, non-high school graduates 39, and from outside of California 755.

Of the 755 students here from other states, Texas and Hawaii lead with totals of 75 and 74, respectively. Louisiana is next with 47, followed by New York with 41, Oregon with 36, and Illinois' total of 35.

Washington has a representation of 31; Pennsylvania 29; Michigan and Missouri 20 each; Arkansas and Ohio 17; Alabama, Massachusetts and Minnesota 16; Mississippi, Utah and New Jersey 14 each; Nevada and Idaho 13; Colorado, Florida, Tennessee and Oklahoma 11 each; Indiana, Iowa, Montana, Wisconsin and Nebraska 10; Kansas and North Carolina 9; Arizona, Georgia, Kentucky and Virginia 8; Connecticut 6; Maryland and West Virginia 5; North Dakota and Alaska 4; Vermont and South Dakota 2 each; and Maine, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Rhode Island, South Carolina and Wyoming 1 each.

While California leads all states with 4467 students, the college has a representation of every state but Delaware.

Grants Received By 8 Instructors

Eight instructors in the college's engineering department will travel to the Monterey Peninsula this summer to implement grants received by the National Science Foundation.

Wallace Sellman will be studying in the engineering measurements department while Robin Crizer, Victor Graff, John Hallock, Glen Hurd, Charles Roland and Edward Van Egri will participate in the engineering graphics division.

A. E. Edstrom of this college's engineering department will be one of the instructors.

The National Science Foundation was created in recognition of the role of high school and college teachers in developing the nation's scientific manpower potential. Financial assistance makes possible the attendance of many teachers who would otherwise need to supplement their income from summer occupations not related to their field.

The sessions will begin June 29 and continue until July 24 at Monterey Peninsula College.

The summer instructor - students will spend approximately 128 hours in lecture discussion, laboratory and special activities.

Student Council Passes Forum, Glee Club, Student-Faculty, A Cappella Choir Allocations

By Roy Twitty

Passage of four budgets, and Coach Alex Schwarz' opinion on the type of award to be issued basketball players, led Student Council discussion last week. Representing Ben Northrup as chairman of the Finance Committee, Helen Fast brought four budgets before the council for approval. Some members of the council commented on the unusual calm manner of budget review in the absence of Northrup, who charged during a previous meeting that Associated Student President Dick Cottrell was playing cat and mouse with the council.

The first of the budgets to be presented, the A Cappella choir money request of $253.06, was passed unanimously. Next on the list was the budget for the Men's Glee Club, asking $106.15, which also passed unanimously with little argument.

Following the passage of the glee club money, the council voted to supply $170 for the Student-Faculty committee.

Last of the money issues legislated by the council was an underwrite of $500 for the college literary magazine, Forum.

The controversial budget for the college band, tabled several meetings ago, has again been postponed for further investigation. Ferd Marwedel, sophomore councilman, stated before the council that a few things that have recently come up are out of the ordinary and require looking into.

Absent from the college to take part in athletic contests in Stillwater, Oklahoma, Northrup is competing in Olympic-style wrestling. He is now in first place for the 147½-pound weight AAU championships.

Interviewed by Dick Whittington over the air on KSFO, a recognized fraternity from the college carelessly used the college name in a manner that was not complimentary. Sam Allen, Inter-Fraternity Council president, reported to council. Interviewed by Whittington two weeks from last night were all fraternity officers and pledges, but no sponsor was present.

Outlining the view of the administration concerning the fraternity interview incident, Ralph Hillman, dean of Student Activities, stated, "If it is proved that this is a definite violation of rules, our course is clear."

The college basketball team, winners of the Big Eight championship conference, has decided that it would prefer trophies for team members in lieu of the sweaters and jackets usually awarded, according to the council report of Josh Williams, awards commissioner. Team members very seldom wear athletic jackets, he pointed out.

"I am not in accord with the suggestion that trophies be awarded to team members," Coach Alex Schwarz, Block SF Society sponsor, stated as he addressed the council; "trophies wouldn't do the college any good because no one would see them."

The team will get jackets.

AWS, HR Canned Goods Drive To Run Until Friday

By Margaret Alvaro

Assisting underprivileged families of the Canon Kip Community House, the Hotel and Restaurant Society, in conjunction with the Associated Women Students, introduced a can drive at the college, which began Monday and will continue through Friday, Pete Coakley, general chairman, declared.

Canon Kip is an agency of the United Crusade which renders its time and services to hundreds of needy families who come to them for assistance.

Because most of these families' homes do not offer children a practical atmosphere, Canon Kip has set up adequate facilities to help solve these needs.

Besides having a good athletic program, they also offer other recreational and cultural facilities, including a television room and a spacious amusement and dance hall.

Many of these poverty-stricken families often go without a sufficient diet and are housed in uncomfortable surroundings.

"If each student brings one can, approximately 7000 cans will be contributed and will help to feed many of these families," Coakley claimed.

Canned goods preferred are those which constitute the main course of a meal. They should be brought to the cafeteria, the library, or the entrance of Science Hall, Coakley said, where they will be piled up for display until the end of the drive.

Last year, Canon Kip did not acquire sufficient funds for their cause and are, therefore, depending on a favorable response from this drive to help supplement the difference of last year.

Under Coakley, sub-committee chairmen for this project include Scoop Allen, art director; Bud Crabbe, radio, and John Meany, photographer.

The service committee was developed by the H&R department during the Fall semester of '58. The drive is the second of two projects sponsored by them, the former being an excursion for blind children from the Light House for the Blind, which proved highly successful.

AWS, Active Minority, On The Move For Night Library Hours

TAKING ACTION is something most students here are averse to for one reason or another. They can be heard airing their complaints or suggestions for improvement of the college to their friends in such a manner that they satisfy themselves by letting off steam, but rarely if ever see their wishes carried out.

Suggestions and complaints don't often go beyond the verbal outcry stage, for very few students ally themselves with an organization or write letters to The Guardsman when they feel that some aspect of the college warrants comment or improvement. Quite often, students must be prodded by a "conscientious minority" before they can be made to realize that they actually possess a potentially potent voice on campus that can be employed to fulfill some of their desires.

One method of lighting a fire under chronically inactive students is now being employed at the college by an exceedingly active minority, the Associated Women Students, and the issue is one that concerns most students and may influence a great many more—the possibility of opening the college's library during the evening hours.

We are certain that many students here feel they would benefit considerably from an extension of the library's hours of operation; those living near the college would have a much greater amount of time in which to use the library's facilities for research papers, background reading, and study in general.

Questionnaires calling for students' opinions on this matter are now being circulated around the college and may be obtained in the offices of the Associated Students, dean of women, and dean of student activities. The forms contain blanks in which students may state their desires for evening hours and the time they would be able to use the library's facilities.

These questionnaires present an excellent opportunity for those who favor evening hours in the college library, to take a giant step toward seeing their wishes become a reality. Completed questionnaires will be given careful consideration by the administration here, and a strong indication of student interest in this project could conceivably result in an extension of the library's hours.

Such a move, in deference to the students' requests, would indeed be an excellent indication that students acting in concert can accomplish almost anything within reason and that student action deserves the recognition of more students here as a vital factor in this college's and all colleges' academic programs.

Eggheads, Meatheads Build Verbal Barrier

IT'S ALL over but the shoutin'. Ya don't think anyone's agonna press charges, d'ya?" Luke said as he placed his feet on our desk, his heels digging into our most cherished belonging, an autographed picture of Alfred E. Neuman clad in a bikini.

Casper was referring to his somewhat dismal victory-triumph in the Ugly Man On Campus contest, in which he took first place, only to have it torn from his grasp by an indiscretion of youth.

It seems that when Luke was in the Montana statewide UMOC contest he had accepted a sportscar from the Anaconda Copper Company as a morale booster. This ran his amateur standing on the rocks and thus made him ineligible for future UMOC clashes.

This was only one of his reasons for feeling blue—he was also caught stuffing the milk cans with Confederate money.

College Eucalyptus Won't Satisfy Imported Bears

With the recent and much publicized arrival of two koalas from Australia, extensive search has been carried out to ensure that these furry bears never lack their favorite food—eucalyptus leaves.

A similar inquiry was held at the college last week in order to ascertain whether the eucalyptus trees around the campus could be used to feed the koalas.

According to Ray Milani, supervisor of grounds, the answer is no. Koalas only eat three of the 250 species of eucalyptus, and the common blue gum found around the college is not one of them.

Another little known fact about the campus was brought out by Milani when he recailed that the college grounds were once used as the site of the San Francisco County Jail No. 2 and that it was probably the prisoners who planted and tended the eucalyptus trees flourishing here today.

Toward the end of the 1880's, John McLaren, the father of Golden Gate Park, obtained the land and began to grow barley, maintaining most of the grounds himself. A reservoir was built where the Science Building now stands.

Today the lawns and shrubs are cared for by six full-time gardeners under the supervision of Milani, who has been connected with the school department for 29 years and is now the Supervisor of Grounds for the San Francisco Unified School District. He is extremely pleased with the fact that for the first time practical cooperation exists between the gardening staff and the horticulture center, and he dreams of the day when the students in the horticulture department will be growing all the materials and his staff will plant them.

One of this semester's main projects has been the floral display recently planted on the corner of Ocean and Phelan avenues. The background consists of red ice-plants and santalena outlining the letters CCSF.

A similar floral letter display, on a background of golden flowers, California's official color, was arranged between the two walks in front of the science building a number of years ago when the college was known as San Francisco Junior College. However, students insisted on taking short cuts through the flower beds and the project had to be abandoned.

College students' habit don't vary too much from year to year but Milani hopes that students this year will give his gardening staff a break.

Since the fence around the lawn in front of Smith Hall has been removed, Milani is confident that students will use the paths there as well as everywhere else on the campus to keep the lawns as green as before.

•Sales Lag A Spirit Lag

Editor, The Guardsman:

I see in The Guardsman of March 18 that "Poor Organization (is) responsible for Card Sales Lag." The fact is that the students are just not interested in buying AS cards. If the students wanted to buy them, there would be no trouble in selling them. The headline suggests that the card sales people were unable to organize in order to ram the cards down unwilling throats, and that their blackmail campaign, using the parking facilities as the weapon, didn't work.

It is time for the student body officers and interested faculty members to realize that there is a trend in this school away from organized activities toward the original purpose of the institution, education. It is time, also, that they realize that most of the students are tired of paying for parking facilities they should rightfully be able to use free. After all, the Student Body doesn't own the parking lots—the city does. —Ron Pavelas.

Foresight

By Dick Dyer

MILTON BERLE has been ranked as the "father" of television and the first in an endless dynasty of video comedians.

In 1929, when TV was in its diaper stages, Berle did a closed-circuit broadcast for a television company in Chicago. There he told the very first TV joke on record: "I want to welcome you on behalf of American Television Corporation and I'd like to BE half of American Television Corporation." The gag wasn't anything special, but it eventually started a trend.

Since then numerous TV funnymen have come and gone and more recently quite a few have left. Last year Sid Caesar and Jackie Gleason disappeared. Ed Wynn was the first to get the axe in 1950, followed by George Gobel and George Burns. Even "Uncle Miltie" himself checks out on May 13 and Phil Silvers gets a permanent discharge in the fall.

With the exception of Red Skelton, virtually every "standup" comic has left us, or soon will. Some, like Bob Hope and Jack Benny, play it safe by doing only one big show a month.

Consequently, the majority of comedy shows are of the situation variety. This generally means a family setting and an over-active laugh-track. A few programs like Danny Thomas and Father Knows Best have proven themselves standard favorites, the former having been in the top ten for the last two years or so.

The Donna Reed, December Bride, and Ann Sorthern shows are okay but a little on the undistinguished side. Bob Cummings is often downright funny and on occasion so is The Real McCoys, which usually beats Playhouse 90 in the ratings. Colonel Flack, a dark-horse and different, produces a fair amount of chuckles thanks to the likeable Alan Mowbray.

Undoubtedly the worst thing about the comedy shows is that idiotic laugh-track. Hats-off to the producers of Glencannon for removing theirs (at a cost of $38,000).

Campus Police Find Students Co-operative

Competent patrolmen and a spirit of co-operation on the part of students and faculty have made this semester one of the finest in the history of the Campus Police.

At the beginning of the Spring semester, the force was confronted with the usual problem of students parking in the spaces of their choice, whether they possessed parking permits or not. Some students even parked in the faculty sections, but these problems are now under control.

Only a small portion of vandalism has occurred this semester, whereas during the fall it was one of the chief problems of the force.

Despite the fact that the students are co-operating with the force more than ever, they are still reluctant in accepting the Campus Police as an official organization, members of the force say.

The purpose of the organization is to enforce the traffic, safety, and parking laws about the campus, but students failing to realize this, still hold grudges against the force and refuse to respect its authority.

The only problem that the Campus Police has with the faculty is the habit of parking overtime in the green zone in front of Science Hall.

Hornets On Parade

A Phi E Drillers Gain Recognition For Performances

By Elmer Milligan

Assemble eight pairs of Bermuda shorts, long socks, A Phi E fraternity paddles, and a group of vigorously cool college men, then you have formed the amazing Marching Hornets of Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity.

Organized in the Spring of 1957 by Josh Williams, drill commander of the group, the drill team has performed on a number of talent shows, on and off campus.

They organized during Hell Week in February of 1956 to keep up their morale. Response was so great that they were asked to perform at the Spring Festival Rally during the same semester, and at the freshman student orientation rally in September of the following semester.

The Hornets marched themselves to victory at the Talent Show of the Club Activities Board dance in October of 1957, and thereby achieved the honor of representing the college at the California Junior College Student Government Association Conference, held in November of that year at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel.

The group has won several trophies for their outstanding marching.

Besides entertaining, the Hornets render various services. During Hell Week of last semester, the A Phi E fraternity pledges were required to carry pink milk cartons in an effort to obtain money for charity. Proceeds were given to the United Crusade fund.

Commencing this year, the Hornets and other members of the fraternity assisted the college health department while physical examinations were given to the freshmen male students. Anthony Lopez, president of the fraternity and secretary of the Inter-Fraternity Council, expressed satisfaction over the project and has declared it a semi-annual feat.

Texas, Move Over!

Alaskans Here Dig That Crazy Space At Home

Life in Alaska is cold and hard but also adventurous and rewarding. Since its statehood, it has been increasing in population. Many spirited people want to meet its challenge to live and work in an exciting land of renewed importance. They will be the modern trail blazers and will build, plan and make ready for those to come.

Its people also are facing another kind of contest, that of gaining a useful education for themselves. Since in Alaska the problem of wide open spaces and lack of colleges face bright young people, they have crossed the state line into other parts of America for educational purposes.

Hildre, a criminology major from Ketchikan, feels that one of Alaska's best points is the slow pace of life led there as opposed to the heetic California life.

Entertainment is basically the same in Alaska, although there is less of it. Most movies seen in the rest of the states are shown there on a delayed basis. (Alaska has seven radio stations and three television stations.)

"Nothing better could have happened than the admission of Alaska," Hildre believes, "but both Hawaii and Alaska should have been made states long ago."

Brown, who is majoring in electronics, is from Skagway. Differences between his home city and San Francisco are mainly entertainment and transportation, but he misses the opportunities for hunting and fishing that people have in the small town of Skagway.

Because of great distances between towns, airplanes provide the main method of transportation.

State Grid Playoff Possible In Future

TWO INTERESTING resolutions and several informative discussions were the featured highlights at the Northern California Junior College Student Government Association (NCJCSGA) Athletic Workshop held on the Modesto campus Saturday, April 11.

Carl Wallace of Contra Costa was the student chairman in the athletic workshop with Modesto's Paul Christian serving as the faculty resource. City College was ably represented by Recreation Association President Bunny Tollefson, Awards Commissioner Josh Williams and this reporter.

The main discussions resulted in the drawing up of resolutions to be presented before the athletic workshop at the semesterly statewide convention to be held in Long Beach on May 7-9.

An attempt to have Northern California's two-year college football powers recognized by the Southern schools, either in the form of a North-South clash for the State championship or in an invitation to the Junior Rose Bowl game, called for the assemblance of a special committee to draw up the formal resolution.

This committee drew up the pact which provided for two main governing bodies which would decide the best teams, one in Northern California and the other in the Southland.

Included in the Northern board, for instance, would be the commissioners from the four conferences in the area (Big Eight, Golden Valley, Coast and Central) plus three interested sportswriters from the region—a seven-man selecting body. The South would have a similar board with its four conferences.

In passing the resolution, the General Assembly made one change, as it was brought up that attempting for a Bowl bid is virtually fruitless; therefore, it was agreed to concentrate Northern efforts toward a North-South playoff for the California grid title—actually more rewarding than participation in a Bowl game.

A plan which would install a consolation bracket at the State basketball championships led to the drafting of a second resolution. It was agreed that a team shouldn't have to return home after a 500-mile journey if defeated in first-round play.

Since a great deal of the expenses is allocated for travel it would only cost a little more to keep a ball club at the championships an additional day or two. Consolation games could be played in the afternoons, not affecting the present time schedule.

This resolution passed unanimously through the General Assembly.

With no further resolutions being created and the orders of the day completed time was allotted for general discussion, and here's where we made our pitch in behalf of Sid Phelan, the college's successful hoop boss.

Phelan has a sparkling idea which would tend to make the Big Eight basketball race more interesting and profitable—a playoff system patterned after the method used in the prep Academic Athletic Association to determine its undisputed cage crownbearer.

In the playoff system (as introduced by Phelan to the AAA while he was basketball coach at George Washington High) a team earns one point by coming out in first place at the termination of the round-robin schedule.

The top four finishers in the regular schedule meet in the playoffs with teams 3 and 4 drawing to see who encounters 1 or 2 in the semi-final round of the playoffs. Winners of the semi-final contest vie for the playoff championship. The winner of that hassle is also awarded one point.

Should a team win both the round-robin and playoffs it would claim two points and the undisputed loop crown. However, if a team other than the regular season champ wins the playoff both clubs would have one point and the league championship would be decided on the outcome of the ensuing struggle between the teams.

Phelan strongly believes that this would stimulate interest up to the last game, since four colleges would be in the running and no single team could "cinch" the title before the season's end, and would also insure a strong league representative at the State championships.

Upon introducing the plan to the athletic workshop, we were greeted with mixed emotions. Five schools opposed, but Oakland and San Mateo seemed to favor the idea. The fact that the two favoring colleges were our neighboring schools led us to believe that they approved the move because they understood it after watching the prep system work so effectively.

After adjournment we explained the matter to some of the opposition and convinced them that this plan wasn't intended to aid City College (perennially near the top regardless), but was good for the rural colleges (Stockton, Modesto, Santa Rosa, etc.), who rarely finish near the top, but with the added incentive of a fourth place standing and possible playoff laurels, would have a chance to win the Big Eight crown.

After considering the latter point a few more climbed our bandwagon and at least we stuck our foot in the door, since the colleges ARE interested and the plan is in the workshop minutes.

Making people aware of a proposal and informing them of its good points is half the battle and if it's won thanks can go to the noble Phelan, who, upon the insertion of this system on the Big Eight cage slate, will have hurt his team's chances for first and will have given three other coaches an opportunity to nab the goods.

Unbeaten Teams Loop Leaders In Intramural Cage

By Nick Peters

Unbeaten teams lead their respective leagues in the Associated Men Student intramural basketball program after four weeks of competition.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon, by virtue of its 2-0 forfeit-win over Beta Phi (0-3), tops the Inter-Fraternity Council standings with a 3-0 slate; the Club Activities Board Hotel and Restaurant entry boasts of an unblemished 4-0 mark in its league, and the two Miraloma Club fives ("A" and "B") share the Independent loop leadership with 2-0 records.

Second place in the IFC is claimed by three squads. Alpha Phi Epsilon gained part of the runner-up spot by downing previously unbeaten Phi Beta Delta. Both teams have 2-1 marks, as does Beta Tau, 49-25 conquerer of Kappa Rho (1-2).

In the other fraternity clash Zeta Phi (1-2) narrowly edged Lambda Phi (1-2) as Kris Kimball potted 20.

H&R maintained its CAB lead by way of a 33-30 victory over the Campus Police (2-1) in an overtime thriller. At the end of regulation play the score was knotted at 27-27, but Ruppert Sutton sank a pair of fielders and Mike Morris netted one to give the cafeteria crew a win in extended play.

Close behind in second at 3-1 the Recreation Association displayed strength and balance in clobbering Alpha Phi Omega (0-3), 69-30. Pete Winkler's 20 and a 16 point output from Dave Nigel paced the winners.

In a battle of non-winners, the International Relations Club (1-2) edged The Guardsman (0-4), 33-30.

Miraloma Club "B" took advantage of a bye awarded to its counterpart, Miraloma Club "A," to tie the latter for the Independent lead at 2-0 by tripping the Frisco Kats (1-2), 41-26.

Gerry DelSecco's 19 points helped his Lucky-Five (1-1) mates crumble Keki-Kanes (0-3), 63-34, in the other Independent clash.

Cindermen Roll Up 81½ Points In Triangular Triumph; Bell, Smith Record Double Victories

By Jim Payne

Springing back from last week's defeat at the hands of Oakland, the college's track and field squad garnered victories over Stockton and San Mateo in a triangular meet at Stockton last Friday.

Friday's effort was almost a hundred per cent improvement over that of two weeks ago as the San Franciscans took firsts in six of the nine running events. However, the general opinion of the competitors was that the broad jump, high jump and pole vault pits were far below standards conducive to good performances. The fact that the high jump was won at a height of 5-10 bears this out.

John Smith was one of two double winners for the college, capturing the 100 in ten seconds flat and retiruling with a more impressive 21.5 in the 220.

Hurdler Jerry Bell led a one-two-three sweep of the highs with a 15.1 clocking and came back with a 24.5 win over the lows.

The day's outstanding performance was turned in by Ram discus ace Mike Reid, who heaved the plate 153-3. He also placed second in the shot, which was won by Don Briemle at 46-3.

Other winners for the college included Pickens Rodgers, who kicked in with a 4:37.0 mile, and Ken Dawdy, whose 2:02.8 was good enough to win the half.

These victories over Stockton and San Mateo gave the Ram squad a 4-1 league record and a 6-3 overall slate.

Sacramento will host the Rams and Santa Rosa this Friday in a triangular which is the season's last league meet.

After that one, the "big" meets take the spotlight. The Northern California JC Relays at Santa Rosa, the West Coast Relays at Fresno, the Big Eight Conference Finals at Sacramento, the Northern California JC Trials and Finals at Fresno and the State Meet at Modesto will get all the trackster's attention.

Last Friday's scores: Triangular—CCSF 81½, Stockton 36, San Mateo 31½. Dual—CCSF 86, Stockton 35; CCSF 95, San Mateo 26.

Walter Johnson still holds the mark as the most effective opening day pitcher, with nine wins in 14 starts, seven of them by shutouts.

Swimmers Sunk By T-Bird Mermen

In a losing effort, Craig Schwarz won the 100-yard free style and gained a second in the 50-yard event, amassing 21 points at the last Big Eight Conference swimming meet against Oakland.

Other meet victories for the college were posted by Laurie Hansen in the 200-yard breast stroke and Gene Gayer in the 200-yard backstroke.

In the dual competition, Oakland beat the college by 44 points, but this number is not a true indication of ability, considering the fact that Coach Roy Burkhead's seven-man team was competing against a squad of 24.

Ten events were held, out of which the college entered seven, and gained three first places, one second and three thirds. Because of a lack in depth, the team had no entry in the diving, medley relay and the free style relay.

Other point-getters were Rich Bruhns, third in the 220-yard free style; Laurie Hansen, third in the 200-yard butterfly, and John Rosenberg, third in the 440-yard free style.

Botsford, Bracken Lead Rams In Court Clashes

By Warren Downes

Led by Fred Botsford and Jack Bracken, the Ram tennis team is battling to retain the Big Eight championship which it won last year.

Botsford and Bracken, the number one and number two singles players on the team, have been beaten only once in league action. These two top players are also the number one doubles team on the Ram squad.

Botsford, who hails originally from Santa Cruz, began playing tennis some five years ago, but didn't play competitively until he moved to San Francisco and entered Balboa as a high sophomore in the Fall semester of 1957.

There he began his tennis career and during his first year he advanced to the finals of the Academic Athletic championships only to be defeated by Jim Watson, who last year led the Rams to the Big Eight championship. Last year Botsford again advanced to the finals only to be defeated by highly rated Bobby Siska.

Botsford, who is ranked 11th in Northern California, feels that his biggest moment came in a losing cause. The incident occurred last year in one of the local tennis tournaments when the Ram ace was facing the highly rated, third ranked in Northern California, Bill Hoogs.

Botsford was ahead in the match and had the highly favored Hoogs at set and match point when he fired a strong shot down the base line which went out of bounds by a very slim margin. This near miss cost Botsford the match as the Cal Frosh ace rallied from this point to take the match.

Bracken attended Riordan High School, but didn't play competitive tennis while there. He has been playing tennis only two and a half years, but has improved steadily and already has won some tournaments.

Bracken combined with Botsford to win the city doubles crown last year in the 18 and under division. He also won the doubles title at the Catholic Athletic League Davis tournament held at Berkeley. In the Golden Gate tournament held this year Bracken advanced to the quarter-finals of the singles before being defeated.

Winning his first title was his greatest moment, Bracken stated. His first championship was the mixed doubles title of the Parkside Tennis Club.

The only opening day no-hitter was pitched by Bob Feller of the Cleveland Indians on April 16, 1940, besting the Chicago White Sox, 1-0.

T-Birds Cut Ram Pennant Chances To Tune Of 19-8

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Backers of Lee Eisan's scrappy Ram diamond forces saw about 80 per cent of their dreams for a conference flag float away into the annals of oblivion last Tuesday afternoon as the locals saw themselves completely obliterated by the Oakland Thunderbirds, 19-8, at Balboa Park.

The T-Birds, who lambasted Ram pitching for a total of 19 safeties throughout the gruelling, three and a quarter hour execution, jumped to a quick 2-0 lead in the opening frame as right fielder Joe Panella lashed out a booming two-run homer.

Making the most of a walk and back to back singles on the part of Bob Farber, Johnny May and John Bagatelios, the Red and White forces set the count at 3-2 following their end of the first. Another Ram tally in the third moved it to 4-2, but it was at this point that the local festivities were to be cut short in favor of an East Bay celebration.

In their half of the fourth the Thunderbird lumber made twirler Bill Simmons look like a high school batting practice performer as they clouted him for half a dozen base hits while producing an equal number of tallies.

Although turned down without a score in the fifth, when the T-Birds stepped to the plate to open inning number six it was the same old story all over again. Simmons lost two on walks and was rapped for a pair of solid singles before bowing out in favor of Roy Tripaldi.

"Trip" gave it his all, but a double and a three bagger teamed up with a boot of what should have been a routine twin killing made it 14-4.

About the only thing making the show even ten per cent worthwhile came in the Ram end of the seventh when reserve catcher Gary "Yogi" Bader delivered his first home run since his early high school days via a 400-foot line-shot down the left field marker with Tripaldi aboard. Bagatellos then promptly belted the next pitch for a 375-foot round-tripper.

Score by innings:	R	H	E
Oakland ..... 200 006 032—19	19	1
CCSF ..... 301 000 310— 8	11	4

Seitz, Velasquez (3-1) and Menke; Simmons (3-2), Tripaldi and May, Bader.

Santa Rosa To Host Final Tennis Meet

Santa Rosa will host the college netmen this Friday at Santa Rosa in the final Big Eight Conference match of the season.

Hopes for a conference championship were dimmed in the April 10 match with Modesto, as the Rams were snowed under, 6-1. The biggest upset of the day occurred in the number one singles match where Fred Botsford of the college was upended in straight sets, 6-3, 6-2.

Jack Bracken was defeated, 6-2, 6-4, and Larry Draper lost a close tilt, 4-6, 9-7, 6-0. Number four man Kent Cummings was dropped 6-0, 6-0. The lone winner for the Rams was Hank Scoble, who won in two sets, 6-2, 6-0.

Rams Drop Vital League Hassle; Davis Medalist

Playing on the unfamiliar Sonoma Country Club course, home of the Santa Rosa Bear Cubs, proved too much for the college golfers as they dropped their second league match of the Big Eight Conference season, 11-4.

Medalist honors for the Rams went to Elden Davis, who carded a 77 to crush his opponent Hugh Scandlan.

College of Marin will face the Rams in a practice match today at Sharp Park. Because of his performance against Santa Rosa Davis has been moved up the ladder to number two man.

Drive-In Drama, New Idea

AN UNUSUAL parking place is discovered by Beverly Ginsberg of the droma department as she waves from the basement of Science Hall. It's all a gag of course to publicize the next production of the Little Theater and acquaint students with its location. The play, Inherit The Wind, has nothing to do with cars or parking spaces but deals with academic freedom and the right of the individual to learn what he pleases. The opening date for the production is scheduled for the night of May 15, and the play will run for three weeks. —Guardsman photo by John Wilder.

Religion Vs. Science Theme Of Future Drama Production

By Alex Sokoloff

A courtroom battle pitting religion against science is the format for the Little Theater's latest production, Inherit The Wind, which is scheduled to open on May 15.

Written by Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee, the play's action centers around the celebrated Scopes "Monkey" trial held in Dayton, Tennessee, in 1925.

In the actual trial, Scopes, a schoolteacher, had broken the state law against the teaching of Darwin's theories on evolution.

In the play, Mathew Harrison Brady, an orator and statesman, heads the prosecution of the teacher, Bertram Cates. Arguing for the defense is the brilliant Chicago lawyer, Henry Drummond.

In the beginning of the trial, things go badly for the defense. Drummond calls on scientists for witnesses, but is ruled out of order by the court.

The proceedings are climaxed by Drunmmond asking Brady to take the stand as a witness and an expert on the Bible. Brady agrees to this.

With him on the stand, Drummond drives home his thesis that man's right to free thought is on trial. He expertly tricks Brady into claiming himself as some sort of spokesman for God.

The courtroom audience begins to laugh at Brady as he loses his self-control. This turns the tides for Cates for he is simply fined $100 and set free.

Brady terms the decision as being one of undue leniency. The decision so affects him that during a post-trial oration he is stricken with a heart attack and dies.

When word of his death reaches the courtroom E. K. Hornbeck, a newspaperman, denounces him as a demagogue. Drummond comes to the defense of the dead man and points out that "Brady had as much right to his religion as I have to mine."

The play is to have two producers who will be responsible for its non-directional aspects. Michael Griffin, drama director, said, they are Larry Brygmann and John Rose, with David Terry in charge of publicity. The total cast numbers 75.

In 1957, one baby was born every 7½ seconds thus increasing the population by three million.

Western States Ad Contest Entered By Six Students Here

Six of the college's students have entered a 10-sectioned western state collegiate art and advertising contest, which is sponsored by the Advertising Association of the West and the Zellerbach Paper Company. The purpose of the contest is to encourage and reward talented western students.

Entries have been submitted by Allen Bergeron, Elwyn Clèveland, Joan Espinoza, George Lozada, Shirley Parban and Saiko Suzuki.

"In visualization of the year 2000 A.D., upon which the theme of the competition is based, the planet earth, now so inspired by its scientific achievements, meets with the living beings of the other nine planets," Wilbur Eckert, advertising art instructor, said.

Ten first prizes will be awarded in each section with a value of $100 each. Second prizes of $50 and third prizes of $25 will also be awarded. The first prize winners from each section will compete against each other for the grand prize.

The entries are 12 by 27 inches, which are proportionate to outdoor advertising billboards. As the theme's events will take place a little more than two generations from now, and mankind hopes to have public relations established with all planets then, the advertising will be offered to all beings similar to those inhabiting earth.

Students will have their own choice of working media; photographic material may be included in the entries, providing it is the student's work.

Observation

Squatters Curb Rehabilitation Of Slum Areas

By William Forshay

CONTINUING last week's discussion of individuals versus society, we come to the problem of the Western Addition "squatters" who refuse to move despite the city's insistence that the houses in which they live are condemned, do not belong to them and also that the tenants do not pay rent.

Careful research indicates two reasons for this refusal to move even in the face of court orders.

Most of the tenants resist relocation because, according to Mrs. Julia B. Smith, relocation chief, "of the fear of the unknown. They ask 'Where am I going?' They are frightened."

In addition to fear, these residents sometimes have ties of friendship, kinship, and the familiarity of the area which they have no desire to lose and so they stay on to the point of an eviction notice or the arrival (eventually, and only if absolutely necessary) of the sheriff for forcible dispossession.

This objection is valid only to the degree that people almost always fear and resist change. It is not valid when based on considerations of public health, welfare, long range planning; the fact that value is received, and that every effort is made to relocate these (often older) citizens in an area close to and suitable to their occupation and economic standings.

A more vital and searching reason for opposition is given by the minister of an inter-racial church who speaks for some of his dwindling flock in his refusal to move.

"The question," said the pastor, "is one of racial prejudice. Most of these people of my race will be squeezed out of this area when the new apartments are built." Pointing out that the average rent in the addition is now $50 per month, the minister added that the lowest rent contemplated in the new multiple units is $90 per month.

"This," he commented, "is racial bias on an economic basis" since few of his race earn enough to afford such rents.

On the surface, this is a plausible argument and opens the question of moral prejudice on the part of the Urban Redevelopment Commission. However, it really closes the question because it is not reasonable, even if factual.

The point is that the new housing is planned to be beautiful, modern, spacious and with adequate parking and playground space. More important, and more pertinent to racial objections, is the fact that it has been guaranteed by the mayor and the builders that the area will be unrestricted. Racial qualifications will not hamper the project.

The fact is that few people of any race can afford to take the best suites in this city's big hotels, but this is an economic restriction and not a question of racial bias. The same holds true of the proposed Western Addition building program.

As an alternative, the minister proposes that the city build cheap, low-rent public housing. This is infeasible since the city does not hold the land after purchase but clears and resells it to the contractors who are pledged to preserve the "San Francisco flavor."

Public housing also has a flavor but most of the persons residing in such developments agree that only financial necessity keeps them there and that as soon as they have the money they will move.

Such rapid tenancy turnover creates new civic problems. Crowding and lack of stability increase divorce rates, [illegible] which in turn raise the juvenile delinquency rate, which lifts the crime levels, and all the while buildings degenerate due to lack of civic pride. Thus a slum is created by the solution of the problem it tried to end.

Much of the Western Addition is an example of the ruthless mechanics involved in this circular problem. Thus the stand of the city in trying to break the ring is important.

A time has come for the individual to consider both his own and the city's problem of social betterment. Support of the Urban Redevelopment program is just one way of asserting personal and civic-minded independence in a reasonable and worthwhile cause.

Immaturity Slows Progress During Northern Regional Student Leaders' Meet With Few Resolutions Passed

Immaturity among various delegations hampered the effectiveness of the April 11 meeting of the California Junior College Student Government Association (Northern Region) Conference. Some good was accomplished, however, in setting up advisory recommendations for the state-wide conference to be held at Long Beach, May 7, 8 and 9.

Among the results of the conference was a resolution providing for a seat on Student Councils for the editors of college newspapers. It was also decided to make a study of the feasibility of offering transferable credits to the editors to compensate them for time devoted to producing campus publications.

One resolution moved by City College of San Francisco protesting the affidavit required as a prerequisite for the National Defense student loan program was defeated by a vote of 4 for and 11 against with 4 abstentions.

An important resolution made by the financial workshop and passed with only one dissenting vote dealt with the idea that Student Government representatives should be invited to participate in deliberations affecting activities under student control.

Three resolutions that were not brought before the General Assembly because of the lack of time will not be presented at the state meeting either.

Those included a resolution by the student presidents workshop which provided for the prevention of any city, county, state or private agency from obtaining property belonging to a public educational institution unless construction is being accomplished on the property directly or is actually connected with the property.

Another resolution of the "unheard three" concerned the elimination of the student presidents workshop.

The third was a proposal to set up a procedure and various methods to fulfill it concerning the planning of a comprehensive agenda for mass Student Government meetings of various colleges. Rules of procedure would also have been handled if lack of time had not delayed discussion.

San Francisco was selected as the next meeting place for the group, which will be held sometime in the Fall semester. Here, it is hoped that a more effective and mature group will pass necessary resolutions for inclusion on the state agenda.

Dean of Student Activities Ralph Hillsman stated that he hopes the students will work hard and realize the responsibility that will be placed upon them. He was pleased, he added, with the college's delegation of 18 this year, and he complimented them on their qualities of leadership and good judgment.

Alberto Salamanca was the only representative from the college to act as the chairman of a workshop. Heading the public relations workshop in conjunction with Dean Hillsman, Salamanca found it was "much the same as my present job of publicity chairman at the college."

Hell Week Excitement Bows Out; Campus Resumes Normal Schedule

By Pat Perkins

ANOTHER pledge week has come and gone and the daily routine around campus is slowly settling back to normal.

Successfully surviving hell week are the future sisters of Gamma Kappa Beta sorority. Pledges included Georgine Peterson, pledge mistress; Sharon Lebovitz, Louis Ortega, Irene Sherry, Carolyn Vickers and Arlene Wilson.

Looking forward to becoming sisters are the pledges of Zeta Chi sorority. The pledges were Mary Reese, pledge captain; Diane Kinsky, Judy Labernadie, Alice Glynn and Linda Merrill.

Beta Tau fraternity, the sponsors of the fund raising drive for the children at the San Francisco hospital, recently presented an orchid corsage to Alberta Coleman for being the outstanding civil service worker in the cafeteria.

The pledges of Delta Psi sorority, who include Judy Arjo, Joan Greenberg, Alberta Giannini, Joanna Geary and Joan Micheletti, will long remember the zany activities of the past week.

The future brothers of Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity are Lee Bertolone, Dan Barter, Bill Lambert, Ken Anderson, Bill Ideker, Serge Tschernisth, Dick Quintara, Steve Ragle, Fred Bryant and Joe Moreno.

In celebration of the festival of Purim the college's Hillel Foundation hosted their brethren of San Francisco State College at a party at Brandeis House on March 23.

Approximately 30 members of the Recreation Association will participate in a field day at Monterey Peninsula College Saturday. The sports include volleyball, archery, bowling, badminton and tennis.

As of 1955 there was a total of 127 million radios and over 29 million phonographs in the United States.

Ad Art Students Offer 50 Sketches To Forum Staff

Fifty sketches and drawings have been submitted to Forum by advertising art students, assuring an adequate selection for use in illustrating stories and articles to be published in the literary magazine in June, temporary chairman William Forshay commented recently.

Material written for Forum is now being read and judged to determine the most suitable work for publication. This judging is done on an impartial basis of grading.

Students who signed up for this purpose can report to Sponsor Catherine Connolly's office, C-331, during these following hours, Mondays at 11 a.m. to 12 noon and 1 to 2 p.m.; Tuesdays and Thursdays, 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. and during College Hours on Fridays.

A tentative editorial board has been chosen to make the final decisions as to which stories will be used and to finish the details of editing.

Members of this board include Forshay, Alexander Klimenko, Michael Osbourne, Claire Jonte and Ellis Lumpkin.

Soliciting of ads, another phase of magazine production, is ahead of schedule. At present, it is believed that enough ads have been sold to take the magazine to press, Forshay indicated. Club member Norman Estes is now leading in the number of ads sold.

Approximately 120 stories, essays, poetry, plays, and other types of works have been turned in, both men and women contributing equally.

Blood Drive Overrides Soph-Prof Game

Tau Chi Sigma's third annual blood drive rally, scheduled for Friday, May 8, has displaced this semester's Soph-Prof baseball game, Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here, announced last week.

The blood drive rally and the student-faculty tilt are both scheduled during a double College Hour on the same date, according to the social calendar. The administration and Tau Chi Sigma fraternity feel, however, that the time should be devoted to the rally because it serves a more useful purpose, thus cancelling the Soph-Prof game.

Since its inauguration in 1947, the Soph-Prof athletic series has been one of the most controversial events ever staged at the college.

Considering the ages of the "greybeards" and their disability to adapt themselves to rugged competition, it has been the intention of the "peach-fuzzes" during past year to substitute the cage and diamond contests for sports that are less strenuous.

Refusing to accept any favors from the Sophs, the professors dueled against the young group in every scheduled game and accomplished an impressive record of victories.

The "grey-beards" have won every athletic contest against their rivals except two. They lost one game and tied the other. The Sophs' only victory was in 1951, and the 19-19 cage deadlock occurred in January, 1957.

Campus Police Due For Gun Instruction

Firearms instruction and qualifications will be the reason for the Sunday, May 10, meeting of the Campus Police force and the San Francisco Police Department, according to Fred Fitzgerald, chairman of the criminology department here.

Sometime this week, approximately ten new men will be sworn into the force.

Fitzgerald added that officers on the force attended the Sacramento State meet which was held April 19 by the United Revolver Club.

Blood Drive Promotion Now In Circulation; Double College Hour Scheduled For Final Day

Gay and colorful posters, designed by the college's advertising art students, are currently being posted throughout the campus to announce the annual blood drive scheduled for May 7 and 8.

Emphasis in these posters is placed on the privileges a donor may receive for giving one pint of blood. Besides the satisfaction of giving to help someone in need, all donors will be able to withdraw 20 pints of blood for himself or a member of his immediate family who is in need. He will also be able to withdraw up to eight pints for any friend who needs it.

In a ceremony today at the City Hall, Mayor George Christopher will issue a proclamation that the city of San Francisco lends its official recognition to the college's blood drive. Cottrell and Don Seratti, Guardsman Editor-in-Chief, will represent the college at the ceremony.

A goal of 250 pints has been set for the drive, with the blood going to increase the college's account at the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank. Technicians from the bank will supervise the drive, which is sponsored by Tau Chi Sigma fraternity, according to Dick Cottrell, president of the Associated Students.

Tau Chi Sigma will have assistance from members of Alpha Phi Omega and Phi Beta Rho in carrying out its plans for the drive.

Students, faculty members and college employees are all asked to donate, but Cottrell reminded students that those not 21 must have parental consent in writing.

According to Cottrell, there will be a double College Hour for the drive on Friday, May 8. Refreshments and entertainment will be on hand, and trophies will be awarded to the fraternity, sorority and club donating the most blood.

Last year the drive produced 205 pints of blood. This number exceeds those of other California colleges.

Sorority Sisters To Be Introduced At ISC Presents

Forty-three prospective sorority sisters will be formally introduced at the semi-annual Inter-Sorority Council Presents, the Spring Cotillion, to be held Saturday, May 2, in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel, according to Pat Arden, ISC vice-president.

The dance is scheduled to begin at 9 p.m. and continue until 12 midnight.

Having completed all of the routine procedures required by each sorority, these prospective sisters will officially be presented to the college by their respective sorority presidents.

Attendance is by invitation only and admission will be $2 per couple with an Associated Student card and $3 without.

Appropriate dress for this occasion will be cocktail dresses for women and suits for their escorts. Refreshments will be served during the course of the evening.

Chairmen responsible for the various committees are Miss Arden, publicity; Ingrid Holberg, Campus Police; Adda Quinn, tallies; Nancy Canning, invitations; Arlene Crabb, band; Sandy Courtemanche, lining up pledges and dates, and Roberta Kennedy, hotel arrangements.

Heading the executive board for the ISC are Arlene Nielsen, president; Miss Arden, vice-president, and Miss Holberg, secretary-treasurer.

Jazz Lovers Get Big Jam Session In College Hour

Hectic midterm week will conclude Friday with a variety of College Hour events, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities.

Jazz lovers will be treated to a concert and jam session by the college jazz band in the cafeteria. Under the co-leadership of David Phares and David Sereni, the swing band will include in its program music from Peter Gunn, West Side Story, selections by Cole Porter and an interesting number called Intermission Riff.

Europe And You, and Little Red Car will be the offerings scheduled for the college film series in S-186 at 10 a.m.

Produced by Scandinavian Air Lines, Little Red Car is the story of a couple touring Europe in a rented car. The film follows their travels from the Scandinavian countries down through Spain and France.

Besides the jazz concert and films, on-campus clubs and organizations will, as usual, hold their meetings during College Hour.

Warning Issued

Poster Approval Rule To Be Strictly Enforced

All organizations intending to distribute posters on campus must first have them approved by the Publications Board Chairman in S-304, Don Seratti, board chairman, warned this week.

One duty of the Publications Board Chairman here is to check all posters for neatness and accuracy, insuring that they convey the intended meaning in a manner comprehensible to all individuals on campus. Posters not meeting these standards will not be approved and must be corrected and resubmitted.

Any unapproved poster seen on campus will be torn from the walls by Seratti and his assistants, who have been "bagging" five unsigned posters per week on the average.

Organizations seeking approval of their posters should bring them to The Guardsman office, S-304, well in advance of the desired date of distribution.

Horticulture Department Wins Acclaim For 'Relaxed Modern Living' Entry At Oakland Show

Maintaining the tradition of always having one of the top-ranking displays in the Oakland Spring Garden and Home Show, the horticulture department's entry for this year was awarded third place honors at the East Bay exhibit last week.

Chairman of the project, John Wingate, a horticulture student, commented on the large turnouts for the floral show and the favorable impression the college's display made.

Relaxed Modern Living was the theme of the horticulture department's entry, an impressive patio scene accented by a variety of colorful flowers, large, round, hanging planters, and an unusual but effective Chinese red moon gate.

Planning for the college's display was started as far back as last fall.

First place in the show was captured by the University of California, and Oakland City College was awarded second prize.

A check of $130 was presented to the horticulture department as well as a third-place award ribbon.

In addition to the Oakland award, the result of combined effort of all the horticulture classes, outstanding individual work by six other students has earned them recognition by the San Francisco Garden Club, according to Harry E. Nelson, department head.

Two of these students, Robert Merritt and Kenneth Mitchell, received the top prize, the Alice Eastwood Award, and were both presented with grants of $100.

The four other students, Myrtle La Grave, Richard Dohkowitz, James Brown and Ben Adams, were also recognized for their work in horticulture and were all presented with books.

HARRY NELSON, head of the college's horticulture department.

Judges for the Alice Eastwood Award were Mrs. P. D. Gladstone, Kay McKeon and W. Brauns, members of the San Francisco Garden Club.

Awards were based not only on scholarship and grades, Nelson said, but also on the potential contributions these students will make to their chosen field.

Candidates for the top honors were selected by the horticulture department and their names sent to the judging committee. Awards were made after each contestant was interviewed by the panel of judges.

AS Office Petitions Obtainable In S-149

Urging party leaders to ready their campaign platforms, Election Commissioner Pete Pedrotti, Sr., declared this week that petitions for Associated Student posts are now available in the AS office, S-149.

Pedrotti also stressed the immediate need for party heads to organize committees and their candidates for the various AS offices for the fall semester.

Regulations Set Up For Summer Session Of 1959

Only graduates of San Francisco high schools or students now in attendance here will be permitted to enroll in the college's summer session, June 22-July 31, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

Students taking business administration 1B, chemistry 1A or 1B, or zoology 1A or 1B cannot enroll in any additional courses, Miss Learnard said. Those interested in attending the summer session will have an opportunity to select from among the following courses:

Art 68, business administration 1B, business 50, 60, 61, 75A, 77, 80A, 80B, 81A, 81B; chemistry 1A, 1B, G16; communication G6; community leadership G5B; criminology 52A, 60A, economics 1A, 1B; engineering 41A, 22, 90; English 1A, 1B; foreign language (Spanish 1 or French 1), based on preregistration qualification (10 hours); geography 1; health 21, 22; history 17A, 17B.

Hotel and restaurant 63; humanities 41B; journalism 26A, 26B; life and physical science G11A; mathematics C, D1, D2, 3A, 3B, 90A, 90B; music 21B, 27A; physical education 24; physics 10; political science 1, 36; psychology 1A, 33; sociology 1; speech 1A; X-ray 69, zoology 1A, 1B, 10.

Registration for summer session ends on June 22, and students wishing to attend must report to their counselors before June 4 for programming.

Modern Techniques Used In Engineering Project

Using modern techniques of welded construction and fabricating procedure, the students of Engineering 54a are attempting to construct a small drill-press as a project for the Spring semester, according to Wilbur Russell, mechanical engineering instructor here.

Instead of using a customary formal project, the class chose the drill-press problem because of the existing opportunity and the availability of the essential materials, Russell said.

A drill-press is an upright metal-drilling machine which is operated by pressing the drill to the metal by hand or by power.

The project will take approximately two years to complete, Russell said, adding that the end product is not the important part of the problem, but the technique used in producing it.

AS Council Gives Band Money, Confidence Vote

Magnanimously forgetting personal feelings and opinions, the Student Council decided to financially support the college band and gave that organization a vote of confidence as the previous meeting when the band budget was debated, William Forshay, campus affairs co-ordinator, urged the council members not to let their emotions rule them in deciding the band money issue.

"If you try to punish an individual by cutting or stopping his budget, you are not directly damaging his position, but you are hurting an integral part of the college," Forshay stated.

(Several council members had voiced disapproval of the statements of Meyer Cahn, college band instructor, in addressing the council and asking for funds. They stated later that they would vote against the measure for that reason alone.)

Ferd Marwedel, sophomore councilman, advised the council that it should first determine how much money is available for budgets before okaying the band budget. Marwedel was against the passage of the $623 allotment on the grounds that the Associated Students could not afford that much money.

With the announcement that $450 was available, the council decided to vote that amount to the band, which motion was passed 13-1-1. (Later, Finance Chairman Ben Northrup, at the Thursday meeting, brought out the fact that if the council had waited for a further report, they would have discovered that a new budget had been submitted for considerably less than the amount voted. However, Northrup stated that he was in favor of the voted budget since it was a "vote of confidence.")

The first was a suggestion that the AS appropriate the funds of defunct and off-campus organizations that had been out of existence for six semesters. Citing the Globe and Anchor as an example, Forshay stated that there was the amount of $15.00 credited to its account at the student bank and that the organization had long been inactive.

Bud Andress, Club Activities Board president, immediately pointed out that the organization was being revived, and also that council had no claims to private funds.

AS President Dick Cottrell suggested that Forshay and Northrup investigate the situation and report their findings and further discussion of the matter was halted.

The second and more debatable issue Forshay brought in was a recommendation that the council raise the AS card membership in on-campus organizations to 75 per cent and at the same time lower the requirement for the band to that amount.

Pointing out the difficulties under which the band is presently laboring and which it cannot improve upon until its present recruiting program is fully effective, Forshay added that some of the on-campus groups could help cover this and other gaps in card sales.

After heated discussion, Cottrell appointed Forshay and Andress as a committee to investigate the matter and the session closed.

Thirst For Knowledge Could Be Quenched Via World Of Books

OUTSIDE READING" is a term heard frequently in and around classrooms, but the frequent use of the term does not necessarily mean that all students interpret this activity in the same way.

There are two contrasting thoughts that register in a student's mind when he thinks of outside reading—one that can retard his education and another that can enhance it.

Some students think of outside reading as something to be avoided unless it is foisted upon them by an instructor, and then think of it as a burden to be dismissed as rapidly as possible. To these people the hundreds of books in local bookstores that are related to their courses are regarded in the same light as a bottle bearing a skull and crossbones and sitting in a medicine cabinet.

Taking this negative attitude toward extra reading may be standard behavior for those who feel they can satisfy themselves through nothing more than classroom activities, but students who think along these lines are actually denying themselves the possibility of capitalizing on benefits for which vast numbers of conscientious students are striving daily.

The other school of thought in this matter is that a college course is only a means to an end—the end being a degree and the knowledge that should go with it—and that by doing extra reading to supplement a course, one can employ his fuller understanding of the course as a means to arriving at a more complete achievement of that end.

How can outside reading help a student?

Someone who merely attends lectures and reads his text may feel that he isn't understanding, or deriving as much from the material as he would like to, the instructor's competence notwithstanding. This often occurs in two-year colleges where the bulk of the curricula is survey courses intended only to introduce a subject and not designed to delve deeply into the material.

A student who finds his history instructor spending only two lectures on the Roman Empire, or his English instructor covering Henry James, Henry Adams and Stephen Crane in one hour (all of which can be expected in survey courses) is quite likely to feel that he has missed something, and rightly so.

For the students who carry this added thirst for knowledge one step further, the thousands of books which are available loom as oases on an academic desert desiccated by fast-moving courses that no more than touch on the basic facets of each subject.

It is the student who turns to outside reading matter parallel to his courses who can complete a course feeling that he has really learned something, that he has amassed more than merely a few facts during a semester. The subjects, and collectively, his entire education, may very well have a more substantial meaning for him because he has increased his understanding of certain subjects through outside reading.

Since the recent increase in and emphasis on paperbacks, many students have found that these convenient, low-priced editions are the answer to their problem; attaining an added understanding of a subject has been made as easy as entering a student bookstore and selecting a book related to the subject in question.

Some students, unfortunately, dash into a bookstore at the beginning and end of each semester to buy and then sell their textbooks, and no doubt believe the hundreds of fascinating paperback titles they pass on their way to the texts are performing a decorative function in the stores. These people have another guess coming, and we'd rather they took it now, while there's still time to make their education profitable.

Gull's-Eye View

THINGS AND PEOPLE DON'T CHANGE MUCH—This unusual photo was taken in March, 1947, from a third-floor window of Science Hall. The scene hasn't changed—even the students look the same. The only difference is the addition of a trash can. Students have been warned to keep clear of the windows, but this photographer risked life, limb and lens in snapping this one. Reports are that 24-hour patrols will be kept during midterm week to insure that no frustrated student, hit with a severe case of bluebook blues, will mar this tranquil scene by turning it into a "way out."

What's In A Name?

No Wonder The Sun Never Sets On British Empire

By Vicky Aumann

If you were in Britain and wanted to take a journey to the town with the longest name in the world, all you would have to do is to go up to the booking office at Euston Station, London, and say:

"A ticket to Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrn—" (here you are permitted to take another breath), "-drobwllllantysiliogogogoch, please."

"Thirty-eight shillings and sixpence ha-penny," says the imperturable station clerk producing the ticket. It seems a remarkable bargain at the price—and one explanation of why, with such names, the sun never sets on the British Empire.

Unfortunately, the stress of modern life seldom allows time for the full 58 letters and 19 syllables. As a special concession for visitors in a hurry, the clerk will understand just as well if you simply say "Llanfair P. G.," the abbreviation by which the town is usually known.

There is no difficulty in recognizing Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllantysiliogogogoch when the train finally arrives there, for the name is proudly displayed on 25-foot signs aboard the station's platforms.

What does the name mean? A rough English translation is "The Church of St. Mary, in a hollow of white hazel, near to a rapid whirlpool and to St. Tysilio's Church and near to a red cave."

The ancient Welsh language looks somewhat terrifying in print, but its musical lilt is most attractive to listen to. The letter "w" is usually a vowel with an "oo" sound, while the "ll" is pronounced like "thl."

Llanfair P. G. is a small market-town on the island of Angiesey in North Wales and boasts of a population of almost a thousand. It is the first town reached on the main London-Holyhead railway after crossing Robert Stephenson's remarkable Britannia tubular bridge, built in 1846.

Strains To Sooth

Erudite Emerge Victors In Noise Vs. Music Battle

Sonorous strains of exciting sound filled the college's Little Theater last Tuesday afternoon as the twilight concert series resumed operation after nearly a semester's absence with the first half of a two-hour hearing of the Toscanini Omnibus album.

Conflicting interests of music lovers and the business office upstairs, when the series' appointed meeting time was during College Hour, resulted in a temporary discontinuance of the recorded concerts under the "baton" of Chuck Huntley, technical director of the Little Theater.

"Noise!" said the business office. "Music!" said the music lovers.

The lugubrious longhairs then went underground to begin plotting a comeback which would be harmonious to the sensibilities of both business and the Muse.

Chosen for its poetic as well as its practical value, the 5 to 6 Monday afternoon time will allow fugue fans leeway to turn up the volume with impunity, leaving the "noise" to reverberate through the empty upstairs offices.

Tuesday's program is Respighi's Pines And Fountains Of Rome, a brilliant, impressionistic tone poem orchestrated in the manner of Rimsky-Korsakov.

Before marriage a man declares he will be master of his own house or know the reason why. After marriage he knows the reason why.—Anon.

Red Brainwashing Methods Revolutionize Psychological Warfare, Point Up Problems

THE TAPE wound to a halt, leaving the emotions of the psychology class ranging from mild surprise to shock. An underlying emotion ran through many of the students—that of fear.

This was the scene in one of the classrooms here recently, as a tape recording by a Colonel in the Psychological Warfare Section of the Army was unveiled to a personal adjustment class. The tape dealt with the Communist brainwashing techniques employed in the Korean War.

Its primary mission in regard to this class was to point out common human emotions and how they affected the soldiers in the POW camps. Actually, the tape held untold value for numerous subjects, for this is not only a mental problem but a sociological and political one, too.

The Colonel mentioned some startling facts: "Korea was the only war in our history in which an American fighting man failed to escape from an enemy prison camp; the Communists never resorted to heavy barbed-wide entanglements in imprisoning our men —they imprisoned the mind, and once this was done it was an easy task to confine the body: grown men died of Marasmus (a mental sickness occurring in infants), but it was never heard of affecting men until Korea."

It is commonly known as "What the Hellism." The prisoner died, not of brutality or starvation, but of the lack of a will to live.

The Colonel blamed the success of the Communists on many factors, primarily the relative lack of the "buddy system," so important in the survival of prisoners in America's other conflicts. In Korea there were no organized escape movements, little sign of discipline among the POW's. There seemed to be no group loyalty.

In one case a sadist threw two dying men out of a prison hut because they were "smelling up the place." The two men died of over-exposure. Forty other prisoners watched the barbaric act, but not one of them attempted to intervene. The onlooking prisoners, upon repatriation, were asked why they didn't try to stop the sadist. The inevitable reply, "It was none of my business."

The techniques the Reds used weren't shocking—just clever and rather scientific. There were three basic steps, the first making informing a duty. The informing started over little things such as some one sharing Red Cross packages. Gradually, the reasons grew until no one knew whom to trust.

The POWs' mail was screened so only the "Dear John" letters and bills were allowed to reach their destinations. This helped crush the men's will to survive.

Anyone who showed the signs of becoming a leader was switched to another camp (the percentage of leaders was a mere 5 per cent of the total number of prisoners) where the Reds often felt that the potential leaders were beyond the hope of ever "embracing" Communism."

Next week: How can they get away with it?

THE Academy of Television Arts and Sciences will televise the annual Emmy Awards next Wednesday night, May 6.

Bob Hope will be on hand as well as talent from all over the world as a salute to TV's international growth.

A total of 42 awards is to be given out, almost double that of last year. At least this way it is unlikely that the show will run short, as the Oscarcast did. The Oscars not only ran short, but $22,000 in the red because of the cost of the unused time.

Of the Emmy nominations, this writer's choices are the following:

Best single program of the year: An Evening With Fred Astaire.

Best special dramatic program: Little Moon Of Alban, Playhouse 90.

Best single performance by an actress, Julie Harris in Little Moon Of Alban.

Best musical or variety special: An Evening With Fred Astaire (again?)

Best musical or variety series: Dinah Shore Show.

Best dramatic series of one hour or longer: Playhouse 90.

Best dramatic series of less than one hour: Alfred Hitchcock Presents.

Best panel, quiz, or audience participation series: I've Got A Secret.

Best comedy series: Bob Hope's specials, but Hope isn't even nominated, sorry to say.

Best public service series: The Twentieth Century.

Best Western series: Gunsmoke.

Best actor starring in a dramatic series: Raymond Burr, Perry Mason.

Best actor starring in a comedy series: Robert Young, Father Knows Best.

Best actress starring in a comedy series: Donna Reed/Jane Wyatt.

Best actor starring in a musical-variety series: Perry Como?

Best actress starring in a musical-variety series: Dinah Shore.

Best news commentator: Ed Murrow.

Four more shows to get the axe—Pete Kelly's Blues and The Jimmie Rodgers Show will not be renewed for next season and, consequently, both will fold by early, July. Philip Marlowe, a new private-eye show, replaces Naked City next season, and Oldsmobile Music Theater is to disappear as soon as a replacement is found.

Students Show Heroic Action In Fire Scare

Cool courage and a quick, sure manner of thinking which is often characteristic of student leaders came into play recently when four City College students returning from the student government regional conference in Modesto saved a restaurant and its patrons from the destructive ravages of fire.

This example of outstanding leadership ability was shown when Associated Student President Dick Cottrell, along with Ted Keller, Bruce Littmann and Mike Haskall stopped to eat at The Hungry Truck, a diner outside of Tracy, Calif., on Highway 50.

While they were waiting to be served, the waitress informed them that the kitchen stove was ablaze and the restaurant was on fire.

Quick action followed when Cottrell and Keller ran to secure additional fire extinguishers from nearby trucks while Littmann and Haskall assisted in evacuating other patrons who were present at the time.

When it was discovered that the roof was also on fire, the four set out to put the blaze under control, Cottrell breaking his glasses in the uproar.

After order had been restored, the four were rewarded with free meals, but it seems probable that they were more amply rewarded by their knowledge that they had once again done an outstanding job.

Burkhead Develops 7-Man Swim Squad Into Power-Packed Group; Schwarz, Hansen, Gayner Outstanding Mermen

By Vicky Aumann

Swimming has reappeared on the college sports agenda this semester after an absence of 17 years, and under the watchful and experienced eye of Coach Roy Burkhead, the seven-man squad has developed into quite a power-packed team.

Butterfly and breast stroke stylist of the team is tall, smiling 21-year-old Laurie Hansen. He first began swimming with the YMCA team in 1949 and five years later, while a junior at Lincoln High School, took third place in the All-City 100-yard butterfly. The next year he followed this up with two third places in 150-yard individual medley and the 100-yard butterfly.

Unperturbed at having to compete against teams with almost five times as many swimmers, the college mermen put up a remarkable performance in gaining one first, one second and three third places at the Big Eight Conference championships at Sacramento a few weeks ago.

Gayner churned his way to victory in the 100-yard backstroke and to a third place in the 200-yard backstroke. Sprinter Schwarz gained a second and a third in the 50 and 100-yard free style, respectively, and Hansen, a third and fourth in the 100 and 200-yard breast stroke.

The Thunderbirds, paced by spectacular Gary Heinrich, tallied 143 points, Stockton College 87, Sacramento 64, College of San Mateo 46 and City College 29.

Observers note tremendous team improvement on times, for during the last three meets, each member of the squad has consistently broken his own previous record.

Majoring in animal husbandry, Craig Schwarz is the sprint ace of the squad. As a five-year-old toddler, Schwarz first learned to swim in the Russian river, but did not enter his first competition until high school.

Despite the fact that he is less heavily built than most swimmers, he collected three individual first places and one second at the All-City meet in his junior year, and two individual first crowns in his last year at Washington High.

Backstroke star Gene Gayner seems to spend most of his time in or near some type of water. For the last six years he has been a lifeguard for the city of San Francisco and at the present time is working at Fleishhacker Pool. He enjoys cliff diving, skin diving and water swimming with the Dolphin club.

A photography major, 21-year-old Gayner first began competitive swimming while attending Lincoln High School where, during his sophomore year, he gained third place in the All-City 100-yard backstroke, the next year a second place and in his senior year the title itself.

Big-shouldered and powerfully built Bob Urrea is the second breast stroker on the team. Last year he qualified for the All-City backstroke title and Coach Burkhead has great hopes that he will develop into a mighty powerhouse.

Happy-go-lucky Rich Bruhns is the 220- and 440-yard free style specialist. Transferring to the University of California next semester, he is a letters and science major. He first began swimming with the YMCA and by the time he reached high school had developed a powerful style, which helped him gain the anchor position on the champion All-City relay team from 1955-57.

He also belongs to the Dolphin club and has taken part in the club's open water races across the Golden Gate and Raccoon Straits.

John Rosenberg, drama major who has just been appointed cheerleader for the fall semester, is the other 220 and 440 swimmer, and 17-year-old freshman Peter Panasik is a promising free styler.

Swimmers Churn For State Honors

In the All-Northern California swim championships at Watsonville last week, Gene Gayner, Laurie Hansen and Craig Schwarz competed for the right to compete in the State meet to be held in Santa Monica on May 7, 8 and 9. Only those swimmers who place third or better in the All-Northern California meet will be allowed to make the trip south.

Unperturbed at having to compete against teams with almost five times as many swimmers, the college mermen put up a remarkable performance in gaining one first, one second and three third places at the Big Eight Conference championships at Sacramento a few weeks ago.

Gayner churned his way to victory in the 100-yard backstroke and to a third place in the 200-yard backstroke. Sprinter Schwarz gained a second and a third in the 50 and 100-yard free style, respectively, and Hansen, a third and fourth in the 100 and 200-yard breast stroke.

Gammas, H&R, Miralomas Show Unblemished Records

By Nick Peters

Gamma Phi Ypsilon, the Hotel and Restaurant Society and the two Miraloma Club entries, still sporting unblemished records, hold first place in their respective leagues after one month of Associated Men Student intramural basketball competition.

The Gammas, going after their third straight Inter-Fraternity Council flag, belted Zeta Phi (1-3), 46-34, as 12-point efforts on the part of Rudy Vasquez and Mike Matson carried the defending champs to their fourth consecutive triumph.

Smith Hall's H&R five maintained its Club Activities Board leadership at 4-0 by virtue of a bye, but is being pressed by the strong-of-late Recreation Association (4-1), just a half game back after its 42-33 thumping of the Campus Police (2-2).

In Independent action both Miralomas remained tied for first at 3-0 after impressive victories. The "A's" soundly trounced Kekl-Kanes, which finished dead last in the loop at 0-4, by 65-33 as Will Gasper poured 22 digits through the cords. The "B's" had a harder time of it but still managed to keep up with their counterparts by subduing the Lucky-Fives (1-2), 53-45.

Alpha Phi Epsilon crushed Kappa Rho (1-3), 38-9, and Phi Beta Delta downed Lambda Phi (1-3), 34-26, keeping the two wingers deadlocked for second in the IFC at 3-1. Beta Tau (2-2) won the other frat-fray by whipping Beta Phi (0-4), 55-25.

Other CAB games found the International Relations Club (2-2) being awarded a "gift" win as Alpha Phi Omega (0-4) was forced to forfeit, and the Filipino Club (3-1) obliterating The Guardsman (0-5), 52-23, as Fred Reyes had his best game of the season with 19 markers.

MURAL CHATTER: The Independent loop terminated play last Thursday with the clash between the two MIRALOMA CLUB entries for first place billed as that league's top attraction. (Results were not available at press time.)

The month of inactivity between the Independent finale and the AMS PLAYOFFS ON MAY 18 AND 20 might prove to be the downfall of the stronger Independent loop, as teams from the CAB and IFC leagues will be getting that needed competition until it's time for the three crown-bearers to battle it out for all the marbles.

Scoring leaders: Ex-Ram track star WILL GASPER tops the Independent charitage in field goals (36), total points (80), best average (16.0), and the highest single game output (21). MIRALOMA "A" team's teammate CHRIS KRIKORIANTZ has the best free throw percentage (4-4 and 100 per cent). Lucky-five GERRY DEL SECCO has been most successful from the charity stripe with 11 for that lead.

Phi Beta Delta's ED O'DONNELL, with 13 points in his last outing, appears headed for a repeat as IFC point king by topping his opposition in fielders (24), total points (53) and best individual performance (20). Teammate DON MALONE is the one-point leader with 10 for 11 and 91 per cent. Beta Phi's STEVE WAHL, in only two games, has the best average with 14.5.

Top point-collector in the CAB is The Guardsman's NICK PETERS, who leads in field goals (34), total points (75) and highest game output (25) despite a sloppy eight digit effort in his last outing. Closing in with 67 markers in one less game, the Campus Police's CHUCK PRANDI has the best average with 13.8. SAM BATTISTONE of the H&R has the best free throw percentage (6-7 and 86 per cent), while the RA's AL WHITE has made the most chuckles (13).

Because of midterms no games will be played during the week of April 27-May 4.

Reid Smashes Discus Standard With 163-3 Toss As Tracksters Obliterate Bear Cubs, Panthers

By Jim Payne

Led by Mike Reid's record heave in the discus, the college's track and field forces crushed host Sacramento and Santa Rosa in the final conference meet of the season last Friday.

The triangular score was CCSF 83½, Sacramento 38, and Santa Rosa 30½.

Reid's thrust of 163-3, best in the state by a two-year competitor, was exactly 10 feet further than his effort of last week and clipped Mike Lewis' old mark of 158-8¾. The husky six-footer also won the shot-put with a shove of 47-1¼.

John Smith zipped the 100 in 9.8, a seasonal best for him. Ellis Jenkins was second in 9.9 with his brother Alex third in 10.0. Smith was clocked in 21.5 in the 220 but was nipped by Sacramento's Don Ramos in 21.3.

A lifetime best was recorded by Jerry Bell when he stepped over the high hurdles in 14.7. He also picked up second place points in the lows.

Ralph Mathis won the high jump at six feet with George Fields and Jesse Sirles placing second and third, respectively, to complete a San Francisco sweep in that event. Sirles won the pole vault at 12 feet with Mathis second.

The dual meet score showed the Rams emerging victorious in both contests—smashing Sacramento 86-26 and Santa Rosa 86-20.

These victories gave the college's cindermen a 6-1 league record and second place in the final Big Eight standings. Their only defeat came at the hands of the powerful T-Birds, who won the first round-robin championship in the history of Oakland City College with a perfect 7-0 record.

This Saturday most of the two-year colleges in the area will venture to Santa Rosa for the annual Northern California JC Relays. All events are relays with the exception of the 100-yard dash and the 120-yard high hurdles.

In the 100 the outstanding individual will be Oakland's Overton Williams whose 9.5 clocking last week against Modesto and San Mateo ties the best time for a two-year century man this year. Smith will be the college's choice as only one entry is allowed per college.

The San Francisco 440-yard relay team of E. Jenkins, A. Jenkins, Ed Tank and Smith will be trying to reverse the defeat handed them by the Oakland quartet of Len Noles, Bob Grissom, William Webster and Williams a month ago in the Big Eight Conference Relays.

Postponement Of Baseball Clashes Delays Title Bid

Still held over the proverbial "Valley of Death" by a weakening thread, Lee Elsau's Ram baseball forces will have to wait another week before determining whether they are still in the running for the Big Eight diamond crown, as the entire circuit was rained out last weekend.

Now sporting a 4-4 record, two games behind the loop leading Sacramento Panthers; the margin might well have been cut decisively by way of twin dumpings of Contra Costa by the Rams and at least one upset of Sacramento by Oakland in two of the proposed double-headers which were washed out.

In view of the postponements, it is still undermined whether the Rams will face the Panthers in their regularly scheduled twin-bill this Saturday at Balboa Park, or if the entire loop will be pushed back one week, sending them to Contra Costa.

In either event, there appears to be little doubt but that the Rams will be either "in" or "out" at the conclusion of Saturday's tilts.

Record Breaker

WITH A HEAVE of 163-3 in the Sacramento-Santa Rosa triangular meet last Friday, Mike Reid, star Ram weight man, broke the college discus record.

Recreation Association Attends Coed Field Day

Rounding out a full slate of activity, the Recreation Association participated in a field day last Saturday at Montgerey Peninsula College, at which several other two-year colleges were represented.

Bunny Tollefsen, RA president, confirmed that there were approximately 25 students from the college who teamed up to form volleyball, archery, bowling, badminton and tennis teams.

On May 2, the women RA members will take part in the All-Junior College field day, according to Miss Tollefsen. Sports to be played include archery, badminton, fencing, modern dance, softball, tennis and volleyball.

Ramblings

By Nick Peters

SPORTS of lesser significance and their participants seldom find the spotlight in The Guardsman or even in the daily publications; however, when these teams and/or their players record top-caliber performances it's only cricket to award them praise and recognition.

Such is the case of the college's volleyball entry in the Far West championships held at Alameda on April 17. The team, coached by "Tester" Tom Nesbitt, is comprised of seven men who have had previous net experience with the Embarcadero YMCA or the Olympic Club.

In defeating the University of California, UCLA and San Jose State in three rounds of competition the Rams were named Far Western champs and in a gentlemanly gesture Nesbitt presented the winners' trophy to Associated Student President Dick Cottrell last week.

Team members Bill Fuller, Mel Makaini, Dave Dung, Captain Mel Hewett, Lewis Robertson, Ed Mahiko and Rudy Buffin, who was a potent stieker for Ram baseball teams in the mid-Forties, as a result of their victory were eligible for the AAU National Championships at Des Moines, Iowa, next month, but will not participate for financial reasons.

Finance Chairman Ben Northrup also did himself proud by having himself a Roman holiday (Greco-Roman, that is) at the National AAU wrestling championships at Stillwater, Oklahoma.

Biz Ben, representing the Olympic Club, blarmed his opposition with a first place in Greco-Roman competition and also ticked off a fifth in free style wrestling to become eligible for this summer's Pan American games.

T-Birds Drop Golfers

In an evenly matched contest, the Ram golf squad dropped a 9½-5½ decision to the Oakland T-Birds. This was their third loss in five matches.

John Carlin, rated as the top Ram linksman for this contest, shot in the upper 70's.

"Both teams played their best," Coach Grover Klemmer said, "and they were well matched, as they each broke 80."

Botsford, Bracken Main Hopes In Championship Tennis Matches Friday

Coach Roy Diederichsen's netmen travel to Sacramento this Friday for the Big Eight Conference championships.

The top eight players in singles competition and the top eight doubles teams will represent the conference in the state sectionals next week.

Main hopes for the Rams lie with Fred Botsford and Jack Bracken in the singles, and the team of Botsford-Bracken in the doubles. The favorite for the singles crown will be Jim McManus of Oakland City College, while McManus and Ken Stanley, also of Oakland, are top seeded in the doubles division.

During loop action the Rams finished third behind the powerful Thunderbirds and strong Modesto. In the Oakland match the Rams were defeated 6-1 on April 17. Botsford extended T-Bird ace McManus to three sets before dropping the featured match, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4.

In number two singles Stanley defeated Bracken in straight sets, 6-1, 6-0. In the number three singles match Russ Wickwire defeated the college's Larry Draper in the best match of the day, 7-5, 5-7, 7-5.

Hank Scoble saved the Rams from a shutout by downing Joe Bencke in three sets, 8-10, 10-8, 6-0. In the doubles matches McManus-Stanley won over Botsford-Bracken in straight sets 6-3, 7-5.

The black mamba, the fastest known snake, can reach a maximum speed of nearly seven miles per hour.

Ed-Bus Day Slated Here Tomorrow

College Observes Schools Week

By Dick Dyer

Education - Business Day and open house, to which all parents and friends of students are invited, will mark the college's observation of Public Schools Week.

Tomorrow's ninth annual Education-Business Day is one-half of a reciprocal agreement between the school department and industries of the Bay Area. On one day in the fall semester, educators visit various industries in the area and observe how they function. In turn, between 60 and 70 industry leaders will come to the college tomorrow to be oriented and conducted on a campus tour of the educational facilities.

The program begins at 8:45 a.m with coffee and refreshments in the faculty dining room. At 9:30 a.m., Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will preside at a general meeting in which the topic Your College will be discussed.

Participating in the discussion are Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator, division of educational management; Alfred Tapson, president of the Faculty Association; Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction; John J. Brady, co-ordinator of student welfare, and Ferd Marwedel of the Associated Students.

At 10:30 a.m., the businessmen will be taken on a tour of the campus, at which time they are to observe the facilities and become familiar with the aims, purposes, and problems of the two-year college. The visitors are also to be taken on a guided tour of the different departments of the college to observe the classes in progress. Among those serving as guides are

Joseph A. Amori, director of placement; Thomas Nesbitt, director of testing and research, and Louis Batmale and Edward E. Sandys, deans of instruction.

The day's program will be concluded with a luncheon at 12:15 p.m. in the faculty dining room, where Dr. Harold Spears, superintendent of public schools, is to speak on the Improvement Of Instruction In Our Schools.

Dr. Conlan stated that the purpose of Education-Business Day is to acquaint business leaders with the operation of the school system in the community and to form a mutually beneficial relationship between future employees and employers.

He also added that guides and department representatives are invited to join with the guests for coffee at 8:45 a.m. Department representatives who have classes at 9 o'clock are expected to invite a member of the department to attend the coffee hour.

All students, parents and interested persons are welcome to open-house days this week at the college. This is the 40th year in which Public Schools Week, an annual event, opens the classroom doors of all public schools in the city to any interested person.

Orientation To Precede Program

Orientation will be the first item on the program for the 60 San Francisco businessmen who have been invited to visit the college on Education - Business Day, scheduled tomorrow to mark the college's observance of Public Schools Week, according to Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college.

Following orientation, these leaders of industry will be guided on a tour of the educational facilities in which a few students will participate.

Education-Business Day will give both the students and faculty an opportunity to explain the college's program and will be the only means of its formal observation by the businessmen of San Francisco.

Dr. Conlan also announced that the date for Prep Day has been set for next Wednesday, May 6.

Future leaders from all the San Francisco high schools and their principals will visit the college for an orientation meeting that will familiarize the students with the college's program and method of teaching.

The guest speaker will be Pat Moran, a feature writer on The San Francisco Examiner, and former Guardsman staff member.

Among the day's activities will be a tour of the campus with the visiting students looking in on the classes of their choice.

AMS Pushes Plans For May 26 Smoker

A small committee has been organized to initiate a crowd-attracting scheme for the semi-annual Father and Son Night boxing tourney, according to Ted Keller, president of the Associated Men Students.

Working on the three-man committee are Mike Gibbons, Tony Bartman, and Keller. The event is scheduled for May 26, and the small nucleus is planning additions to its regularly scheduled lightweight-heavyweight fights.

"We are planning to get some of the biggest names on the coast among referees, boxers, and masters-of-ceremony, to take charge of the event," Keller commented.

International Relations Club Will Host Model UN May 9

By Bob Pacini

Delegates from more thar 20 other two-year colleges will gather here on Saturday, May 9, to attend a model United Nations under the sponsorship of the college's International Relations Club.

President of the IRC, Mario Gutierrez, acting as Secretary-General, will deliver the welcoming speech to the group. Following the opening remarks, Gutierrez will also present a brief background of the United Nations and its organization.

"Why we should change the UN" is the theme of the meeting, and Gutierrez will introduce the idea of creating a supra-national body from the UN and how such a group would be chosen from among the member nations of the international organization.

Four speakers will deliver addresses, giving background material in the fields chosen to be included within the jurisdiction of the supra-national body. These areas would include international trade, human rights, military police forces and determination of political borders.

After the four lectures, designed to give a broad understanding of the general topics, the delegates from the various colleges will retire to committee groups, each devoted to one of the fields and there discuss the particular problems involved in such an undertaking. A chairman from each committee will be chosen by the delegates.

Deadeyed Pair Emerge Victors In Pistol Meet

Two campus policemen captured three medals at pistol matches held recently at Sacramento State College, and the force is now awaiting final team results of the matches, according to Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor here.

Richard Gambie, chief of the Campus Police, took second place in the National 45 match, while Jim Olsen won second place in the National 38 match and third place in the aggregate class, which is the total of all his shooting scores.

Nine men were sworn into the force yesterday by Thomas Cahill, chief of the San Francisco police department, at the Hall of Justice. The names and badge numbers of the men are George Carroll 6997, John Kennedy 6677, Gino Micheli 6588, Laurence Miles 6660, Warren Mitchell 7037, Martin Novitski 6056, Anthony Oliva 6658, James Sirois 6147 and Richard Wernecke 5855.

Two marksman teams and one sharpshooter team will be entered in the Oakland pistol matches scheduled for this coming Sunday, May 3.

Members of the college's force are planning a visit to the law enforcement agencies in Marin County next Tuesday, May 5, and then they will proceed to Marin Town and Country Club in Fairfax for a picnic.

Two groups, the Campus Police group and the civilian group, will compete in the inter-class pistol match which is to be held on Monday, May 11, at the Colma Police Range.

Services of the force have also been requested to police the Spring Festival at the Cow Palace with Gambie in charge.

Barbary Coast Revived For May 15 Spring Fair

Centering the motif around the Barbary Coast of old San Francisco, the annual Spring Festival, sponsored this year by the Club Activities Board, will open officially May 15 at 6 p.m. with a parade of floats and accompanying cars beginning at the college and arriving at the Cow Palace approximately one hour later.

Among the many festivities taking place at the Cow Palace will be dancing to the music of the college's dance band, booths devised and decorated by various on-campus clubs and organizations, and one or two "surprise" events, according to George Hucks, Spring Festival chairman.

Trophies will be awarded for the best poster, parade float, costume and booth. No money will be used inside the main entrance. Instead, patrons will purchase 10 cent tickets.

On-Campus Clubs Plan Dance, Fair, Sports Activities

By Pat Perkins

ACTIVITIES galore seem to be keeping the various on-campus clubs very busy this spring.

A special "thank-you" message was issued by the Hotel and Restaurant department and Associated Women Students to the pledges of the various sororities for bringing in so many cans of food for the children of Canon Kip Community House. All of the canned goods that came in were greatly appreciated and these organizations are grateful to everyone who contributed.

Phi Beta Delta fraternity proudly accepted the position of first place in the IFC basketball league recently. The pledges for this semester are Herb Lundburg, Lane Chrisman, Ed Smith and Doug Walt, pledge captain.

Making plans for the May Festival are the members of Gamma Kappa Beta sorority. The sisters are now starting to design the float they will use for the festival.

A student bus will be sent to the Northern California Junior College Relays at Santa Rosa this Saturday, May 2. Students interested in attending the relays can check with the Rally Committee for accommodations. Bus tickets are 50 cents with Associated Student card and $1 without.

10 Represent College At State Dental Meet

Ten women from the college's dental assisting program presented a series of group and individual clinics at the California State Dental meeting held last week in the Cirque Room of the Fairmont Hotel.

Representing the college were Leola Brown in Set-Ups, Diane Christoffersen and Maiene Bohn in Telephone Technique, Barbara Conti in Recall Systems, Barbara Crawford in Study Models, Doris Menconi in Cleanliness, Josephine Gambini in Darkroom Procedure, Zena Kobernick in Orthodontics, Linda Rogers in Hi-Speed, Marjorie Swatman in Opportunities, and Mae Wong in Toothbrush Techniques.

Observation

Courtesy Bug Fails To Bite Demon Drivers

By William Forshay

INEXTRICABLY related to the "American way of life" is the possession and mastery of an overchromed, overpowered, overemphasized, mechanical monstrosity and rolling deathtrap known as an automobile.

The "wheels of industry" are bound forever (to hear the big-wheels tell it) to the wheels on the highways. The tie-in includes steel, oil, crime, all-girl orchestras and traveling salesmen.

AUTO USE CHANGING

In addition, this four-eyed family "scenicruiser" has taken over the functions of the home in the kitchen, dining room, bedroom and (as seen in the last auto show) the barroom.

All ages are infected with the gobugitis and even the youth of the nation are hoodwinked into acceptance of a car as a prestige symbol. High school students view a "hot-rod" as a sign of juvenile class distinction, sophistication, dateability and (poor grades?) desirability. This holds true particularly for high school girls whose romantic ideals involve a teenage Rock Hudson smelling of oil, drive-in movies, hot dogs and automotive "togetherness."

THE "REAL" PROBLEM

However, it is not the many uses the automobile has assumed in present day living nor is it the staggering total of accidents that helps keep the population below a Malthusian density that raises the real question of the "cult of ownership" and the "next year's will be even better" gimmick.

The problem is the growing lack of courtesy between those with cars and those without.

Little courteous actions such as signalling, which are not often done, indicate the antipathetic feeling of drivers for other drivers and prompted one comedian to make the remark on women drivers, to-wit, "There are only three reasons that a woman signals a left turn: she's turning right, pointing at something, or drying her nails."

POCKETA-POCKETA MITTY

Males, both juvenile and senior, no sooner sit down in the family sedan than their imagination transforms the sedate old buggy into a streamlined Mercedes/Romeo Porsche/wagon and suddenly they're in the last man-killing lap at Le Mans with a chance to win and who's the idiot who thinks he can pass such a bomb? Invariably the sound of a friendly siren trying to stop another would-be racing driver from killing somebody (police don't care about the driver anymore, only the innocents) only angers the speed-happy highway addict.

Still, the sound of the siren draws forth curses and various maledictions and he thinks they're discourteous when they call him sir and politely inform him that he has been exceeding the speed limit. Then he really explodes when they present him with a pass to visit Judge Doom and he's not yet had a chance to meet or with whom he may renew an old acquaintanceship.

HIGHWAY RUSSIAN ROULETTE

Pedestrian little boys who play a beginner's form of Russian Roulette trying to cross city streets are in this same "lacking in courtesy" category but woe betide the hapless driver who happens to nudge one of these ball-chasing or car-dodging little angels. A lynch mob would seem more friendly than the faces that suddenly loom out of every door and window to glare accusingly at the new Frankenstein who uses an auto to beat little children.

Nor is the usually courteous cop with five kids especially nice in tone when he says "allrightyou, how dit happen, wheresyalicense, how muchayahad tadrink?"

It seems a prerequisite that a mechanical civilization must drop many of the attributes that make a success of a more primitive rural society. It is a pity that it chooses to drop the primary virtue which made it a civilization in the first place; i.e., the courteous mode of address, thought and manner.

The population of China, according to the 1953 census, is 590,194,715.

The density of population in China is 150.9 per square mile.

The population density of Japan is 630.4 per square mile.

Dual Roles As Actors, Producers Assumed By Rose, Brygmann In 'Wind' Courtroom Trial Scenes

By Alex Sokoloff

An exacting and difficult task must be handled by John Rose and Larry Brygmann, producers of the Little Theater's next attraction, Inherit The Wind, according to Michael Griffin, drama director.

As producers, Rose and Brygmann have to coordinate all the non-directional moves involved in staging a play. Under their management will fall the problems concerning the acquiring and handling of decor, settings, costumes, scripts, furniture and even a monkey and organ.

Griffin explained that in the past producers for the Little Theater's presentations have not always been able to surmount the inevitable problems involved in the staging of a play. That is the main reason for having two producers for Inherit The Wind.

A highly successful producer was Dean Cyr, a student at the college a few years ago. "Cyr," Griffin said, "could get us such items as Oriental rugs, period furniture, and genuine paintings by the masters."

Aside from their jobs as producers, Rose and Brygmann have been assigned leading roles for Inherit The Wind. The play is based on a famous trial of 1925.

Brygmann plays Mathew Harrison Brady, head of the prosecution against Bertram Cates, a schoolteacher. In the play Brady is hailed as a champion of right and justice by the community of Hillsboro, where the trial takes place. The role demands that he appear as a great orator and a deeply religious man.

Rose has the task of portraying Henry Drummond, a celebrated lawyer of that time. Drummond is the man chosen to defend Cates, who is on trial for teaching Darwin's theories on evolution in classrooms. The lawyer's great skill and courtroom tactics free Cates in the end.

Drummond's double in actual life was Clarence Darrow, the famed criminal lawyer. One of Darrow's well-known cases has recently been made into the movie, Compulsion, with Orson Welles as Darrow.

JORDY COONEY, veteran of many Little Theater productions, will take the role of the Mayor in Inherit The Wind.

"Both roles," Griffin said, "are powerful and heavy ones." Since the play is to be presented in the arena style, the audience will be considered as being in the courtroom itself.

During the performance actors sitting in the audience will be called on stage to act as jurors in the proceedings. The play's action is divided into street and courtroom scenes where Brady and Drummond deliver their famous orations.

Prep Day Program Attracts Thirty-Five Student Leaders From SF Secondary Schools

Thirty-five student leaders representing the seven public high schools in San Francisco will arrive here today at 9 a.m. to participate in the Prep Day program, according to Roberta Kennedy, Associated Student vice-president who is in charge of the Prep Day proceedings.

Miss Kennedy commented that since the acquiring of a college education is becoming increasingly more important, the two-year colleges are taking a greater role in carrying the burden of an overpopulated college situation. She stressed the fact that this college, besides having an excellent faculty, is meeting the challenge of more students by expanding its facilities to accommodate 7200 students in the near future.

PATTY MORAN, a former student of the college, will be featured speaker at the Prep Day luncheon here today.

Former Guardsman Managing Editor Patty Moran, who is now a feature writer for The San Francisco Examiner, will be featured speaker at the Prep Day luncheon and will aid the college's student leaders in acquainting the visitors with this campus.

The program will start after the group's arrival at 9 a.m. with registration and refreshments served by delegates of the college. At 9:30, an orientation and a short introductory talk will be given by the college's president, Louis G. Conlan.

At 9:45, the group will be photographed by members of the college's photography department, after which the group will be conducted around the campus by Miss Kennedy, Joan Lloyd, Bud Andress, Deanne Gutierrez and Helene Fast.

The group will visit various classrooms on the campus from 11 a.m. to 12 noon, after which luncheon will be served in the faculty dining room.

Prep Day at the college is an annual event, dating back to the Spring semester of 1954. Aside from Miss Moran, former members of The Guardsman staff who have returned to the convention as successful newspaper personnel include Bob Rezak in 1954 and Ken Molino in 1956.

May 15 Deadline For AS Petitions

Petitions from all students intending to run for election to Associated Student offices must be filed with Election Commissioner Pete Pedrotti, Sr., before midnight, May 15.

Six major positions and 14 seats on the Student Council will be filled by election on May 25 and 26. The key positions are those of AS President, AS Vice-President, Associated Men Student President, Associated Women Student President, and Freshman and Sophomore Class Presidents.

Petitions may be obtained from the offices of the dean of student activities, S-148, and dean of women, S-150.

Candidates must have at least a 2.0 grade average, and have their petitions signed by 15 AS card holders who belong to the party the student wishes to represent.

In addition, candidates for the AS presidential and AS vice-presidential offices must have completed 45 but not more than 60 units, with AMS, AWS and Sophomore Class presidential aspirants having completed 30 to 60 units, and Freshman Class presidential hopefuls 15 to 30 units. Seven freshman members of council must have 12 to 30 units, and sophomore members 30 to 60 units.

Choir, Men's Glee Attend UC Festival

Having successfully participated in the annual Junior College Choir Festival at the Hearst Memorial Auditorium on the University of California campus last Monday, the college's A Cappella Choir and the Men's Glee Club will give a College Hour concert May 22 in the library, according to Robert Morton, music department instructor and director of the college's singing groups.

Participating in the UC event were 15 two-year colleges from the Northern California area.

Presented for the first time before an audience was a cycle of six songs entitled The Redeemer.

Outdoor Rally Climaxes Blood Drive During Friday Double College Hour

An outdoor rally west of Cloud Hall during Friday's double College Hour will climax the blood drive being held at the college tomorrow and Friday, according to Dick Hinkle, chairman of the drive.

All 10 o'clock classes will be cancelled to make the double College Hour possible, administrative officials announced.

Refreshments and entertainment will be provided during College Hour, and trophies will be awarded to the fraternity, sorority or club which donates the most blood.

Heading the list of entertainers at the rally will be the Virgil Gonzalves sextet from Fack's, the Sonny Rollins quintet from the Jazz Workshop, the Dick Crest orchestra, Barbara Norris from the Purple Onion, Frank D'one from the hungry i and Shelly Robbins also from the hungry i.

The blood drive, which will be supervised by technicians from the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, serves to increase the college's account at the bank. Prospective donors may report to drive headquarters in C-249.

Hinkle urged all students and college personnel to donate, adding that those under the age of 21 must present written parental permission if they wish to donate. Anyone who gives a minimum of one pint may withdraw an unlimited amount from the bank in case of an emergency for himself or a member of his immediate family.

The college is the only California educational institution allowed two days for its blood drive. The added day is a result of last year's drive here, in which the number of pints donated exceeded that of any other California college.

In a ceremony at City Hall last week, Mayor George Christopher issued a resolution proclaiming that the city of San Francisco recognizes May 7 and 8 as "City College Blood Drive Days."

Cottrell's Resignation Shocks Student Council; Muller Wins Post In Heated Voting Session

By Roy Twitty

Stunning the Student Council with his resignation, Dick Cottrell stepped down from the office of Associated Student president last week, thus triggering off a heated voting session in which Fred Muller was chosen as Cottrell's successor.

Reading his letter of resignation (text is at right) to the council during last Tuesday's meeting, Cottrell relinquished his post as AS head and handed his gavel over to Roberta Kennedy the following meeting.

Although she is next in line for the presidency, Miss Kennedy, present AS vice-president, stated that she is "going against the constitution and will not move into the position (AS President)." This move would have caused the shifting of five AS officer positions and Miss Kennedy feels that she will be more valuable to the AS as vice-president.

Nominations for the position of AS president were then opened by Miss Kennedy, who acted as chairman during the election. The chair had decided to allow the President's Cabinet equal power in nominating and voting for candidates. (Council voted not to reveal voting statistics.)

Three members of the President's Cabinet were nominated as candidates for the presidential post and then nominations were closed. Muller, state information chairman, was named by Bob Tiedeman, sophomore councilman; Ben Northrup, finance chairman, was nominated by Bill Ecker, frosh councilman, and Ted Keller, AMS president, was nominated by Bruce Littman, council parliamentarian.

Challenging the right of Northrup to be considered for the post of president of the AS this semester, Bill Forshay, campus affairs co-ordinator, stated that such a position would give the candidate an unfair advantage when running for the same office next semester.

Insisting that the council must show impartiality, Forshay added that it would not be good for the future of the AS to give one candidate an unprecedented advantage that could be used in a future political campaign.

Countering Forshay's charges, Northrup made reference to the nation's president, who is allowed by the constitution to serve two terms in succession. He added that he is very politically minded and plans to go into politics some day.

Supporting Northrup, Bud Andress, Club Activities Board president, stated that no one would have the upper hand in next semester's election by being chosen to fill the position of president now.

Muller, announcing his qualifications to hold the office of AS president, stated that he ran against Cottrell for the top position this semester, as did Northrup. Finishing his semester-long task as state information chairman, Muller supervised the completion of the junior college directory booklet last week.

Cottrell Letter Offers Fullest Cooperation

Associated Student President Dick Cottrell was obviously moved when he read his letter of resignation to the Student Council last week. The text follows:

"Believe me, this is one of the greatest decisions of my life, as you, my fellow officers, have given me the greatest honor by electing me to office and working with me so well as a team. You are the greatest.

"At this time, for many reasons but mainly two, I must resign; the first is because of failing below the accepted grade point average of an officer of this college, and the second is because of several financial obligations of my own that must be taken care of immediately. You, as well as I, know that we are here primarily for an education, and I have not filled this obligation properly.

"Therefore, to you, I offer my resignation from the office of Associated Student President on this date, April 28, 1959.

"I will attend to the present business at hand, specifically Education-Business Day this coming Thursday, before I completely drop from the Associated Student President's office.

"To the one who will succeed me, I offer my fullest co-operation."

IRC Sponsors UN On Model Scale Here Saturday

By Bob Pacini

Acting as host to delegates from nine other two-year colleges, the International Relations Club will hold its model United Nations here this Saturday.

In releasing information on the final plans for the meeting, Mario Gutierrez, president of the IRC, also announced that the model UN would not be held in the library of Cloud Hall as originally planned, but will instead take place in Smith Hall.

The proceedings will be open to the general public.

Of the 20 two-year colleges asked to send delegates to the session, Gutierrez said that only nine have accepted the invitation. Fifty-six delegates scheduled to attend the meeting will be representing colleges from Contra Costa, San Jose, Diablo Valley and Stockton, among others.

The morning session will be devoted to registration of the delegates, at which time they will be served coffee and doughnuts. Following this the election of a president of the general assembly will be held. Those colleges attending have been asked to send the name of a candidate for this position in advance of the meeting.

Robert C. Johnson, political science instructor here, will deliver a welcoming address and later in the meeting will present a brief lecture on the background of the United Nations and its organization.

Johnson will also introduce the main topic of the meeting, how a supra-national body of the UN could be created from the present members of the international organization.

Three other guest speakers besides Johnson will give talks on the four areas that would come under the jurisdiction of such a supra-national body. These areas are international trade, human rights, military police forces and the determining of political borders.

At the conclusion of these lectures, designed to give each delegate a more thorough understanding of the problems involved in the creation of a supra-national UN organization, delegates will retire to committees devoted to each of the four main topics.

During the afternoon recess, refreshments will be served by Hotel and Restaurant students.

Editorial: Teaching Implies Two-Way Obligation

FREQUENT USE is made of the words "obligation" and "duty" in the halls and classrooms of colleges and universities.

Probably the most familiar meaning implied by these words is that, which pertains to the students' obligations and duties to their instructors. Much is said of how arriving in class punctually, paying complete attention to lectures, asking only pertinent questions and remaining in one's seat until the lecture is terminated, are various courtesies a student is obliged to pay his instructor.

Comparatively little, however, is said of the instructors' obligations to their students.

Perhaps the wide latitude extended to junior and senior college instructors in their choice and presentation of subject matter has led some students to accept categorically all methods of instruction. In the midst of the many divergent approaches offered by instructors, it often appears to the student that no standard methods exist on the college level. He may begin to feel that each individual instructor's idiosyncrasies must necessarily be condoned because "this is a college and the instructors must have freedom in conducting their classes.".

In such a case, when no tangible standards can be produced to govern instructors' activities, certain time-honored and commonly accepted unwritten rules can easily be brought to the fore to insure that the students' best interests are served. These "rules" are, in essence, the deferential and respectful treatment students have come to except from instructors through the years, an accepted premise on which the wheels of education have functioned harmoniously. The absence of this treatment usually indicates a violation by instructors of the courtesies students have a right to expect in classrooms.

What are some of these obligations?

(1) An instructor should assume that students are enrolled in a particular course to learn the material that course purports to offer, as set forth in the college's bulletin. He should then endeavor to make his lectures the means to that end by giving students a completely comprehensible treatment of the subject matter.

A flagrant violation of this principle is committed by the instructor who instead assumes that most college students have a background in a certain subject and directs his lectures to them, while the other students spend the semester trying to understand what he is talking about.

Most educators would like to assume that a high school graduate can write an intelligible composition, but when they encounter one who can't, they certainly shouldn't take the attitude that "he should be able to write one."

Such assumptions are erroneous and impractical, and often lead to confusion and disappointment on the part of students.

(2) An instructor should be able to discipline himself and his students in order to make a course function smoothly and to give his students the amount of instruction they deserve.

In this category, violators are numerous enough to form a line from this college to the nearest high school.

An instructor should be thoroughly familiar with the subject matter of each of his courses, and should plan an approximate schedule of lectures to insure that he gives adequate attention to each phase of the course. An example of one who fails in this regard is the history instructor who rushes through the Renaissance and Reformation in the final week, showing that he has not kept pace with the course schedule during the semester and is denying his students the lecture material they should be able to expect.

Self-discipline and student-discipline are sometimes both lacking in such a case. Quite often an instructor cannot draw the line between pertinent and excessive questions and finds the pattern of the course being set by the students' will. When he succumbs to such impertinent questions he is wasting class time that could otherwise be devoted to more relevant matters.

Among the other obligations of an instructor to his students, which would be elaborated on if space permitted, are: to give a meaningful answer to every question asked, to warn students of their attendance discrepancies, and to begin his lectures punctually.

An instructor who shows as much respect for his students as he expects to receive from them, is adhering to principles of student-faculty relations that will go a long way toward enhancing the overall quality of our education.

Shots At Random

By Jim Clifford

(Editor's Note: The basis for information used in this article concerning the Communist brainwashing techniques employed in Korea is a tape recording by a Colonel in the Army's Psychological Warfare Section. The tape was recently played before a psychology class here.)

* * *

FEW of the American prisoners who were brainwashed in Korea were actually mentally subjugated to the point that they embraced Communism and turned their backs on the US. This wasn't the factor that really worried the military and the State Department.

What did bother the State Department was the number of prisoners who co-operated by signing documents against "the capitalistic war-mongers," germ-warfare verification slips, etc. Most of the men who signed these felt that no right-thinking, intelligent American would believe this "stuff." But what of the millions and millions of people, in Communist countries and countries on the verge of swinging toward the Kremlin, who didn't know these documents were "bunk"?

The military was shaken by the small number of Chinese Reds used to guard American prisoners. The US employed two regimental combat teams in keeping Communist POWs under guard. Why were the Communists so successful in mentally emasculating our men?

One reason was the disorganized manner in which the POWs conducted themselves. Discipline was at a premium. The Colonel felt that this lack of discipline was not entirely the military's fault, for it's difficult to teach a man strict military discipline in nine weeks of basic training. True discipline is the individual's self-control, and this true order can't come from an outside source but rather from within the individual. True discipline is taught in the home.

By the time a man is 18, his character is pretty well molded. It would be hard for a sergeant to teach in a few weeks what a recruit's parents and environment couldn't do in 18 years. The only hope that the sergeant has is the gaining of the recruit's interest and co-operation.

This is probably why the Reds met with less success in dealing with US Marines. The Marines learned true discipline in boot camp because they knew what they were getting themselves into; they accepted every bit of the hard training because they realized it was necessary in approaching their desired end—becoming Leathernecks. This is in direct contrast to the average soldier, who was a draftee with one basic object in mind—to return to civilian life as quickly and painlessly as possible.

The old song goes, "I didn't raise my boy to be a soldier," which seems to be in line with the traditional American philosophy in regard to the military. However, Kipling's "Tommy" is probably a truer picture of the position of the soldier in our society. Tommy, the British equivalent of our "Dogface," is kicked from pillar to post in peacetime England, but "he's the saviour of his country when the guns begin to shoot."

The men in Korea, however, never received the pat on the back Tommy did when he headed for the battlefield. They didn't go to war, they fought a "Police Action." The GI query to this euphemism was, "If this is a Police Action, why don't they send Cops?"

No bands played for the Korean GI; no pretty movie stars kissed everyone who bought a bond. Few soldiers and sailors were treated to free drinks. In fact, Korea seemed to be a fracas no one wanted and no one cared about. But still, men were dying in this fracas.

Here is where the political problem enters—how can you fight a Cold War with Hot War patriotism without the general public yelling, "Saber Rattler." We seem to be a defending champ with the USSR as the challenger. Yet, every day our patriotic muscles tend to grow more flabby.

It's a sociological problem because, as a nation, we are tending to become more complacent, frustrated and insecure. As David Reisman clarified in The Lonely Crowd, we aren't sure what we are trying to do, and we are not sure what we stand for.

The words of George Santayana, in his essay Cissie Liberty, seems apropos—"Any day it may come over us again that our modern liberty to drift in the dark is the most terrible negation of freedom."

US Discipline Lag Crux Of Red Success

Foresight

MEANINGLESS is the word which should be applied to the presentation of the 11th annual Emmy Awards, to be seen tonight from 10 to 11:30 p.m. on Channel 4.

Why? Simple. The Emmy contenders are nominated from some 8000 eligible shows which have been telecast from the period January 1, 1958, to February 28, 1959. Most members of the Academy cannot possibly have seen every show nominated, since the programs are rarely re-run between nomination time and voting week. Consequently, a vast majority of members vote only for shows they have seen or for a program they haven't seen merely because their friends have told them it was great.

Voting for the Oscar Awards, on the other hand, is more carefully done because of the fact that there are far fewer films involved and Academy members have an opportunity to see all nominated motion pictures before voting.

Nevertheless, even if the Emmy voting is largely incompetent, unqualified, and often based on hearsay, Harry Aekerman, national president of the Academy, promises 90 minutes of entertainment and a carload of 50 or more celebrities. According to Aekerman, "This year we will not try to make all 42 presentations on the air but only those which lend themselves to the maximum entertainment value."

The program itself will originate live from Hollywood, New York City and Washington, D.C. For comedy in an international vein, film clips of American shows will be shown with dubbed in German, Spanish and Italian dialogue, including Broderick Crawford's Highway Patrol in Japanese.

* * *

LAUGHING AT LIFE—Mort Sahl: "Whenever I drop in to watch a rehearsal of the new funny shows left, the comics usually remind me of how difficult it is to be funny on television. And then they go on the air and prove it."

Quiet, Please! Genius At Work

Machine Punches History Of Students In IBM Card Series

By Bill Reid

One of the vital nerve centers of the college is located in the humming, throbbing IBM office located in Science Hall. A vast amount of information is daily catalogued in this room by a number of highly sensitive mechanical geniuses.

Under the supervision of Jim Enwright and Eddie Wong these machines file such statistics as dropping and adding of courses, recorded grades, absences and class sections.

The machines that perform these functions total six in number, with each machine having a specific duty. Over the whir of activity that envelops the room, Enwright explained the machines' functions.

The first was the key punch machine where each new student's code number is punched by hand. This machine is also used to punch cards for new classes and sections. Next was the 032 interpreter which actually prints information by using holes in an IBM card as a guide.

Arrangement of cards in numerical or alphabetical order is taken care of by the 082 sorter machine.

Grades are recorded by a neat bit of co-operation between two machines —with a little help from an instructor. An IBM card is sent to an instructor who marks the card under the desired grade. The card is then fed into the reproducing punch machine which detects the mark and then punches a hole over it. After this fairly complex maneuver has been completed, the card is fed into another machine, the 402 tabulator, for still further processing.

There are roughly 35,000 grade cards filed in the IBM office. These, along with attendance cards, class and section cards, and just general information cards which tell a student's history in a series of punched code numbers, add up to plenty of headaches for Wong and Enwright.

Man Wants A Blonde, Switchboard Can't Deliver

Questions On Mummies, Crumpet Recipes All Help Confuse, Amuse Operator's Daily Routine

"I wanna blue-eyed blonde about five-three an' 'round 20 years old," the deep, resonant maseuline voice demanded. This request momentarily startled the college's switchboard operator, Marie Kenison, but in the tradition begun by the intrepid Mr. Watson, she bucked up and referred the matter to Dean Ralph Hillsman.

Many such calls come in each day over the switchboard. As for the call by the young gentleman (in a very serious tone of voice) who was in search of "a blonde," it turned out he had just broken up with his girl friend and was looking for a new romance.

Mrs. Kenison, whose job seems very complicated and intricate to on-lookers, says she enjoys her work (she's been at the college for 13 years) and feels her job is a lively one that doesn't give her the chance to get bored.

As well as being supplied by gardening faculty members with fresh flowers regularly, Mrs. Kenison is sometimes surprised with her favorite candy, brought to her by Gloria Andersen, the college nurse.

Another typical, if offbeat, incident was a call from a woman who coolly asked how to unwrap a mummy without damaging it. Quick-thinking Mrs. Kenison referred the woman to the De Young Museum without blinking an eyelash.

Drama students caused quite a commotion at the switchboard last year because of the contest they conducted to find the best English crumpet recipe, a contest aimed at promoting their then current production—an English play, of course. Several days passed before Mrs. Kenison learned the reason for the sudden interest in cooking.

Mrs. Kenison's days are never dull —and she insists she wouldn't have them any other way.

SURROUNDED BY COLORFUL plants and flowers, Marie Kenison mans the college's switchboard every day and answers hundreds of incoming calls. She has been at the college for 13 years and found that the job requires tact in dealing with calls that often prove amusing.

Rams Held To Split In Last Chance For Conference Flag; Patch Homer Ices Second Tilt

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Although emerging victorious in the seven inning nightcap by a 6-2 margin, the Ram baseball machinery still virtually saw all of its conference title hopes float down the drain by way of a wild and wooley 21-3 drubbing from Sacramento in the opener of a twin bill at Balboa Park last Saturday.

With but four contests remaining for the Rams in 1959 Big Eight activity, it seems next to impossible for them to overtake the loop leading Stockton Mustangs, now a full two games ahead of Lee Eisan's challengers.

In the opener, the Capitol City boys found themselves off to an early 5-1 lead at the end of the first two frames, and, although Bob Farber managed to pole a 370-foot home run in the seventh, were never in danger throughout the affair.

The Panthers lambasted Ram starter Roy Tripaldi for a total of 11 safeties in the first six innings and picked up seven more off reliever Gene Russo. Nine local errors teamed up with a dozen free passes to complete the disastrous affair.

Now 5-5 in conference play, the Eisan charges began to look more like a ball club in the finale. Hurler Bill Simmons more than made up for his poor showing in the local end of a home and home double-header with Oakland by handcuffing the Panthers with but five hits and three walks.

Capping off the smooth chucking of Simmons, a Ram infield which had been guilty of nine miscues in the opener came through with marvelous support, and sent at least half a dozen rugged chances into the putout column. The Rams also picked up six safeties at the plate.

Considering the locals strictly "bush" after their miserable showing in the opener, the Sacs withheld their All-Conference chucker Bill Enos, sending relief artist Norm Marks to the hill. The Rams shelled him for a pair of tallies on three hits in the opening frame, and when Paul DeMartini checked in from first on Johnny May's third inning double the margin of victory was in the books.

Although still up by 3-2 in the sixth, the lefty was not on the cake until third sacker Tony Patch rapped out a 380-foot "luxury liner" four bagger to left center with two passengers aboard to complete the show.

Explosive Bat Of DeMartini Bright Spot Of Ram Nine

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Although the 1958 edition of local baseball talent seems to leave quite a bit to be desired in the won-lost column, Ram diamond fans can still look back on the dying season with a handful of fond memories, one of the most potent coming in the form of hard-hitting outfielder Paul DeMartini.

Despite the fact that berths aboard the All-Big Eight roster have come few and far between for Red and White artists in the last pair of seasons, it seems a good bet that DeMartini should be one of the boys to pick up a gold marble for himself at the loop's close.

Not only does his dynamic .424 clip at the plate speak for itself as far as offensive power is concerned, but it was his bases-loaded four-bagger against Stockton, and two-run double against San Mateo pitching that turned a pair of doubtful diamond frays into much-needed wins.

There are more things taken into account than hitting in the selection of the all-conference "dream team," however, and the words of Coach Lee Eisan seem to point to the fact that DeMartini has as good a chance as anyone in nailing down a post.

"Paul is a great little hitter," he began. "I can't think of anybody I'd rather have up there in a clutch.

"The kid's always thinking on the base paths; he's fast and he knows just where to go with the ball in any given situation involving a base-hit to his position. About the only thing that could possibly hold him back would have to come in the form of his trouble in handling the long, low ones where you have to move instantly to make the catch."

Aside from these things, however, it has to be mentioned that little "Dumdum" is one of the finest "team men" and bench jockeys the Rams have seen in many a diamond season.

With still another year of eligibility ahead of him, it seems well apparent that local fans will see a lot more of this hard-sticking youngster from Dick Murray's Sacred Heart plant.

Ram Netters Hope For Monterey Spot

With the opposition getting tougher every week, the top netmen from the Big Eight Conference will participate in the Northern Sectional tennis matches Friday and Saturday at Monterey.

The top eight singles players along with the best eight doubles teams from the Big Eight will face the top men from the other two-year college leagues in Northern California. These competitors will play an elimination tournament until the top eight players and teams remain, with a trip to the state championships at Fullerton as a reward for those who are left.

In the Rams' last conference match of the season the college netmen put a tight clamp on third place by downing Santa Rosa 5-2 on the Bear Cubs' home court. Fred Botsford won the feature match by overpowering Tom Caulfield, 8-6, 6-0. In the number two singles match Fred Bracken, troubled by a stiff wind, lost to Mike Handley, 2-6, 8-6, 6-3.

In the doubles contests Botsford-Bracken combined to obliterate Caulfield-Harris 8-6, 6-0; while Draper-Mattison easily defeated Handley-Calmer 6-2, 6-3.

Miraloma Club B's Independent Champs By 52-42

By Nick Peters

Using every possible means to gain their advantage, the undefeated Miraloma Club "B's" swept to the Independent league championship via a 52-42 tripping of Miraloma Club "A," earning them a shot at the Associated Men Student intramural basketball title to be determined in the tri-loop playoffs on May 18 and 20.

Brute strength on the part of gridders Tony Hobbs, Horace Spikes and Hulin Wallace, who also contributed 16 points to the cause, resulted in complete board dominance and consequent injury to the losers' stalwart performer Will Gasper, forcing him to leave play in the early going, thus hampering Miraloma "A" efficiency.

With Gasper out of the lineup after having collected only two points (he had been hitting at a 17-digit clip prior to this one) the "A's" (3-1) couldn't muster much of an offense and, had it not been for a sturdy 17-point effort from Tom Curran, they would have been in arrears by several more than 10 at the final buzzer.

Wilson Williams' 10 markers and a four-field goal output by scrappy Freddie Glossar ably assisted the three aforementioned "B" front-liners, who literally proved to be both irresistible forces and immovable objects by weaving an air-tight defensive web around the backboards.

In the other Independent clash the Lucky-Fives (2-2) routed the Frisco Kats (1-3), 58-42, for third place behind loop point king Gerry DelSecco's 18 points. Keki-Kanes, which terminated play a week earlier, wound up winless and in the cellar at 0-4.

In the Inter-Fraternity Council's fifth round of competition a mere two-point margin in the featured attraction sent the boys home with a three-teams-tied-for-first situation.

Phi Beta Delta, in what must be considered an upset, nosed out previously unbeaten Gamma Phi Ypsilon, 27-25, to knot those two clubs at 4-1, while Alpha Phi Epsilon also reached that status by smothering Beta Tau (2-3), 63-31.

After trailing 12-8 at the half, the Phi Deltas utilized Dick Jenkins' 8-point second stanza effort plus a blanket-type defense on the Gammas' high-scoring Rudy Vasquez and Dennis Shutter in their come-from-behind equalizer. Jenkins led all scorers with 12.

Lambda Phi (2-3), taking time-out from scheduled radio commitments, had no trouble clobbering Kappa Rho (1-4), 47-26. Mike O'Brien and Tom Oregnen combined for 38 scores while Zeta Phi (2-3) edged Beta Phi (0-5), 23-18, despite a 14-point performance by the losers' Steve Wahl, in the other frat-frays.

Ulloney was the head that wore the crown in the Idle Club Activities Board loop as the Recreation Association (5-0) showed only a half-game lead over the Hotel and Restaurant Society (4-0).

Filipino Club's (1-3) hopes for the title were washed down the drain when it was learned that their first three games (including a win over the RA) had to be forfeited because of use of an ineligible player.

Lamda Phi's OREGNEN leads the IFC scorers with 58 markers, but is closely followed by Phi Delta's ED O'DONNELL (57), teammate O'BRIEN (53) and Beta Tau's RON NIKLSEN (51). Beta Phi's Wahl has the best per game average—a 14.3 clip in a trio.

In the CAB The Guardsman's NICK PETERS leads with 75, just eight digits ahead of the Campus Police's CHUCK PRANDI, who has played one less game and claims the best average (16.8).

FINAL INDEPENDENT LEAGUE SCORING (Only players with 10-point averages listed).

Golfers Top Panthers

Mike Andrakin and John Carlin, top Ram golfers, paved the way to a 10 to 5 April 24 victory over Sacramento, putting the college in third place in the Big Eight standings.

Both teams fired in the lower 80's excepting Ram medalist John Carlin, who shot 76, as the low medalist for this match.

The Junior Varsity pounced on College of Marin, winning 11½ to 3½ in a practice tilt. John Murphy and Ron Nunan were low medalists.

Spikers Grab Third In Northern Relays As Bucs Upset T-Birds; Reid, Sirles, Wilson Sparkle

By Jim Payne

A scrappy Ram track and field squad brought home only two firsts but managed enough other points to earn third place behind Modesto and Oakland in the first annual Northern California Junior College Relays at Santa Rosa's Bailey Field last Saturday.

Fans were mildly shocked when the final tabulation of points showed the Pirates from Modesto sneaking in to grab the winning team trophy from the waiting arms of Oakland's powerful Thunderbirds. Scores of the first three placers were Modesto 64, Oakland 53½ and San Francisco 44½.

The only two gold medal winners for the college were Jess Sirles, who broad jumped 23⅝, and Mike Reid, who tossed the discus 146-3. The college's Othello Carr took third in the broad jump with a leap of 22-8.

Injury and illness plagued three out of the four men on the college's 440-yard shuttle hurdle relay contingent, but the team still managed to eke out a fourth place by substituting with Sirles and Ralph Mathis.

Jerry Bell ran second to Oakland's Sam Perry in his trial heat of the open 120-yard high hurdles, allowing him to compete in the finals, but a severe muscle pull kept him out of the final sprint for steeple honors.

Hurdlers Ed Moise and Russ Nichols were kept out of the meet because of illness.

San Francisco's only placer in three events was John Smith, who ran a 10.0 third in the open 100-yard dash, and anchored the 440 and 880-yard relay teams to third place finishes.

Jackie Williams of Monterey Peninsula won the hundred in 9.9 with Oakland's Len Noles second. Overton Williams, the Oakland speedster who ran the century in 9.5 two weeks ago, won his trial heat in 9.8 but pulled a leg muscle in the finals and was forced to drop out of the race.

The speed-blessed Oaklanders took four firsts and two seconds in the nine running events. However, Modesto displayed overall power in both the field and running events. This allowed them to be the first team to defeat the high-flying T-Birds this season.

Sam Perry, the Thunderbirds' ace hurler, met his match for the first time of the season as Jim Swindle of Vallejo clipped him in winning the high hurdles in 14.9.

The Ram mile relay quartet of Ellis Jenkins (who ran in place of the injured Pickens Rodgers), Steve Barrett, Ken Dawdy and Mel Wilson placed fourth behind Oakland, Modesto and Sacramento. Nevertheless, a top individual performance was turned in by Wilson, who, in his first meet of the season, ran an outstanding 48.4 quarter mile in anchoring the relay after having anchored the distance medley relay to fourth with a 50.0 quarter.

(The school record is 48.9 but Wilson's mark cannot be recognized because it was in a relay lap.)

Other San Francisco placers were Don Briemle, who garnered a fourth place in the shot, and Mathis who tied for third in the high jump.

Coach Lou Vasquez is taking three of his finest competitors to Fresno this Saturday for the annual West Coast Relays to compete for gold watches in the two-year college division. They are Reid in the discus, Sirles in the broad jump and Smith in the 100-yard dash.

The compete scores of last Saturday's meet:

Modesto 64, Oakland 53½, San Francisco 44½, Vallejo 24½, Fresno 21, San Jose 17, American River 16, Sacramento 15, San Mateo 12½, Contra Costa 12, Stockton 11, Santa Rosa 9, Monterey 8 and Diablo Valley 7.

Blazing Sprinter DynamicWeapon In Cinder Wins

By Jim Payne

If there was anything that Track Coach Lou Vasquez wanted for the 1959 season, it was an "explosive" sprinter to fill the near-sprinterless gap of last year.

To be sure, he has been blessed with at least three better-than-average dash men in Ellis and Alex Jenkins and Ed Tank, all of whom would like to fill that gap.

But there is a fourth and unheralded speed merchant who just may be the best of the lot.

His name is John Wesley Smith. Common enough name, but you can rest assured that there is nothing common about his high school sprint times of 9.6 and 21.0 for the 100 and the 220.

Smith is a 21-year-old freshman from North Little Rock, Arkansas.

Off the above-mentioned times, it seems that there would be no doubt that he would be that outstandingly "explosive" sprinter Vasquez is seeking.

However, Smith sat out the 1958 campaign and has found it rather difficult to regain the form that won him those speedy clockings along with the double sprint title in the Arkansas State High School track meet in 1957.

He isn't worried, he says, because he feels that he carries within his 5'5" 128-pound frame the "explosiveness" that his coach is looking for. In his training Smith is striving to be ready for the big meets, such as those in Fresno and Modesto near the end of the season.

The little flyer has aspirations toward going to a large university but hasn't decided which one. Whichever he chooses, though, you can be sure his talents will be greatly appreciated.

Fence Meet, Field Day Highlight RA Weekend

Members of the Recreation Association enjoyed a highly successful wiener roast last Saturday at the women's gymnasium, according to Bunny Tollefson, the organization's president.

Another field day, scheduled for Saturday, will be held at San Jose City College. All RA members interested in attending are invited to sign up now in the women's gymnasium.

Some of the competitive sports offered at the meet include volleyball, archery, bowling, badminton, swimming and tennis.

Adviser Lene Johnson's fencing team ventures to Napa College this Friday night to participate in a foil match.

Membership in the organization, although free, is limited to members of the Associated Students.

Mermen Place In Norcal Meet

Overshadowed by the national record breaking performance of Oakland City College's sensational Gary Heinrich, a trio of Ram swimmers had to settle for three thirds, one fourth, and one fifth place in the recent Northern California Junior College swim meet at Watsonville.

Laurie Hansen gained third and fourth place in the 200-yard and 100-yard breast stroke, Craig Schwarz a third in the 50-yard free style and Gene Gayner third and fifth in the 100-yard and 200-yard backstroke, respectively.

The 18-year-old Heinrich and teammate Jim Marchetti between them gained 42 points of Oakland's 79 digit total. The Rams finished with 17.

Groups Prepare For Spring Festival, Party Conventions

By Pat Perkins

ACTIVITIES in all the organizations on campus are being stepped up as the clubs call party conventions, and begin to prepare for the Spring Festival and the numerous social events which are scheduled to take place within the next few weeks.

Delta Psi sorority had a very successful hay ride with Zeta Phi Sigma fraternity recently. The group is now planning its snow cone booth for the spring festival.

Beta Tau's new pledges are Fred Lagapa, Jerry Kucserka, Mike Lazzari, Jim Arlen, Herb Lebhertz and Frank Harrison, pledge captain.

The members of Gamma Sigma Sigma service sorority relaxed at Fairfax last weekend after ushering for five weekends at the drama club's presentation of The Cherry Orchard.

Zeta Phi Sigma fraternity is proud of their pledges, Ron Recchioni, secretary, announced because the pledges won first place in the hell week competition. Four pledges are on the swimming team, Craig Schwarz, Laurie Hansen, Gene Gayner and John Rosenberg. The other pledges are Ramy Cohn, Al Gere, Roger Slatt, George Cunningham, Lloyd Carlson, Cliff Elbi and Bill Keane.

A dinner for the members of Theta Tau sorority was given by the pledges on April 26. The future sisters are Dorothy Baker, Candy Carnel, Thalia Demakas, Joyce Thomas, Jean Miller, Pat Lustenberg, Margie Tynes, Iretta Schiener and Betty Hontalas, pledge captain.

Sponsored by Tau Chi Sigma fraternity, the college's annual blood drive starts tomorrow and will continue through Friday. A trophy will be given to the club, sorority or fraternity donating the most blood.

The presentation of pledges at the St. Francis' Colonial Room last Saturday night will long be remembered by the new members of the various sororities on campus.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity scheduled its semi-annual "pledge dinner" for Saturday at the Cliff House. Dick Kentera, pledge captain, will present trophies to three of the brothers. AKR joins with Zeta Chi sorority in making a float for the Spring Festival. Also on the fraternity's agenda is a "car wash" project, which will be its money-raising campaign for the semester.

New Club Added To Campus List

Ratification of its constitution has allowed the newly formed Retail Floristry Club to take its place among the on-campus organizations of the college.

In announcing the formation of the club, Adeline Steinway, publicity chairman, also disclosed an impressive list of objectives and activities planned by the group.

Designed to promote interest in the Retail Floristry classes, the new club, Mrs. Steinway said, will also help members gain a better understanding of their chosen profession.

Establishing and maintaining a scholarship fund for the benefit of outstanding retail floristry students will be one of the organization's foremost projects.

In addition it is also planning to assist charitable organizations, have social functions, endeavor to build prestige for the college, and maintain a close contact with graduate and active students.

Mrs. Steinway added that the Retail Floristry Club will offer for sale to other on-campus organizations corsages and floral displays at a moderate cost to enhance their social activities.

Membership in the club is limited only to retail floristry majors. Faculty adviser for the young club is Maryhope Cummings.

"Founding fathers" of the club are Ronald Ghezzi, president; Sam Webb, vice-president; John McKelvey, treasurer; Sorelle Lowe, secretary; Orrie Izett, corresponding secetary; Amelia Mendez, historian, and Dennis Call, promotion.

The first and simplest emotion discovered in the human mind is curiosity.

Opening Weekend Performances Of Inherit The Wind Sellout

Tremendous success in ticket sales is already apparent for the Little Theater's newest presentation, Inherit The Wind, according to Michael Griffin, drama director.

Opening weekend performances on Friday and Saturday, May 15 and 16, have been sold out since April 22, and good attendance is expected at all performances. The most notable fact of the sellout is that no outside publicity on the play had yet been released at the time, Griffin said.

Griffin believes that the heavy ticket sales is due to the highly successful run of The Cherry Orchard. Most of the persons who saw it were quite pleased by it; in fact, many saw Cherry Orchard more than once, and so popular was the play that it had to be held over.

The play centers around Bertram Cates, a schoolteacher who is on trial for teaching Darwin's theories of evolution, which at the time was against the law in Tennessee.

Rehearsals have been going well, according to Griffin, and he believes that the audience will be moved by the action.

Among the rehearsing performers is Jordy Cooney, a veteran of many Little Theater productions, who will play the role of the mayor in Inherit The Wind.

As the mayor he portrays a sympathetic and understanding man. In a town which is set against the defendant Cates, the mayor takes it on himself to insure him a fair trial.

Cooney's first role at the college was that of a doorman in The Mad Women Of Chaillot. Since then he has had many leading parts in plays.

There has been great variety in his past performances. This is illustrated in his role of Gramps, an old liar and tell-tale raconteur in Petified Forest, and his role of Gaev, a Russian aristocrat, who hides from reality behind billiard tables in The Cherry Orchard.

Former Instructor Wins State Award

Alice C. Cooper, former English instructor at the college, has been chosen State Teacher of the Year and will receive the Horace Mann Award in a public ceremony June 7 in Los Angeles.

Original sponsor here of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society here, Miss Cooper was a member of the faculty when the college's doors first opened in Fall 1935. After an eight-year stay at the college in the English department, Miss Cooper left in 1943 and moved to Los Angeles, where she continued the teaching career, which led to this statewide recognition.

National Teacher of the Year is a New Yorker, and the International "champion" teaches in Cologne, Germany.

Bus Fund Depends On 40 Passengers

Plans are now being made by the Rally Committee to request funds from the Student Council for buses to the Fresno Relays this Saturday, according to Ann Thuss, chairman of the committee.

These plans, however, can go into action only when a list of at least 40 students who wish to attend the event is compiled, Miss Thuss said. And because of the lack of student support for the track team, interesting students in the relays won't be easy, according to John Dunn, faculty adviser to the committee.

The Rally Committee itself is divided into two main groups. These are the cheerleaders and the song girls, who serve to enliven the atmosphere at the various sports events. To get students fired up for coming sports tilts the two groups appear at rallies, such as the ones held in College Hour for track and baseball.

This year the two groups number more than 20, and the head cheerleader is Herman Clark; the head song girl is Rose Thomas.

The committee holds its meetings in Smith Hall, 108, Mondays and Wednesdays from 2 to 3 p.m. Meetings and committee membership are open to all Associated Students.

Six Student Leaders Head For Long Beach CJCSGA Convention

Heading the college delegation to the semi-annual California Junior College Student Government Association Conference at Long Beach starting this Friday and ending Saturday will be Fred Muller, new Associated Student president.

Other student leaders representing the college will be Roberta Kennedy in campus activities, Ben Northrup in finance, Nick Peters in athletics, Albert Salamanca in public relations and Jackie Pera in student government. Accompanying the delegates will be Sherman Elworthy, sponsor of the Club Activities Board.

Five workshops are slated as part of the daily program to give delegates an opportunity to discuss problems and exchange ideas. The many resolutions which were passed at the recent CJCSGA (Northern Region) conference at Modesto will be brought up and discussed, and if they merit attention, appropriate action will be taken to have them adopted.

Northrup, who attended the Bakersfield conference last semester, is considered qualified to represent the college in the finance workshop, since he is the present finance chairman. Salamanca, Publicity Committee chairman and recent workshop chairman at Modesto, will attend the public relations workshop.

Last semester, one of the heated issues at the Bakersfield conference was the appeal for the C average requirement for all college athletes. Peters, sports editor of The Guardsman and men's athletic commissioner, will handle the athletic workshop to see that the Northern California two-year college football powers are recognized by the Southern schools in the form of a North-South clash for the State championship. He attended the recent CJCSGAC athletic workshop at Modesto where this resolution was drawn up.

The group will leave the International Airport on Thursday morning via Western Airlines and after registering at the Lafayette Hotel will head for a tour of Disneyland. The delegation will leave Long Beach Saturday and will arrive in San Francisco at 5:40 p.m.

Businessmen Interview Graduates Here May 13

One hundred and fifty prospective graduates will be selected for interviews with business, industrial and government recruitment teams next Wednesday, May 13, Joseph Amori, college placement director, announced last week.

To be eligible for interviews, students must be due for an Associate in Arts degree and a Certificate of Completion, a certificate awarded by the college to students who have taken a pattern of required courses and completed a major in one of the 50 semiprofessional training programs, Amori said.

The graduates will include both the February and June classes. Each will select five firms with whom he chooses interviews. Twenty minutes have been allotted for the interview, he stated.

This will mark the fourth successive year that Business Recruitment Day has brought outstanding industrial and government leaders in search for business talent.

Spots Still Open For CAB Festival Floats

Preparations are being rapidly completed for the annual Spring Festival scheduled for Friday, May 15, according to Susan Shawl, chairman of the float and parade committee.

Petitions for floats should have been in last week, Miss Shawl said, but organizations which have not yet submitted a petition for a float can still do so. The sign-up sheet will be in S-140.

The parade will include three different sections. The first will be the major or decorated floats, second will be decorated cars, and third will be sports cars. The theme for the Spring Festival is Barbary Coast, and Miss Shawl urged that floats be decorated in a manner appropriate to the theme.

The starting time for the parade has been set for 6 p.m. at the college's Ocean Avenue parking area. It will last about 20 minutes and will terminate at the north barn of the Cow Palace.

Organizations which haye entered floats in the parade are expected to be on campus with their entries by 5 p.m. in order to allow time for judging and alignment of the floats.

Observation

Paradoxical Quirks Make Future Doubtful

By William Forshay

CURIOUS paradoxes exist in the world today and many of them lead the thoughtful to ponder the direction that civilization is taking. A few samples of these conflicting actions indicate that mankind is taking two steps backward for each step forward. Gleanings from recent news events reveal the following examples.

French wine merchants are now trying to sell more wine by advertising the vitamins in this beverage while American tourists are decrying the fact that an alcoholic oasis can be found at Gettysburg. (Maybe some are healthy because they drink?)

It turns out that big business pays more to college grads who work harder. These same grads generally have better grades in college, too, but that doesn't prevent a leading educator from asking if we are making a playground out of college and indicating (by knocking various special days, campaigns, fraternities and sororities) that we are.

The great Fisher/Reynolds/Taylor case is just about to go into the books and be forgotten, and shortly after it comes Ding Dong Daddy and old Mother Duncan. (Hey, Frank, you can come out now.)

A disgruntled farmer left the nation to try farming "down under" to be free of government controls and suddenly a rash of editorials and proposed bills appeared to alleviate the farm problem and cut subsidization.

Hate merchants are still with us, busy with their bombings and lynchings, while a national council of Protestant churchmen suddenly informs the nation that it has entered politics by announcing its disapproval of a Catholic for president. (Specified the individual, too?)

A little country called Tibet fought for its very existence as an autonomous and uncontrolled nation with its leader in exile while other world leaders prepared for a "summit conference" to help ease the tensions of the Cold War. (Did anyone invite the Dalai Lama?)

San Francisco is busy investigating the reason for so many suicides here while the 15th bank robbery of the year gets pulled off by a man with a paper bag.

The college goes through its periodic growing pains and its periodic political pains as new buildings are added and new student officers. One's to increase the academic content and . . . (so's the other?)

It appears that everyone is getting his toes stepped on and no one cares. This started out to be a funny column but now teardrops are splotching the copy paper and we ought to stop so we will.

Alexander Klimenko Named Forum Editor

As literature submitted to Forum moved in the final stages of being judged last week, the Forum Club chose Alexander Klimenko as editor of the literary magazine, due to be published in June.

Active in literature and science, Klimenko was a member of the University of California Occident staff in 1958 and before that the co-editor of the Washington High School newspaper, The Eagle.

His scientific endeavor led him to take first place in the physical science department of the Fourth Annual Bay Area Science Fair in 1956 when he was a senior in high school.

The new editor is "impressed by the ceaseless and selfless devotion of the readers who have given so much time and effort to select the type of material which will help to make Forum an outstanding magazine."

Summer Registration To Start Next Monday

Any student who plans to attend summer session at the college must report to the registrar's office between next Monday, May 11, and Thursday, June 4, to fill out a registration booklet, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

However, since the first few days of registration are the heaviest, students are to report to S-117 during May 11, 12 and 13. After that, all registration will be done in S-130.

Industrial, Government Teams To Screen 150 Business Majors In Recruitment Program Today

By Elmer Milligan

Business, industrial and government recruitment and procurement teams from the Bay Area will convene here today for the fourth annual Business Recruitment Day program, Joseph Amori, college placement director, announced last week.

Judged highly successful by employers, graduates and instructors last year, Business Recruitment Day brings to the campus outstanding industrial and government leaders in search of business talent.

Recruitment Day is co-sponsored by the college placement service and business department and gives prospective business graduates an equal opportunity to compete for positions with top firms in the San Francisco Bay Area.

Fifty-seven recruitment and procurement officers, representing 39 leading firms in Northern California, will meet and interview 150 students from the February and June graduating classes.

To be eligible for interviews, Amori said, the business students must be in line for a June Associate in Arts degree and a Certificate of Completion.

A Certificate of Completion is awarded by the college to students who have taken a pattern of required courses and completed a major in one of the 50 training programs.

The business training programs include all of the business courses, graphic arts, photography and advertising arts.

The visiting recruiters will be welcomed at 8 a.m. by Louis G. Conlan, college president, during an orientation breakfast in the faculty dining room in Smith Hall.

Amori will serve as master of ceremonies during the orientation period, and Louis Batmale, dean of instruction, will explain the college's various training programs and what graduation from these courses means.

Immediately following the breakfast, the group will adjourn to Cloud Hall where each recruitment team will occupy a private office to conduct its interviews.

Each student will be entitled to select five employers with whom he desires interviews. Twenty minutes have been allotted for each interview.

"Individual personnel folders containing a personal data sheet and five rating sheets will accompany each business graduate and will be utilized by the interviewers during the evaluation and appraisals of the students," Amori stated.

Seven occupational categories dominate the job opportunities available this year. Fields open to student employment are accounting, secretarial work, wholesale selling, office machines, retail selling, advertising and advertising arts, the placement director said.

Booth Gimmicks Highlight Of CAB Spring Festival

Proving that although the old Barbary Coast lies dead near the North Beach International Settlement, the spirit, modified, lives on, as the college's annual Spring Festival carries that spirit Friday night to the Cow Palace.

Sponsored this year by the Club Activities Board, festivities start at 6 p.m. Friday with a car float parade from the campus. Decorated in the Barbary Coast theme by the sponsoring organizations, official cars and sports cars are expected to turn right at Ocean Avenue toward the Cow Palace, according to Bud Andress, CAB president.

In the parade will ride the faculty member who was elected last week to assume the role of Grand Marshal. His identity hidden until the parade starts, he will ride in a new convertible.

Arriving at the Cow Palace, money will be exchanged for scrip at the outside ticket booths. The scrip can be purchased in 10 cent ducats and is the only currency acceptable once inside the building.

Dancing, with music furnished by a non-college band, booths sponsored by the many on-campus organizations and a couple of "surprise" events will highlight the evening's festivities.

Among the 20 booths arranged around the four corners of the Cow Palace will be several with new ideas, highlighted by a car-wrecking booth featuring a 10-cent whack at a jalopy with a sledge hammer, set up by Phi Beta Delta.

Phi Beta Rho promises a Hitchrack marriage booth, and a bucking broneo booth with a saddle suspended by four ropes is sponsored by the Individual Club; the Dunko, Pie-in-the-eye consists of water-filled balloons to be tossed at various volunteers from the ranks of Phi Beta Delta.

In the April 29 issue of The Guardsman Dyer made several selections for the television world's Emmy awards. The Foresight columnist's selections agreed with 12 of the 18 award choices he had included in his column.

Rose, Bryggman In Lead Roles As 'Wind' Opens Here Friday Night

Faculty-Judged Cooking Contest Sidelights Play

With John Rose and Larry Bryggman cast as opposing principals in the Lawrence and Lee drama of the famous Tennessee "monkey" trial of a quarter century ago, Inherit The Wind goes on stage in the Little Theater Friday night for the first of six performances.

Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Subsequent performances are scheduled by Michael Griffin, drama director, for Saturday night, and the two following weekends, May 21 and 22, and May 28 and 29.

In addition to carrying the lead roles, Rose and Bryggman are in charge of all non-directional sides of the presentation. The play concerns Bertram Cates, a schoolteacher on trial for teaching Darwin's theories on evolution. Rose plays Henry Drummond, a lawyer for Cates. Bryggman plays Matthew Harrison Brady, head of the prosecution against Cates.

Bryggman states that Brady is a difficult character to portray, because there are few persons like him in the world today. Brady is a deeply religious man, who condemns modern interpretations of God and the Bible.

Rose feels that his part of Drummond is easier than that of Brady. Drummond, like many today, believes in God but feels that science has put religion in a different light.

One of the by-products of preparations for opening night was a contest last week to find the best cook among the actors and actresses in the play. Judging of the contest was done by members of the administrative staff. The food is needed for a picnic scene in the play.

The play's run will be a limited one because of the imminence of the end of this semester. As a result, only a half the number of persons who saw The Cherry Orchard will be able to see Inherit The Wind, Griffin said.

Both Rose and Bryggman hope to carve out careers for themselves in the theater. Among those from the college now active in the theater are Jack Jones, who has appeared with Charles Laughton in The Caine Mutiny; Barbara Jean Murphy of television and radio; Dran and Tanya Seitz, who appeared in a recent issue of Life magazine, and Jack Hulse who was with the touring company of The King and I.

Student Government Convention Smashing Success; Disneyland, Mature Deliberations Featured

By Alberto Shlamanca

"One of the most sensible and mature conventions of the California Junior College Student Government Association," was the consensus regarding the conference held on May 7-9 in Long Beach.

In an atmosphere of complete collaboration at the Lafayette Hotel, all recommendations and all but three resolutions were passed. "Work was done well when work was required and amusement was well chosen and enjoyable," said Fred Muller, AS president and head of the college's delegation to the three day conference.

One of the important resolutions which was passed by a majority of the students present dealt with an income tax exemption for students, a bill that is now in the House of Representatives.

The publicity and public relations workshop recommended the formation of a publicity committee, to work under the supervision of the publicity chairman.

From the student government work shop, a resolution regarding the passage of Assembly Bill 1328, that would permit school libraries to include sectarian literature considered of educational value, was passed.

The Northern Region also gained an athletic victory as its resolution demanding a North-South football championship playoff passed through the general assembly.

City College, however, was unsuccessful in attempting to lower the grade point average requirement for athletes, as a resolution for a mandatory 2.0 average was favored.

Along with Muller, five other delegates represented the college at Long Beach. They were Roberta Kennedy, who attended the campus activities workshop; Jackie Pera, finance under 35,000; Nick Peters, athletics; Alberto Salamanca, publicity and public relations, and Ben Northrup, student government.

Muller, who is also State Information Chairman, also attended the conference as a CJCSGA officer. Sherman Elworthy, adviser for the Club Activities Board, accompanied the group. He also served as resource for the publicity and public relations workshop.

Proceedings at the event started with a welcome banquet featuring Dr. Myron S. Olson as the key speaker. Olson, a doctor of education from the University of Southern California, spoke on the topic: Student Government—Farce or Farce. He told the delegates to "be humble, the better you use the power delegated to you, the more power will be delegated upon you."

Activities scheduled for Friday, May 9, included two workshop meetings, a general assembly, regional meetings, a trip to Disneyland and a dance at the hotel's Grand Ballroom to the music of Gus Bivona.

Guardsman's '58 Volume Cops ACP First Class Rating

A rating of First Class for its Fall 1958 volume was awarded to The Guardsman this week by the Associated Collegiate Press, whose headquarters are at the University of Minnesota.

Categories in which last semester's Guardsman excelled, according to the ratings, included news stories, style, page makeup, sports display, sports writing, headline structure and typography.

This marks the seventh First Class award for The Guardsman, which has also earned 28 All-American ratings in 34 semesters of membership in ACP since Fall 1939. First Class is one notch below All-American. Other ACP ratings are Second Class, Third Class and Fourth Class.

The awards, given each semester to college and university newspapers entered in the ACP competition, are based on general conduct, style, writing and coverage. The ACP's board of critic judges is comprised of journalistic authorities from various newspapers and academic staffs.

The judge's comment on The Guardsman stated, "An excellent, ... a newspaper ... to be proud of."

Coeducation Yields Formula For Success

Records show that students who take advantage of campus activities and apply themselves in their studies here do well in any other college, Patty Moran, Prep Day luncheon speaker, told the visitors last week.

Desiring a "good rounding of coeducational experience" after graduating from an all-girl high school, Miss Moran, when she enrolled here, asked her counselor to suggest a curriculum that would allow her to circulate among the students and meet the faculty members as well.

Journalism was suggested, a field in which she excelled to the point of being chosen as Guardsman managing editor.

Continuing her education at San Francisco State, Miss Moran participated in journalism and received her degree in English literature.

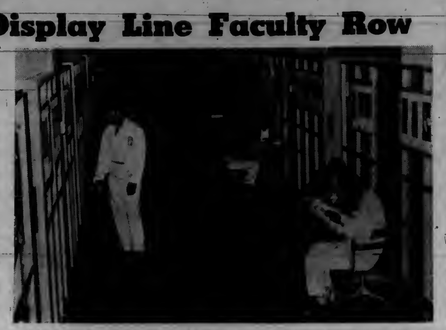
Four months after graduating from State, Miss Moran accepted the position of feature writer and copy reader for the San Francisco Examiner. Although she has attended several schools in the area, she emphasized that it was City College references and experiences that qualified her for her present job.

Neck-Twisters In Photo Display Line Faculty Row

Lovely Coeds, Famous SF Bay Area Sites Features Of Current Exhibit

Adorning the walls along faculty row in Cloud Hall is a captivating photo display composed of 20 beautiful selections from the photography department.

The exhibit consists of pictures of several lovely coeds here and famous landmarks of the San Francisco Bay Area.



The pictures were taken by students who are currently enrolled in the photography classes and were especially arranged for Education-Business Day held last month.

In preparation is a special photography project scheduled to be on display within the next two weeks. The enterprise will feature the talent of Emmett Smith, commercial art instructor here, in a one-man retrospective type of show.

Students will have a good opportunity to view a vivid picture collection representing 27 yedrs of photographical skill, having its beginning in New York City in 1932 and continuing to the present time.

The Big Show, a unique photography display consisting of the best historical materials pertaining to the college, will mark the college's 25th anniversary next year.

All persons possessing pictorial items that will fit into the anniversary program are requested to inform Smith in C-126.

Frequent Tests Result In Consistency Of Study Habits

FREQUENCY of examinations was discussed here a few issues ago, when we made the point that in a state-financed college it is the prerogative, nay, the duty of an instructor to administer frequent exams to students to insure that the taxpayers' money is not going down an endless drain and to keep the students honest.

It is a generally accepted view that frequent exams are helpful in insuring proper utilization of tax money for education. And from the instructor's standpoint, this system also goes a long way toward insuring that he is not wasting his time and lectures on a class of boobs.

The use of frequent tests is also valuable in another way, perhaps the most valuable of all when considered from the student's point of view. When a student is tested more frequently than the conventional once per midterm period, he is compelled to study regularly and thus can follow the course as it was intended to be followed, be adequately prepared at examination time, and adopt a method of study that will help him to acquire a better understanding of a course.

An instructor who administers more than one test each six weeks in a course in which this is practical, is actually doing his students a favor.

Although the word "compelled" was used above, systematized study is not necessarily a compulsory practice, for many students adhere to their assignment schedule whether or not frequent tests are introduced. It is the example set by such students that we hope others will follow.

The "crash program" theory, the impulse to lay one's books aside until an atmosphere more conducive to studying comes along, is a common if not a natural tendency among students. The surest way to extirpate a student's lethargy and insure that he profits from a course is to test him so frequently that he cannot afford to neglect his assignments, to keep him so occupied that he "won't have time to waste time."

When this is done and a student studies regularly to avert the catastrophic consequences of not studying, it follows that he will proceed through the course at a steady, consistent pace, learning the subject as it was intended to be learned.

By following this pattern of consistent application, a student will find at examination time that his worries are comparatively few indeed, for constant studying leads to a preparedness which is the most effective weapon with which to cope with exams.

Carrying this process one step further, the student who discovers that his learning capacity and examination preparedness are increased through a program of consistency forced on him by frequent exams, will be convinced he has traveled the right road. He will be inclined to adopt this method of studying, feeling confident that it will acquire for him the meaning he seeks to derive from each of his classes.

Was It Vagrant, Vegetarian, Or Economist?

Balboa High Farmers Lose Plot To Unknown Poachers

By Jim Pudoff

Items such as lettuce, onions, and other vegetables were reported poached from a small farm plot on the southeast campus two weeks ago.

The plot, farmed by some 15 Balboa High School students who are engaged in a somewhat unique horticulture program, was raided by unidentified poachers. It was observed by the adolescent farmers that the crime was apparently committed in the early part of the weekend.

The missing articles, which were immediately rated as of "blue ribbon" quality by the growers, were missing without a clue to their whereabouts.

Wayne Basso, a tall Italian farmer, seemed to be particularly upset about the pilfering. Expressing his views emphatically, Basso reported a heavy loss to his crop of onions. "We ought to have guards around here," he said.

Criminology instructor Fred Fitzgerald shook off all responsibility in the matter. "Since the incident did happen on the campus, it is the natural instinct of the Campus Police to be interested. There is, however, no night patrol conducted by the students. The Ingleside police station conducts a periodic observance of the area." Fitzgerald suggested an immediate complaint to that department.

Embree Johnson, horticulture instructor for the young crop planters, stood "on the fence" toward the matter. "The loss wasn't that great," he told the students, ordering them back to pulling weeds.

Calm consideration of the incident might lead to the conclusion that perhaps a vagrant (obviously a vegetarian) had himself a handsome dinner, or maybe an economist employed an ingenious method to tackle the high cost of living.

Caesar's TV Special Tops; Martin Axed

By Dick Dyer

SID CAESAR did his first TV special of the year recently, which turned out to be one of the best shows of this or any season. The entire show was a satire on movies and was as funny as (censored).

Art Carney and Audrey Meadows supplied some rather strong support in the comedy skits. Caesar, although not as great a "stand-up" comic as Bob Hope or Red Skelton, is certainly the king of satire.

The opening skit was an hilarious take-off on drive-in movies with Caesar and company portraying the frustrated couples.

But the highlight of the program was the sketch entitled A Star Is Lost, in which Sid depicted a matinee idol from 1925 to the present. Caesar played Anthony Stunning, an ex-extra who skyrockets to stardom after being "discovered" by Director Carney. As Stunning, who also irons his hair because it looks like a haystack, he becomes Valentino, Yul Brynner, and ends up in a bubble bath a la Jayne Mansfield, doing 20 films a week.

The grand finale was a musical cavalcade of impressions of song-and-dance numbers as done by movie stars of the Thirties.

• • •

DEAN MARTIN'S third and last special of the season was only fair, and nothing to shout about.

His guests, Bob Hope and Mae West, helped considerably. However, it would have been much better if there had been more Hope, and less Martin. Miss West should visit Slenderella. She may have been the Marilyn Monroe of the Thirties but today she could be classed—as the Sophie Tucker of the Fifties.

Old gags, old songs, and plenty of good old ad libbing seem to sum up the buffoonery. Those who like to watch Martin clowning around, playing it coy, and acting as if he had just left a two-week New Year's Eve party, would have enjoyed the goings-on.

MEDICAL SCIENCE has finally come up with a cure for those blue-book blues. A new discovery, Tafranil, will hit the market July 1, and it's tabbed as being the greatest blues shooer yet. Doctors hope it'll cut down on the increasing number of suicides in the US. Six pills a day are supposed to do the trick—with no "goofballs" effects, yet.

Chalk up another one for Aldous Huxley. In Brave New World he predicted a happiness pill which he called soma. Soma's motto was, "Take a gram and avoid a damn."

THINK WE HAVE IT BAD? At the University of Kansas the parking problem got so bad the campus police resorted to toll gates equipped with electrically-operated main gates. PAT ON THE BACK . . . Efficient and always friendly Mary Jean Leonard, registrar here, received a letter last week from William Looney, personnel manager for United Airlines. The letter unloaded praise for alumna Beverly Secrest, who's presently a stewardess with UA. Looney gave laurels to the college's educational benefits—claiming it was the key factor in Miss Secrest gaining her position.

What's also news to us is that the college has a semiprofessional course in airline stewardess training. Nice requirements too. Applicants must be 100-135 pounds, 60 to 68 inches tall and range in age from 20 to 28.

Come Fly With Me

Jet Age Brings Hostess Course To Curriculum

By Peter Burr

Faster-than-sound jet age air transportation has wrought yet another mark in the ever-changing picture of progress with the recent innovation of the air stewardess course offered in the college's semiprofessional division.

The two-year course of study, which was inaugurated last semester to fill the growing demand for qualified personnel in this field, includes a heavy business curriculum with such recommended electives as journalism, geography, language, psychology, photography, history and the humanities, giving the neophyte phlyte-mites a far-flung flavor of the diverse. Emphasis is placed on the emotional stability of applicants because of the constant association with persons of all types and disposition.

The air stewardess of today has come a long way, from the days of not-too-long-ago when the sole qualification necessary for the aspiring airdoll was a face and a figure which would pacify the panicking passenger during landings, take-offs and whenever the engine would fall off in a flaming hunk of mechanical malfunction.

If she could do this in addition to answering such inane questions as, "Will you ask the pilot to fly a little closer to the ground, please," or "Isn't there something the matter with that engine over there?" while pouring coffee, distributing chewing gum and holding the inevitable cardboard canister under the noses of the more sensitive passengers, she was in, but in . . . at least until she got married.

Today, requirements of the various airlines are broad but exacting in their search for the right girl rather than the right paper qualifications. The candidate must be at least 20 but not yet 27 years of age, at least 5'2" but not more than 5'8", weight must be related to height usually not to exceed 138 pounds maximum, vision good but glasses or contact lenses are permitted. Marital status is sometimes single, sometimes married, depending on the airline.

The broadest, yet most stringent, requirements are in the education, experience and personality department. A high school diploma is required, and two years of college are preferred, with a personal background which will enable the career-minded candidate to get along well with people, experience which has developed a desire to serve others, and the ability to be gracious and poised.

Varied interests, a cheerful disposition, tact, maturity and good judgment are essential along with a knack for being a good conversationalist.

And with these paper qualifications, it is not difficult to see why the air stewardess marriage rate is as high as it is.

Reid's 5th Lone Track Tally In Fresno Relays

In the 33rd Annual West Coast Relays at Fresno last Saturday, none of the four athletes competing for the college was able to place better than fifth in the tough two-year college division.

Discus ace Mike Reid was the only San Franciscan to place as his heave of 147½ took fifth behind Santa Ana's Dough Stoner (154-11½). He also competed in the open and intercollegiate class of the discus.

John Smith of the college ran 9.9 for third in his trial heat of the 100-yard dash. The first two placers qualified for the finals.

Jesse Sirles went unplaced in the two-year broad jump and Pickens Rodgers was held out of the open and intercollegiate 5000 meters because of a muscle injury.

Long Beach City College won the two-year division team title with 35 points. The college's Rams finished 18th with one point.

James Bates of East Los Angeles Junior College was named the outstanding participant for the two-year college division. Bates ran 9.5 in his trial heat to equal the West Coast Relays record for the two-year 100-yard dash. He won the final in 9.6.

Next Saturday, Coach Lou Vasquez will take his forces to Sacramento for the Big Eight finals. The first five placers in this meet travel to Fresno to compete for the right to go to the State championships in Modesto.

RAMBLINGS

By Nick Peters

THIS 'N THAT: Alex Schwarz, the college's famed men's physical education instructor who starred in a College Hour drama production, was recently appointed to the University of San Francisco's athletic Hall of Fame. A great honor bestowed upon a massive mentor, who was a top-notch fineman on Don grid contingents of the late Thirties.

On the subject of Halls of Fame, the college's annual voting session will take place soon with but one change from previous ballot procedure. In the first elections 13 athletes and coaches were honored in 1957 and four were handed honors in 1958.

As the number of worthy athletes will dwindle rapidly should large numbers be admitted every year, and to remedy this possibility, only two will be admitted annually beginning this semester, a plan patterned after baseball's Cooperstown system.

Another USF Hall of Famer, also a unanimous choice in '57 City College selections, Ollie Matson, has spurred talk of a National Football League title for the Los Angeles Rams.

A winter trade which brought the heralded gridder from the Chicago Cardinals to the coast has prompted quotes like "with that line in front of Matson and Arnett (Jon) the Rams can't be stopped." The thought provoking problem that puzzles us, however, is the fact that the Angelenos traded away half of their fabled immovable line to acquire Matson!

May 29 Sign-Up Day For Hopeful Gridders

Looking ahead to next season's rugged gridiron schedule, Football Coach Grover Klemmer has chosen Friday, May 29, as sign-up day for all aspiring grid men.

Although the regular season practice sessions will not begin until August 31, Coach Klemmer has called for the early sign-up so that preseason practice and conditioning can get underway soon enough to have his charges ready for the season's opener against Los Angeles Valley Junior College September 8 at Van Nuys.

Coach Klemmer urged all men interested in trying out for the team to report for the sign-up which will be held in the men's gymnasium during College Hour.

RA Climaxes Semester With Awards Night

With the semester drawing to a close, the Recreation Association will hold an awards social to honor qualified students at the women's gymnasium next Monday, May 18, from 7 to 9 p.m., according to Bunny Tollefsen, the organization's president.

To obtain an award, a student must have attended three-quarters of the sport sessions, maintained a C average and possess an Associated Student card.

H&R Virtually Clinches Berth In Intramural Cage Playoff By Dumping RA In Title Go

By Nick Peters

It's all over but the shouting in the Club Activities Board league, as the Hotel and Restaurant Society remained undefeated at 5-0 by downing the previously unbeaten Recreation Association (5-1) by 27-22 in a ruggedly played contest last week virtually to cinch their loop crown and earn a berth in the Associated Men Student intramural basketball playoffs.

With pivot Sam Battistone coming through with a 10-point effort and guard Ruppert Sutton dropping in another eight, the chow eagers were never headed, consistently thwarting aggressive RA attempts to overtake the lead.

By winning their "big game" the Smith Hall five will represent the CAB in the May 18 and 20 tri-league playoffs unless the International Relations Club (3-2) managed to upset them last Monday night giving the RA another shot at the laurels.

In other CAB action the Campus Follee (3-2) sneaked by the IRC as Chuck Prandi came through with a 22-point showing. As it turned out Prandi's output was well appreciated, for the IRC, behind Julio Insua's 14-digit second-half, pulled from a 22-13 intermission deficit to within a pair before bowing at 36-34. Insua ended up with 20.

The Filipino Club (2-3), slapped down with two early season forfeitures (including a win over the RA), had no trouble in disposing of Alpha Phi Omega (0-5), 42-24, behind a well-balanced and speedy attack.

Winless APO and The Guardsman (0-5) squared off last Monday in the loop's last evening of play for the right to hold down the cellar, the latter attempting to snap a discouraging 15-game loss skein.

Scoring marks were affected by the Filipino Club forfeits as the Filipino-RA and the Filipino-IRC game point totals were tossed out the window in favor of official 2-0 verdicts awarded the RA and IRC to wipe out previous Filipino triumphs.

Forfeitures also took their toll in the Inter-Fraternity Council league as Lambda Phi (2-3) was requested to sit out its last two tilts (last Wednesday's against Beta Tau and tonight's versus Alpha Phi); therefore, depriving Lambda's John Grugnen (58 pts.) and Mike O'Brien (57 pts.), Alpha Phi's Rich Sullivan (51 pts.) and Beta Tau's Ron Nielson (56 pts.) from an equal opportunity to nab the IFC's scoring goods.

More important, however, is the "gift" win handed Alpha Phi Epsilon, as it is presently tied with Gamma Phi Ypsilon and Phi Beta Delta for the loop lead. Considering the latter pair's comparatively easy opposition in tonight's curtain-dropping frays, barring upset, the three fraternities will end up at 6-1, all tied for the title and itching for the overall IFC championship, which will probably be determined through playoffs.

Campus Police's Prandi passed up an idle Nick Peters (75 pts.) to take the CAB point lead at 89 markers in five hassles, a 17.8 clip.

Hall Of Fame Balloting Today; New Ruling Set

Ballots will be given to instructors today to vote two more athletes into the college's athletic Hall of Fame.

Last year four men were elected to the coveted organization, but a new ruling which goes into effect this year will limit the honor to two athletes being selected annually.

Men's Athletic Commissioner Nick Peters revealed this fact when he returned from the athletics workshop of the CJCSCA convention at Long Beach last week. The main topic concerned a North-South grid playoff.

Bagatellos Aids Ram Cause With Phenomenal Bat

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

As any Ram baseball fan will well substantiate, Coach Lee Eisan stumbled into the 1959 conference schedule knowing full well before the first ball was thrown that he had a pitching staff as weak as a five-cent cup of coffee.

A little known fact concerning another of his tremendous problems, however, is that he had not a man aboard the squad who had played first base before.

Barreling through the first trio of Big Eight outings at a phenomenal .512 clip, the converted outfielder from Lou Haas' Balboa stables was also a thorn in the side of Modesto hurlers Jim Honeycutt and Chuck Voirath, as he rapped out 4 for 7 at the plate in the twin-bill with the prune packers early last month at Balboa Park.

Although the Eisan charges saw one of their most humiliating hours of duty in the local end of a home and home double-header with Oakland's Thunderbirds on the afternoon of April 14, the "Big Bag" lit a small candle in the hearts of the small home crowd as he unloaded a booming 385-foot round-tripper in the bottom of the seventh to set the count at 7-16, the T-Birds winning out in the end, 19-8.

Slapping the horsehide at the nearly unbelievable pace of .481 through eight conference outings, there were not a few whispers around the hot stove that the unheard of youngster might well pull the stunt to end them all and wind up on the All-Big Eight roster at the season's close.

Eisan's comment was limited to a safe, "You never know," when approached for comment concerning the practical possibilities of this opinion.

The May 2 hassle with a rugged Sacramento contingent, however, proved to be the downfall for the big Greek first sacker. Although the Red and White forces managed to gain a split with the Capitol City boys, Panther twirlers Ralph Lawrence and Norm Marks teamed their efforts beautifully to send Bagatellos home hitless in six trips to the plate, dropping his average to a "poor" .393.

Santa Rosa Kills Ram Pennant Hopes In 18-4, 3-1 Sweep Of Twin-Bill; New 'Record' Set

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Lee Eisan's 1959 diamond contingent may have kissed the conference flag a hearty goodbye when they dropped both ends of a double-header to Santa Rosa at the winner's field last Saturday, but they still came up with a feat probably never accomplished in the entire history of the major leagues, when 26 Ram batsmen marched to the plate in the second game without hitting a single ball out of the infield!

The startling "achievement" capped the most humiliating afternoon of the current campaign, as the Red and White forces returned to the Phelan Avenue plant of the short end of a pair of 18-4 and 3-1 annihilation.

This time, however, the problem went a little further than the per usual one of no pitchers. To be blunt, it was an out and out case of "no authin."

All-Conference catcher Johnny May was able to work but six innings of the opener because of a shoulder pain; second sacker Byron Beckes bobbled through the twin-bill with a bum leg; a sore arm on the part of hurler Bill Simmons saw him removed from the hill after a single frame, and the rest of the squad gave little or no support whatsoever.

Taking full advantage of the local infirmary, the Bear Cubs were five miles out and away before Eisan could scratch his head and do what he could to reassemble his forces.

The Cubs nailed down three tallies in the first, another in the third, and added a quartet more in the fourth, while holding the Red and White charges to but one apiece in the second, third, and fourth.

From this point on it was no contest at all, and when the Rogues from the Redwood Empire dented the plate for another six in their end of the eighth it amounted to little more than insult added to injury, for what little was left of the massacre had already been wrapped up in their big pockets.

Moving into the record setting second end of the twin affair, the Ram defense mobilized itself into one of the most formidable weapons desirable, but the aforementioned local hitting spoke for itself in the Red and White undoing, in which was otherwise a well played contest.

Hurler Roy Tripaldi tossed an admirable game, allowing but five hits while striking out four, but the whole mound show lay in the right arm of an erratic Santa Rosa balloon-ball artist by the name of Willie Trenam.

In spite of his highly unorthodox wind-up and delivery, Trenam "the Terrible" cut the Ram batsmen down as though they were no more than bushers and he a Big Leaguer.

Rams Move Back Into Contention Via 11-3 Victory

By Warren Downes

Behind the six-hit pitching of righthander Bill Simmons the Ram nine temporarily boomed back into the Big Eight pennant race by walloping Contra Costa, 11-3, last Wednesday afternoon at Balboa Park.

Simmons was hammered for a home run by the first Comet batter of the game, but from there he took command and kept the base hits well scattered.

The Red and White forces hammered four Comet pitchers for 12 hits, including two circuit clouts. Paul DeMartini led off the initial inning for the local forces by singling sharply to right field. Gene Russo walked and then Roy Tripaldi unloaded the first of three safeties to drive DeMartini across. With two down, Johnny Bagatellos singled "Trip" across to extend the Ram lead to 3-1.

Back to back singles by Tripaldi, Bob Farber, and Johnny May knocked starter Bob Simmons off the hill. Bagatellos promptly greeted reliever Gene Callan with his second consecutive single to drive Farber across. A wild pitch by Callan scored May to extend the Ram lead to four runs.

In the fourth frame DeMartini smashed a line drive to center field which took a crazy hop and bounced over the head of the surprised center fielder and rolled to the far reaches of the outfield, allowing DeMartini to score easily.

In the fifth inning the Rams were given a run when Callan hit the first batter, walked the next one, and then made an error to load the bases. With the bases filled Callan walked DeMartini forcing in Bagatellos.

In the eighth inning, Russo unloaded a tremendous circuit clout to left center field. The Rams then loaded the bases and Coach Lee Eisan inserted pinch-hitter Byron Beckes, who had hit safely in eight consecutive games. Beckes calmly unloaded a screaming line drive to left field to drive in two runs.

Score by innings:	R	H	E
Comets 101 001 000	3	6	2
Rams 303 110 02x	11	12	4

Golfers Drop Match To Mustangs, Close Season In Fourth Place

In the last Big Eight Conference league match of the season, the local linksmen dropped to a fourth place standing, after taking a shellacking from Stockton's Mustangs, 9½-5½.

Ram entry Eldon Davis shared low medalist honors with Stockton competitor Chuck Jeregge. Both players scored the same 2½ points for their teams. The two teams were consistent in their scoring, which ranged from the lower 80's to the upper 70's.

All the eight conference teams met at Napa's Silverado course last Monday. The teams played 36 holes to qualify for the six low medalist ratings. A team participation trophy was also awarded.

George Grantham made 55 errors at second base in 1923 when he was with the Chicago Cubs, a modern National League record.

Netters Bracken, Botsford Compete In State Championships At Fullerton

Top netmen from Northern and Southern California will clash for the state championships in both the singles and doubles divisions this Friday and Saturday in Fullerton.

The north state section matches were held last weekend in Monterey with the top eight players in both singles and doubles competition gaining the right to face the top eight players in both divisions from the southland.

Top seeded in the state tournament will be Chris Crawford of Menlo College, a member of the victorious 1958 Davis Cup team.

In the Big Eight championships held two weeks ago in Sacramento Rawson Lloyd of Modesto overwhelmed Jim McManus of Oakland 7-5, 6-4 to win the conference singles title. Lloyd avenged an earlier defeat by the Thunderbird number one man.

The top eight players in the conference won the right to play in the state sectionals held at Monterey last weekend. Those gaining the right to represent the conference were Lloyd, Dan Teves and Bob Gill, Modesto; McManus, Ken Stanley and Russ Wiekwire, Oakland; Frank Francois, Stockton, and the Rams' highly rated Fred Botsford.

Selig Wins NCPSA Award; Perpetual Plaque To College

John Selig, political science instructor here, was awarded the annual Presidential Citation of the Northern California Political Science Association May 2.

Selig received the award at the association's annual meeting, a day-long session on the University of San Francisco campus.

The award is made on the basis of an individual's achievements in instruction, community service, participation in the association's work, and published research.

Along with a certificate, the award included a perpetual plaque, which now hangs in President Louis Conlan's office. The plaque will remain at the college for a year.

Selig, who is a former president of the group, states that this is the first time the association has ever presented such an award to one of its own members.

The association is composed of political science instructors from the Northern California colleges and universities. At the meeting California politics was the main topic of discussion.

An instructor here since 1936, Selig received his B.A. degree at the University of San Francisco and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees at the University of California.

POLITICAL SCIENCE Instructor John Selig is shown holding the award he received recently in recognition of his community participation and leadership in political affairs.

Competitive Organizations Combine Efforts, Preparations For Festival

By Pat Perkins

WITH the Spring Festival drawing near, the various organizations on campus are making preparations for the May 15 affair. End of semester activities are being planned as the final midterm period comes into focus.

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity held its formal initiation last week. The organization's new active brothers are Noel Blincoe, Ron Cararol, Gary Filipula, George Huega, Gary Lahr, Phil Sergeant, Dave Simmons, Salvador Ting, Elliott Washington and Read Yeadon.

As the Soph Ball is rapidly approaching, couples are reminded to enter the King and Queen contest.

Gamma Sigma Sigma service sorority is happy to add to its long list of active members the following new pledges: Phyllis Bauman, Mary Ann Gooschin, Linda Saillete, Margaret Lindstrom and Linda Ryan.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held its semi-annual pledge dinner May 9 at the Cliff House. Three traditional trophies were presented to brothers Bob Basso, "Most Sadistic"; Larry Feldman, "I Tried," and Paul Bieberdorf, "Best Brother." A new trophy, the "Strongest Hand" trophy, donated to the fraternity by this semester's pledge class, was presented to Sam Franzella. New members are Bill Lambert, Bill Ideker, Dick Kentera, Lee Bertolone, Serge Tschernisch, Joe Moreno, Dan Barter and Ken Anderson.

The International Relations Club held its Model United Nations at the college last Saturday. Delegates from nine other two-year colleges attended.

Student Discount Rate Offered For Emlyn Williams

Students interested in attending this special matinee performance, beginning at 2:30 Saturday afternoon, may obtain tickets at the finance office in Smith Hall. Prices at the special rate are $2.50 and $1.65.

In the performance, also entitled A Solo Performance Of Scenes From The Novels, Williams, the noted British actor and playwright, will render a re-creating of Charles Dickens' celebrated tour of America, in readings of Dickens' own works.

This week's presentations in San Francisco are the only showings of this program on Williams' current tour of the United States.

Emlyn Williams As Charles Dickens was heard in San Francisco six years ago during a two-week theater run. On Williams' current tour, he will also give performances of Dylan Thomas' A Boy Growing Up. Further information can be secured at the Curran theater box office, 445 Geary St.

Retail Floristry Club Display Wins Prize

Capturing an award with its first entry in a flower show, the newly formed Retail Floristry Club was presented with a second prize ribbon for its display at the recent San Francisco Garden Club Show.

Publicity chairman for the club, Adeline Steinway, stated that the show, held in the rotunda of the De Young Museum, attracted many other amateur groups.

Unity of color and gracefulness of design in the college's entry were achieved with the use of an antique metal swan resting on a low metal base that simulated a sled. Also incorporated into the display were bronze snapdragons, tangerine carnations and new autumn roses.

4 H&R Students Vie For Sheraton Award

One of four qualified students of the Hotel and Restaurant department will be selected to receive the fourth annual Sheraton Corporation American Award during a formal dinner to be held at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel tonight, according to Lawrence Wong, director of H&R department placement and faculty award committee co-ordinator.

Thirty-one graduating students in the H&R were screened by the faculty for their class work, leadership, grades and all-around ability, and as a result, four finalists were chosen.

The finalists are George Bettosini, Larry Ernest, William Murphy and Robert C. Sheridan.

The winner will receive a personal plaque, in addition to having his name placed on a perpetual plaque along with former winners.

Tryouts Now In Session For Student Speaker At June 12 Commencement Ceremonies In Riordan Auditorium

By Elmer Milligan

Tryouts for student speaker at commencement ceremonies on June 12 at Riordan Hjgh School auditorium are now being held by a faculty committee headed by William Culver, according to John Brady, commencement committee chairman.

Approximately 825 students will be awarded their Associate in Arts degrees on this occasion. These include the graduates for the entire year, summer session 1958, Fall 1958 semester, and Spring 1959 semester.

Dr. Harold Spears, superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools, will present the traditional and special commencement awards, and Dr. Louis G. Conlan, college president, will confer the degrees.

A major event of the program will be the presentation of the President's Award Plaque to the man and woman graduating students, who during their enrollment have given the most service to the college.

Another major award will be the Scholastic Cup, presented to the two students, one man and one woman, who have gained the highest grade point average during their enrollment here.

Music will be furnished by the college concert band, under the direction of Meyer Cahn, and the A Cappella Choir, under the leadership of Robert Morton.

The number of commencement tickets given to each graduate for members of his immediate family will be determined by the size of the class, Brady stated.

As a prelude to commencement, an assembly will be held in the library in Cloud Hall at 10 a.m. Wednesday, May 27, Gertrude Norgard, acting dean of women, announced.

The program, a presentation for all graduating students here, will include a greeting to prospective graduates by President Conlan; a talk on the importance of commencement by Donald Snepp, English instructor, and a few musical selections by the Men's Glee Club.

The main event at the assembly will be the awarding of scholarships to 27 students of the college.

Scholarships to be presented, Dean Norgard said, are the Dr. A. J. Cloud Scholarship, Margaret Dougherty Scholarship, Alice Eastwood Floriculture Scholarship, Academy of Advertising Art Scholarship, Chinese Students Club Scholarships, Graduating Class 1958 Scholarship, Square and Circle Scholarship, Hotel and Restaurant Scholarship, and a Criminology Scholarship.

Sigma Delta Chi Directors Will Meet Here Today

Leaders in the newspaper and magazine world, comprising the Board of Directors of the Northern California chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, will honor the journalism department of City College by meeting here at noon today!

The group will be headed by Richard Lamb, president, California editor of Business Week; Charles Schneider, editor of The San Francisco News; Campbell Watson, California editor of Editor and Publisher; David Schutz, managing editor of The Redwood City Tribune; Robert Eunson, Far Western editor of the Associated Press; Richard Talley, Menlo Park publisher; Albert M. Colegrove, Scripps-Howard feature writer; Jack McDowell, political editor of The San Francisco Call-Bulletin, and Al Gilbert, past president.

The meeting here was in response to an invitation from the journalism department. Hosts for the college are journalism instructors Joan Nourse and George Mullany, and Dr. O. E. Anderson, representing the administration.

Friday Last Day To Petition For 'Leave'

Last day to file petitions for a leave of absence is this Friday, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

Any student who wishes to petition for a leave must first see his counselor to obtain the necessary forms and signatures, and then file the petition with the registrar's office.

Miss Learnard stated that second midterm grades of all students applying for leaves will be checked. If the grade average is below 1.5, a notice will be placed in the student's folder stating that he is not eligible to return until he has been readmitted by John J. Brady, coordinator of student welfare, or the readmissions committee.

Jazz Band To Open 1st Marin Festival

With varied media of small combo, octet and full jazz orchestra, the college's musicians will travel to College of Marin tomorrow to open and participate in the first organized junior college jazz festival, Meyer Cahn, band instructor in charge of the unit disclosed.

Twelve colleges in the Northern California area will compete over the three-day festival period for prizes which will be awarded to the group best qualified as representative of the jazz idiom.

Built around a nucleus of former professional side men Dave Phares on saxophone and Richard Tanguay on valve trombone, the college's musical contributions will consist of Leonard Bernstein's Cool, from his West Side Story composition, and interpretations of the Peter Gunn theme music played by the full 15-piece jazz orchestra as openers. Octet and small combo renderings of various "classic" jazz numbers will follow with special emphasis on an octet arrangement of Beat Generation from Downbeat magazine.

Each night during the festival, six bands will take 20-25 minute sets from the first downbeat at 8 p.m. On the third and final night of the festival the remaining units will vie for the prizes which will be given following a lecture-demonstration by Dr. S. I. Hayakawa, noted scholar and lecturer.

A dance, with music furnished by the groups competing will round out the final stage of the event.

Deadline Set For AS Candidate Petitions

Candidates for Associated Student offices have until midnight this Friday to file their petitions, according to Pete Pedrotti, Sr., election commissioner.

Petitions are available at the office of the Dean of Student Activities, S-148, the Dean of Women, S-150 and the AS office, S-140.

Each candidate will be required to submit three 5 by 7 inch pictures and five 2 by 3 pictures. Posters no larger than 14 by 22 inches are to be turned in to the Election Committee for approval between May 15 and May 28. These posters are to be placed around the campus and in Cloud Hall and Science Hall by members of the committee.

Elections are scheduled for Monday, May 25, and Tuesday, May 26, between the hours of 8 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Findings of recent satellite studies indicate that the Earth is slightly pear-shaped with the area of greatest bulge occurring in the southern hemisphere.

War Pictured As Immoral, Unnecessary

By William Forshay

HISTORY often appears to be made of three phases: war, preparations for war, and treaty periods when protestations of an eternal love for peace and non-aggressiveness are made. This would be comic if it were not for the endless tragedy involved.

Clausewitz remarked that war was simply "an extension of national policy when other diplomatic means have failed." Indeed, it is often resorted to before diplomatic means have even been tried. In addition, it is often over a trivial or non-existent issue or a manufactured one designed to suit selfish self-interest.

SELF-INTEREST CLOAKED

Aided by over-emotionalism, clever propaganda, and an ever-growing appeal to national pride, the blood of the next generation's finest young men is shed, and civil conditions are created that end in near-despotic rule in normally and nominally "democratic" nations.

Urged on by the bugaboo of "national security," pride is instilled in a populace capable of informing on friends and relatives even on suspicion. Doubtful cases of "acts against the government" are convicted by partisan presses and vindictive (self-styled) "protectors from the communist menace" who seek to grasp the reins of government in greedy, rapacious hands.

Insidious "guilt by association" stalks normally forthright people and makes them avoid friends who have dared to criticize the nation and its policies or even those who read or discuss certain modern day and history-making literature.

CODE EQUALS RULE

War is not, however, a national matter. It is actually a matter of logic and individual logic at that.

Society, despite its political forms, is ultimately made up of individuals. These individuals establish their code of conduct and from this code one rule becomes ingmediately held in most civilized nations (including Russia).

That rule is that it is morally wrong for one person to take the life of another. This is extended (in English law particularly) to two or ten or hundreds of individuals. A mob committing a lynching is co-equally guilty of murder.

Enlightened nations are now abolishing capital punishment and this rule of reason is one of the points often cited. Even a nation does not have the right to take a single human life. The Bible reserves that right to God and both Lao Tze and Confucius condemned bloodletting.

It is no more right or moral for a nation to harm or attempt to take the life of another nation than it is for an individual to harm or take the life of another individual. The reason is simple and logical.

NATIONS ALSO INDIVIDUALS

Nations are made up of societies of individuals whose morals code insists that they respect the individuality of others. Life-taking causes a complete loss of individuality for persons and nations. (E.g., Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia.) Since the rules and moral rights that govern the individual supposedly make the rules and morals that govern the nation of the individual, it becomes immoral for that nation to make war. War is therefore immoral and not logical in any society.

A defensive war is a question of survival and survival is not (necessarily) immoral. However, as Ernest Hemingway pointed out, "An aggressive war is the great crime against everything good in the world. A defensive war which must necessarily turn to aggressive at the earliest moment is the great counter-crime. But, never think that war, no matter how necessary or how justified, is not a crime."

Thus the logical morals individuals impose upon each other prevent destruction of individuals on the human level. It is a pity that these same individuals consistently fail to impose such logic on the nations they compose and find themselves ever and again committed to the immorality of war.

Mankind is eternally engaged in verbal self-improvement. If these verbal engagements were transmitted to active participation of all clear thinking individuals, war would be impossible and honorable peace inevitable.

32 Hats In Ring For May 25-26 Balloting

Soph King, Queen Crowning Set For Ball At 'Village'

Crowning ceremonies for the Sophomore Class king and queen will be featured at the Sophomore Ball Saturday night at The Village, 301 Columbus Avenue, according to Sophomore President Jackie Pera.

Polynesian Paradise is the theme for the affair, which will last from 9 p.m. until 12 midnight. Jimmy Vaughn will provide the music with a 10-piece orchestra upstairs on the main floor and a combo downstairs.

Dress for the dance is semi-formal and admission is free with an Associated Student card and $2.50 without one, Miss Pera said.

The crowning of the king and queen will take place in the upstairs room at 10:45 p.m.

Candidates for the crown, who will be chosen by penny voting, and their organizations are, for king, Larry Feldman, Alpha Kappa Rho; Tony Bartmann, Alpha Sigma Delta; Al Guaraglia, Beta Tau; Jack Roach, Phi Beta Delta; Bob Stammer, Hotel and Restaurant; Sam Allen, Student Council, and Alberto Salamanca, Student Council.

Running for queen are Arleen Kor-

Boxing, Awards Highlight AMS Smoker May 26

Featuring a card of nine matches, plans for this semester's edition of the semi-annual Associated Men Student smoker, to be held next Tuesday in the men's gymnasium, have recently been released by Boxing Coach Roy Diederichsen.

Diederichsen said that women as well as men will be welcome at the smoker. He also stated that students would be admitted free with Associated Student cards, and parents who accompany students with AS cards will be admitted free also. Students with registration cards will be admitted for 25 cents.

Proceedings, which start at 7:30 p.m., will feature an evening of boxing matches by students here. Boxing matches before intermission are scheduled with Rudy Jones vs. Al Reyes, 115-pound division; Milt Wong vs. Al Guerrero, 120-pound division, and Hal Abdul vs. Rudy Gallardo, 125 class.

During intermission medals will be awarded to the championship teams of the three intramural leagues, and to the highest individual scorers in each league, Gerry Del Secco, Chuck Prandi and Rudy Vasquez.

The second half of the show will feature Jara Becrum pitted against Rudolph Ranous in the 135-pound class; Miguel Guevas and Dennis Sweeny, 145; Don Black and Jim Leonard, 155.

The final three matches will feature Don Thompson and Mike Hancock at 165; Giles Turner and George Perry, 175, and Bruce Anderson and Den Beyrna, heavyweights.

Night Hours May Lie Ahead For Library

Heavy student response to recent questionnaires circulated on campus may result in the opening of the college's library in the evenings next semester, according to Edward Sandys, dean of instruction.

While commenting on a possible evening schedule of operation for the library, which is contingent on a decision by the administration, Sandys emphasized that such a move would be only on an experimental basis.

Several hundred questionnaires have been returned, indicating that interest in this proposed project exists among students here. If the administration decides in favor of evening hours on an experimental basis, further student response through considerable evening attendance could conceivably result in a permanent evening status for the library, Sandys stated.

Tony Bartmann

THE NEED FOR ACTION is the basis for the formation of the United Students Party. If I am elected my promises will be expressed in action. I consider it my obligation to fulfill the wishes of all the students, not just a few. Here are some of my plans:

1. To extend the hours of operation for the cafeteria.

2. To open the library at night.

3. Reciprocal privileges with surrounding colleges.

4. A student plan for reduced rates on automobile insurance.

5. Inter-collegiate social affairs.

In order to carry out my plans and ideas I have tried to select the people who will best represent you, the students of City College. These people have united to give you the things you need.

TONY BARTMANN

Presidential Candidates Will Deliver Campaign Speeches At AS Election Rally Friday

Thirty-two self-declared candidates will be vying for 20 Associated Student offices next Monday and Tuesday, when the polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., Pete Pedrotti, Sr., election commissioner, announced last week. All candidates will be introduced and presidential hopefuls will give their campaign speeches at a special outdoor election rally to be held near the Redwood Ram this Friday during College Hour.

Competing in what should be a closely contested race for the top office of AS President are Ben Northrup, Individual Party, and Tony Bartmann, United Students Party.

As the running now stands, these are the only political parties entering candidates for offices in the race for student government leaders for Fall, 1959.

The United Students Party is making its first appearance on the political scene at the college, and is a merger of the IFC-ISC and the Independent parties, USP spokesmen said.

The 32 students who declared their candidacy had entered the race for the six major AS positions and 14 Student Council seats as of last Thursday. The indefinite number of candidates can be attributed to the fact that the last day for filing petitions is after Guardsman press time.

Running for AS Vice-President are Arlene Crabb (USP) and Sue Shaw (Indiv.).

Associated Men Student presidential candidates are Mike Haskell (USP) and Lou Cooper (Indiv.)

Vying for the Associated Women Student presidency are Judy Day (Indiv.) and Dawnita Campbell (USP).

Next semester's Sophomore Class will be led either by Tessa Thompson (Indiv.) or Tony Lopez (USP), while the two Freshman Class presidential aspirants are Bill Keane (USP) and Bill Ideker (Indiv.).

The USP has a large group of candidates vying for the seven council seats specified for the sophomore and freshman sections respectively, whereas the Individualists have entered six freshmen and three sophomores.

Candidates for Freshman members of council are Individualists Margaret Alvaro, Vicky Aumann, Honey Fast, Hasko Hoffmeister, Dick Kentera, Bill Lambert; United Students Party members are Dan Dirst, Jack Vergara, Betty Hontalas, Jean Miller and Jerry O'Brien.

Voting will be by machines, and locations of the polls are in Science Hall, at the Silver Pole, against the west center wall of Cloud Hall in the Quad, in Smith Hall next to the bookstore, and at the south entrance to the Cloud Hall library.

No campaigning will be allowed within 100 feet of polls, Pedrotti warned.

A large number of the 1835 eligible voters is expected at the polls where each voter will be required to submit his AS card for punching and to sign the register of that poll before entering the voting machine.

The election committee, headed by Pedrotti, will supervise the actual polling by conducting the operation of the voting machines with the aid of Alpha Phi Omega fraternity and students from political science classes.

Pedrotti emphasized that each AS cardholder should vote to ensure the success of the election, and he also urged all students to attend the rally this Friday to get a clearer perspective of the candidates and the issues.

Election results will be posted Wednesday, May 27.

Last semester's elections brought in the largest number of votes in two years when nearly 26 per cent of the 2325 eligible voters turned out at the polls.

Accounting Classes Draw First Place In National Exam

Outdoing classes from some of the country's leading universities, the college's accounting classes captured first place last week in a national examination conducted by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

"This was the highest median score hy any secohdary accounting class that has participated in the contest during the last five years," Harry R. Buttimer, business department instructor here, stated.

The papers were graded in New York and returned the same week. The results were a factor contributing to the morale of accounting students interviewed by prospective employers who visited the campus last Wednesday in the business recruitment day program, Buttimer declared.

"The examinations are a big asset to the business department," Buttimer stated, "for it helps us ascertain whether our standards are up to par. Compared with some previous scores, this year's scores really proved outstanding."

The school department paid the required 50 cents per paper fee which the institute charges for grading.

Entertainers Add Spice To Fashions In 'Fling' Tonight

The college's Associated Women Students, Recreation Association and Inter-Sorority Council climax their social events for the semester with the Feminine Fling to be held from 7 to 9 o'clock tonight in Smith Hall, according to Arleen Kordoules, AWS president.

Highlighting the evening will be a bridal show displaying special gowns for this occasion. Diane Robinson, Karen Bluechel and Dinne Wilson will act as models.

Invitations have been sent to all AWS cardholders, but other women students as well are invited to attend. Admission is free.

Since this is to be an informal gathering, casual attire may be worn, Miss Kordoules said.

Dessert of assorted pastries and coffee will be served by Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority sisters.

The Margaret Dougherty Trophy, given in honor of the former dean of women, will be presented to the sorority that maintains the highest total grade point average for this semester.

Last semester Zeta Chi outsmarted the other sororities by achieving the high grade point average. Theta Tau placed runner-up in the competition and received honorable mention.

Heading the various committees are co-chairmen June White, Carolyn Heath, Pat Arden and Arlene Nielson, decorations and serving; Norah Chavez, invitations; Arlene Crabb and Ingrid Holberg, publicity; Beverly Johns, programs, and Miss Kordoules, entertainment.

Ben Northrup

IF ELECTED PRESIDENT, my main goal will be to develop unity among all students. Unity will bring spirit and pride.

To improve unity I propose a three-point program:

1. A 20 per cent discount on all food in your cafeteria and fountain.

2. Those wishing only a parking permit will pay only two dollars for this privilege; Associated Student card will NOT be required.

3. To promote unity among students.

THIS CAN BE DONE, AND WILL BE DONE IF I AND MY PARTY ARE ELECTED.

I feel that my past record vouches for my ability to lead the Individual Party and the presidential office in a manner which will be a credit to the college and the Associated Students.

BEN NORTHRUP

600 Earlybirds Sign For Summer Session

An all-time high of 600 students pre-registered for summer session during the first two days of registration, as compared with last year's total of 400, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

Miss Learnard estimated that approximately 1300 students will attend this year's summer session, and stated that any student who still wishes to attend must report to the registrar's office by June 4 to fill out a form.

The registrar also announced that all registrations must be confirmed on June 18 at S-117. If a student fails to confirm his registration on this date, his place will no longer be held in the class of his choice.

PREPARING FOR TONIGHT'S FEMININE FLING, sponsored by the Associated Women Students, are Arlene Nielsen, Arleen Kordoules and Bunny Tollefsen.

'Do Nothings' Risk Own Future In Venting Anger On Term Paper

AS THIS SEMESTER goes into its final weeks and hundreds of students are working on the final drafts of their term papers, it seems an appropriate time to comment on the term paper as a student aid and an integral part of many courses.

Term papers probably rank immediately below exams on the lists of "things-to-vent-my-anger-on" which are kept, mentally at least, by a great many non-thinking and irresponsible students whose philosophy is "do as little as possible and hope for the best." That term papers are not exactly held in the highest esteem by many students comes as a surprise to no one.

Although dislike for reference papers sometimes appears to take the form of college-wide acceptance, it is also true, fortunately, that a great number of students in any institution are capable of recognizing a term paper assignment as a most worthy project whose aim is to help, not hinder, the student as he searches for a meaning in each of his classes.

For students who plan to further their education through upper division work, term paper assignments in the lower division are invaluable. Regardless of the field of study to be entered, almost all upper division students' chances of success are largely contingent on their ability to write a term paper. Almost all upper division students, particularly those in the social sciences, English, philosophy and humanities, are confronted with countless term projects and periodical reports; it is the students who have received adequate preparation who will be most apt to complete this vital phase of a course successfully.

It follows, therefore, that students here who hope to transfer to four-year institutions in the near future, can fortify themselves for the exacting upper division routine by applying themselves to their term paper assignments while in the lower division.

Playing a larger role in some students' academic lives than some observers imagine, the term paper can aid students in the following ways:

In compiling a reference paper, a student gains invaluable experience in doing research and becoming familiar with various sections of a library.

When diligent research provides the student with a spate of new ideas, he gains further experience in learning to arrange these ideas in a logical and comprehensible fashion, enhancing his faculties for clear and logical thinking as well as writing.

A student's writing ability, so important in expressing his thoughts in examinations and other scholastic projects, cannot help but be improved by a conscientious and thorough preparation of a term paper.

A capacity for budgeting time, which becomes increasingly important as the student advances, can be gained from working a term paper into one's study time and completing both the paper and the studying without ill effects.

In spite of the many advantages to be derived from the proper compilation of a term paper, it seems as though the enterprising individuals who expend a great deal of effort on such projects are "rare birds" or "non-conformists." We hope that when the merits of the term paper are some day widely recognized, the situation will be reversed, with the conscientious workers in the majority and the lackadaisical "do-nothings" relegated to the no longer enviable position of non-conformists.

Things 'Ducky' In Biology 40

Students Laud Muscovy Exhibit; New Display Presented Each Week

More than 20 outstanding science collections have been exhibited this semester in Science Hall, but last week's display, arranged by four vivacious coeds here, seemed to rate the highest among the students and faculty.

The display was the result of an enterprise from a biology 40 class, in which all students were assigned to project committees, and each committee was requested by Charles Stewart, science instructor, to present a different exhibit each week.

Composing last week's committee were Cay Andersen, Jan Ramirez, Nyla Pueschell and Linda Samuelson.

Featured in the exhibit were two small Muscovy ducks that were born around Easter of this year and were obtained from a farmer in Cloverdale, California.

Muscovies are native from Mexico to southern Brazil and are easily domesticated. They have a small crest and red caruncula tions about the eyes and forehead. They eat corn and grain and drink a huge amount of water.

The Muscovies are the largest of the domestic ducks, but are not as common as other breeds.

When the Muscovies are young, they quack like any other duck, but as they reach maturity the quacking ability decreases and the ducks acquire the ability to hiss.

Because of their quiet hissing attitude and their ability to domesticate, Muscovy ducks are considered very good pets, members of the project committee said.

Perhaps the most interesting characteristic of the ducks, the coeds said, is the beautiful change of colors they undergo during their existence.

The ducks are yellow when they hatch, three months later they become white, and as the Muscovies mature their feathers turn different colors.

Monkeyshines Steal Scenes In Little Theater's New Production

Probably the most gifted character aetor to trod the boards of the Little Theater, Mike The Monk, symbol of the center of controversy in Inherit The Wind, the theater's latest production, requires no makeup, never forgets his lines, and takes his cues like an Abbey Theater pro.

Mike, who resides at the Ansel W. Robinson Co., at 135 Maiden Lane, has only a bit part in the play. However, he hopes that this will be the big break he's been looking for.

Attired in sunglasses and a purple beret, Mike said, "Good chimps seem to be at a premium in Hollywood. Numerous variety shows feature monkey acts; TV situation comedies often use us in bits. What I'd really like to land is a part in the old standby—Tarzan films."

When Michael Griffin, drama director, heard of the east naming the bit player "Mike," he calmly remarked, "Well I'll be a monkey's uncle."

"I GO APE OVER GIRLS," says Mike The Monk, character actor in Inherit The Wind, as he clings to the pretty shoulders of Little Theater actress Maureen Rogers. —Guardsman photo by Esther Lisomo.

Politicians Vie For 'Regular Guy' Rating

AT THE PRESENTATION of the TV Emmy awards a few weeks ago, two of the nation's foremost political figures shared the limelight in handing out the coveted awards. Vice-President Richard Nixon and Press Secretary James C. Hagerty jousted for the attention of the viewers but came out a poor second to such figures as Bob Hope, Jack Benny, et al. But the important objective was captured; they entered your home, and were in your minds for a few seconds. Like the baby-kissers of old, they were supposedly nearer the hearth for a while.

Nixon was there as a simple, funloving TV viewer, typical of the millions watching him. He played the "regular guy" to the hilt.

Hagerty didn't make nearly the good impression Nixon did; in fact, he almost handed out the Emmy to the wrong candidate. For a little while, however, two of the nation's leading figures had shown what regular, TV loving Americans they are—just like us, who, they probably felt, were very impressed by this, as we, attired in a beer-stained undershirt chomped away on a cigar and thought, "Wha' a' coupa great guys." Some viewers no donbt thought it was a sneaky way of gaining personal publicity free of charge.

Nixon and Hagerty aren't the only ones who've found a new form of "baby-kissing." Mrs. Franklin D. Rooseveit recently made a commercial for an oleomargarine concern. Millions of Amerlean housewives watched as she told how much she loves the stuff.

"Gee," the housewife was supposed to say, "The former first lady uses it, just as I do."

One of her lines read, "Twenty years ago we housewives would never have thought of using oleomargarine." Twenty years ago her husband would have booted her out of the White House for getting in the middle of the then big dairymen's battle with the oleomargarine companies.

Another commercial, for a very important cigarette, depicts one of the country's foremost members of the diplomatic corps coming down the steps of the State Department building and expounding on the greatness of this smoke and saying that all his striped pants buddies smoke 'em too.

It might not be long before one of the sporting goods companies will come out with a new set of "Dwight D." clubs. Or maybe Senator Kennedy will plug razor blades on the Friday night fights. It takes a rugged type to do that. Someday H. S. Truman may teach Margaret to play the violin, buy an old smoking jacket and some candelabra. Then he'll be in business.

When that day comes, and it may not be far off, it won't be just the Hollywood starlets who'll be willing to do anything to get in front of a camera.

Hawaii Calls

New 'Staters' Voice Opinions Of Mainland, SF

Consensus among Hawaiian students here reveals that advertisements and faulty presentations tend to mislead the public as to life in the 50th state.

Traffic jams, business competition, television, radio, newspapers, politics and many-more daily routines are no different there than they are here, claim the mainland visitors.

People come and go, live in modern homes, shop in modern towns and really enjoy casual, as well as, formal living.

Here at the college, 74 Hawaii-born students experience life in California.

Al Arnold of Kailua, Oahu, claims, "Of all the 16 states I've visited, California, to me, is the greatest."

"I like the scenic views of Yosemite," Alan Shoening of Honolulu, Oahu, commented.

"Socially, there is much more to see and do here. I enjoy the many fine operas, concerts and plays San Francisco has to offer," says Mel Hewett of Honolulu.

It has been determined that despite the agreeable weather, outdoor life here is limited at certain times of the year, whereas, the people of Hawaii experience almost consistently mild weather.

Andy Lau of Honolulu states, "I don't believe there is another place where there are finer beaches than ours."

"The first thing I want to do when I go home this summer is to go surfing; there's no surf here," declared David Dung of Kailhi, Oahu.

Bill Fuller of Honolulu states, "I think the beaches here are less clean and the water too cold for swimming."

Cynthia Char of Kalmuki, Oahu, remarks, "I like the wide area of travel here. Eating pizza pie is one of the many pleasures I've experienced."

"For seems to be everyone's pet peeve, but because of its newness to me, I like it," claims Ann Ligsay of Kahuku, Oahu.

Jim Meyer of Honolulu — "The crowdedness in which the homes are built in San Francisco seems to eliminate all privacy. One can even hear the whispers of his neighbors."

"As a whole, California is quite favorable, and that's why I chose to further my education here," commented Dick Visperas of Waihiwa, Oahu.

Foresight

By Dick Dyer

JAMES ARNESS, in the opening seconds of each episode of Gunsmoke, has walked down the main street of Dodge City every Saturday night for 220 consecutive weeks, and has drawn his Colt and "killed" Joe Gunslinger, the epitome of all Western badmen.

That's as much as the viewing audience sees, but there's more to the tale than that. Suppose we "observe" the aetors on the set and try to reconstruct exaetly what happens from there.

The director yells "Cut!" Arness, who is obviously not a thinking man, lights up an L&M, as the would-be gunman rises to his feet.

Arness: "Great fall, Sam. It's too bad they never eateh it on camera."

Arness: "Good show. By the way, Sam, how many times have I 'shot' you now? Chester tells me it just passed the 200 mark in January."

Sam: "That's right, Jim. Well, I'm due over at the Desilu lot at noon where Rory Calhoun is to splatter me all over the wall with a sawed-off shotgun. See you later."

Sam, a typical full-time extra, happily picks up his paycheck and leaves the set. Sam represents the hundreds of extras and stunt men who make their living by getting shot at, by falling off cliffs, horses, and houses, and by those who assemble in a noisy mob to lynch the innocent hero, among other things.

This brings us to the subject in question, how much is an extra worth? That is, what does the poor fellow get for his troubles? According to statistics, he usually gets plenty.

Take the average TV lynch mob shouting, "Let's go in and string Longley up." For this, each extra gets the union minimum of $22.05 per day.

If a closeup is taken of an extra, he gets an additional $7.75. If an extra fires a six-gun at Vint Bonner (John Payne, for example), he receives $63.33. When an extra speaks so much as one word of dialogue, he is officially classified as an actor and entitled to $80 per day on TV or $90 a day in motion pictures under the Screen Extras Guild contract.

Further breakdown reveals the following pay scale per day: falling into a river or getting doused with a bucket of water, $4.25; wearing an artificial beard, $7.75; wearing a full uniform, $6.89; riding a camel, $33.89, and leading a camel, $17.75.

An extra who merely shows up for an employment interview is entitled to ear fare of $1.50, whether he is hired for the TV episode or not. On top of this, if the extra has to wear a costume for the interview, he is paid another $5.00.

Western stunt men, on the other hand, unquestionably deserve every penny they get because of the many hazardous feats which they perform.

Their pay rates generally are as follows: saddle fall, $100-150; saddle fall from a running horse, $150-$200; horse fall, $250-300; being dragged by a horse, $150 and up depending on how far and over what terrain, and falling off a building, $300 and up according to the height.

•Books Burden Students?

Editor, The Guardsman:

In regard to our efficiently run library: Why is there no one at the end of each long day to put books back on the shelves in the reserve reading room? Although it is the duty of each student to replace a book, this is not done and therefore an added burden is placed on the next student.

Twin Athletic Ideas Pass At CJCSGA Meet

By Nick Peters

THREE RESOLUTIONS and two recommendations were the results of six hours of heated deliberations in the highly successful athletic workshop of the California Junior College Student Government Association (CJCSGA) state convention held in Long Beach on May 6-9.

Of the three resolutions drawn up, two were passed by large margins in the General Assembly, both having stemmed from the Northern Region conference in Modesto last month, therefore giving the colleges from this area an unprecedented victory over the perennially influential Southern delegations.

NORTH-SOUTH PLAYOFF

The first resolution, and the one of utmost importance, took up over two hours of workshop debate and eventually led to a stipulation for a North-South football playoff to determine the State grid champ.

After two differing opinions were aired, the workshop passed 27-18-4 the Northern resolution whereby two governing bodies would be set up—one for the four Northern conferences and another for the Southern quartet.

Each body would contain the four respective conference commissioners and three sportswriters from that region as appointed by the State Athletic Commission and would, at season's end, select the championship team from its region to compete in the title hassle.

An attempt by Bakersfield, after the original vote, to remove the sportswriters from the body failed by one, 22-23-8. The Bakersfield delegate felt that metropolitan scribes would be biased in their opinion, but it was explained by a Northern representative that they were needed as tie-breakers and that the State Athletic Commission's selections should be trusted for non-favoritism.

We strongly advocated the Northern resolution although there will be times when good contingents will be overlooked by the voting body. Despite its shortcomings it should prove a great deal better than the alternate plans which required an extensive playoff schedule to determine the true champ, since the latter methods would expect the same elevens to play as many as 12 games—far greater than the normal maximum.

CAGE CONSOLATION BRACKET

Another resolution favored by the North providing for a consolation bracket at the State basketball championships passed unanimously through both the workshop and General Assembly with comparative ease.

The one resolution that failed to survive the General Assembly barely passed through the workshop. It concerned a plan to re-evaluate the State Athletic Code in regard to the subsidization of athletes.

We felt, along with most delegates from this area, that the problem does not lie in re-evaluation, but instead in enforcement. The State Code, as it stands now, is fairly strict in regards to giving an athlete aid for his services, but poor enforcement has been responsible for the fallacies which are evident in many colleges.

2.0 NECESSARY

In the recommendation department City College suffered its hardest blows as our efforts to allow an athlete to compete on a team if he has the grades to stay in college (10½ units of "D" work) were steamrolled by 40 to 8 in favor of a mandatory 2.0 average.

Most delegates felt that an athlete should have at least a 2.0 to discourage students from entering an institution just to participate in athletics. We argued that the athlete shouldn't be discriminated against because by competing in sports he has less time to study and should not be expected to maintain a 2.0 like Student Council members, who, as leaders, should have better grades.

It was also recommended that the State Athletic Commission make a careful and serious study of "the more basic matters of zoning for athletic purposes with consideration to specialized schools."

Under optional discussion we suggested that neutral referees be employed at the State cage championships in contests involving the host college's conference; meeting with unanimous approval it was brought up that our idea be inserted in the Fall regional agenda.

Championship AMS Cage Tilt Monday Night

By Nick Peters

Crucial playoff games, a fitting climax to a successful Associated Men Student intramural basketball program, are on tap tonight to determine which two contingents square off next Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the men's gymnasium for the grand finale—the championship tilt.

Since Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Alpha Phi Epsilon and Phi Beta Delta finished the Inter-Fraternity Council season with identical 6-1 marks a special playoff plan had to be devised.

Last Monday Alpha Phi and Gamma Phi clashed with the winner of that vital fray meeting the Phi Delts tonight at 7 p.m. in the men's gymnasium for the IFC crown.

On the same court at 8 p.m. Mirnloma Club "B" (Independent loop champions) meet the Hotel and Restaurant Society (Club Activities Board title-holders) with the triumphant five facing the IFC representatives on Monday for the overall laurels.

In deadlocking for the IFC title at 6-1 all three teams appeared fairly even in talent. The Gamma's lone loss was by 27-25 to the Phi Delts, Alpha Phi dropped one to the Gammas, 33-31, and the Phi Delts' sole setback was at the hands of Alpha Phi, 36-27. A flip of the coin determined the IFC playoff set-up giving the Phi Delts an assist by keeping them out of last Monday's battle.

Both Alpha Phi and Phi Delta were handed "gift" wins in the last two rounds of league play as Beta Phi Beta had to forfeit its last pair.

(The Guardsman originally printed last week that Lambda Phi had to forfeit its last two frays which was an error of fact, since Beta Phi was the penalized party.)

Results of the final two weeks of IFC activity found the Gammas routing Alpha Kappa Rho, 60-33, and Beta Tau, 48-32, as clever Rudy Vasquez hit for a phenomenal total of 45 digits. In its only outing Phi Delta outlasted Zeta Phi, 47-32.

In other hussies Lambda Phi edged Beta Tau, 39-35, as "Big Mike" O'Brien totaled 17 markers and Zeta Phi took the measure of Kappa Rho by 34-28 as Warren "Dummy" Downes tanked 12.

Final CAB action saw the Campus Police's Chuck Penndi roll up an impressive 29-point performance in leading his mates to a one-sided 73-48 obliteration of the Filipino Club. The H&R and Alpha Phi Omegn collected forfeit 2-0 decisions over the International Relations Club and The Guardsman, respectively, in scheduled campaign closers.

Ten members from each of the three league championship entries will also be presented with medals between bouts at The Tuesday night fights.

Much credit for the success of the spring 1959 intramural rage program must go to its sponsor, the AMS with President TED KELLER at the helm.

Keller was appropriated over $300 in AS funds for the functioning of the program, the biggest in the college's history.

Ably assisting the AMS by seeing that the program functioned smoothly, the college's Director of Athletics JACK GADDY proved an unparalleled faculty aid by supervising the three-night-per-week proceedings.

4th Place Taken By Ram Golfers On Napa Course

Although landing no better than a fourth spot in the final conference standings, the varsity golf squad showed an abundance of strength at various times during the season, with John Carlin and Mike Andrakin placing among the top five in the all-loop meet at Silverado.

Number one Ram linksman Carlin, who has been averaging a solid score of 75.6 throughout the course of the season, proved himself to be a weapon of victory on more than one occasion.

While in junior high school, a fellow southpaw introduced him to the game, and he has since competed in forms ranging from 15 to 20 tournaments. Carlin also competed with the St. Ignatius golf squad during his prep years.

Second ladder man Andrakin closed out the season with an impressive 78.5, elevating himself from a "do nothing" at San Francisco's Mission High to number three man on the All Conference squad.

Rounding out the group of better performers of the local link maehinery, Elden Davis, shooting consistently in the low 70's, has also proved himself a great asset to the club, while sophomores Larry Barr and Ron Nunan, although still chipping away in the 80's, have steadily improved.

Sirles Specializes In Versatility, Continues Practice In Off-Season

In this age of ever increasing emphasis on specialization, Jesse Sirles is a rarity. This versatile iron man of the track competes for the college as a broad jumper, high jumper, pole vaulter and sprinter, and is a consistent point-getter in each of these events.

Only a freshman, this amazing 5-7, 147 lb. trackster already has a trio of outstanding marks to his credit, broad jump (23-10), high jump (6-1), and pole vault (12-8). While attending Polytechnic High School, he won All-City titles in the broad jump and pole vault and tied for first in the high jump.

A strong believer in year-round training, Sirles feels that only through constant effort and striving for better condition and form will he be able to continue to compete successfully in three field events plus relay-running.

Consequently, he does not stop training between seasons but indulges in light weight lifting for overall body strength and three-quarter effort jumps to improve technique.

Coach Lou Vasquez has expressed the opinion that if Sirles continues to train as hard as he does at present, he may well become one of the greatest all-around field event men in the college's history.

Little leaguers use 10 men in a baseball game. The extra man is a "buck-shortstop," who plays between first and second base.

Bell Cracks 'Stick' Standard In 14.8, Cindermen Salvage Second In Conference Finals

By Jim Payne

After jumping off to a big lead early in the meet, the Ram track and field machine sputtered and finished with 92⅝ points for second place behind Modesto's 103 3/5 in the Big Eight Conference finals at Sacramento's Hughes Stadium last Saturday.

The sultry-hot day saw one conference record tied and four broken, one of them by the college's Jerry Bell, who skipped over the high hurdles in 14.8, bettering the old mark of 14.9.

Bell's victory brought him double pleasure. Aside from setting a new record, he defeated his arch-rival and co-favorite from Oakland, Sam Perry, by a full hurdle.

San Francisco's only other first was brought in by little John Smith, who hit the tape first in the 100, timed in 10.0. Alex Jenkins ran his best race of the year and pulled out third place points in that race. Smith weakened a little in the 220 but was still able to garner fourth.

Ram Mike Reid, number one rated two-year discus heaver in the nation, tasted defeat at the hands of Modesto's huge Herschel Sanders, who threw the plate 151-4. Reid has thrown 163-3 this year but could only muscle a heave of 148-0 Saturday. Sanders put the shot 53-6½, a new conference record, to continue his day-long domination over Reid, who again finished second.

Waymond Hall of Stockton etched his name in the Big Eight record books when he set a new standard of 23-4½ in the broad jump. This event alone tallied 15 points for the Rams as Jesse Sirles, Othello Carr, LeRoy Wise and Vern Coleman all placed.

Sirles also tied for second in the high jump, which was won by Contra Costa's Lloyd Hall who tied the conference record of 6-4, set in 1958 by San Francisco's Willi Gasper and Ed Costa.

The most pleasant surprise for the Rams was the "come through" performance of Tony Vanee. Vanee was fourth in the mile and "gutted", out a third in the two-mile.

Competitors who placed fourth or better in this meet automatically assured themselves of a trip to Fresno this Saturday to compete in the Northern California J.C. meet.

Besides those already mentioned, Don Brlemle (discus), Ralph Mathis and George Fields (high jump) and the mile relay, which placed fourth, qualified for Saturday's meet.

The Big Eight Conference scores: Modesto 103 3/5, CCSF 92⅝, Oakland 66 1/15, Sacramento 54, San Mateo 44 3/5, Contra Costa 30, Santa Rosa 21 1/3, Stockton 18.

Doubles Team In State Net Finals

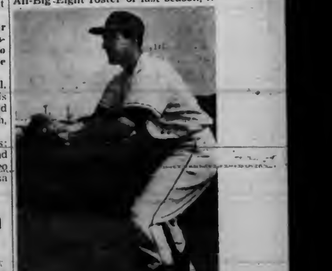
Two members of the college net team competed in the state tennis finals at Fullerton last Friday and Saturday.

The doubles team representing the college consisted of Jaek Bracken and Fred Botsford. No singles player from the college qualified in the face of the smashing forehand and deadly backhand of Menlo star Chris Crawford, who defeated Rawson Lloyd of Modesto to eineh the singles crown.

Other singles quaiifers, along with Crawford and Lloyd, were Bruce Campbell, Menlo's number two man; Jim McManus, Ken Stanley and Russ Wiekwire, the top three men for Oakland's Big Eight Conference champions; George Stoesser, Monterey, and Paul Flores, representing College of the Sequoias.

Other doubles qualifiers were Crawford - Campbell, Menlo; McManus - Stanley and Jerry Nieolet-Wiekwire, Oaklknd; Joe Bixler-Flores, College of Sequoias; Bob Gill - Bob Roster and Dan Teves-Lloyd, Modesto, and Bill Stureh-Dave Barton, Amerlean River.

Slugging Ram Ace Brings Home Bacon Via Base Hit Route



By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Although hard hitting infielders are to be found few and far between in this atomic version of the game of baseball, local diamond enthusiasts have something to be proud of in the person of slugging Ram shortstop Roy Tripaldi.

Although a handful of so-called "experts" might consider the above remark ill-founded on the basis of an obviously poor Ram infield, the fact still remains that Tripaldi has to go down in the books as one of the toughest returnees from last year's delegation.

It was at the conclusion of that eampaign that the long ball hitting youngster from Sacred Heart fell victim to one of the biggest farces in Big Eight baseball history: although hitting at a phenomenal .407 clip and eheeking in with an .850 plus fielding average, he was a forgotten man when the All-Conference honors were passed out, and was forced to settle for a ridieulous consolation award in leading the second team.

Aside from the obvious talents of eateher Johnny May, who was the sole Ram horsehider nominated to the All-Big Eight roster of last season, it seems well apparent that the booming stiek and sparkling glove of the converted third sneker gave their all in a fruitless eampaign for the crown.

Adding to his tremendous performance throughout the '58 pennant chase, Tripaldi has turned in one terrific performance after another through the course of the 14 Big Eight clashes of the current season.

Bolstering the so-so '59 squad, the "Tripper" has seen more than his share of glory in the base hit department In 41 trips to the plate the combination of hard legs and speetacular hitting ability has paid big dividends both in RBI's and batting average.

Former Ram Athletes Slated For Nomination To Hall Of Fame By Vote Of Selections Board

Two athletes will be seleeted to the City College Hall of Fame after results of the third annual voting session, which began last week, have been compiled. The names of the honored pair will be revealed in The Guardsman's last edition on Wednesday, June 3.

In the past two years a total of 17 ex-Rams have been named to the coveted organization. Considering that this number is comparatively high for a two-year total and that the number of worthy athletes would eventually be extinguished, an alternate plan will go into effect whereby only two competitors or coaches will be honored per annum.

President Louis G. Conlan, Dean of Student Activities Ralph Hillsman, Coaches Sid Phelan, Alex Schwarz, Grover Klemmer, Lou Vasquez, Roy Diederiehsen, Roy Burkhead, Lee Eisan, Director of Athletics Jaek Gaddy and ex-Coaches Bill Fiseher and Tom Wilson constitute the 12-man ballot-body which is currently selecting its choices.

Packed Houses Welcome Opening Performances Of Inherit The Wind

Balboa Students To Witness Free Drama Offering

With four more performances scheduled for this weekend and the next, Inherit The Wind made its first appearance here last Friday night before a "packed house."

"Because of the demand for tickets," Michael Griffin, drama director, stated, "a special performance will be given free of charge for students of Balboa High School in their theater on May 27."

For this performance the Balboa students have invited drama students from other high schools all over the city, Griffin added.

A cast of 32 and a staff of 37 present the play by Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee, which deals with the famous Scopes "monkey" trial which took place in Dayton, Tennessee, in 1925.

In the actual trial, a high school teacher was charged with teaching the Darwinian theory of evolution which was against the law at that time. Clarence Darrow defended the schoolteacher, while William Jennings Bryan appeared for the prosecution. Darrow made Bryan the butt of ridicule, and though he lost the case, it was ultimately won and the young man only fined in the first decision.

Capuchin is the smallest player of the group since he is a pure Capuchin monkey rented for the production.

Club Cavalcade: Spring Festival Brings Memories

By Pat Perkins

MEMORIES of a successful Spring Festival still linger in the minds of the members of the various organizations that participated in this event last Friday night. Besides having elections for new officers, the various clubs, sororities and fraternities may also look back on an array of activities of the current semester.

Beta Tau fraternity had its annual "dunko" booth at the May Festival. The Spring '59 and the Fall '58 pledge classes seemed to be the poor victims who were dunked.

Last week Alpha Phi Omega fraternity held its semi-annual installation banquet. Next semester's officers will be Jim Johnson, president; Eckart Sellinger and Joe Tulipano, vice-presidents; Read Yeadon, Gary Filpula and Dave Simmons, secretaries; Pete Pedrotti, Sr., treasurer; Bob Siekmann, historian, and Noel Blincoe, sergeant-at-arms.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity and Zeta Chi sorority joined forces in making their float for the festival. A car wash project is currently on the fraternity's agenda as its money-raising campaign for this semester. Ken Anderson was presented with the outstanding pledge trophy.

A very popular booth at the festival was the hitchrack marriage booth, sponsored by Phi Beta Rho sorority.

Delta Psi sorority held a meeting for nomination of officers for the fall semester at Ginny Hyde's home recently. Plans are being made for a mother-daughter luncheon to be held on May 24. The installation of the new officers will also take place.

The awards social, sponsored by the Recreation Association, was held last Monday. Awards were presented to the students who participated in three-fourths of the planned activities during the course of the semester and maintained a C average.

Observation

Comics More Subtle Than Readers Realize

By William Forshay

SINCE a great mass of the literate American public is conversant only with newspapers and since many of these are concerned only with one section it seems that a few comments and criticisms could easily be made about these so-called "funnies."

Most families who receive newspapers find that the pages of color and/or of humor have been taken over by four lines of thought.

There is still the funny cartoon and strip which attempts to make one smile by placing its protagonist in ridiculous situations with (sometimes) ludicrous results. Among these proponents of slapstick comedy are Buz Sawyer, the very old Katzenjammer Kids, and, of course, Blondie (which moves the action to a theoretically normal American home).

Modern political humor has largely deserted the editorial page to find a permanent and more frequently read position on the comic page. Satirist Al Capp's Li'l Abner, Schulz's delightful Peanuts (who says it isn't political in the sense of commentary on civil issues?), Feiffer's wry commentaries on conformity, and the often bitter or dejected Pogo of Walt Kelly who reflects (sometimes pathetically and sometimes ridiculously) the who's, what's, why's, and wherefores of the American political scene.

Nor are the escapists ignored, as the standard adventure story (which took precedence around 1939 and had a fantastic growth) continues on its gory, often out-of-this-world way with the staring eyes of poor Little Orphan Annie following the newest habit or appearance-named criminal in Dick Tracy (remember Pruneface?).

Flash Gordon continues to save earth beyond the stars while lovable, friendly old Mary Worth tries to save parts of it with a "Life can be beautiful philosophy."

Also in this category is the most beautifully drawn and most artistic of them all, Prince Valiant who never grows older while raising a family and engaging in countless duels where he is wounded every so often and still manages to come up youthful and smiling. Steve Canyon and Terry and the Pirates both fit into this group also.

Finally, there is the real "children's category" which includes the simply-drawn, clean, and unsexy humor of the "great" Walt Disney and is exemplified in other papers by Mik's Ferd'nand and (perhaps) Lynde's Rik O'Shay (which is also a parody on TV westerns).

The prevalence of these comic characters is no indication of their worth or lack of it. Most persons seem to read them almost without caring what the difference is or whether the artist is trying to point out something to them.

Day to day crises in The Heart Of Juliet Jones seem to be nothing more, for example, than a readable soap opera. Few readers recognize the Washington prototypes of Pogo's Okeefenokee swamp characters. Feiffer's characters say things that seem obscure to many readers and certainly aren't complimentary to present day society.

Council Receives Clarification Of Insurance Policies, Debates AS Student Funds Management

By Roy Twitty

Management of student monetary matters, including allotments, partial budgets, and insurance payments, has been in the foreground of Student Council legislation and discussion during the last two weeks. Catastrophe, liability and other miscellaneous types of insurance policies periodically purchased by the Associated Students were explained in detail to the council last Tuesday by Oscar E. Anderson, college controller and financial adviser to the AS. Previously passed by a thin majority, the $600 insurance budget had been threatened by a revote.

Re-appropriation of AS funds previously allotted to the college band was suggested by Bill Forshay, campus affairs co-ordinator. According to the minutes of the May 12 meeting of council, Meyer Cahn, music instructor and band adviser, would not accept the band budget, which amounted to $450.

Return of the money to the AS undistributed fund cannot be effected immediately, according to Ben Northrup, finance chairman, because the band may have spent a portion of the funds.

Scheduled to supply dance music for the Spring Festival, which was held last Friday, the band was unable to appear, according to Bud Andress, Club Activities Board president. One member of the band previously explained to a few council members that the difficulties lie with players who would not be able to perform because of prior commitments.

Reporting to the council about the finance workshop at the recent statewide student government convention, Jackie Pera, Sophomore Class president, stated that this college has the lowest AS card membership of the 64 colleges represented, although the same amount of benefits are offered here.

Charges that the council is "trying to run the AMS" were brought against student legislators by Ted Keller, Associated Men Student president, and Bruce Littman, parliamentarian, during consideration of a $41.50 budget.

The accusation was made when councilman Ferd Marwedel and Bob Tiedeman challenged the fairness of charging admission to fathers attending the AMS Father-Son Night Smoker next Tuesday. The council voted the fathers free admission.

Student Speakers Named For June Commencement

Jacquelyn Pera and Gaynor Abbott were chosen last week as student speakers for the 23rd annual commencement ceremonies to be held June 12 at 8 p.m. in the Riordan High School auditorium, William Culver, chairman of the student speaker selection committee, announced.

Abbott and Miss Pera, both honor students, were selected from a group of eight graduating candidates by a faculty committee of 12.

The students were judged on the basis of academic achievement, speaking ability, and service contributions to the college. Each candidate was required to have a minimum grade point average of 3.5, Culver said.

In addition to the above qualifications, two other factors, fluency of style and speaking efficiency contributed to the selection of the student speakers, he stated.

The subject of Miss Pera's tryout speech was, Is City College Of San Francisco A Glorified High School Or A Top Ranking California Junior College? Abbott's tryout speech was entitled, What City College Has Meant To Me And What It Means To The Community.

Members of the faculty will be assigned to aid the student speakers in the writing of their speeches for commencement. Miss Pera will be coached by Vivian Ward and Walter Krumm will assist Abbott.

Abbott, an electrical engineering major, graduated from high school in Stamford, Connecticut. Prior to his enrollment here in Spring, 1957, he served three years in the U. S. Navy.

Pistol Team Wins First Place Trophy

Once again the college's special police marksman pistol team captured a first place trophy at the Western Revolver Club Association matches sponsored by the Oakland Pistol Club at Knowland Park May 3, according to Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor.

The four men, scoring the individual points winning the trophy, were Charles Terry 259, James Olsen 242, Frank Mateo 238, and William Donovan 211. The counting of these individual scores gave the team a total of 950 points.

Richard Gamble, Campus Police chief, took a first place trophy in the aggregate match as well as three medals for second place in the .45 revolver match, third place in the .38 revolver match, and third place in the .22 revolver match.

Blood Drive Sets State Record For Peacetime Donations With 297 Pts.

Representing the largest amount of blood donated by any Northern California organization during a two-day peacetime drive, the Tau Chi Sigma sponsored annual blood drive, held May 7 and 8 this year, netted a total of 297 pints of blood, exceeding the proposed goal of 250 pints by 47.

Depending on pledges to donate in the future, it is expected that a final high goal of 339 pints of blood may be reached.

Of the organizations and clubs, fraternities led with a total donation of 61 pints, sororities followed with 40, while trophy-winning Veterans Club gave 15 and the Hillel Foundation 5.

Another trophy winner, Beta Phi Beta fraternity, contributed 32, Tau Chi Sigma 15, and Alpha Phi Epsilon 14.

Sororities donating were trophy-winning Zeta Tau 15, Delta Psi 14 and Phi Beta Rho 11 pints.

Blood, collected by the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, was given by students, members of the faculty, and civil service workers.

Forum Distribution Date Set For June 1

Chosen at a recent meeting of the Forum Club, William Forshay was named assistant editor of the Spring 1959 Forum, which is to be distributed June 1.

Other staff members selected were Norman Estes as advertising manager and Adele Goldblatt, James Hyde, Michael Osborn, Brenda Payton and Donald Seratti as editorial assistants.

Special credits for services rendered are to be given to Jack Essex, Clare Jonte, Virginia Eyon Li, Ellis Lumpkin and Alta Pryor.

According to the previously chosen editor, Alexander Klimenko, "Forum is indebted to Ronaldo Castellon for the fine art work on the cover and on the inside of the magazine." Illustrations were also chosen from more than 50 sketches and drawing submitted by advertising arts students.

Because the magazine has been so composed as to include representative work of the entire student body, it should contain something to please everyone, Klimenko added.

Students Invited to Ground Breaking for New Arts & Classroom Building

Leaders to Participate in Ceremony at Site on Next Tuesday at Noon

Ground will be broken at City College on next Tuesday, May 26, at noon for the new $2,000,000 classroom and arts building which will be erected on the north Campus bordering on Cloud Circle.

Ceremonies, which will be informal, will be under the direction of the Associated Students, according to Fred Muller, President. Muller waited upon President Louis G. Conlan yesterday and invited Dr. Conlan to turn the first shovel of earth which will set the machinery of the general contractor in motion.

The affair will be under the direction of Mike Haskell, general chairman, Nancy Canning, Program chairman and Al Salamanca, public relations chairman.

All members of the student body are invited to join in this historic ceremony and be included in a panoramic picture which will be made at the start of the noonday ground breaking.

The new building entrance will face east, and the entrance will be from Cloud Circle on the south, providing easy access from both the Science Building and Cloud Hall.

Contemporary in design, the three-story structure will include 24 classrooms, 10 art and music laboratories, a little theater and a closed circuit educational television network.

Construction of the building will take approximately 18 months. It is expected to be completed by the spring 1960 semester.

LITTLE THEATER

The little theater will accommodate 400 people and will include a small TV training studio. A choral room and a band room for the music department will also be included.

Art laboratories will be provided with the benefits of outside landscaping by having lower windows. The Diego de Rivera fresco will find its proper place in the new building.

LONG TERM PLAN

As an addition to relieve present overcrowding in permanent buildings, as well as to provide standard facilities for students now attending classes in temporary buildings, a master plan is under way in order to meet immediate and long-term requirements at City College.

Under this master plan, the rooms vacated in Science Building and Cloud Hall will be converted from lecture rooms to science laboratories.

Also under the plan, there are additions to Smith Hall that will entail an enlargement of the present coffee shop into a multi-purpose room that can be used for various activities.

ATHLETIC STADIUM

The present archery field will be the site of the new athletic stadium.

The stadium, designed primarily for football, track and field events, will have a capacity of 5,000 upon completion and can be expanded to seat as many as 20,000.

Prospective Graduates To Assemble Wednesday

All prospective graduates are requested to attend a pre-graduation assembly next Wednesday at 10 a.m. in the Cloud Hall library, Gertrude Norgard, acting dean of women, announced last week.

The program will include a greeting to prospective graduates by Louis G. Conlan, college president, and Jacquelyn Pera, sophomore class president; a talk on the importance of commencement by Donald Snepp, English instructor, and the awarding of scholarships to 27 students of the college.

Fred Muller, Associated Student president, will present four Alpha Phi Omega service scholarships.

Vets Have Until May 31 To Transfer Benefits

Veterans attending the college under the G.I. bill who are planning to attend another college at the end of this semester, must apply by the end of May for transfer of their benefits, according to Robin Dunn, in charge of veteran affairs.

Veterans can inquire about their advantages and the processes involved in transferring them to another college in S-134, the office of veterans affairs. Dunn stressed the importance of the transfer application, saying that vets must notify the Veterans Administration of their transfer in order to have their benefits changed to another college.

Official AS Election Results To Be Released Today As New Method Streamlines Balloting

Introduced for the first time at Associated Student elections which ended yesterday, and results of which will be officially released later today, was the new method of flicking one switch to record a straight party ticket vote, according to outgoing election commissioner, Pete Pedrotti, Sr.

Pedrotti added that running a straight ticket simplifies the work of the election commissioner and makes the election appear more realistic to the electorate.

Commenting on the poor electoral response from AS members in previous years, Pedrotti claimed, "If the students can't start to learn to vote while at college, they shouldn't complain about the slack voting habits in city elections."

One bad aspect of the election campaign this semester was that candidates barely had the time to get their petitions in to the election commissioner before the deadline. This was due to the delay in receiving the second midterm grade results, on which a candidate's eligibility to run for office hinges.

However, Pedrotti said that if the deadline date had been extended, the final examinations would then have clashed with, or come very close to the election dates.

Pedrotti described his position as election commissioner as being similar to that of an unbiased umpire, and refused to comment on the election results.

Distribution Of Forum Magazine To Start Monday

By JoAnn Griffin

Free distribution of Forum, the college literary magazine, to Associated Student card holders (with 50 cents price to non-AS members) will take place at the Ramporium starting Monday, according to Alexander Klimenko, editor.

Representative of student writing throughout the year, the Spring 1959 Forum contains approximately 32 pieces chosen from 200 short stories, poems, plays and essays originally submitted.

These include material which, because of its wide range of interest, should please everyone, Klimenko added.

Selection of choice material to be published was made by a group of readers and an editorial board, the board members being Adele Goldblatt, James Hyde, Michael Osborn, Brenda Payton and Donald Serafil.

Ronaldo Castellon, who drew this year's cover depicting a number of students grouped about the Ram, will receive special credits along with Jack Essex, Clare Jonte, Virginia Eyon Li, Ellis Lumpkin and Alta Pryor.

Placing great stress on literature and its enjoyment, the Forum Club's weekly College Hour meetings have featured recordings, tapes, poetry readings of individual student compositions, lectures and discussions.

Forum has evolved from a mimeographed sheet in 1939 to its present printed form. Throughout the year, various types of modern and abstract covers and artwork have been used.

Serving in many capacities, Forum gives students a chance to have their work published and gives many students experience in editing and working on a magazine.

Numerous past editors and contributors to the magazine have now achieved success in professional fields of writing.

AS Leaders To Be Honored Tonight

Presentation of the Outstanding Service Award will be one of the featured events at the semi-annual Student Council dinner in Smith Hall starting at 6:30 o'clock tonight, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities.

This award is presented to the student who has not held Associated Student office this semester, but who the council feels gave most service to the welfare of the college.

In addition to this presentation, current AS office holders will be given various other awards and keys. After this the newly elected AS President will be installed, and he in turn will then install the AS officers who will serve with him during the coming semester.

Hillsman also said that Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, is scheduled to speak at the affair.

Preparation and serving of the food will be under the management of the Hotel and Restaurant department.

Retail Floristry Club Float Captures First Prize At Cow Palace Festival

Striking it rich with its theme of "Miners '49ers," the float of the Retail Floristry Club captured first place at the May 15 Spring Festival, sponsored by the Club Activities Board at the Cow Palace.

Another first prize award was presented to the RFC for its poster advertising the festival, according to Adeline Steinway, publicity chairman for the club. Featured on the poster was a three-dimensional figurine of a dance hall girl dressed in attire appriate to the Barbary Coast theme of the festival.

In addition, the RFC also landed an honorable mention for its booth at the festival.

More than 5000 flowers went into the construction of the float, a massive entry 25 feet long and 12 feet wide. Colors of gold and blue were predominant.

A huge replica of California, done entirely in flowers, dominated the rear of the float. The center portion depicted a gold mining scene, and the front of the float was decorated with two swinging doors, again constructed of flowers and symbolic of one of the old Barbary Coast saloons.

Members of the RFC rode on the float dressed in costumes of the period.

President of the RFC Ronald Ghezzi, assisted by Treasurer Sam Webb, and John McKelvey and Dennis Call, constructed the basic frame work of the float. Decoration of the float, reminiscent of the Tournament of Roses type projects, was done by each member of the Retail Floristry Club.

Mrs. Steinway said that members of the club were indebted to the many wholesalers of the San Francisco Flower Market who donated the flowers used in the float, and also to Harry Nelson of the horticulture department here for use of much greenery which was also incorporated into the float.

Bud Andress, CAB president, stated that gross intake exceeded $900, which was approximately $200 more than last year's spring festival proceeds.

Spring Scholarship Winners To Be Introduced At Pre-Grad Assembly

Two Campus Police To Be Presented $250 Scholarships At Assembly Today

Two students from the Campus Police force were each awarded a $250 scholarship from the International Footprint Association with the presentation slated for today at 10 a.m. as part of the scheduled pre-commencement assembly, according to Fred Fitzgerald, criminology chairman. This is the first time that this association has presented students here with scholarships.

A three-man committee here nominated both men to receive the awards from the association. The committee was composed of Dr. Louis Batmale, dean of instruction; Morris Grodsky, instructor in the department, and Fitzgerald.

With this nomination and the recommendation from Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, James L. Quigley, chairman of the Scholarship Committee of the San Francisco Chapter No. 1, named Gary Blount and Lawrence Miles, both members of the Campus Police, to be the recipients of the cash awards.

Blount, a fourth semester student, has maintained a "B" average in his major field of study, while Miles has a record of better than "B" average for his two semesters at the college.

Change In Policy Delays AA Degrees

Certificates will be conferred in place of degrees at the 23rd annual commencement ceremonies to be held at 8 p.m. Friday, June 12, in the Riordan High School auditorium, John Brady, commencement committee chairman, announced last week.

Because the commencement ceremonies will be held approximately seven hours after the last final examination has been given, the commencement committee and the registrar's office find it impossible to check all of the final grades to determine which students qualify for graduation.

After the grades have been checked, Associate in Arts degrees will be mailed to the graduates, Brady said.

Band Presents Varied Program For Spring Concert This Friday

In its fifth annual spring appearance before students, parents and friends of the college, the concert band, under the direction of Meyer M. Cahn, and featuring violin soloist George Gonsalves, will present a varied program ranging from the Romantic to the modern schools of contemporary music Friday during College Hour in the library.

Gonsalves, who appeared last year on the Ed Sullivan show while serving in the Navy, will perform Cavatina by Raff and will be accompanied by 19-year-old Ming Tsoi on the piano. Miss Tsoi arrived recently from Hong Kong and has come to this country to study music.

Dougherty Trophy Goes To Zeta Chi Sorority

Zeta Chi sorority was once again awarded the Margaret Dougherty trophy presented by Arlene Neilsen, Inter-Sorority Council president, at the Associated Women Student Feminine Fling Bridal Show last Wednesday night.

The award was given to the sorority achieving the highest total grade point average, of which 2.595 was maintained by Zeta Chi. Delta Psi placed second.

Despite the fact that only one award was made, Miss Nielsen said that competition was very close.

27 Awards Due For Presentation Today In Library Program

By Elmer Milligan

Winners of the Spring 1959 semester scholarships will be introduced today at a pre-commencement assembly in Cloud Hall library at 10 a.m., Gertrude Norgard, acting dean of women, announced last week.

All prospective graduates received an invitation to attend the assembly and will be excused from their 10 o'clock classes, Dean Norgard said.

Marion Bachwitz and Jack Hom will each receive a $50 Cloud scholarship, to be presented by Maurice Power, chairman of the Cloud scholarship committee.

The Margaret Dougherty scholarships will be awarded to Lynn Gannon and Carol Stocks by Mrs. John Halcek, president of the Faculty Wives Association.

John Dunn, Hotel and Restaurant instructor, will present four $100 Alpha Phi Omega service scholarships to Beverly Johns, Roberta Kennedy, Bruce Littman and Robert Tiedeman.

Isabelle Lim and Richard Daffner will each receive a $50 Chinese Students' Club scholarship, to be presented by Marcelline McDermott, Chinese Club sponsor.

The two Alice Eastwood scholarships will be awarded by Mrs. Dwight Gladstone, SF Horticulture Society president, to Robert Merritt and Kenneth Mitchell.

Erla Theobald will be presented the $50 Graduating Class of 1958 scholarship. Fred Muller, Associated Student president, will make the presentation.

Two $125 Square and Circle scholarships will go to Joan Lee and Daisy Wong. Harold Friedman, former CSC sponsor, will present the awards.

Jacquelyn Pera and Beatrice Wong, winners of the Bank of America Junior College Business scholarships, will receive their awards from John Becker, Bank of America officer.

San Francisco Flower Industry scholarships will go to Belva Ann Smith, Delmer Rose, and Adeline Steinway. The awards will be presented by Maryhope Cummings, retail floristry instructor.

Lawrence Wong, Hotel and Restaurant instructor, will present seven H&R awards. Winners and their awards are Shoren Fenton, G. H. Roberts scholarship; Ronald McDonald, Accent scholarship; Sam Battistone, Harvey M. Toy scholarship; William D. Murphy, DuPar Foundation scholarship; George E. Bettosini, Executive Stewards' and Caterers' Association scholarship; Larry B. Ernest, Harvey M. Toy Chef scholarship, and Sherman R. Bohn, Duncan Hines scholarship.

The program for the assembly will include a greeting to prospective graduates by President Louis G. Conlan and Miss Pera, Sophomore Class president.

Nine Vicious Scorpions, One Harmless Crab

Biology Display Cases Spotlight Land, Sea Animals

By Bob Paelni

Vicious scorpions and a cooked crab held the spotlight in last week's display in the biology show cases on the third floor of Science Hall.

Large groups of students gathered around the scorpion display, and various reactions, ranging from "oo's and ah's," to "ugh and gads!" plainly demonstrated that group of crawling, clutching creatures had divided the college into two camps of appreciation.

Charles Stewart, biology instructor here, stated that the displays are a compulsory part of the nature study classes. Each student enrolled in these classes must present a display at one time or another during the semester.

According to Stewart, the scorpions, which are not death-dealing in their bite, were found in Marin county. The four students who were responsible for the display are William Belandi, David Keen, Clare Jonté and Jane McKaye.

Stewart also said that the scorpion and crab displays indicate that "live" exhibits are far more attractive to students than inanimate ones. He disclosed that the crab, surrounded with a "sea-side" atmosphere had been boiled before being placed in the show case. He also added that there are no culinary designs in prospect for the crab when the display is removed.

Stewart stressed that full credit for the biology displays should be given to the students in the nature study classes, for they are the ones who choose the subject of the displays, gather the materials and set up the project.

Free Classroom Discussion Can Aid Students' Search For Truth

IN A SOCIETY where many freedoms exist and are preserved by popular will, the right of free discussion in educational institutions is as important as the right to do almost anything else.

An "open society"—one in which discussion that may lead to constructive ideas and suggestions is permitted—prospers by not only permitting but encouraging open discussion of important topics, especially in colleges and universities. The ideas of freedom, on which such a society thrives, are thus furthered, and students can satisfy themselves by becoming increasingly aware of the poignant matters they will be dealing with as adults.

Freedom of classroom discussion, for our purpose, may be defined as a student's right to a complete explanation, when practicable, of material (particularly controversial subjects) covered in a course.

This statement is not without certain qualifications, the greatest of which is the time factor involved in almost every course. Admittedly, an instructor is obliged to give his students a complete treatment of the subject matter and must therefore be the sole judge of how to pace each course and how much time to spend on each topic.

Allowing for the time factor, we find that many college instructors either arbitrarily decide what will be covered in lectures or are able to complete their treatment of a subject before the semester ends. When this is possible, it is often practicable to permit at least limited discussion of certain controversial topics that may spring up in such courses as political science, economics and sociology.

An example of a controversial topic is an explanation of socialism to supplement a lecture on the capitalistic system.

When an instructor endowed with ample time refuses to allow discussion of or answer questions about certain items because he considers them inimical to the "American way of life," he actually undermines his society's freedoms, which have been built on the right to question and discuss such topics. He also hinders students in their quest for the truth.

On the other hand, an instructor who favors an impartial explanation and discussion of one economic or political system as a comparison to its counterparts, helps to preserve the individual rights which make such discussion possible. He allows students to understand all the salient facts and thus to adopt a broader, more universal outlook in their perpetual search for truth in the classroom.

If America's way of life is superior to all others, as its proponents claim, it should not stifle, but should foster an open discussion and comparison of all contrasting systems.

Since our colleges and universities are the primary stimuli of thought, and the top producers of tomorrow's men of action, it is extremely important that the quest for truth in these institutions be given an order of "full steam ahead."

Sherwood Returns To TV With New Show

FOUR new shows have made their TV debuts recently. One is fair and the rest are pretty bad.

Sherwood As Is, a Monday through Friday affair, is a perfect vehicle for old Don's brand of clowning and egotism. On this show, according to the Navajo Kid himself, he is completely free to express his opinion of the sponsor's product. However, the producer's reverse psychology must have worked, for "Bad Boy" Sherwood hardly says a degrading word about it. (You're slipping, Don.)

As for the program itself, it's about as good as a local budget would permit, which isn't anything special. Don's guests have ranged from the astrology-minded grandson of Chester A. Arthur, 21st President of the United States, to a serviceman who has allegedly been taken for a ride in a flying saucer by people from outer space.

Peck's Bad Girl is another one of those hackneyed and undistinguished family situation comedies which are so plentiful these days. The title is really misleading, for it's all about an innocent little girl (Patty McCormack) who continually meddles in her parents' affairs.

Marsha Hunt and Wendell Corey, as the mother and father, try hard enough but are always up to their ears in corn and cliches.

Too Young To Go Steady is pretty much the same, only worse. Here the parents, Joan Bennett and Donald Cook, are buzzing around, trying to watch over their rock 'n roll-crazed son and daughter, while at the same time reminiscing about their bygone teenage days.

It's all terribly trite, wearisome and loaded with worn-out contrivances. At the last minute, Don Ameche, originally scheduled for the lead, bowed out to Cook, which proved to be one of the smartest moves of Ameche's career.

And as for Laugh Line, the new Ivy League type of panel show, it's so trashy that it doesn't even rate a review.

* * *

It Pays To Be Ignorant—The New York Grand Jury, which has been hearing evidence in connection with the TV quiz scandals, has not found a single violation committed by any contestant or member of the show's staffs, with the exception of a perjury indictment against one producer.

According to reports, since no criminal acts have been found, the case and the investigation will probably be dropped.

* * *

Hands Up, Sir Winston—The three top shows in popularity in England are Wagon Train, Lawman and Dotto, according to the latest statistics.

Bondshu Doubles As Stunt Man

Frosh Politico Risks Neck In Pal Joey, Lineup

By Nick Peters

Diving from a yacht into choppy seas, getting clobbered in bar brawls, being struck by speeding autos and swimming from Alcatraz to the San Francisco shore might seem rather extraordinary to the average individual, but it's all in a day's work for student and frosh councilman Paul Bondshu, whose lust for adventure and money has spurred him into the world of camera and reel as a stunt man.

To look at the 5-9, 165-lb. merchandising major one would picture him as a very reserved individual, but an inspection of the "real" Bondshu reveals a magnanimous personality and a man of intense fortitude and athletic ability.

An East Bay native, 21-year-old Bondshu attended Oakland Tech High and was graduated in June 1954. While a senior at Tech he made his "debut" as an unpaid extra in a technicolor production.

Understanding that his rusty-red hair and blue eyes were "naturals" for color films he, after consulting several directors and producers, decided to join the cinema guild and contacted the Dwyer Casting Agency seeking bookings.

His "big break" came immediately after his military discharge when, claiming previous experience, he was cast in an International Settlement nightclub fracas as part of the eventually popular Pal Joey starring Rita Hayworth, Kim Novak and Frank Sinatra.

In that scene he served as a punching bag for an assortment of blows, but as far as he's concerned it was his big moment regardless of the punishment.

After establishing himself in Pal Joey he was given a bigger role in Alfred Hitchcock's Vertigo with Novak and James Stewart in the winter of 1957. This part was actually his first stunt role, as he doubled for a regular actor in a dangerous situation, the main function of a stunt man.

While walking from his parked auto toward Colt Tower he was knocked down by a speeding auto. Of course, he was well padded and an experienced driver was behind the wheel; however, one couldn't convince Boadshu as he was shaking in his boots waiting to be clobbered.

What made it even worse was the fact that it required four "takes" to make the scene perfect. The aftereffects of fright were somewhat relieved, however, when the $125 for only a few hours of work came through the mail.

In his most pleasurable "work" he was employed for two days on the set of Kiss Them For Me with massive Jayne Mansfield and suave Cary Grant, who was cast as a flamboyant naval officer on leave in San Francisco with a great weakness for elaborate parties.

As a result, the entire Fairmont Hotel was rented at $1000 a day with several male extras and female models hired as "party-props," among them Bondshu.

"All we were expected to do," he said, "was to eat, drink and be merry. And it wasn't a bit difficult with all those gorgeous models.

"And that Mansfield, what an appealing 'personality,'" Bondshu exclaiming, adding, "that was the nicest $30 I ever made."

No longer a redhead, Bondshu had to dye his mop blond, as he dubbed for a light-complexioned actor just two weeks ago in a scene from On The Beach, a picture concerning the destruction of the Earth through atomic warfare with but two survivors, both in an atomic powered submarine.

After the sub surfaces in the bay near Alcatraz, the hero (portrayed by Bondshu) leaps from the deck and

Shots At Ramdom

By Jim Clifford

AT THE RECENT Student-Faculty coffee hour, three instructors were discussing some of the more humorous answers they received during midterm week.

A member of the engineering department told of the cutie he pulled on his class by giving them this problem: As a man walked down the Rue Pigalle in Paris he happened to brush against Brigette Bardot.

As a result he became excited and his body temperature went up one degree Fahrenheit. If the energy taken to make the temperature change had been used to lift him straight up in the air, how high would he go?

The instructor thought this was pretty clever until he read one of the answers: Considering the man to be mostly water at the time, he would rise 77 feet.

Some instructors related some answers that, although not correct, added some levity to their day. A poly sci instructor asked what the Roosevelt Corollary was. He got this answer from a coed: It's what FDR died from.

Some weird identifications were tossed around, too. One English major identified the James brothers, William and Henry, of course, as Jesse and Frank.

The political science prof really had some beauts for the Monroe Doctrine, but we'd better not print them.

* * *

ONE COED HERE has a novel way of mixing English homework with pleasure. When her boyfriend, currently at Fort Ord, writes her, she not only answers but sends his letter back—with grammar and spelling corrections efficiently marked in the margin with red pencil.

SHORT SHOTS—We can't recall who said them, but these "oft time gems" were overheard 'round campus last week:

Now when the papers say a man took a fifth you have to read the whole story to find out if he's an alcoholic or a gambler.

Roosevelt proved a man could be President as long as he wanted to; Truman proved it could be anybody; and Eisenhower proved we didn't need one anyway.

WHO WAS the theater-goer who was carried away during the final scene of Inherit The Wind and yelled, "You tell 'em" when Larry Bryggman, as Matthew Brady, a take-off on William Jennings Bryan, started blasting modern interpretations of the Bible?

Education System 'Cleaned Up'

Custodians Backbone Of Spick And Span Campus

By Roy Twitty

Attending classes daily at the college, students learn the names of instructors, become familiar with the campus and its various departments, and gradually set up a daily routine of going to classes, but very few realize how many persons work behind the scenes to maintain the facilities they use.

Walking along pathways and sidewalks, students pass through the well-kept grounds and enter clean buildings that are well-lit and always seem to be in excellent condition. Strolling down hallways that contain few marks of wear, students enter their respective classrooms, receive instruction and homework assignments, and then depart for home.

At the end of a typical day of instruction, after students and faculty members have deserted the campus and grounds for a well-deserved rest, a ceremony not unlike a changing-of-the-guard takes place. Day crews of maintenance personnel hand over the keeping of the college to night teams.

When mentally viewing the college from a different perspective, all these groups of personnel working among students during the day and cleaning up after the students leave at night make the institution appear more like a plant or factory.

Running down the list of buildings and grounds maintenance personnel, one finds an amazing variety of skills and specialties. Custodians, carpenters, stationary engineers, steam fitters, electricians, plumbers, and a non-working custodial foreman are included.

Relatively new to the college, Bill Kelly supervises the entire custodial staff of janitors. Classified as a non-working foreman, Kelly has three janitorial foreman directly under his supervision who work with crews in each building.

The purpose of Kelly's position is to supervise the working foremen to be sure the janitors do a thorough job of cleaning. Each man has a certain tour, or run, that he is to follow which allows the supervisory personnel to know where each man should be in any building within a one-half hour period.

Other groups of maintenance personnel, mainly classified as specialized mechanics, have their headquarters at the college but come under a school system department headed by Robert Stoffer, assistant superintendent of buildings and grounds.

Doubling as an emergency team, these mechanics can be called to any location in the San Francisco public school system, but operate from the well-equipped maintenance shop they have developed in an abandoned building here.

Trouble developed last year when thieves began night raids on vending machine coin boxes located in the Science Hall basement. Working with Dr. Oscar Anderson, college controller, electrician Ed Banderob put on his thinking cap (which he still can be seen wearing) and installed an electrical warning device. This special alarm alerted the Ingleside police when the bandits returned for another raid.

Also aiding the students, Bill Erickson, carpenter, had a lot to do in moving the book store to its present location last semester. He supervised the construction and installation of new shelving and display cases in the store's new building.

Vincent McGarry, chief stationary engineer, supervises four full-time engineers in producing sufficient quantities of steam for heating the three main buildings on the campus. This problem is complicated because the steam must be piped daily to the Smith Hall kitchens from boilers in Science Hall.

Working closely with the stationary engineers, steamfitter Jim Capra keeps the college's heating systems in good operating order, including all radiators and steam lines. He also works closely with the two plumbers, George Quinn and Amelio Zenotti. Both Quinn and Zenottl maintain the many storm drains on the campus streets and curbs as well as the drains on building roofs.

The outward appearance of the college is maintained by Ray Milani, head gardener, who has charge of the cutting of trees and the trimming of bushes and lawns. Milani periodically confers with Anderson and Dr. Louis Conlan, college president, in determining a limited budget to keep the campus grounds in good shape.

Miralomas Dump H&R 49-33; Alpha Phi Flattens Phi Delta 33-18 In Intramural Playoffs

By Nick Peters

Emerging victorious in their playoff engagements, the Miraloma Club "B" entry of the Independent league and the Inter-Fraternity Council champion Alpha Phi Epsilon earned the privilege of competing for the Associated Men Student intramural basketball title in a contest played at the men's gymnasium last Monday night.

Both teams found little difficulty in disposing of their outclassed rivals in the playoff tilts last Wednesday, as the Miralomas rolled over the Club Activities Board Hotel and Restaurant Society by 49-33 while Alpha Phi was trouncing Phi Beta Delta, 33-18.

For the Alphn Phis, the right to represent the IFC in the AMS finals was the result of a long, uphill climb. It saw the team fall back in the round-robin race via an early season loss to defending champion Gamma Phi Ypsilon, pull up at season's end to a tri-way tie for the IFC crown, down the Gammas, 41-28, in a special post-season fray and come back just two days later to whip the Phi Delts for the undisputed fraternity flag.

In the Alpha-Gamma battle, 13 and 11 point efforts on the part of Larry Morgan and Rich Sullivan, respectively, plus outstanding rebound support from their agile teammates proved to be the necessary weapons for a decisive triumph.

Coming back against the Phi Delts, the Alphivc utilized a brilliant defense in clamping the lid on the high scoring talents of opponents Ed O'Donnell, Bill Jenkins and Don Malone, holding them to a 10 digit combine.

Maintaining only a 15-11 halftime margin, the winners pulled away in the second stanza as Sullivan, who led all scorers with 18, tanked 10 final half points to pave the way toward a championship berth.

Miraloma Club "B" displayed a well-balanced attack in halting H&R's bid for the AMS title by shellacking the Smith Hall five, however, the losers provided tough first half opposition despite having to play without their scrappy floor-leader, guard Rupert Sutton, and were at arrears by only 22-15 at the intermission, as Bob Stammer hit for eight markers.

In second period action, though, the Miralomas kept their eight to ten point margin as Tony Hobbs, Horace Spikes, Hulin Wallace and Freddie Glosser hit nearly at will. Spikes, Wallace and the losers' Sam Battistone led all scorers with 12.

Golf Roundup Shows College Tee-Men 4th

Reviewing the season briefly, the golfing linksmen finished in fourth place with three road wins, and four close-engined home losses in the Big Eight Conference.

Defeated by San Mateo 10 to 5, Stockton 9½ to 5½, Oakland 9½ to 5½, and Santa Rosa 11½ to 4½, the Ram golfers whipped Sacramento 10 to 5, Modesto 10½ to 4½, and West Contra Costa 11½ to 3½ on the road.

Grover Klemmer, team coach, expressed dim hope for the next season, as he will lose all but two of his present team.

Brawls, Falls, Stunt Man's Sport

swims fully clothed toward lifeless San Francisco. "This one paid $90, but it was hell," according to Bondshu. "The scene was shot early in the morning in freezing water and was retaken four times before meeting the director's approval."

Not limiting his talents to flicks, Bondshu has done a lot of work for the Lineup television series. As a matter of fact, he is currently awaiting video employment when Lineup begins producing its 1959 series soon.

He has been in about a dozen television productions, usually as background material, but three different Lineup shootings have brought him some interesting and varied work.

In one instance he was praised for his "sterling authenticity"; little did anyone know that Bondshu wasn't acting.

This incident occurred when he was cast as a drunk in a tenderloin bar which had been the scene of a killing. A policeman tried to remove him from the establishment, but Bondshu resisted and went for the officer's pistol.

As he was reaching for the gun the policeman was supposed to graze his chin, but he bent too far forward and the policeman's blow landed solidly, decking him.

This stark realism was greatly appreciated as it removed any hamming possibilities and resulted in every director's dream—authenticity.

In another Lineup he was cast as a boxer, keeping in shape by running through Golden Gate Park. While jogging one morning he was removed from further pugilistic endeavors by a hit-run driver, but by now this was old stuff to Bondshu, who got up, pocketed $50 and called it a day.

Ironically, Bondshu in all his schooling (one semester at College of Marin and two here) has never taken a drama course, yet has probably advanced as far as most aspiring dramatics students ever will.

"Hell, I'm no actor," he said, "there are 5000 Marlon Brandos and Ingrid Bergmans in the Bay Area alone hoping for that Hollywood stardom, but stunt men are scarce, and I'm out to make money."

Herrerias Guest Speaker At Spring Athletic Banquet

Athletes who have earned their block letters will receive them this Monday night during the semi-annual banquet, which will be held in Smith Hall starting at 6:30 p.m., Alex Schwarz, sponsor of the Block SF Society, announced recently.

Rene Herrerias, frosh coach at University of California and standout performer for the 1949 NIT champion USF Dons, will be the guest speaker.

Block letters will be awarded to those athletes who competed in basketball, baseball, golf, swimming, tennis, volleyball and track. A block will also be presented to Ben Northrup, 147-lb. AAU Greco-Roman champ.

Award winners will receive a Block SF if it is the first year they have competed in a particular sport, while those men who competed on Big Eight Conference championship teams will receive jackets with the block sewed on the jacket. Also sewed onto the jacket will be letters stating the team the athlete was on and the year that his team won the championship.

Those men who win an award the second year of competition will receive jackets on which they may have their blocks sewn or if they have already purchased a jacket they will be reimbursed if they show a receipt, Schwarz said.

Men who are receiving their awards for the first time were urged to join the Block SF Society by President Bob Ross. Membership cost is only 50 cents.

There will be a meeting of the society this Friday during College Hour in the men's gymnasium with all members expected to attend.

BLOCK SF MODERATOR Alex Schwarz has completed final plans for Monday night's edition of the semi-annual awards banquet.

Ram Hurdle Ace Sets Loop Mark

High hurdles champion for 1959 in the Big Eight Conference is a slim, 6-1, 19-year-old named Jerome (Jerry) Bell.

Bell's achievements on May 16 (the day of the championship meet at Sacramento) didn't stop with his merely winning the race over the high sticks. He also set a new conference record of 14.8 in doing it, and defeated the co-holder of the old record of 14.9 in the process.

Strangely enough, the new record holder was not a pre-race favorite. As the race's dark horse, Bell displayed the competitive spirit essential to any good athlete, and the results were there for all to witness.

The bespectacled stick-stepper has made tremendous improvement since his prep track days. Although he won the city high hurdles championship in 1957, his best time was only 15.0. That was over the regulation 39-inch high school hurdles. This year Bell has skimmed the 42-inch college barriers at a 14.7 clip, currently fourth best in the nation for a two-year performer.

Bell's best of 24.5 in the lows isn't yet up to the tough standard set by this year's low hurdle men, but if he improves as much in the lows as he has in the highs, where most of his work has gone, his low stick times should rate with the best anywhere.

A graduate of Polytechnic High School, sophomore Bell is a mathematics major here and hasn't decided where he will finish his education, though San Jose State may have the inside track.

New Officers Elected At RA Awards Social

Elections were held last week for the Recreation Association and the new officers for next semester were announced at an awards social, given in the women's gymnasium last Monday.

Officers elected to their new post were Gladys Grassini, president; Joanne Maloney, vice-president; Frank Stuckey, secretary; Al White, treasurer, and Dave Nigel, historian.

A gavel engraved with her name on it was awarded by the RA department to Bunny Toilefson, as outgoing president.

The managers of various sports also received their medals. These included Stuckey, golf; Kirby Griffin, fencing; Carol Vernon, modern dance; Nancy Parraga, volleyball; Wayne McMullen, archery, and White, men's basketball.

Bell, Smith Win Seconds In NorCal Cinder Championships At Fresno; Rams Take Seventh

By Jim Payne

Hurdler Jerry Bell and sprinter John Smith found the warm Fresno weather to their liking as both brought home second places in the Northern California Junior College track and field championships last Saturday evening. College of Sequoias collected the winning team trophy with a total of 58 points. The college finished seventh with 21½ digits.

Bell followed Vallejo's Jim Swindle over the high sticks and was clocked in 14.8. The winning time was 14.7. Bell coasted to a second place in his qualifying heat after having led almost to the tape.

Little Smith was first out of the blocks in the 100 but was inched out by Monterey Peninsula's Jackie Williams, who won in 9.8. Smith was given the identical time in his second place effort. The 5-4 Ram won his trial heat, defeating Williams in 10.0. Alex Jenkins placed sixth in the final also in 10.0.

Smith never got started in the 220 and finished a disappointing sixth, running 22.2. Williams completed his double by barely winning the race in 21.4 from Sacramento's Don Ramos, who also turned in a 21.4.

The college's Jesse Sirles took fifth in the broad jump, which was won with a new meet record leap of 23-9½ by Bill Mosher of College of Sequoias. The old record of 23-1¾ was made by San Francisco's Mack Burton last season. Sirles also placed in the high jump, in which he managed a tie for sixth.

Weightman Mike Reid had an "off" day as he could only muscle a heave of 141-6 for sixth in the discus. The burly Ram's dismal day was completed when he went unplaced in the shot.

The Sacramentan Ramos whizzed through a 47.8 quarter-mile, breaking by eight-tenths of a second the 48.6 record set last campaign by Chuck McNiff of Yuba College. Second-placer Charles Craig of Stockton ran 48.3, also bettering the old record.

Charlie Belcher of Contra Costa, who doubled with 4:27.7 mile and 1:55.7 half-mile wins in the Big Eight championships, passed up the mile in favor of the half and won the two-lapper in a crisp 1:54.5.

Sacramento's mile relay quartet stopped the watches in 3:20.2, shattering the meet record of 3:20.6 that it set last year.

Competitors in the meet were the cream of the Northern California two-year college crop. Every participant had to place fourth or better in his particular conference championship meet in order to compete.

Anyone who placed fourth or better in this meet automatically qualified himself to compete in the state championship meet in Modesto this Saturday.

Bad Luck Halts Mathis In Championship Meet

The unexpected hand of bad luck struck the college track and field squad's leading high-jumper Ralph Mathis two Saturdays ago in the Big Eight Conference championship meet at Sacramento.

Mathis, competing in the pole vault, attempted and made the height of 12 feet. However, his descent from the bar was a disastrous one; he landed in the pit with his full weight on his left foot, completely dislocating the ankle. The torn ligaments and cartilage may prevent his ever competing in the high jump, broad jump or pole vault again.

Loss Of Gridders Lessens Hope For Coming Clashes

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Aside from the loss of All-Conference selections Oscar Donahue and L. C. Shields (both to San Jose State), head grid mentor Grover Klemmer has quite a few more tears to shed before the Ram forces kick off their 1959 seasonal opener against LA Valley, next September.

Klemmer has not only lost two of his more valuable tools with the departure of Shields and Donahue, but nine of the 11 starters from last year's delegation. The entire backfield has gone on in hope of greater glory, and center Tony Hobbs, along with hustling end Horace Spikes are the only two returnees from last season's starting line.

Although the problems of graduation and transferring veterans will be fairly well remedied by the promotion of former bench material to the active ranks, Klemmer will still be forced to look to incoming prep performers to bolster what could prove itself to be a highly potent piece of grid machinery.

Among the former reserves who will now be called upon to fill the bill in probable starting roles are backs Bill Baker, Marion Page and Hullo Wallace, while Paul Dieterheft, Vic Lazcano, Walt O'Connor, Ev Stehn and George Petty will open the holes in the roles of starting linemen.

Pass receiving should be the most optimistic of Klemmer's grid hopes, as Leroy Wise, and a host of '58 prep performers are expected to come to the aid of Spikes.

Aside from the elevation of former bench strength, Klemmer will also depend heavily on a pair of stalwart veterans of the 1956 campaign, tackle Carl Mitchell and fleet-footed halfback Lionel Vaughn.

Among the more promising prep performers are a pair of All-City aces, Lincoln halfback Don Briemle and Balboa end Larry Pedrodnlasol.

Botsford Grabs State Net Consolation Title By Defeating Bracken At Championship Playoffs

Fred Botsford of the college's tennis team won the state net consolation title at Fullerton recently by defeating teammate Jack Bracken, 7-5, 7-5.

The consolation qualifiers were made up of those players who were eliminated in the first round of the state championship play-off and those players who were playing only in the doubles competition but had not qualified for singles competition.

In the state championship finale, the number one seeded player from Northern California, Chris Crawford of Menlo, swamped the number one player from Southern California, George Conway, 6-2, 6-0.

In the doubles competition Botsford-Bracken, playing in the championship bracket, won their first round match easily but were dumped in the second round by the number one doubles team from the southland, Diek Drake - Conway, in a ruggedly played marathon, 6-3, 13-11.

The state doubles championship match turned out to be a battle between two Northern California representatives, Bruce Campbell - Crawford, the Menlo stars, and Jim McManus-Ken Stanley, the Oakland netmen who were the champions of the Big Eight Conference.

The Menlo duo won the crown by 6-3, 2-6, 9-7, as Campbell and Crawford both showed themselves veritable tigers in the 90-degree Fullerton heat,

Science CAN Be Fun!

Student Engineers Show Achievement In Modern Exhibit

By Elmer Milligan

A combination of student achievement and audience participation is spotlighted in the modern fun-filled Electrical Engineering Technology program, currently on display in the basement of Science Hall.

The exhibit, approved by the Engineering Counsel for Professional Development, a national organization that acknowledges college technical engineering programs, demonstrates some of the best accomplishments of the department.

Featured in the display are an electric call board, designed and built by Richard Younce in Engineering 52D, an electric eye, designed and built by Elmer Smith, a January 1959 graduate and employee of the Sandia Corporation, and a set of jumping rings.

All of these units were constructed in the electrical engineering department under the supervision of Rex Harris, engineering instructor.

To operate the display, a passer-by must place his hand in the upper left corner of the display window, then rub the hand gently across the pane.

As the hand moves, light from the electric eye goes to a mirror, located about two feet away, and returns to the eye, thus making the electronic board count.

Normally the electric call board, similar to all gymnasium scoreboards, is operated by a dial, but in this display, it functions by interrupting the light beam from the electric eye.

Interruption of the beam will occur as many times as the hand is rubbed across the window. When the hand is taken off the window, the beam pauses to register the desired number of digits on the electronic board.

The board can be cleared at any time by pressing lightly on the window glass just above the microswitch.

Located at the right of the call board is a set of rings and coils. This unit is operated by rubbing the hand up and down the display window.

When the beam registers the number of digits on the electronic board, the coils will jump up or down depending on the movement of the hand. This action demonstrates electro-magnetic repulsion between the rings and coils.

At the end of each day, the electric eye gives a total count of interruptions and digits on the board, then resets the next morning.

Jobs Available In Placement Office For Pre-Graduates

All prospective graduates who were interviewed during the fourth annual Business Recruitment Day and are experiencing difficulty in obtaining employment are urged to visit the placement office in S-187, Joseph Amori, college placement director, announced last week.

Assistance will also be given to any graduating student who seeks placement in part or full-time positions, Amori said.

Heading the list of job opportunities available for men and women students are positions as camp directors, painters, clerks and stenographers.

To be eligible as stenographers, applicants must be United States citizens and capable of typing 45 words per minute and writing 90 words per minute in shorthand, he stated.

Twenty-five students, men and women, are needed as recreational leaders for the summer period. The job includes planning, organizing and supervision of gymnastics, music and playground activities.

Also being sought by Amori are counselors and assistant camp directors. Qualifications include experience in camping and skill in arts and crafts.

Particularly needed are women interested in child care and a piano player who plays all types of music.

Swimming instructors are also in demand, Amori said, adding that applicants must be more than 19 years of age with a water safety instructor certificate or a senior lifesaving certificate.

Final Two Performances Of Inherit The Wind Scheduled For Friday, Saturday Nights

Inherit The Wind, nearing its final performance here this weekend at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, will be presented today to the students of Balboa High School, in the Balboa Little Theater.

Balboa has extended an invitation to other high school drama students of the city to attend this free performance. This is the first time the Little Theater group here has given a special performance away from the college, according to Michael Griffin, drama director.

Helping to make this extra showing possible was Bill Forshay, managing editor of The Guardsman, who canvassed the different city high schools, notifying them of the event and inviting their drama students to attend.

Costs for this trip to Balboa will include such items as the transporting of costumes, sets and scenery. These costs will be assumed by the Little Theater itself.

Griffin hopes that many students will take advantage of this extra showing of the play, and attend it. Some persons were unable to attend the opening night here at the college for lack of seating space.

This lack of space will be remedied when the Little Theater moves into the new arts building, on which construction started yesterday, for the new building will have a theater which can seat an audience of 350 persons. The present theater can accommodate only 70.

In the new theater there will be a stage larger than the present one. Griffin states that he prefers a roomy theater in the new building to any expensive equipment for the theater that might be installed in it.

Another problem with the present stage is the almost complete lack of wings. In a play such as Inherit The Wind, where two settings are continually on stage, space is of particular importance.

Former Student Winner Of Sam Goldwyn Award

George Erengis, a former student of the college, has been awarded the Sam Goldwyn Award for his book entitled The Charmed Life Of Private Eben Biggs.

For his novel Erengis was given $1000 by Goldwyn in a public ceremony held in Los Angeles earlier this month.

Erengis attended City College in the Fall 1955 and Spring 1956 semesters, and upon completion of the two semesters he transferred to the University of California at Los Angeles where he is now completing his education.

AS Card Privilege Criticism Stirs Council Discussion

By Roy Twitty

Constructive criticism resulting from a letter to The Guardsman editor, approval of three budgets, and the secret selection of the semester's most outstanding student and faculty member, were the main points of discussion reviewed by the Associated Students government last week.

Criticizing organized activities, and the AS in particular, for requiring the purchase of an AS card, Ron Pavelias wrote a letter to the editor, which was published Wednesday, April 22. He stated at that time that most students here are simply not interested in purchasing and using the AS card, and that it is wrong to require one for the privilege of parking on city-owned land.

Reading the letter in print, members of Student Council, some furious, some curious, agreed to invite Pavelias to a council meeting to discuss the issue openly before the assembly. Pavelias attended the Tuesday meeting last week.

Asked why he had not purchased an AS card this semester, he replied that none of the benefits are attractive enough to him and many other students just like him. Pavelias added that he is married and able to furnish his own recreation, but was previously coerced to buy a card even though he did not care to participate in the activities offered.

"I don't believe I should pay the student body for the privilege of parking on city-owned property," Pavelias replied when Bud Andersen, Club Activities Board president, asked for his views on the matter. Sam Allen, Inter-Fraternity Council president, pointed out that the city has given the parking areas to the AS to decide what to do with them.

Discounts at local stores, which was thought to have been a big selling point of the card, are not believed by many people to be actual, valid benefits, according to Pavelias.

More income for the AS treasury might result, he suggested, if the charge for car-parking on the campus is reduced from $5 to $2. With this arrangement, parking could be the only benefit offered for this price and might cause students to buy a regular card later. Participation in activities might increase if more forums and discussions are offered.

Moving on to other business, the Council then heard a recommendation from finance chairman Ben Northrup that $121.00 be alloted to KCSF, the college's closed-circuit broadcasting station. The budget passed as did the drama request of $1500. The most recent money allocation was a $150 incidental expense account for John Gaddy, physical education instructor.

8 Dental Coeds Capped At Formal Ceremonies

Eight dental assisting students were graduated from the college's two-year course in formal capping ceremonies held at Smith Hall under the direction of Ruth Inskipp, instructor in the course, last Thursday.

Those receiving caps were Malene Bohn, Diane Christoffersen, Barbara Conti, Barbara Deicke, Josephine Gelberman, Zena Kobernick, Doris Mcnconi and Margaret McManuss.

Graduate students acting as "big sisters" in the ceremonies were Gail Anderson, Jo Bowman, Barbara Crawford, Josephine Gambini, Jackie Lawless, Margaret Lee, Linda Rogers and Marjorie Swatman.

In Wichita, Kansas, Denver Bland won the Democratic nomination for Sedgwick County sheriff, soundly defeating Candidate J. Wyatt Earp.

Club Cavalcade

Pinnings, Dinners, Swamp Campus Group Activities

By Pat Perkins

PINNING ceremonies and end-of-the-semester dinners seem to be prevalent on the busy agenda of the various on-campus organizations.

Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity and Phi Beta Rho sorority won first place at the Spring Festival for their hitch-rack marriage booth.

Plans are being made for Delta Psi sorority's pinning and pledge dinner. The banquet will be held this Sunday. The sorority held its semi-annual mother-daughter luncheon and installation of new officers at the Skylark Restaurant last Sunday. The new officers are Diane Christoffersen, president; Nancy Casella and Bobbie Smith, first and second vice-presidents; Stevie Tissier, pledge mistress; Cathy Sanborn, treasurer; Carolyn Nunan, corresponding secretary; Ginny Hyde, recording secretary; Alberta Giannini, historian, and Joni Greenberg, publicity chairman.

Next semester's officers of Gamma Kappa Beta sorority were elected at the home of Annette Moquin last week. Miss Moquin is the new president; Joan Soldate, vice-president; Carolyn Vukasin, pledge mistress; Pat Perkins, treasurer; Irene Shetry, recording secretary; Arlene Wilson, corresponding secretary, Georgine Peterson, historian; Carolyn Vickers, custodian, and Louise Ortega, sergeant-at-arms.

Theta Tau sorority recently held its pinning ceremony at the home of Vivian Ward, sponsor. Plans for elections, the Theta-Beta picnic, and a cake sale (sponsored by the new sisters) were made at a business meeting held at the home of Lea Calderon.

The sisters of Delta Sigma Tau sorority are busily preparing for their pinning banquet. New members to receive pins are Ester Jones, Nadine Lyons, Lutisha Scales, Wilda May, Vickie Young, Christine Young and LaVern Williams.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held election for new officers last Sunday night, results of which will be disclosed at a later date; a "car wash" was also enacted by the fraternity on Sunday. Plans are currently underway for possible meetings of the brothers this summer. Pledge Treasurer Bill Ideker will order jackets and assorted fraternity items for the "new brothers" within a week.

Hosting Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator of the division of instruction, who will speak on the Pursuit Of Excellence, Alpha Gamma Sigma scholastic honor society, is to hold a meeting in S-232 during College Hour Friday, according to William G. Richardson, sponsor, who urged all interested to attend.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 o'clock in The Guardsman office, S-304.

Stammer, Vilanova Win Royal Titles Of King, Queen At Ball

Bob Stammer of the Hotel and Restaurant department and Eleanor Vilanova of Zeta Chi sorority won the royal titles of king and queen last Saturday night at the semi-annual Sophomore Ball.

Adding sparkle to the ball was the additional crowning of princes and princesses. Princes for the event were Jack Roach and Al Guaraglia with Liz Hogan and Donna De Fount acting as princesses.

The crowning ceremonies took place in the upstairs room of The Village, where the winning couple was awarded trophies donated by Theta Tau sorority and Beta Tau fraternity. Proceeds from the contest will go into the class scholarship fund.

Candidates for the king crown were Larry Feldman, Alpha Kappa Rho; Tony Bartmann, Alpha Sigma Delta; Sam Allen, Student Council, and Alberto Salamanca, Student Council.

Vying for the queen title were Arleen Kordoules, Student Council; Deanne Gutierrez, Student Council; Joan Soldate, Gamma Kappa Beta; Diane Christoffersen, Delta Psi; Jane Bartmann, Phi Beta Rho, and Zeta Bullard, Theta Tau.

Extra-Curricular Activities Turn Colleges Into Playgrounds, States Famous Educator

STUDENT activities are often blasted but seldom with more rhetorical effect than that employed by Jerome Ellison, a journalism instructor at Indiana University, who recently accused the nation of "making a playground out of college."

Citing such student pastimes as drinking, marrying, and having a good time cutting classes and taking "cinch" courses, he brought up a very real problem but, discussing a problem and its solution is one thing and "just cussing" it is another.

The marriage problem is one that is even growing in high schools, but ignoring this, Ellison labels colleges as "marriage mills" without any attempt to understand the reasoning behind such marriages.

Many college students have gone steady for two or more years with their future wives and they can see three more years quite often with nothing more than occasional dances and inexpensive dates and mutual studying. Tired of waiting, they agree that one can go to school while the other works. This mill "grinds exceedingly fine" as well as slow, but the result is worth the effort.

Course difficulty was cited as one reason for students, even bright ones, failing to take courses that would enable them to attain their educational objectives. Here again is an oversimplification of a problem of deep significance. Failure to take into account the lack of thorough basic preparation as emphasized by the recent English teachers conference in this city is of importance when a student tells an instructor that a course is hard. If a person is unable to understand the grammatical rules concerning his own language, then how is he supposed suddenly to acquire the ability to recognize the dative, accusative and genitive cases in another language?

Bugaboos of the "Second Curriculum" which is made up of courses that satisfy "status hunger," "tradition," "lust," and "stereotyped dissipation" seem to this learned professor to be of the utmost importance to modern college students. He knocks, in rapid succession, cars on campus, marriages, "pinning," "souped-up programs of athletics," and homecoming game decorations.

Here the professor really demonstrates the way to confuse by multiple examples from several different colleges. If all the affairs with which he illustrates his points so capably took place on one campus, a mass nervous breakdown would occur among faculty and students.

Finally the professor points with shame at the "illegal highjinks" of a few students from a few of these institutions of higher learning.

Failure to recognize good in any organization is the easiest way to point out the bad in it. Ignoring the good in a discussion in order to overemphasize bad points is the cheapest type of sophistry and one of which a professor should not be guilty.

Ultimately the professor makes his constructive suggestions such as outlawing cars, fraternities, sororities, cutting down ill-formed attitudes on marriages, and raising standards. These may be good suggestions and it is possible that they would change the shape of future education but one point remains.

Colleges exist to turn out better trained individuals who will fit into and do credit to their society and the schools from which they graduate. Part of this "fitting" consists of adjustment to people and the modern world. Much of what the professor says is true, but if so, it still does not reflect the whole truth. It is certainly a good example of the recurring plea for the old "ivory-tower" dedicated scholar who thinks only of his future in the circumscribed life on a campus rather than a modern and capable individual who can handle both activity and scholastics without sacrificing his whole mind to stultifying and restive curricula that will force him into this same mold.

The professor states that he has "seen too much of the power of higher education" and we are forced to cut him off here and agree wholeheartedly and wish that he had seen a little more of the power of informal education such as takes place in campus activities, service groups, fraternities and their opposite numbers, and various other student functions.

825 Students To Receive Certificates At June 12 Commencement Ceremony

President's Plaque, Scholastic Cup Key Points Of Program

By Elmer Milligan

Approximately 825 students will receive certificates during the 23rd annual commencement ceremonies to take place Friday, June 12, in the Riordan High School auditorium beginning at 8 p.m., according to John Brady, commencement committee chairman.

These students include the graduates for the entire year, summer session 1958, Fall 1958 semester, and Spring 1959 semester.

On this occasion, certificates will be conferred in place of Associate in Arts degrees, which will be mailed later.

Brady urged all graduating students to corroborate the correctness of their addresses with Olga Perkins of the registrar's office.

A major event of the commencement ceremonies will be the presentation of the President's Award Plaque to the man and woman graduating students who, during their enrollment here, have given the most service to the college.

Student speakers will be Jacquelyn Pera and Gaynor Abbott, chosen over six other candidates for their roles by a faculty committee of 12. The third speaker of the evening will be a commissioner of the Board of Education.

Another major award will be the Scholastic Cup, presented to the two students, one man and one woman, who have gained the highest grade point average during their enrollment here.

Dr. Harold Spears, superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools, will present the traditional and special commencement awards; Dr. Lloyd Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction, will introduce the candidates for certificates; and Dr. Louis G. Conlan, the college's president, will confer the certificates.

Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator, educational management, and Dean Ralph Hillsman will act as marshals for the exercises.

Music will be furnished by the college concert band, under the direction of Meyer Cahn, and the A Cappella Choir, under the leadership of Robert Morton.

A rehearsal for those graduating is scheduled for the same afternoon beginning at 1 p.m. in the Riordan auditorium. Brady said, when caps and gowns may be obtained in the school's dressing room.

Associated Student cardholders will have the use of the caps and gowns free of charge and non-AS cardholders may rent them for $4.

Abbott, Jaquysh Win Scholastic Cup, Top List Of 30 Graduating With Honors

Two honor students, slated to receive the coveted annual Scholastic Cup at commencement, are Ardath Jaquysh, who has a 3.9 grade point average, and this year's valedictorian, Gaynor Abbott, with a 3.83 average. Miss Jaquysh completed her studies in February while Abbott completes his this month.

Three graduate with highest honors, Miss Jaquysh, Abbott and Esther Reutlinger.

Ten scheduled to graduate with high honors are Franklin Kramer, Elmer Smith, Fall 1958, and Karen Beck, Nancy Canning, Kenneth Dawdy, Edward Egert, Joan K. Lee, Jilona Lichtenstein, Jacquelyn Pera and Ramon Ray, Spring 1959.

Graduating Student Awarded Academy Of Art Scholarship

Miss Parham will receive a year's training at the Academy of Art which is located downtown, and at the end of the training period will be given a job by the academy's placement service.

Yesterday afternoon the advertising art department held its annual luncheon at Rickey's Red Chimney to honor those students who are graduating from the college and are art majors.

Fourteen students will receive certificates of completion in recognition of completing the required courses for an advertising art major. The students receiving certificates are Donald Anderson, Allan Bergeron, Elwyn Cleveland, Joan Espinosa, Leo Hahto, Nancy Hanes, Judith Harrell, Elisabeth Hogan, Jack Lai, George Lozada, Miss Parham, Clayton Shader, Saiko Suzuki, Joan Weitin and Lee J. Wong.

In order to receive a certificate a student must have at least a C average in all advertising art courses, as well as a C average in all other subjects.

An honored guest, Annette Le Grass, will speak to the graduates. Miss Le Grass is a former student of the college, graduating class of June 1957, and is now an employee of Wallace Art Service.

Business Student Awarded Medal

For the second straight year a woman, Clare A. Kent, won the Wall Street Journal Award, Edward Larson, business instructor, announced last week.

Miss Kent is only the second woman from the college in 11 years to receive the award.

A silver medal and a year's subscription to the Wall Street Journal will be presented to Miss Kent at the June 12 commencement ceremonies in recognition of her feat.

The award is given annually to the graduating student who shows the most promise in the field of investment and finance.

Having completed her studies here in February, Miss Kent is currently in a full time job as a general office worker at Levi Strauss. She attended high school at Abraham Lincoln and enrolled at the college following her high school graduation.

Student Council Presents Awards At Spring Dinner

Winding up this semester's student government activities and official actions, the Student Council presented awards of outstanding service to Dean Gertrude Norgard and Helene Fast at the semi-annual council dinner last week.

Mrs. Norgard, acting dean of women this semester, was chosen by members of the student legislative group to receive the award as the faculty member who gave the most service to the Associated Students.

Leaving the ranks of the college administration, Mrs. Norgard will return to the post of music instructor when Mary Golding, dean of women, returns to the college next semester from her sabbatical leave.

Miss Fast received an outstanding service award as the student who the council felt contributed the most to the Associated Student organization. Students who have held an AS office during the semester are not eligible for this honor, and Miss Fast was cited for her volunteer secretarial work with the finance and state information chairmen.

Two AS Presidents, Dick Cottrell and Fred Muller, as well as cabinet and council members, received awards of service. Muller, who succeeded to the AS presidency recently upon Cottrell's resignation, presided over the installation of incumbent President Tony Bartmann.

Veterans Monthly Claim Signatures Due June 4

All veterans receiving Korean GI Bill benefits must report to the veterans office during the first four days of June to sign their monthly reports for the month of May, Robin Dunn, veterans counselor, announced.

Veterans of the Korean War must return to the veterans office during finals week to fill out their forms for the 12 days of June the college was in session.

Bartmann Leads Sweep As United Student Party Grabs Top Six AS Executive Posts

By Vicky Aumann

United Student Party candidate Tony Bartmann was swept into his new office as Associated Student President last week, with every member of his ticket victoriously following him into the other five executive offices.

The United Student Party also won every council seat in which they entered candidates, leaving only four seats to the Individual Party.

A total of 383 votes cast represented only 20 per cent of the number of AS card holders, and was the lightest vote since the Spring 1952 elections, when only 348 students went to the polls, according to Pete Pedrotti, Sr., Election Commissioner.

Bartmann, who is completing his term as Associated Men Student Vice-president, received a total of 198 votes. Individual candidate Ben Northrup polled 164 votes in his second bid for the top AS office.

The AS Vice-presidency went to Ariene Crabb (202) who defeated Sue Shawi (144).

In the balloting for Associated Women Student President, Dawnita Campbell was elected with 199 votes, besting Judy Day, who received 146 votes.

Mike Haskell received second largest support of all candidates with his winning total of 240 votes to defeat Lou Cooper (86) for the Associated Men Student Presidency.

The Sophomore Class will be led by Tony Lopez, who defeated Tessa Thompson by a vote of 182 to 159. Bill Keane (195) was elected president of the Freshmen Class to top Bill Ideker (147) in that contest.

Five USP candidates ran for, and were accordingly elected to the sophomore seats in Student Council. The two remaining seats were filled by Individualists Larry Feldman and Sharon Lebovitz.

Stevie Tissier led the way with 246 votes, the highest number of votes recorded for any candidate, followed by Ron Recchioni (240), Karin Rinechei (233), Karin Raisis (230), Feldman (226), Wallace Hayes (216) and Miss Lebovitz (185).

Losing sophomores were Sergey Chernov (180) and Ron Pavellas (175).

Losing candidates were Margaret Alvaro (179), Hasko Hofmeister (163) and Helene Fast (151).

Election Commissioner Pedrotti stated that the elections ran smoothly and the results were tabulated accurately by checking the voters' AS card numbers against the college files. This had not always been done, and was only inaugurated at the 1957 Spring elections.

Explaining the large drop in the number of votes cast this semester, Pedrotti said that spring elections always suffer because of the large percentage of graduating sophomores.

Fall Registration, Summer Session Details Announced

Registration for Fall 1959 at the college will begin at 7:45 a.m. on Tuesday, September 8, and will continue through September 11, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

However, no registration will be held on September 9 because of Admission Day, a holiday; new students are to register on September 10 and 11 and returning students on September 8.

Miss Learnard added that tomorrow is the last day to sign up for summer session. Any student who has not yet filled out a pre-registration booklet in the registrar's office must do so by that date.

She also reminds students that they must confirm their registration by bringing their yellow cards to S-117 on Thursday, June 18, to receive their certificates of registration. If a student fails to confirm his registration on this date, his place will no longer be held in the classes of his choice and students on the waiting lists will be permitted to enroll. Telephone confirmations are not acceptable, she said.

Summer session begins Monday, June 22, and ends on Friday, July 31. The last day to drop a course will be July 10, and the last day to file for a leave of absence, July 17.

Forshay Named To Head Next Guardsman Staff

Current Guardsman Managing Editor Bill Forshay was last week named Editor-in-Chief for the Fall 1959 semester at a meeting of The Guardsman's editorial board.

Assuming the position of Managing Editor is Jim Clifford, who has served as Feature Editor this semester.

Other members of The Guardsman editorial board for the fall are Elmer Milligan, News Editor; Vicky Aumann, Feature Editor; Pat O'Shaughnessy, Sports Editor; Roy Twitty, Staff Editor, and Don Seratti, Staff Writer.

Next semester's staff will represent a break from The Guardsman's all-male editorial staffs of the past two semesters.

Forshay becomes the 38th editor of The Guardsman.

New President Gives Party Credit

TONY BARTMANN, new AS president.

"Although I am still overwhelmed at the thought of my new responsibilities as President of the Associated Students, I cannot alone claim credit for the victory. The clean sweep of the United Student Party clearly indicated that it was a party victory won by those most interested in the students and the progress of the college.

"It is now my privilege to try to lead that party and all students interested in such progress toward the potential fulfillment of the goals clearly stated in the United Party platform. These goals are intended to culminate in the growth, civic betterment, and better realization of the purposes of the college.

"In addition, I sincerely thank all those who demonstrated their sense of civic responsibility by voting in the past election."

Classics Instructor Bids Farewell To College

Finals Mark 'End Of An Era' For Dr. Soule As Retirement Draws Near

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

It is a rare thing indeed when the arrival of final examinations draws a curtain of sadness across the heart of an instructor, but such will be the case at the close of next week, when Dr. Henry "Doug" Soule glances briefly over 24 years of faithful service to the college, and, as a faculty member, makes his way down the steep hill for the last time.

Undeniably one of the most scholarly instructors ever to grace this campus, Soule has been both loved and admired in the same breath by well over 7,000 citizens of Ramdom who have studied under his guiding hand in the foreign language field since the college's birth in 1935.

Having rationed out his inestimable command of Greek, Latin, German, French and Spanish to so many men and women who have gone on to reach the pinnacle of worldly success, the elderly gentleman of the classic field of study takes greatest pride in his advancements along the lines of a curriculum which he does not at this time officially profess—promoting correct speaking and writing of the English language.

In Soule's own words, "A man who attempts mastering a foreign language before he has learned the correct use of his own is like unto one who would set about constructing a great cathedral before being able to build a simple, country home."

The oldest member of the present faculty, and in whose honor the current Information Service booklet of California two-year college student government is dedicated, backs up his stand by pointing out the ridiculousness of multi-million dollar firms which are foolish enough to adopt such sales slogans as "Winston tastes good, like a cigarette should" and "Finally a gasoline burns clean."

Born and reared in Oakland, Soule was educated both at Oakland High School and the University of California, where he attained his doctorate in the field of Greek literature.

Although readily admitting that the propagation of the classics has fallen off tremendously in contemporary collegiate institutions, he is quick to predict what he terms "an educational Renaissance" for the near future.

"Perhaps it won't take place in your time or mine," he points out, "but the American people are beginning to awaken to the fact that they have been 'taken in' by a handful of fast-talking educators who scoffed at intelligent learning and replaced it with the practice of producing well-balanced illiterates instead."

Aside from his overwhelming accomplishments in the foreign language field, Soule is an accomplished pianist and painter, an avid opera and symphony patron, and has a warm place in his heart for all forms of literary and dramatic endeavor.

A member of the Sierra Hiking and Nature Study Club, he is by no means planning to rest on his laurels but is optimistic about the possibilities of his joining the faculty of the San Francisco College for Women at Lone Mountain.

"Sure, I'm an old codger," he says. "But when one can no longer hide something or explain it away, the only thing left to do is brag about it."

Despite the fact that he is one of the most knowledgeable individuals on the college faculty roster, Soule has always stressed the importance of humility.

"No man is ever indispensable," he says, and to back it up suggests that if one ever thinks he is, he might stick his head in a bucket of water, pull it out, and see how much of a hole he leaves.

Although possessing a vocabulary equalled by very few men, the faculty's veritable "Rock of Ages" can seldom, if ever, be heard to utter a five dollar expression. He has always made it a point to stress the correct use of the "little words," advising that when this is done, the phrases of the upper echelon will take care of themselves.

"DOUG" SOULE, scholar, musician, artist, and the faculty's "Rock of Ages," who retires this month after 24 years of service here, has "made it a point to stress the correct use of the 'little words.'"—Guardsman photo by Jim Sidwell.

Ever since the dawn of recorded history nearly every great man has been labeled with a motto which seems to best typify the thing for which he stood. In the case of Dr. H. D. B. Soule there seems to be nothing more appropriate than "Benignitas dare; non scire"—greatness is in the giving; not the having.

Graduates Can Show Gratitude By Attending Commencement

WHEN the college's annual commencement ceremonies are held next week, more than 700 students will be eligible for graduation and for participation in the program at which their graduation and attainment of an Associate in Arts degree will be acknowledged.

Nothing could be more gratifying to the administration and faculty here and to the general public and educators than to see all graduating students taking part in the college's commencement exercises.

Commencement participation and bestowal of degrees are inseparably linked at many other California two-year colleges; students must appear at commencement in order to graduate.

This college chooses not to employ such forms of compulsion, and therefore must rely on the students' sense of obligation.

Unfortunately, in past years the graduating classes' representation at commencement ceremonies has quite often been deplorably small.

It is hoped that this year's representation will be more substantial in proportion to a college of such a large enrollment.

Graduating students' appearance at commencement ceremonies next week would be an excellent indication of their recognition of and gratitude for the countless opportunities they are granted under a system of free education that is still considered unique in most parts of the world.

Avoid Extremes During Final Exams

WITH FINAL EXAMINATIONS looming ominously as a potential roadblock to successful completion of the semester, it is very likely that many students are about to make one of two mistakes which could prove scholastically fatal.

Some students overestimate final exams to the extent that they become nervous wrecks preparing for them, while others underestimate and virtually overlook them until zero hour approaches.

A successful performance in these exacting exams often lies in one's ability to avoid both of these extremes.

Students should, on the one hand, keep from being completely overawed by finals, and should merely recognize them as the sole remaining means of demonstrating their knowledge of and improving their grades in each course.

They should then govern their study activities accordingly, not taking the incipient examinations too lightly but rather starting to prepare for them early enough to allow a comfortable assimilation of information, insuring a successful showing when they enter the classroom.

Foresight

By Dick Dyer

THE past television year has been larded with Western marshals and private eyes on all channels. The next couple of seasons promise even more of the same.

Here is the tentative list of shows scheduled for the fall lineup.

WESTERNS: Wichita Town, outdoor action with Joel McCrea; Whispering Smith, Audie Murphy as a frontier detective; Shotgun Slade, with Scott Brady; The Alaskans, Richard Long in a 60-minute series with a Klondike gold rush locale; Doc Holliday, with newcomer Adam West portraying the notorious gunman; Riverboat, set in Mississippi in the 1870's, starring Darren McGavin; Bonanza, an hour-long guest-star series laid in a Virginia City mining camp, and Laramie, with John Smith.

DETECTIVE SHOWS: Robert Taylor in Captain of Detectives; Markham, Ray Miliand as an English-educated private eye; Johnny Staccato, crime and jazz featuring John Cassavettes; Philip Marlowe, with Phil Carey playing the Raymond Chandler character; Bourbon Street Beat, a 60-minute show dealing with more jazz and more crime in New Orleans, to star Richard Long; The Fat Man, with Robert Middleton playing the radio-originated role, and Hawaiian Eye, a detective series set in the Islands.

CBS is planning a full-hour crime series entitled The Lawbreakers, which delves into motivation, psychological and sociological, of infamous criminals. The Lineup is in for a much-needed face lifting; it will be extended to an hour and will have a guest star policy, a jazz score, and possibly a pretty policewoman written into the storyline.

SITUATION COMEDIES: The Dennis O'Keefe Show, with O'Keefe playing a Broadway columnist; Hennessey, Jackie Cooper as a Navy doctor; Fibber McGee and Molly, featuring Bob Sweeney, Cathy Lewis and Hal Peary; Love and Marriage, with William Demarest; Dobie Gillis, Dwayne Hickman in a high school setting, and Dennis the Menace, based on the comic strip of the same name.

ADVENTURE SHOWS: Destination Space, science-fiction starring William Lundigan; Adventures in Paradise, based on the James A. Michener South Sea tales; The Invisible Man, from the H. G. Wells' story, and a two-part series about Daniel Boone, set for Walt Disney Presents.

Clare Booth Luce is scheduled to be hostess and narrator for Diplomat, a new CBS weekly program about foreign service officers. The sponsor (and his product) must be approved by her and the State Department.

MISCELLANEOUS: Barbara Stanwyck and June Allyson will each have her own anthology series, and Dick Clark will have a new panel show called Dick Clark's World of Talent. Biography, a new entry of 90-minute specials, is in the works for CBS. Among the prospective subjects are Albert Schweitzer, Sir Winston Churchill and General Charles De Gaulle.

ShotsAt Ramdom

By Jim Clifford

U. S. EDUCATION is under the gun; it has been ever since the Russians launched Sputnik I. This progaganda boost of the USSR's wasn't blamed by the public on a faulty political administration, inter-service squabbles, the contented materialism of our society, or what appeared to be an advantage of the totalitarian state—the advantage of the man at the heim to do as he pleases without having to wait for the often slow processes of democracy, which takes time to spend a commodity known as justice in the forms of Congressional and Senatorial approvals, etc.

None of these things was pointed out as the cause of the Russian's big jump. Rather, it was the US educational system that was kicked in the rear—and kicked hard.

Newspapers, TV programs and magazines came out with articles or programs that highlighted the faults in our educational philosophy and the fine things in the USSR's. Eventually, people wondered if Jefferson's and Franklin's ideal of mass education wasn't a bunch of baloney anyway.

Probably the most recent and vicious attack on our educational institutions came from George Sokolsky, a writer for King Features whose article concerning education appeared last week in the Call Bulletin.

After stating that the taxpayers were putting plenty into the coffers of education and seemingly not getting their money's worth, practically calling President Deane Mallot of Cornell a big boob, labeling college prexies "mere administrators busying themselves with brooms and dustpans," fitting all college students into the class of "beatniks," he said this:

"What is the inspiration of the university? Does one find himself coming out of it with a sense of moral grandeur, with overwhelming loyalty to his country, and its history? Corny stuff! Everything is corny stuff! Everything is debunked until the student himself is just a lot of corny stuff. Of that no dreams are made, no castles built!"

US Education Under Gun As Public Panics

That's what the man said. He never mentioned that the home is more responsible and influential than the school in molding a young person's ideals.

The students who graduate from here this semester, and the ones to graduate in the near future, will be watched closely by many persons. They will be looked upon as a criterion of mass education, and with their accomplishments the ideals of some great men will either burn brightly or be extinguished from the American scene.

This national hysteria over our system has caused a panic that may change our educational set of values in the next few years. It is for us to join or fight this hysteria—we can do the latter by proving that mass education results in better citizens and more productive Americans.

More Honor Grads

zuki, Chiyeko Tsuchitani, and Edward Van Tassei for Spring 1959.

Students who graduate with highest honors must maintain a grade point average of 3.75 or higher, William Richardson, Alpha Gamma Sigma adviser, explained.

A student with an average of between 3.50 and 3.74 grade points inclusive can be considered for high honors while honor graduates must have an average of 3.30 to 3.49 grade points, inclusive.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

•How's That Again?

Editor, The Guardsman:

This letter is in regard to the article published in our newspaper Wednesday, May 20, 1959, page 4: "Blood Drive Sets State Record For Peacetime With 297 Pints." There are many erroneous statements contained in the article.

A total of 297 pints was donated during the two-day drive true, but 42 persons (who wanted to give) were rejected for "medical" reasons.

The number of persons pledging to give blood (at a later date) totaled 57. The total donations of the first three-placed fraternities was 61. Donations from the remaining fraternities almost equaled the total of the first three.

This also holds true in respect to the sororities, as the total amount given by the first three totaling 40.

We also feel that more credit be given Beta Phi Beta fraternity, this is the third year in a row they have won the trophy for most pints given (1959, 32 pints—21 members).

The trophies were given on a percentage basis (number of members, pints donated). Beta Phi Beta, 21-32 (152%), Theta Tau, 17-15 (90%). Vet's Club, 25-15 (60%).

Of the total deductions; 220 were given by campus organizations, 12 by faculty members, five by civil service employees, and 60 by students not specifying any organization.

•Parking vs. AS Cards

Editor, The Guardsman:

About two months ago, an article appeared in The Guardsman stating that Associated Student cards hadn't sold because of poor organization on the part of the AS card committee.

In last Wednesday's paper (May 20), Ben Northrup offered a proposal for a two dollar parking permit program. This reduced permit would not require the purchase of an AS card.

What is Northrup trying to do—set an all time LOW for student card sales? If he thinks that this semester's sales of 1800 cards were poor, just wait until next term. He will be lucky if he sells 800.

This is a great plan for the 25th anniversary of the college. Why even bother to sell the special anniversary cards?

Toquinto, Molich, Duggan In Hall Of Fame

Signal-Caller From Heralded Grid Contingent Of '48 Joins End, Hoopster On Honor Roll

By Anthony Papidas

Outstanding footballers Bob Toquinto and Jim Molich along with clever cager Kevin Duggan were the three 1959 selections into the City College Athletic Hall of Fame after results of the third annual voting session were tabulated by The Guardsman last week.

Quarterback Toquinto was the field general of the fabled 1948 league champion outfit which also featured former Hall of Fame selections Ollie Matson, Burl Toler and Don Stillwell, and also quarterbacked the 1947 eleven. His excellent leadership was called by many a chief factor for the '48 "dream team's" success.

Molich was a sticky-fingered end on the 1939 grid contingent, finishing the season as the team's leading scorer and moving on to greater glory as a Fresno State stalwart in the early Forties.

Pivot Duggan was the most instrumental competitor in Ralph Hillsman's 1949-50 Northern California Junior College championship team which was eliminated in national championship play at Hutchinson, Kansas. He led the Rams in scoring, was a unanimous All-Conference choice and climaxed a superb season by being named a first team Junior College All-American.

In his first season of play in 1948-49 Duggan was awarded a second team All-Conference post and was a near All-American later at San Francisco State.

IFC Champs Alpha Phi Epsilon In 41-38 Win Over Miraloma Club 'B' For Intramural Crown

By Nick Peters

In one of the most bitterly contested basketball games in recent City College intramural history, the Alpha Phi Epsilon Inter-Fraternity Council champs edged Independent loop titleholder Miraloma Club "B" 41-38 last week, to win the Associated Men Students' cage crown. Taking the "big one" was for the IFC representatives a miraculous upset victory over a team which was enriched with Horace Spikes, grabbing an offensive rebound, spun around and museled his way for two to knot it up at 37-37 as the clock showed 3:25.

This tie, the closest the Miralomas came to overtaking the lead, was short-lived though, as Curry, who had been a thorn in the Clubbers' side all evening, pricked the losers with a jumper and drew blood with another for 41-37. Spikes closed out the scoring with a charity, but it wasn't enough as the Alphas eked out a 41-38 decision.

For the AMS champions it was a well-deserved win, recorded over a team that was rated to take all the intramural marbles, but instead was left holding the bag to a squad that completely outplayed them in every phase of the game.

Sullivan, undoubtedly enjoying one of his best games, and the lithe Curry scored nearly at will when the points were needed, while Clark, Ray Harris and Larry Morgan became defensive demons, time after time blocking the vain scoring efforts of Tony Hobbs, Spikes and Wallace.

Although admittedly "flat" through most of the fray, as "Hatchetman" Hobbs and Spikes were unusually ineffective against their opponents pressing defense, the losers somewhat redeemed themselves by finishing in a blaze of glory to fall in arrears by only three at the bizzer.

Tracksters Bell, Smith Place In State Title Meet

San Francisco's defending state track and field champions failed to successfully defend their championship in the state meet at Modesto last Saturday. The Rams finished with three points for 20th place behind Glendale's winning total of 56.

Only two competitors represented the college. One hundred-yard specialist John Smith sprinted for a 10.0 fifth place in the century as East Los Angeles' Jim Bates won in 9.7.

High hurdler eJrry Bell couldn't untrack against a strong field and his clocking of 14.9 was only good for sixth place points.

A national two-year college record was set in the pole vault when Fresno's Voyee Hendrix sailed over the bar at 14-5¾. Don Ramos of Sacramento equalled the national 440 record with a 46.9 effort and Bates tied the state meet record in the 220 by running 20.7.

Charles Clark of Santa Ana was chosen the meet's outstanding performer as he won both the mile and the two mile.

Block SF Holds Awards Banquet In Smith Hall

Last Monday night the Block SF held its semi-annual block awards banquet in Smith Hall with more than 100 guests in attendance.

Awards were presented to those men who competed on the basketball, volleyball, baseball, tennis, track, swimming and golf teams.

Guest speaker Rene Herrerias, freshman basketball coach at University of California and member of the 1949 National Invitational Tournament champion University of San Francisco Dons, spoke to the award winners and answered questions.

Title Bouts, Cage Awards Featured At AMS Smoker

Boxing matches and the awarding of trophies to the winners of the three intramural leagues highlighted the annual Associated Men Student smoker which was held May 26 in the men's gymnasium.

The smoker featured nine three-round fights. The matches began with Albert Reyes edging Rudy Joves for the 115-pound title.

Milton Wong was awarded a unanimous verdict over city Golden Glove champ Al Guerrero for the 120-pound laureis. The "Fightingist Fighter" trophy went to Rudy Gallardo for his spectacular knockout victory over Hai Abdul in the 125-pound class.

Rudolph Ramos grabbed the crown in the 135-pound division over Jara Beekum. Miguel Cuevas and Dennis Sheely fought to the only draw of the evening in the 145-pound class. Aggressive James Leonard was awarded the 155-pound title over tough Don Black.

Mike Hancock TKO'd Don Thompson in the second round to have his hand raised in victory in the 165-pound clash. George Perry won a unanimous decision over Giles Turner in a bitterly contested fight for the 175-pound laurels, and in the heavyweight championship clash burly Dennis Beyma started out like a house of fire to down a surprised Bruce Anderson in the first round.

Columnist Hampered By Shortage Of Space

RAMBLINGS

By Nick Peters

WHILE sitting at our desk pondering over what to report in our column we were overcome by a sudden wave of shock, the aftermath of which reminded us that this would be our final effort in The Guardsman after two years of relating the facts and fables of City College sportsdom.

Knowing that time had finally crept up and caught us by surprise, we realized that we had so much to write —yet hadn't enough space to do an excessive amount of columnizing, only some 20 column inches.

We thought about how wonderful and easy it was to write about the consistently winning athletic teams which represent the college, and the top caliber coaching talent which assembled these habitually victorious contingents—but decided that for lack of space we would leave our thoughts out.

We thought about the road trips we took with the football and basketball teams to watch the athletes at play—but decided to leave it out because it wasn't important enough.

We thought about the summons into administrative dens when some of our material was misinterpreted—but decided to leave that out for it had little value.

We thought about the intramural basketball program and the team which we participated on (dubbed the Galloping Greeks) which galloped over very bumpy terrain on the way toward 16 consecutive losses without victory, and Director of Athletics Jack Gaddy, who had to suffer through most of those miserable contests without even batting an eye—but we decided to leave that out because it wasn't important enough.

We thought about the gentlemanly athletes, and the other kind, we met as part of our job and realized that for the most part we acquainted ourselves with some good Joes—but we left it out because of lack of space.

We thought about the college's athletic Hall of Fame and how our attempts to make each voting session a success were thwarted by one of the administrative hierarchy (here comes another summons), who annually refused to take part in the program although he is an individual who should have an intense interest in the organization—but we decided to omit the thought for fear it could incriminate us.

We thought about mentioning that college graduates Gil McDougald and J. W. Porter are both making a name for themselves in the major leagues despite being unable to make the Ram nine—but knew that this wouldn't go in, since it was a lie as neither went out for baseball here.

We thought about former Ram grid greats Ollie Matson, Burl Toler and Dick Stanfel, who all reached later fame at USF and in the professional ranks—but regarded this as unimportant information and left it out.

We thought about grid coach Grover Klemmer's 440 mark set in 1942, which was the oldest standing record until tied last week in 46.6—but realized that it wasn't too interesting and left it out.

We thought about the error we inadvertently made in stating that volleyball player Rudy Buffin was a star baseballer for the Rams in the late Forties, therefore adding five years to the youngster's age. He competed in 1953 batting a healthy .333—but this fact wouldn't interest anyone so we omitted it from our final effort.

We thought about mentioning that outfielder Stan Johnson, Big Eight bat champ with a tremendous .483 with the locals in 1955, hit a robust .364 with Colorado Springs of the Western League in 1958 and is now a promising White Sox hopeful as a flyeateher for Indianapolis of the Triple-A American Association—but felt that not enough readers would be interested, therefore leaving it out.

We thought about the lack of student spirit and the fact that it was beginning to improve during the last basketball season and we hoped that this rise in attendance would continue —but decided to keep this out of our script because no one would witness the games anyway.

We thought about two of the members of last year's State champion track team, Mike Lewis and Ed Costa, both from Lincoln High. Costa was the Skyline Conference high jump champ with a leap of 6-9 while wearing the spangles of Brigham Young University, and Lewis, despite having to compete against some giants in Southern California cinder circles, who threw some iron around with authority for Occidental—but knowing that this wouldn't appeal to many, we decided to do without it.

We thought about our pet concept that managers have little to do with a team's baseball success by watching Casey Stengel's usually high-flying Yankee balloon being deflated to a last place position and remembering that one Fred Haney, who finished eight fathoms down with the 1956 Pirates, came back to frisk the flag with the 1957 Braves—but understanding that most observers would consider us a crackpot decided to leave our thoughts out.

We thought about the thousands of athletes in the Bay Area alone, who with proper conditioning could have become outstanding competitors, yet deprived themselves by "being smart" and keeping out of shape through extensive smoking, knowing all along that they were only hurting themselves—but we'll leave it out because it won't sink in anyway.

We thought about reporting all these facts—but thinking that for our last effort we should do something more worthy and not take up so much room, decided to call it a memorable two-year stay by wishing City College the best of luck in the future and depart never to darken this space with type again . . .

2-Year Visit Offered Thrills For Scribe

Grim Outlook In All-Star Ratings For Baseballers

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

A brief glance at the 1959 Ram baseball statistics seems to show that about the only record the locals were able to set this year came about when skipper Lee Eisan sent 26 men to the plate against Santa Rosa last month without a ball being hit out of the infield.

Closing out the conference grind with a fifth place 6-8 won-loss record, the Red and White forces showed just about no real outstanding performers at any position, and it seems that nary a Ram performer will find himself on the All-Conference roster to be released next week.

In spite of the fact that Paul DeMartini, Bob Farber and Johnny Bagatelios all reached the half-way mark swinging over the .400 clip, shortstop Roy Tripaldi, one of the most potent returnees from last year's deiegation, closed out the Big Eight slate like a South Seas hurricane (.393) to lead the locals in the batting department.

DeMartini (.354) and all-league catcher from last season John May (.333) were about the only other Ram stickers to close out the season on or above a respectable one for three clip.

Had it not been for May's sore arm and Tripaldi's poor glove, Eisan might well have seen a pair of his boys make the all-star squad. As things now stand, the Ram skipper feels that his only winning pitcher Bill Simmons is the sole local performer (6-4) who has a slim, outside chance to be placed aboard the Big Eight bandwagon.

Concealed Injury Hinders Trackster

If points were scored for courage, Pickens Rodgers, 20-year-old freshman distance running star of the college's track team, would be an undisputed champion.

Rodgers either won or scored well in dual meet competition throughout the season, and was one of the favorites to—win either the mile or two mile in the Big Eight Conference track Championships. Consequently, fans were amazed when, after being in contention in both races, he suddenly dropped out in the last lap of each event when the pace became really torrid.

Only after the meet did Rodgers reveal that he had pulled a ham-string muscle in his left thigh a week before the race and it had not healed. Yet, though suffering intense pain, he concealed his injury and ran in the championships in a vain effort to score needed points for the college.

Seifless motivation such as Rodgers displayed is rare indeed—the reason for this tribute to Pickens Rodgers, a portrait in courage.

Campus Activities Wind Up Events As Spring '59 Closes

By Pat Perkins

AS THE SEMESTER draws to a close, so do the activities sponsored by the various on-campus organizations. The members of these clubs who have faithfully supported the many social events throughout the spring have found memories to last them until fall.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity elected its officers for next semester: Hasko Hofmeister, president; Paul Bieberdarf, vice-president; Larry Feldman, treasurer; Joe Moreno, recording secretary; Sergey Cherney, corresponding secretary; Bill Lambert, custodian; Dick Kentera, sergeant-at-arms, and Ken Anderson, historian.

Delta Sigma Tau sorority held its election of officers for next semester. Elected were Burnez Blackshire, president; Queen Ward, vice-president; Shirley Sneed, treasurer; Ester Jones, recording secretary; Lutisha Scales, corresponding secretary; Ellen Young, pledge mistress; Wilda May, historian, and Vickie Young, parliamentarian. An installation and pinning banquet is planned for June 21.

The Recreation Association's fencing team racked up a final total team standing of 15 wins and 17 losses. The women's team (7-9) was headed by Diane Preddy, while Kirby Griffin and Wally Stick captained the men's team (8-8). Members of this team are Griffin, Stick, Alain Masson, Peter Pedrotti, Bill Crabtree, Neil Pace and Roland La Pell. The women's team includes Miss Preddy, Margaret Baxter, Colleen O'Donnel, Wilma Cupp, Daisy Damas, Joanne Ligi, Joan Morgan and Lorraine Michelis.

Festive Ceremonies Mark Start Of Last Major Construction

By Bob Pacini

Festive ceremonies, under a gray and threatening sky, marked the ground-breaking formalities for the new arts and classroom building last Tuesday.

Scores of students and many faculty members gathered at the north campus bordering on Cloud Circle as the college band under the direction of Meyer M. Cahn, presented short concert selections.

Fred Muller, Associated Student president, began the proceedings by introducing Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college. Dr. Conlan commented on the early history of the college and recalled for the audience attending the ground-breaking ceremonies, the dedication of Science Hall on April 25, 1937.

Dr. Conlan declared that the construction of the new building will be the last major phase in the development of the college. He also stated that approaching 25th anniversary festivities present a "fine opportunity to show the people of San Francisco the achievements of the college."

Dr. Conlan introduced Milton Pfleuger, architect for the college, who said that the building now under construction is the fifth major development program at the college, the others being Cloud Hall, Smith Hall and the two gymnasiums.

Dr. Alfred Tapson, president of the college Faculty Association, injected a note of humor by saying that light rain which was then falling was a scheme by Dr. Conlan to soften the earth for the ground breaking.

On a more serious level, however, Dr. Tapson remarked that the new building will allow for even finer achievements at the college.

At the conclusion of these speeches, Dr. Conlan, assisted by Muller and Roberta Kennedy, Associated Student vice-president, brought to a close the momentous occasion by turning over the first shovel of dirt on the ground that will be the site of the new building.

The ground-breaking program was under the direction of Mike Haskell, general chairman; Nancy Canning, program chairman, and Albert Salamanca, Publicity Committee chairman.

The new addition to the campus will be of contemporary design, and will contain in its three stories 24 classrooms, 10 art and music laboratories, a little theater and a closed circuit television network.

Estimated construction time of the $2,000,000 classroom and arts building is 18 months.

450 Spring Semester Students Listed As Grads

'Green Thumbs' Exhibit Motifs

Summer vacation won't mean rest for the horticulture department, according to Harry Nelson, department head, who disclosed several projects to be undertaken by his students.

During the last week of the semester the horticulture department will enter a display at a garden show to be held in the Civic Auditorium. "The Home Builders and Decorators Show" will run from Wednesday, June 10, through Sunday, June 14.

A tropical garden will be the theme of the entry. The exhibit is not a competitive one and no awards are scheduled to be presented for the displays.

Another exhibit will be entered in a Marin County garden show using a roof garden motif, and opening Wednesday, July 1. Prizes will be presented to the outstanding entries of the show, which will close Sunday, July 5.

Nelson also commented on the flower project at Ocean and Phelan Avenues. Almost 500 flowers—short-stemmed iceplants—have gone into the display which will form the letters "C.C.S.F." when fully developed.

Originally scheduled for completion by June, the display's date of dedication has been moved back to September because of erroneous planting, Nelson said.

Care of the project will be the responsibility of the horticulture classes. With the formation of the letters "C.C.S.F." the tiny iceplants will beautify the campus, in addition to advertising the location of the college.

Observation

Falsehood's 3 Faces Confuse, Abuse Society

By William Forshay

IF ANY NAME is ever slandered in this column, there will be many who swear to the truth of the slander merely because it appeared in print.

The people of the United States have an unfortunate tendency toward acceptance of the written word as the truth without realizing that a lie is often favored over the truth in certain disreputable papers as long as it is sensational and the writer can't be caught at it.

If a story contains a modicum of actual fact that is already known and accepted, the public will also tend to accept any falsehood based on that fact as being true as well.

THE PROBLEM

Thus, we come to a major problem that affects everyone exposed to the written, spoken, televised or intimated word. The problem of the "lie" in our society and the form it takes.

Any propagandist would state that there are three basic forms of a lie. Those wholly false, those wholly true but placed in a false light by implication, and those partially true and partially false.

For the first example, nothing is needed except a name of which the public expects certain things and then the intimation that such things have actually taken place. For example, if a rich widow is reported as giving a new sports car to a certain South American playboy, whether the report is true or false, a vast majority of the public will read into the story much more than is covered by the story itself or (perhaps) was intended. The falsity is overborne by the sensationalism plus the willingness to accept and believe the worst about such a person.

ANOTHER METHOD

A wholly true combination of fact can also be made to appear even worse when one or two known factors are adduced to present such a result as the following. Fact A: Joe is a bellboy at a small hotel. Fact B: Call girls sometimes frequent small hotels. Adduced statement: Joe is a visitor to the rooms of call girls and does favors for them in return for unspecified gifts.

An innocent and truthful statement, but if it appeared in Confidential, or in some local gossip column, Joe's reputation is destroyed.

Sometimes, this small brush smear technique is abandoned for the "big smear" or the "big lie" depending on the publicity and notoriety which can be gained by group defamation. This technique also employs the old saws such as "Where there's smoke, there's fire," or "A man is known by the company he keeps."

In this partially true and partially false group are cases such as those the government tried in committee meetings of Americans who had allowed their names to be used by Communist front organizations. The reasons for their joining such groups may be logical and their ignorance of the purposes quite plausible because of the practice of such groups in adopting super-American names and goals. This means nothing to the lying hounds of innuendo and malicious concepts.

INNOCENCE NO SOLUTION

Protestations of innocence are vain. Verbal nostrums and public vindictum as expressed in print and carried on in whispered conversation convict without trial and condemn without pity. This goes on not only in politics but in religion, advertising, special interest groups and in across-the-back-fence tittering dialogues.

As a solution, this column can only offer suggestions that are sure to go unheeded although the need for them is obvious.

THE IGNORED ANSWER

The thoughtful person must take care to study all accounts of alleged incidents; weigh the truth he knows against the size of the assumptions being made from it; check the tone of the tale for any biased semantics that tend to color it unduly in a certain direction, or which cast dubious or insinuating material into the fabric without necessity.

After all, a very good book warns, "Judge not lest ye be judged also," and Mark Twain once commented, "A man who tells the truth never needs to remember what he says."

Lip About Tip? Don't Dip In Hip For Tip!

By Don Seratti

TIPPING is an unnecessary conventionality exercising a harmful stranglehold on our society!

A radical statement, many will say. Well, to match one startling remark with another—tipping is harmful because most people tip unconsciously. It is a distressing source of embarrassment.

After creating a mushroom cloud on the journalistic horizon, perhaps an elaboration of these arguments is in order.

Why do people leave tips? Try asking someone, and chances are the answer will be, "Well, because everybody leaves tips. It's a part of our lives."

Because everybody tips! There we have the primary reason for the continuation of this ludicrous tradition. If everybody tips, who wants to appear "different"? Who wants to hear people say, "He doesn't leave tips"? Who wants to be looked at askance by a haughty head waiter?

If this is the case, and a glance at our unimaginative masses might just reveal that it is, we can easily conclude that many people leave dollar bills on restaurant tables and quarters in bellhops' hands because of the unrelenting social pressure exerted on those who dare to violate this hallowed tradition.

In other words, too many people tip before they think, and this practice can be dangerous. A man who will leave a tip because he has never considered doing anything else, is a man who can be easily swayed by anyone who has a mind to try.

"But I tip because I like the service," says a man as he emerges from a lunch counter after leaving a quarter in payment for a 20 cent piece of pie dropped on the counter by an ar-

Card Sales Near Anniversary Goal

Zipping past last year's slow pace in Associated Student card sales, a record number of cards may be sold this semester. More than 2000 have already been sold, according to Deanna Gutierrez, AS card sales chairman here.

The Silver Anniversary year of the college has affected the card sales goal, she declared, with 2500 cards, 100 for every year the college has been in existence, the desired goal.

Miss Gutierrez asserted that this expectation is well on the way to being achieved, if not surpassed. This is mainly because of the overwhelming enthusiasm and co-operation of her "sales force," she stated.

In revealing the names of the leaders in this semester's sales contest, Gerald Mapes, AS card sales co-chairman, said Jack Verga, as of September 25, was the current leader. Following Verga were Bill Keane, Judy Day, Karen Bluechel and Greg Girth. Mapes said students may still purchase cards from S-116 or the student bank in Smith Hall.

Prizes will be awarded at the Freshman Ball, October 10. A $20 first prize book order good at the Ramporium will be offered by the AS to the person selling the most cards. Second prize will be a $10 order, and third prize a $5 order.

Among new discounts are a 50 per cent discount on corsages at Podesta and Baldocchi, a 10 per cent discount at Warren's Candy, and a 10 per cent discount at Legg's Ice Skating School. Other familiar discounts to students who have purchased cards in the past are once more being offered with the same rates.

CAB Day Set For This Friday; 'Big 25' Dance Featuring Wolohan Highlights Events

CAB Day has been proclaimed for this Friday, October 2, during College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., by the Club Activities Board with a semi-formal dance, the "Big 25," following in Smith Hall that evening from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight, according to Ben Northrup, CAB president.

The purpose of CAB Day is to familiarize new and returning students with the many organizations available to them and also to let them get a general view of what each club stands for, Northrup said.

As a start to the day's program, displays will be placed in front of Cloud Hall by the 57 organizations here on campus, including eight sororities and 12 fraternities which CAB represents. Information will be offered at the various tables set up there where questions may be answered.

Climaxing activities for CAB Day will be the "Big 25" stag or drag dance that evening, Northrup stated.

Music will be provided by Maurice Wolohan and his seven-piece orchestra.

Each student attending the dance is expected to present his Associated Student card and registration card at the door for free admission. Northrup added that students without these two cards will be charged an admission fee of one dollar. Others with only a registration card will be charged 50 cents.

Proper attire for this occasion, he said, is a sport coat and tie for the men and dressy sport for the women.

Tallies, depicting a "Big 25," will be given to all who attend, and Northrup commented that this is the first time for tallies at a CAB dance.

BEN NORTHRUP, new president of Club Activities Board.

Semester's College Hour Events Listed

Activities ranging from band concerts to Inter-Fraternity Council games highlight the schedule of College Hour events this semester. The College Hours will follow the same time schedule as last semester, 10 to 10:40 a.m.

The complete list of College Hour activities for this semester is as follows: October 2, Club Activities Board Day; October 9, no College Hour, pre-registration; October 16, rally and regular club meetings; October 23, rally and guest speaker; October 30, Student-Faculty Coffee Social; November 6, Inter-Fraternity Council games; November 13, rally; November 20, concert in the library; November 26, Thanksgiving, no College Hour; December 4, double College Hour—CAB Christmas benefit show; December 11, Christmas Concert; January 8, election rally, guest speaker and club meetings; January 15, Soph-Frosh basketball games in the men's gymnasium.

Alphabet Pre-Reg Ends As Signups Start October 9

Operating under a new system, appointments and registration numbers for next semester will be given starting Friday, October 9, in the library from 7:45 to 8:45 a.m., Walter E. McCloud of the counseling department stated today.

The counseling department urged all students to register for their appointments early on October 9, for the first applicants will receive early registration numbers. Students who come at a later time will receive later numbers and, therefore, will be forced to register at a later time.

This new system has been developed and adopted by the counseling department to help save time and confusion for both the students and the counselors. Previous to this, students were asked to sign up in S-160 on appointed dates depending on the first initial of their last name. This method has been discontinued.

Instead, each student planning to return to the college in Spring 1960 must pick up an open-hour blank form which will be available through next Thursday in Science Hall, the library, and the cafeteria.

Students should fill out this form and bring it with them on the morning of October 9, McCloud said.

Each student will be given a postcard to be self-addressed and returned along with the open-hour form, both filled out. The postcards will be mailed to students one week before they are to meet with their counselors for program planning, McCloud added.

Students who fail to come at this time for their registration numbers will have to do so at a later time in S-160.

The 10 o'clock College Hour that day will be from 8 to 9 a.m. in order to give all students sufficient time to complete these necessary procedures.

Only the 8 o'clock and 9 o'clock classes will be affected. The 8 o'clock class will run from 9:10 to 9:50 a.m. and the 9 o'clock class from 10 to 10:40 a.m. All other classes will follow the regular Friday College Hour schedule.

College's Fraternities Show Wares At IFC Smoker Tonight

Ten of the college's fraternities will display their wares tonight at the 13th consecutive semi-annual Inter-Fraternity Council smoker from 7:30 to 10 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, according to Joe Welsh, president of the IFC.

Fraternities will be represented at booths to which interested students may come to talk with fraternity representatives and learn the achievements and activities of each organization.

"There is no limit as to how many fraternities an interested person may sign up for at the smoker tonight," Welsh said, "and there is no cost or commitment of any kind for signing up for a fraternity's rushing affairs.

"Those who express an interest in certain organizations by signing up for them will be invited to the first pledging affairs held by the respective fraternities in the near future," he added.

The evening's program includes addresses by Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here, and by the presidents of each of the ten fraternities. Entertainment will be by the various fraternities.

A scholarship trophy will be presented to the fraternity that had the highest grade point average last semester. Another trophy will be presented to the fraternity that gave the most service to the college last semester.

Soft drinks and doughnut holes will be served by Gamma Phi Ypsilon. Alpha Sigma Delta and Phi Beta Delta will work on the setting up of the tables. Zeta Phi Sigma and Lambda Phi have done the publicity on the smoker. Tau Chi Sigma made the programs and Alpha Phi Epsilon has charge of the distribution of the programs. Alpha Kappa Rho and Alpha Sigma Delta will clean up at the end of the night.

Other IFC officers include Bob Basso, vice-president; Jack Verga, secretary; Art Curry, treasurer, and Conrad von Emster, rushing chairman.

Enrollment Zips Past 7000 Mark For Second Year

This semester there is a total of 7053 students attending the college. The total enrollment for last semester was 6895 students. Enrollment for the Fall 1958 semester also rose above 7000.

Total enrollment for day students this semester, however, is lower than enrollment for Fall 1958 daytime students. A year ago there were 6000 daytime students. This semester there are 5703 students attending day classes at the college.

Last semester, Spring 1959, there were 5594 daytime students.

An increase in enrollment for night classes was also disclosed. Nighttime classes last semester attracted 1301 students. Scheduled to attend night classes this semester are 1350 students.

Miss Learnard said that the enrollment for the nighttime classes does not vary too much.

A leveling off of college enrollment is occurring, Miss Learnard stated, but in a few years a new rise in enrollment can be expected from students now crowding junior and senior high schools to capacity.

IAPA Offers Journalism Study Abroad

By Maria Dueñas

That Latin American students should be less interested in politics and more in studies, while American students should be more interested in politics and less in sports, is the opinion of James B. Canel, manager of the Inter American Press Association.

The Latin American newspaperman is staying at the St. Francis Hotel while making preparations for the Conference of Latin American Publishers, which opens today to run until Friday, October 9.

The objective of this conference is to present the annual report on conditions of the press in each of the countries represented and also to discuss the problems which are currently facing the press in such countries as Nicaragua, Cuba and the Dominican Republic. Similar conferences have been held in Argentina, Cuba, New York, Santiago de Chile and various other places.

Canel emphasized that the main objective of the IAPA, which was established in 1942, is the freedom of the press, its protection and assurance. This position has led to many bitter clashes with Latin American dictators, under whose rule, freedom, and especially freedom of the press, cannot exist.

He pointed out that more opportunities exist in the USA for journalism students. Because salaries are higher, journalism can be a career. In Latin America it is generally a side line. Only those who can afford it, by having a profession such as law to fall back on, take up journalism. There are few "Schools of Journalism." Santiago de Chile has one of the best. In general, Latin American journalists learn by experience rather than by formal schooling.

The IAPA has an exchange scholarship program for journalism students who wish to study in a country other than their own within the Western Hemisphere. That is, an American student with high scholastic standards and with command of the language of the country in which he wishes to study, may apply for an IAPA scholarship by writing to The Scholarship Committee, Inter American Press Association, 22 East 60th St., New York, N. Y.

These scholarships may not exceed the amount of $2500 a year with the exception of very unusual cases. Applicants may go to the university of their choice, but the Scholarship Committee reserves the right to assign any student to another university, if it will better fulfill his objectives. The deadline for all applications is September 1 of each year.

'Soft Sell' Creature Peddles AS Cards, Creates Good Will

A STRANGE CREATURE exists on our capitalist campus this semester, but it is one we meet with pleasure.

It is known as the "soft sell" and is particularly active but not aggressive or repulsive in the area of Associated Student card salesmen. In addition, it seems to be having great success both in building up some good will which was formerly lacking and also in setting and reaching a high goal in such sales.

With 2000 students already participating in their own college activities and citizenship programs voluntarily, and more expected, a strange and perhaps bitter contrast is offered by a nearby campus where membership is involuntary, parking privileges are extra, and a price of $13.00 is DEMANDED for far fewer privileges and benefits than our own cards.

Other colleges often complain of the lack of "spirit" and participation in student functions. If the barometer of Associated Student card sales is accurate, it seems obvious that this will not be the plaint of our college and we hope that the interest manifested will be demonstrated by higher attendance at all our collegiate activities.

Poulson's Indiscreet Treatment Of Khrushchev Causes Undue Friction

CONTROVERSIAL MATTERS, on campus or off, require a direct approach and should permit, as they do in The Guardsman, room for appropriate rejoinders. Thus we have a column devoted to our readers and their discussion of what is said or done.

A matter such as the mayor of Los Angeles insulting a visiting representative from another country contrary to instructions from the State Department is one which does not really rate a controversy, but has already caused one.

It is obvious that this theoretically intelligent former congressman committed a serious breach of social conduct in his castigation of Nikita Khrushchev.

While we do not place the rights of cities, states, or the government over the rights of the individual, certain points should be noted.

For example, if Mayor Poulson had really known the vitriol in his system was boiling, he could have requested that his city be left out of the "world traveler's" itinerary. Or, he could have notified the State Department of his dislike and snubbed Mr. K. by not attending the social functions where the Soviet leader held forth.

But if he did feel that some categorical imperative demanded that he should tangle with the Russian Bear, he should have at least gone well armed, because the breach of social conduct would have been ignored if he had won a large scale verbal battle a la Richard Nixon.

As it was, he lost, and poorly, in a tasteless manner and possibly jeopardized the possibility of a real thaw in the "cold war."

We wonder if there is any real humor in such a situation, but one comedian has already presented a minor satire on Mr. K. calling home and saying, "You know those rockets scheduled for San Francisco? Well, shift them 400 miles south."

Jacobsen Visits Washington

IRC Adviser Cites Glaring Flaws In AF Foreign Student Program

By Bob Pacini

Undesirable opinions of the United States are being formed by students visiting this country under Air Force sponsorship, according to Joseph M. Jacobsen, counselor here, who flew to Washington last week to present his views before a meeting of the Chiefs of Staff of the Air Force Reserves.

Holding the rank of major in the Air Force Reserves himself, Jacobsen said he believed that students studying in America under an Air Force program, are not getting an accurate picture of the American way of life.

These students study at, live on and spend most of their time at the Air Force bases to which they have been assigned. Thus, Jacobsen said, they have no way of obtaining a more desirable impression of America and its people.

Jacobsen, the sponsor of the International Relations Club at the college and a member of the National Association of Foreign Student Advisers, said it would be of great value if the visiting students got off their bases and into the community more to see first hand life in the United States.

A feeling of neglect and resentment might arise in these students if they are not shown more attention and concern, and thus, in an era when the United States is constantly before the international spotlight, great harm could occur to the nation when the foreign students return to their respective countries, bringing with them the impressions, good or bad, they have formed of America, its people, its way of life and its hospitality toward visitors.

Air Force bases that are playing host to foreign students, Jacobsen declared, are not properly equipped to present these students with a program that would be more beneficial to them in helping them come to a better understanding of this country.

It would be of great value to the visiting students and to the country, Jacobsen continued, if the N.A.F.S.A. could step into the picture and introduce the foreign students to American family life, help them learn English and also aid them in reaching a more favorable conception of the United States.

Jacobsen recently wrote to Washington to express his views on the matter and was invited to present his conclusions to the conference of the Chiefs of Staff of the Air Force Reserves in the nation's capitol.

Dean Returns With Ottawa Degree

Sabbatical Covers Study Of Foreign Teaching Methods

By Pete Burr

Traveling through most of Western Europe and the Middle East in an intensive effort to study and analyze the cultural heritage of college students during her 12-month Sabbatical, Dean of Women Mary Golding has returned to the college with an intimate knowledge gained on the spot from colleges and universities the world over, including those of American, European and Oriental cultures.

The dean is now Dr. Golding by virtue of the Doctorate degree in Philosophy conferred upon her by the University of Ottawa, Canada, in the early months of her journey.

Dean Golding visited various educational institutions in Canada and on the American eastern seaboard before venturing into the more exotic hinterlands of the international scene.

After passing through the necessary red tape of obtaining the required entry granted by the ministers of education of the various nations through the International Federation of University Women, Dean Golding was permitted to visit and to participate in lectures and seminars at the universities of London, Paris, Istanbul and the Stanford aggregation outside of Stuttgart in Germany as well as sessions of the UNESCO Committee for the Advancement of Educational Opportunities for Women and the Curriculum Advisory Committee in Paris.

DR. MARY GOLDING, dean of women, back from a 12-month Sabbatical leave which took her through many different parts of the world.

According to Dean Golding, the age level of City College students is roughly equivalent to that of the last year of European secondary education, but it should be noted, she believes, that the European student is in for one of the roughest examinations that he will encounter in his academic career for the sole purpose of obtaining his ticket to the University.

In comparing students at the college, representative of one of the most interesting of American cross sectional studies, with students from the British Isles, France, Germany, Italy and the Middle East, Dean Golding observed that discipline, administered in the home during the earliest formative years, was responsible for the amazing performance of the European student at comparable city college age levels.

"Teachers in Europe have few problems," Dean Golding said. "Working as they do with a more or less select group cleared of deadwood by the exacting curriculum, none but the serious candidate remains at the termination of secondary schooling."

Dean Golding added that students of comparable age to students at the college were doing the equivalent of graduate work in American universities.

European Student Performance Due To Early Discipline

Crowds, Lines, Parking . . .

'Old-Timers' Hold Upper Hand In Campus Know-How; New Students Baffled By Myriad Tribulations

Crowds everywhere, lines everywhere, classes filled, no lockers, no parking space, can't find a seat in the cafeteria, don't have time to wait in line in the bookstore for that one last purchase, ad infinitum . . .

These unhappy phrases are bantered back and forth throughout the campus by returning students. Those gods of the campus who have "been here before" and know all there is to know including which professor to "take" and which "not to take," but probably more important, that one particular parking space that no one else knows about.

An excellent question but no answer. It has always been so. Yet from all corners of the campus come the cries of the suffering.

The student who almost ruined his new suede shoes climbing two muddy, water-soaked hills from the site on which he parked his car . . .

The student who was late to an English class because he had to buy the book and the line ran the length of the bookstore . . .

The individual who didn't eat lunch because waiting for a seat in the cafeteria wouldn't have been worthwhile. The food would have become cold anyway. He went to his afternoon class and caused the professor to gaze at him over the rims of his glasses because each time this professor would make an emphatic statement the fasting student's stomach would announce loudly its discomfort. Only two weeks of college and already this student is certain his professor dislikes him . . .

The suffering is now but remember, Liberté, Egalité, Fraternité, and midterms.

At present, for many, the first midterm exists somewhere dimly in the distant future; however, those who have witnessed previous reactions to this period smile knowingly because they realize that after the midterm there should be—and probably will be—more parking space, more room in the cafeteria, and perhaps even a locker to share.

Summer Dream

College Coeds Study, Hula On Oahu Campus

Hawaii for most is just a wish and a dream, but for three college coeds here, it became a reality this year.

Naureen Mottioli, Joan Michieletti and Susan Shawl had the opportunity to join a study tour at the University of Hawaii this past summer and returned with many gratifying comments and happy memories of their experiences.

Home for six exciting and busy weeks was Atherton Hall, located on the Mid-Pacific Institute campus just a few blocks from the University.

"Dormitory life proved very interesting, for we had the rare occasion of meeting girls from all parts of the world," claimed the coeds.

Their daily schedule usually consisted of attending classes, sightseeing, dating, going to luaus (Hawaiian feast), swimming, or just loafing on the Isles' most enchanting beaches. They even had a taste of poi (taro which the Hawaiians mash and use in place of potatoes, bread, or rice).

Almost every course is offered at these summer sessions to 6000 students. Among these, lauhalo weaving, hula and several other courses in Hawaiian culture are taught. These coeds ventured a few lessons in the hula which proved very satisfactory.

"My funniest experience was when I had to get up and do the hula at one of the 'uke' sessions held on the beach in front of a huge crowd," Miss Shawl said; "however, learning the hula was a lot of fun, and I enjoyed doing it," she added.

Miss Michieletti claimed that her favorite pastime was a day at the beach. She enjoyed meeting people, especially the beach boys.

All three coeds admitted that they practically lived in Bermudas and muumuus (Hawaiian dress) throughout their entire stay, except on a few occasions. This is typical of Hawaii's casualness, "I bought five muumuus," claims Miss Shawl. "They are so comfortable. I even bought a shirt with a big footprint on the back."

Shots At Ramdom

By Vicky Aumann

COLLEGE is ready for another year. So are the instructors. The students—well that's always a question.

In one of the first lectures last week, an anthropology instructor was explaining how skulls vary in different racial groups, and how they are measured and compared. This is done by finding the cephalic index, which expresses the ratio of the head's width to its length.

If an individual's cephalic index is under 77, the person is classed as a dolichocephalic or long-headed. If the number is between 77 and 82, he is a mesocephalic or medimm-headed, and a figure over 82 shows the person to be a brachycephalic or round-headed individual.

Seems that the longer-headed individuals (the American Indians, for example) were the first to appear on this earth, but they were gradually subjected and influenced by the rules of the "round-heads" who came much later.

The round-heads seem to be the conquerors. If anyone noticed the extremely rotund, skull shape of our city's distinguished guest last week, we certainly hope the instructor was wrong this time.

WE HAVE all heard, no doubt, that the Russians are responsible for the majority of the world's greatest inventions. There was Ivan Edisonsky, of course, father of the electric light and stereophonic sound; Nikita Wattsky, his aide, and Igor Bellkowsky, inventor of the "Allo."

The "Allo" is an instrument with a bell, earpiece and mouthpiece all in one and usually only rings at the most inconvenient times. Muttering under your breath, you clothe yourself a la Bardot, rush out to pick up the mouthpiece and say into it, "Allô, allo."

Then a voice at the other end squeals in delight, "Is Kookie there?"

And you say, "No. You've got the wrong number again!"

FOREIGN STUDENT adviser Joseph Jacobsen received a surprise trip to Washington last week, all expenses paid. Seems that the Defense Department refuses to grant any concessions to foreign students who are faced with the problem of tackling compulsory military courses in a language they are just beginning to learn.

What with terms such as the intercontinental ballistic missile and all that, it is not surprising that many students find the courses quite strenuous. Dr. Jacobsen got the invite in order to present his plea on behalf of foreign students to the big brass direct.

1935-San Francisco Ram Grid Turnouts-1959

RAGS TO RICHES.

Football may have undergone some terrific technical changes by way of the adoption of the T-formation, inculcation of the trap system of ground-gaining, and the adaptation of professional pass patterns, but the spirit behind the Rom grid forces from 1935 through today (as blended above) has ever remained the same.

Although the opening edition of the Red and White pigskin parade kicked off Rom history with a 12-0 win over Solinas, the late Coach Russ Sweet closed the year with a 2-7 record, but a lot of fond memories.

Shown on the right side of the symbolic photo are the Silver Anniversary charges of Coach Grover Klemmer (fourth row, olongside line coach Alex Schwarz). Throughout its history the local forces have seen their ups and downs, Stanfels and Motsons, victories and defeats, but the emphasis on fair play has ever remained the same.

Lady Luck Too Much To Battle As Rams Drop 2 Cliff Hangers

LA City Squelches Last Minute Ram Drive For 7-6 Nod

Dame Fortune, Fate Deal 20-16 Loss To Rams In LA Opener

By Frank Dunne

A single point proved itself the difference between victory and defeat as the Los Angeles City College Cubs defeated the local grid forces, 7-6, in the Rams' home opener at Kezar Stadium last Friday night.

Kermit Alexander, a veritable one-man band for the L.A. forces, belted through the winning placement with but four minutes and 40 seconds remaining to play in the contest.

Aside from packing the mail 21 times for a total of 72 yards, the swivel-hipped Cub halfback was also the lad who pushed across the game-breaking tally on a dive over left tackle from one yard out.

In spite of its dreary outcome on the part of the Ram backers, the Phelan Avenue defensive unit was as sharp as a Mosiem sabre throughout the affair, and the Cub forces were unable to move the ball beyond the Red and White 36 during the first 45 minutes.

Wayne Stribling, who ran like a Tennessee cannonball from start to finish, picked up the sole Ram marker of the contest with seven minutes remaining in the third period on a buck up the middle from the one-yard stripe.

Although the Rams were as far from victory at the final gun as Tipperary is from Dunkirk, the maestro was playing quite a different number two minutes before zero hour.

Through the outstanding field generalship of Dennis Bates and the hard-nosed line play of Walt O'Conner and Al Kent, the locals moved the ball from their own 20 to the Los Angeles 33 in five plays. It was at this point that the Klemmer charges stormed up to the line of scrimmage to set up the play that has to go into the books as one of the greatest heart-breakers of all time.

Bates threaded the needle on a perfectly executed swing pass to halfback Bob Taylor, who skirted toward paydirt like Jesse James after the 3:10 to Yuma. With 10 of the 11 enemy defenders then at his back, Taylor appeared to be in by at least three furlongs when disaster struck in the form of a defensive back by the name of Tim Holland.

To say that the flashy, little L.A. scatback was the last man between Taylor and destiny would be the understatement of the decade. Taylor had already by-passed him and through no more than a quirk of fate the smogman's left hand was guided to the ankle of the Ram thoroughbred, tumbling him to the turf.

Taylor lost control of the hide, and as it bobbled crazily toward the sideline, Alexander got a hand on it before it crossed the marker, and the rest is history.

Dame Fortune called the play and Fate cleared the way as the Los Angeles Valley Monarchs edged the City College Rams, 20 to 16, in the opening game of the Rams' 25th grid season.

The clock had run out when the Monarchs scored their game-winning touchdown. With two seconds to play on the Ram 39-yard line, Los Angeles formed a hurriedly ragged offensive play which drew one of the Ram linemen off-side. This in turn killed the clock. Cashing in on this break, Monarch Quarterback Tom Davies passed to Pete Holt on the 15-yard line. Holt danced his way to the game winning touchdown.

The Monarchs drew first blood as Tom Pulford scored on a 20-yard end sweep to break the ice and give the southerners an 8 to 0 edge early in the first quarter. The point after touchdown was added on a pass from Davies to Jim Zar.

The Rams charged back later in the same quarter to tie the score at 8-8. Ram fullback Wayne Stribling bulled his way up the middle to even the count. Stribling also added the extra points on a brilliant end run. Two circus catches for 15 and 25 yards by Charlie Smith set up the first Ram score.

The locals forged ahead as Tim Moffett banged his way up the middle for 27 yards and the go-ahead touchdown. The p.a.t. was added on a pass from Dennis Bates to Mel Oliver.

Bates was a standout all evening. His passing was excellent and he mixed his plays well.

Los Angeles struck back in the third quarter on an 18-yard run by Holt. Failing to make the conversion, the Monarchs trailed the Rams 18 to 16 until the clock ran out. Then the fluke pass from Davies to Holt snatched victory from the hands of the Rams.

In the final play of the game, Davies' pass to Holt was deflected off the target. Holt was not the intended receiver but a quirk of fate put him in the right place at the right time. From the 15 he scrambled his way to the end zone.

Hoops Highlight Club Activities; V-Ball Possible

Basketball will highlight intramural sports competition between clubs and fraternities this semester, according to Mike Haskell, president of the Associated Men Students.

This is the fourth consecutive semester of such intra play because of increasing interest in basketball and spirited competition among the different clubs in the college. In the past competition has been only in the spring semester.

Haskell announced that six-man volleyball has a good possibility of being added to the intramural program. A vote will be taken by each fraternity and submitted to the Inter-Fraternity Council to decide the matter.

The basketball schedule will be made by Haskell and the program is under the jurisdiction of Jack Gaddy, men's physical education director. The games will be played at night in both the men's and women's gymnasiums, Haskell said.

All players must have an Associated Student card. Basketball lettermen are ineligible for intramural competition. A team playing with an ineligible player must forfeit the game.

Gaddy's brand of mural hoop competition has shown terrific steps in the right direction over the past three years. Sporting an abundance of talented cagers who went on to greater glory with the Ram varsity, the Rickey Ross Rockets literally tore the loop wide open last fall in picking up the marbles without a single loss.

Last spring the throne was turned over to Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity.

Chief Block Club Posts Still Open

Two Block SF Society commissioners will be picked at this Friday's College Hour meeting to complete the club's positions for this semester, according to Bob Ross, Block club president.

An athletic commissioner will be chosen to attend Student Council meetings. His job will be to relay back to the Block club proceedings that take place in council. He also carries to council any appropriations that the physical education department needs for athletic equipment.

An awards commissioner will be picked to help Ross set up the semi-annual awards banquet which will be held December 7. The awards commissioner picks the guest speakers and checks the trophies and blocks that will be received by this semester's athletes.

Any athlete who has received a block from the college can be a member. Alex Schwarz is the Block Society sponsor and can be consulted in the men's gymnasium.

Gaddy, Sweet, Eisan Pioneers In Molding Football Factory Highlighted By Matson, Stanfel

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

The year 1935 was one of good vintage for many, and sour apples for a few.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt laid his Second New Deal before the 73rd Congress of the United States in Washington; the Social Security card became the credential to independency in old age; a mental degenerate by the name of Adolph Hitler made his official debut in a Munich beer hall, christening an evil dream which was to change the world forever; and George Herman Ruth, cast off as but another memory by the great Yankee machine, saw one of his greatest hours in baseball as he unloaded a trio of home runs for the Boston Braves before bowing out of the game completely.

In San Francisco, 1935 was just another year—a bad one for most of us, for we were still cold, hungry and despondent, groping through the exodus of the big crash.

Standing in the center of a dilapidated field on the corner of Van Ness Avenue and Bay Street, however, were three men who were little concerned over the unsavory financial state of nation—Jack Gaddy, Lee Eisan and the late Russ Sweet had just given birth to what they knew had to go into the books as a memorable event.

Eleven days later the Red and White forces defended the college's honor for the first time and carried the banner of Ramdom on to glory by way of a 12-0 whitewashing of Salinas Junior College, now Hartnell College.

This was the humble beginning of a ritual which has' religiously repeated over 200 times since then. From Gaddy and Eisan, through Conlan and Fischer, on into the competent hands of Grover Klemmer and Alex Schwarz the precious tradition has traveled.

All the way from Al Pedrin to Oscar Donahue, Ram gridders have marched down through the years, ever bearing one thing in mind: to represent their fellow students in but one way—by playing the finest brand of football their hearts, nerves and sinews would allow.

There have been the Matsons, Stanfels, and Tolers, operating alongside men whose grid ability is probably no longer even thought about by themselves.

The passing of the years has shown its mark upon the brand of Ram football, but the spirit behind it has ever remained the same. Perhaps this enitly is best expressed in the words of Grover Klemmer: "Dealing with football is like observing a glass of rare vintage. One man will say, 'My God, it is half empty.' We try to smile and say, 'It's half full.'"

ATHLETIC DIRECTOR Jack Gaddy (as he appeared in 1935), was the brains behind the hard-nosed line play of the college's first grid squad.

5 Coeducational Sports Offered This Semester

Members of the Recreation Association are offering five coeducational activities for all students who are interested this semester, according to Gladys Grassini, RA president.

The following sports will be conducted at the times listed as follows: fencing, Monday or Wednesday at 4 p.m.; modern dance, Tuesday at 3 p.m.; volleyball, Thursday at 3 p.m.; social dance, during college hour on Friday, and also folk dancing on Friday morning. Anyone interested in joining can sign up in the lobby of the women's or men's gymasium as soon as possible.

Officers for this semester working with Miss Grassini include Joanne Maloney, vice-president; Frank Stuckey, secretary; Al White, treasurer, and Dave Nigel, historian.

RAMBLINGS

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

WHERE were you on March 10, 1944? If your name is Winston Churchill you were probably preparing yourself for an historic trip to the Big Four conference at Yalta; if your name is Holland Smith you were cleaning out the Mariannas; but if your name is Russell Sweet, you must have been discussing single wing patterns and the like with St. Peter.

Ram grid backers lost a lot more than a mere football coach with the passing of Russ Sweet, for the lovable strategist of the college's first pigskin squad was much more than this—he was the heart and soul of everything that the Red and White brand of athletics has stood for since its inception.

What about this legendary figure? Who was he? Where did he come from?

Concerning these three queries, there is a possibility that we may be able to shed a small ray of light on the matter.

Russ Sweet was born in a little town about 25 miles northeast of Billings, Montana, in 1905. Almost from the first moment he was able to carry his body upright on those sturdy legs of his he was perennially seen dancing through the open fields near his farmhouse in a physical prophecy of his future gridiron laurels.

From here he went on to the University of Montana, from where he and "Wild Bill" Kelly tore open the 1926 East-West Shrine classic with the latter hitting Russ for a 67-yard six-point pass play that won the ball game for the coast forces.

Sweet was probably one of the 25 most versatile athletes of modern times. Aside from having run the 100-yard dash in 9.2 for an unofficial world's record, he was also a standout at baseball, basketball, tennis, golf, and other sports, too numerous to mention.

60 Organizations Open Ranks To New Students; Semester Social Activities Start Soon

By Pat Perkins

ALL NEW STUDENTS as well as old are invited to join the various campus clubs and participate in the many activities offered by these organizations.

Approximately 60 clubs are at the disposal of those who are interested. Among these clubs are the California Teachers Association, the Chinese Students Club, the Horticulture Society, the International Relations Club, the Newman Club, the Broadcasters Club, the A Cappella Choir, CCSF Baud Association, and Le Cercle Francais, just to name a few.

Alpha Gamma Sigma (scholarship society), Alpha Phi Omega (the men's service fraternity) and Gamma Sigma Sigma (the women's service sorority) are the honor groups at the college.

The various fraternities include Alpha Kappa Rho, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Alpha Sigma Delta, Beta Phi Beta, Beta Tau, Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Lambda Phi, Phi Beta Delta, Tau Chi Sigma and Zeta Phi Sigma.

Delta Psi, Delta Sigma Tau, Gamma Kappa Beta, Kappa Phi, Phi Beta Rho, Theta Tau and Zeta Chi are the seven campus sororities.

Next Sunday the Inter-Sorority Council will hold its semi-annual formal tea for rushees in Laurel Hall, at 2676 California Street.

According to President Annette Moquin, Gamma Kappa Beta sorority is busily planning its fireside and rushing dinner.

The Hiking Club will meet during College Hour Friday in C-257 to discuss the Saturday, October 3, hike and other important matters. Everyone is welcome to attend this meeting.

Music Dept. To Conduct Tryouts For Yule Concert

All students interested in participating in the 25th annual Christmas concert, one of the highlights of the academic year, are encouraged to consult Robert Morton, music instructor, who can be located at 1 p.m. daily in B-6 or at 9 or 10 a.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday in B-5.

Scheduled for the evening of Thursday, December 10, and again Friday, December 11, during College Hour, the concert is open to anyone who wishes to attend. The concert will require no Associated Student card for admission.

Among the chief participants will be the A Cappella Choir and the Men's Glee Club, both under the direction of Morton, and the concert band, under the direction of Meyer M. Cahn, also of the music department.

Morton expressed a desire to see more students sign up for music courses, as more singers, especially altos and tenors, can be used, and he implied that students should have no inhibitions about inquiry if they are interested.

Music G-12, A Cappella Choir, offers two sections, while Music G-13, the Men's Glee Club, offers one. Treble Clef is not being offered this semester.

These music courses, which can also be considered social activities, hold annual banquets and picnics, elect officers, which have not been selected as yet, present awards and participate in outside presentations. Churches, other colleges, and clubs are among the places at which the groups sing.

AWS, ISC Delay Film Series Until October 16

Films originally scheduled to be shown this Friday in S-136, during College Hour, are to be delayed until Friday, October 16, because of organized meetings of the Associated Women Students and the Inter-Sorority Council, according to Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor.

The audio-visual aid rooms are to be used by Dean Ralph Hillsman to address these two groups.

ALTHOUGH THERE ARE NO two-year junior colleges in Italy, His Excellency Guiseppe Medici, Italian Minister of Education, showed avid interest in City College on his visit here last Tuesday. The main purpose of this visit was to get a better idea of the advances in American education. He plans to take back the information he has gained to Italy and possibly apply it to the school system there.

During his visit he posed for photographers. Above, shaking hands with Louis G. Conlan, president of the college (left center), he is flanked by Dr. Ernesto Manga, chief private secretary to the Italian Minister of Education, left, and Dr. Giorgio Rota, section chief at the Italian Ministry of the Treasury.

Election, Speech Mark First Honor Society Meeting

Election of officers and an explanatory speech by faculty sponsor William G. Richardson marked the first meeting of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, during College Hour September 18 in C-232.

Officers chosen for the semester include business administration major, Thomas Murphy, president; Mary Didenko, a secretarial major, vice-president, and education major, Jean Toso, secretary-treasurer.

At the meeting, Richardson delivered a brief presentation explaining the history of the honor society, its aims and goals and the requirements for the three types of memberships offered.

Associate membership candidates are first semester students who hold life memberships and are gold seal bearers of the California Scholarship Federation.

Temporary members are those students who carried at least 12 units with an overall grade average of B with no grade lower than "C." These students must have 42 grade points with 12, 13 or 14 units; 45 grade points with 15 units, 48 with 16 units and 51 with 17 units.

Exceptions are made for students with a "D" grade if the overall grade average is 3.5 or for those who have held membership in the society for one or two semesters, Richardson explained.

Further information can be obtained by consulting Richardson in S-143G or by attending College Hour meetings in C-232 on the following dates: November 13 and January 8. Non-members are invited to attend the meetings, Richardson emphasized.

Sororities Prepare Firesides, Teas For Fall Rushing Season As Registration Closes Today

All women students interested in sorority rushing activities may register in the dean of women's office, S-150, through today, according to Margi Hill, Inter-Sorority Council secretary.

Each of the eight sororities on campus will have representatives present in the dean's office to acquaint prospective members with the rushing routine and to collect the $1 fee required from each registrant.

There will be an orientation meeting this Friday during College Hour for those who sign up. During this time each sorority president will describe her sorority and its activities.

On Sunday a formal tea will be held in Laurel Hall, located at 2676 California Street. The purpose of this tea is "to get all of the sorority members and rushees together so that they may get to know each other better," Miss Hill said.

Dressy suits or wool dresses with gloves, hat, and heels are proper for this function.

Next week each sorority will hold a fireside. Casual campus dress is appropriate and one may attend any number or all of these informal get-togethers.

The dinners each sorority sponsors are next on the rushing agenda. These dinners are by invitation and type of dress will be specified.

Each sorority will hold its coffee preference hour on October 27 and preference sheets may be filled out in Dean Mary Golding's office the next day. Rushees may pick up their invitations to pledge on October 29 at 2 o'clock.

A rally for new pledges will be held during College Hour on October 30 in S-136. At this time information about Pledge Week will be distributed.

The presidents of the eight sororities, Diane Christoffersen from Delta Psi, Bernice Blackshire from Delta Sigma Tau, Annette Moquin from Gamma Kappa Beta, Judy Cordy of Gamma Sigma Sigma, Miss Hill of Kappa Phi, Anita Carcione from Phi Beta Rho, June White of Theta Tau and Zeta Chi's Sorelle Lowe, are working as a committee to make these rushing affairs successful.

200 Students Per Day Ask Campus Parking Permits

Parking permits issued up to date number 1150, according to Martin Novitski, chief of the Campus Police.

Permits are being issued Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., at the southeast corner of the reservoir parking lot, located across from Science Hall, Novitski stated.

Effective on Wednesday of last week, the "A" parking area, located south of Science Hall near the cafeteria, was converted into a faculty parking lot. This area, formerly used by students, became a faculty parking lot because of the large amount of construction in most of the faculty parking areas.

In order to obtain a parking permit, a student must have an Associated Student card, driver's license, and the registration slip for the vehicle.

"Student co-operation has been very good considering the many changes in the former parking system," Novitski said.

Parking Problems Highlight First Student Council Business Sessions

By Bob Pacini

Parking problems, that brought forth charges of meddling in Campus Police affairs, and money matters, including Associated Student card sales and budgets, dominated the first business conducted by the Student Council.

Campus Police Chief Martin Novitski announced that the Campus Police had issued 1150 parking permits. It was then suggested that the parking lot adjoining Smith Hall, now reserved for faculty parking during the construction period, be opened at 10 a.m. to students.

Bud Andress, AS information chairman, remarked that this would be unfair to faculty members who arrive after 10 a.m. Andress proposed stationing a campus policeman at the entrance to the reservoir, and admitting only those cars that have parking permits to the parking area. This, he said, would be more practical than letting any car enter the parking lot and citing it because of no permit.

Novitski informed the council that he had only eight uniformed men and couldn't spare another man for such a task. When Andress suggested that some help be offered the Campus Police in the parking matter, Club Activities Board President Ben Northrup countered by saying that the Campus Police didn't tell the council how to run its business, and that the council shouldn't try to tell the Campus Police how to conduct their affairs.

Andress made it clear, however, that he did not infer anything critical of the Campus Police. Northrup also stated that there is a multitude of signs about the college informing students of parking regulations.

The council was surprised when Novitski announced that the Campus Police are already 100 per cent in AS membership. Andress expressed admiration and said that it should serve as a model for all.

Dean Ralph Hillsman told the council that once again the college is in line to receive financial aid from the federal government through the National Defense Education Loan Fund. This act makes it possible for the government to loan colleges grants of money if the colleges will pay one-ninth the sum requested.

This year the college will receive aid amounting to $34,000 and thus, Hillsman said, the sum of $2500 would have to be put up. The council passed the motion and $2500 will be taken from the college's reserve fund in order to qualify for the grant from the government.

Surprise Guest Expected At Frosh Ball October 10

Special arrangements have been planned for this semester's Freshmen Ball, on Saturday, October 10, from 9 p.m. until 12 midnight.

Freshman Class officers, Bill Keane, president; Sandy Pool, secretary; Bob Rogers, treasurer, and members of the Associated Students are working to make this dance a success.

The Surf Club has been obtained for the ball, and the theme Sea Breeze has been selected. A surprise guest is scheduled to appear along with Steve Paul's orchestra.

Counterpoint: Tips On Tipping

rogant waitress who was merely doing her job.

In view of such inconsistencies, the reason behind the action becomes important. The person whose tips are prompted by conviction, who tips only when he considers the service particularly deserving of reward, is a person who keeps tipping within the realm of its original meaning. Unfortunately, such an individual is in the minority, for he and only he, among those who tip, is a genuine individual.

Perhaps the strongest argument against tipping is that it is a constant source of confusion, misunderstanding, and embarrassment. A man places a dollar bill on a restaurant table and is bombarded by such comments:

From his wife: "You know we can't afford that much."

From his children: "Is that all you're leaving?"

From his waiter: "Well, sir, 15 per cent would be more appropriate."

Such a dialogue is often only the prelude to a scene which ends in a vehement exchange of uncomplimentary epithets—a discomfiting experience for all concerned.

One way to combat the contemporary concept of tipping is to take an active part in hastening its downfall, namely, to cease tipping for the sake of tipping and restore this custom to its original usage.

TONY BARTMANN, AS president, will be on hand as host to the CJCSGA Regional Conference to be held on campus October 17.

AS Hosts Regional Conference October 17

By Thomas Wood

Key members of the Associated Students here, led by AS President Tony Bartmann, will host delegates from 26 two-year colleges for the upcoming Northern Region, California Junior College Student Government Conference, to be held Saturday, October 17.

Acting as chairmau of the conference will be last semester's AS President Fred Muller, who will be assisted by Ben Northrup, regional vice-chairman.

State Information Service Chairman Bud Andress is in charge of sending out questionnaires to each of the visiting colleges, in order to co-ordinate activities of the different workshops.

Each semester, as a prelude to the State Conference, sectional meetings of the two-year college student leaders are scheduled to exchange and compare ideas and attempt to solve the problems of their respective colleges.

This semester the college has been selected as the site for the semi-annual affair.

By a process of resolutions brought up before the geueral assembly and a subsequent consideration by all delegates in the form of voting, the most important and commonly beneficial ideas, accepted by a majority, will remain for later submission to the State Conference.

Nine separate workshop sessions will be held, one for each phase of student life. They will include Associated Men Students, Associated Women Students, Athletics, Campus Activities, Current Problems, Finance, Publications, Public Relations, Student Government and Veterans.

Following registration and coffee hour in Smith Hall, delegates will separate into the workshop rooms in Cloud Hall. Following the workshop meetings, a general assembly in the library will take place to air the results of the talks and to bring up any new ideas and resolutions, followed by lunch and then another individual room gathering.

Climaxing the agenda, a final general assembly is scheduled where the findings of the day can be openly clarified and debated and final resolutions offered before voting.

The Inter-Sorority Council members, who are the eight presidents of the on-campus sororities, will serve as welcoming hostesses for the conference. Members of the Associated Women Students will assist by registering the delegates as they arrive and by serving a light breakfast in Smith Hall.

Conscientious Non-Tipper Has Artistic Touch

By Don Seratti

IN THE REALM of the gifted and the creative abides an individual who, because of the nature of his art, is not readily associated with people commonly referred to as artists. This individual is the person-who-carefully-evaluates-all-service-rendered-him-in-a-public-place-and-leaves-a-tip-only-when-he-feels-the-service-merits-one, or to use a simpler but less precise term, the conscientious non-tipper.

This type of artist is so rare in our society that his field of endeavor is easily overlooked in most discussions of the fine arts.

Despite the relative obscurity in which the non-tipper plies his trade, the special skills he possesses and the profound thinking that produces these skills establish him as an artist in the true sense of the word.

A non-tipper must be an iconoclast. Tipping has become such a hallowed tradition in our society that many customers automatically reach into their pockets before departing from an establishment, giving virtually no thought to why they embellish a tabiecloth that should be on its way to the laundry or fill a palm that should be immersed in dishwater.

However, one who begins to express strong doubts about the merits of this venerated institution can, with a little more determination, break with it and proclaim his independence.

Strength of conviction is another attribute required of the non-tipper. He must form his conviction by reasoning that in spite of tradition, tipping is actually nothing more than a customer's way of expressing appreciation for a job well done, and should be strictly a spontaneous act.

He may also conclude that workers' compliants of low salaries and dependence on tips could be better answered by their employers than by patrons.

If we are to tip those who fall into the so-called "services performed" category, who is to stop this group from being broadened to include grocery clerks, shoe salesmen, janitors and even schoolteachers, any of whom could find his own interpertation of "rendering a special service"?

When the non-tipper has arrived at these conclusions, he must put his art to the final test—he must be able to uphold his convictions under heavy pressure exerted by a servant who has, after years of practice, perfected the art of looking daggers at the non-tipper. It is when being confronted by this arch-enemy that the true non-tipper will overthrow the "tyranny of the obsequious waiter" and the weakling will succumb.

If enough individuals are able to meet these qualifications and place non-tipping on a level of recognition equal to the more well-known arts, the artist's painting and the musician's composition may well be joined in museums and exhibition halls by the non-tipper's masterpieces — the empty hand and the unadorned tablecloth.

Defense Act Loans Open For Superior Students; Science, Education Given Preference

Students with high scholastic records and who are in need of financial aid may receive it this semester through government loans provided by the National Defense Student Loan Act, according to Verrell A. Weber, a member of the college Federal Loan Committee.

Those who qualify for these loans may borrow up to $400 each semester and up to $150 each summer session.

Of the $50,000 available for loans this semester, nine-tenths was allotted to the college by the government. The rest of the money is from Associated Student funds, allotted by the Student Council.

The federal allotment, according to Miss Weber, represents the highest sum given by the government to any Northern California college, aside from the University of California.

Final ruling on applications is given by a committee composed of faculty members. A personal letter to the committee stating the applicant's qualifications is required.

The committee, Miss Weber declared, in approving loans shows preference to applicants majoring in science and education. Students entering a science or a teaching profession upon graduation receive a 50 per cent discount in payments.

The loans, which are payable after graduation and a year of employment, will be granted only to those who have at least a B average in their studies.

Students wishing to apply for a loan are expected to consult Dean Ralph Hillsman in S-149 for additional information.

Four Scholarships Available Here To Aspiring Students

Aspiring but financially limited students may apply for one of the four scholarships available this semester, according to Mary Golding, dean of women.

Alpha Phi Omega, men's national service fraternity, offers two scholarships, $125 each, to the most deserving man and woman student who have taken part in student activities in the past Spring or Fall semester.

The Chinese Students Club offers one scholarship a semester, for which all students are eligible. This scholarship is made available from the proceeds of the annual Sweetheart Ball given by the Chinese Students Club.

In addition, Florence Lewis, an alumna of the college, gives a $50 scholarship each semester to a woman student.

Letters of application, which can be picked up in S-148 or S-150, must be returned to Dean Golding or Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, by November 28. Letters will be judged on the basis of need, student activities, ambition, and scholastic ability, Dean Golding said.

Applicants will be judged by the Scholarship Board, whose members are Deans Golding and Hillsman, John J. Brady, co-ordinator, division of student welfare, and Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction.

Graduate Petitions Due By Next Friday

Students expecting to graduate at the end of this semester should file a graduation petition by this Friday, October 9, according to Mary Jane Learnard, college registrar.

The last day to file petitions to drop courses is October 28. Students failing to drop courses officially will receive a final grade, and Miss Learnard warned students that they cannot withdraw from a course in order to avoid receiving a final grade of F because of excessive, unexcused absence.

Pre-Registration Starts Friday

Students wishing to receive early registration numbers for next semester are expected to do so this Friday, October 9, from 7:45 to 8:45 a.m. in the library, Walter E. McCloud of the counseling department stated.

Instead of being held from 10 to 10:40 a.m., College Hour this Friday will be from 8 to 9 a.m., in order to allow students to complete all necessary pre-registration procedures.

Only the 8 and 9 o'clock classes will be affected. The 8 o'clock class will run from 9:10 to 9:50 a.m. and the 9 o'clock class from 10 to 10:40 a.m. All other classes will follow the regular Friday College Hour schedule.

All students who report after this hour, or on subsequent days, must go to S-160 and will, therefore, receive later registration numbers, according to McCloud.

Open hour blank forms and information sheets are available today and tomorrow in the library, Science Hall and the cafeteria. Each student is expected to fill out the blank form and bring it with him on Friday morning.

One week prior to the time they are to meet with their counselor, students will receive postcards advising them of their appointments.

If for any reason a student is unable to keep this appointment, McCloud said, he should notify the counseling office, either in person or by telephone, prior to the appointment. This will preserve his registration number and a new appointment will be made.

Freshman Ball Features Cutest Couple, AS Card Sales Winners

Officers and members of the Freshman Class will present their semi-annual ball this Saturday from 9 p.m. until 12 midnight at the Surf Club, according to Bill Keane, class president.

Highlights of the evening include the crowning of the Cutest Couple and awards for Associated Student card sales winners. Entertainment will be provided by Steve Paul's orchestra, featuring Bill Sheridan and a Strolling Trio.

Students who attend may have a surprise in store for them, Keane added.

Contestants for the Cutest Couple Contest will be judged by the way "they look together," Keane said, and five judges will pick the couple about 11 o'clock that night.

Judges for the contest will be Tony Bartmann, Associated Student president; Bob Basso, Inter-Fraternity Council vice-president; Bruce Hannah and Dorothy Hill, faculty sponsors, and Mrs. Ella Keane and Mrs. Stephen Paul. The couple chosen as the Cutest Couple will be presented with trophies.

Associated Student card sales awards will be presented at the conclusion of the Cutest Couple Contest. Deanna Gutierrez, AS card sales chairman, will present the awards of money orders for $20, $10 and $5, good at the Ramporium.

A tropical atmosphere will be blended with the dance theme of Sea Breeze. Appropriate dress for the women are cocktail dresses, Keane said, and dark suits and ties are required for the men. Students with Associated Student cards and registration cards will be admitted free, those without cards will be charged $2.50.

No Classes Next Monday

For the first time since the Fall semester of 1956, students of the college will owe a debt of gratitude to Christopher Columbus for reasons other than his most renowned feat of discovering the new world.

Columbus Day, this year, will fall on a Monday, October 12, and no classes will be scheduled. On Tuesday, October 13, classes will resume.

F Grades Due In All Courses For Poor Attendance

A grade of F in all courses will be given to students who are dropped from the college's enrollment list because of poor attendance, John J. Brady, co-ordinator, division of student welfare, stated last week.

Last semester a total of 180 students was dropped from the college rolls because of poor attendance. Each of these students received failures in their respective courses and they will not be readmitted to the college until the failures are erased from their records, he declared.

Removal of these failures is practically an impossibility, Brady explained, because the only way failures of this type are erased from a student's record is for the student to be accepted at another college or university, with his work at such an institution proving he is of college material.

"This sounds easy enough," Brady added, "however, I know of no college, two-year as well as four-year, which will accept a student with a complete semester of previous college failures on his record."

Once a student is dropped from a college because of poor attendance no college wishes a repeat performance of unreliability, Brady said.

To emphasize his statement and the importance of adhering to attendance rules and leave-of-absence instructions, Brady referred to President Louis G. Conlan's orientation address here, in which he stressed that attendance rules will again be strictly enforced this semester as they have been in the past.

Personality Goal Overstressed By Competitive Activities

MOST STUDENTS have a threefold objective in attending college. They desire additional knowledge in a field in which they hope to become sufficiently proficient to enable themselves to earn a living, they wish to understand themselves and their individual goals to a greater extent, and they plan on improving their social relationships in such a way as to become well-rounded and personable human beings.

We cannot help but feel that quite often this third factor takes an unwarranted precedence over the other two goals and is consequently overstressed to the exclusion of the more laudable desires.

There is some anomaly in so many fraternities, sororities, clubs, activities, sports, and even in student government, all competing for the attention of a student body of only a little over seven thousand.

Perhaps it is time for the "thinning out" process utilized on farms whereby a farmer selects those plants most capable of growing well and bearing fruit and discards the rest.

We are not suggesting that benefits are not derived from student activities or even that any of the activities on campus fail to bear fruit. We do suggest that too many activities all in competition for student interest must inevitably vitiate the strength of each other and ultimately result in ineffectuality.

As was noted in last week's Guardsman, foreign writers tend to look down on the overemphasis on sports in our schools and on politics in their own. Possibly there is a lesson here for all of us.

If some of our public-spirited and capable personalities so deeply involved in various organizations could be persuaded to devote just half of the time they normally use for such activities for their studies, we would not be treated to the embarrassing spectacle of students in important positions on campus being forced to resign because of academic inadequacies.

Also, we would gain much by having the opportunity to watch the natural exuberance and forensic abilities of these same persons at work in the classroom where they would be both entertaining and instructive.

As a prominent local educator recently remarked, "The time may be coming when students will find their activities drastically curtailed by governmental authority to allow for more study time. The space-age competition may be so severe that it will result in a forced limitation of extra-curricular participation."

We hope this will not occur but we also hope students will select only those activities for which they have free time and can handle without detrimental effects on their grades or attendance.

Chaplin Personifies Ageless Man Of Ages

By Pete Burr

YEARS AGO, a hero of the age was created completely within the awkward movements of a "little fellow" who had only one name in all of his films, Charlie Chaplin.

A classic approach to genius leads inevitably to an emotional involvement with the created substance. Such is the case with Chaplin's personification of the essence of mankind inherent in the ageless mustachioed man of the ages.

Because progress had not as yet caught up with itself in the new medium of film, our hero went on cold, without words and performed miracles in his pantomimes of life. That he was funny and made people laugh there can be no doubt, but the residue of this humor, the feeling as one left the theater that something profound had happened, transformed the images of the "movie" into a new art form.

The gimmick in these funniest of the funny films was that Charlie always had something to say. This pathetic little character, unloved by all but the sympathetic movie audience, managed to stumble through life with all the wisdom of a sage, somehow born into the wrong epoch at the wrong time. Stripped of all pretension, the physically poor aspect of naked man against the forces of a ridiculous and overdressed society made sense in a subtle way that brought truth if not reason to the ideals of the Industrial Era.

Modern Times, a revival currently gracing the Larkin theater screen, was made in 1936, well into the development of the talkies. It was a wise choice that emphasized a biting satire of the machine age.

After going berserk (classic scene) on the nuts and bolts assembly line of a giant and impersonal factory, Charlie emerges from the hospital with the admonition that he must maintain a tranquil existence without any undue excitement. He immediately becomes inadvertently embroiled in a communist demonstration (classic scene) and winds up in the local pokey as a Red agitator.

At the noon meal, he unknowingly pours a narcotic, hastily hidden in the salt shaker by an addict on the verge of apprehension, over his gruel, thereby obtaining the joie de vivre to foil an escape attempt.

Our hero is now a privileged prisoner, languishing luxuriously in his open cell with a canary, a pot of tea and a newspaper bearing the frightening headline of the day, being entertained by the jokes of his jailer also languishing in the same cell. Disaster occurs when he is pardoned and forced out into the horrors of everyday employed (or unemployed) America.

Determined to get back into jail by hook or by crook, a memorable scene depicts his efforts in a restaurant where he eats a magnificent meal, motioning to a policeman through the window at the cashier's desk to do his duty. The small, almost imperceptible nuances of the toothpick and the cigars stun the senses with their grace and beauty.

In the wagon, he meets the girl, a gamin played by Paulette Goddard, who has been arrested for vagrancy. They escape together from the wagon, the gamin convincing our hero in a brief second of decision that freedom is the highest order of life.

Through adventures and misadventures, the twosome regale the crowd with a laughter seldom achieved on the sophisticated modern screen. In a vaguely quixotic ending, it is the little man, Charlie Chaplin, who somehow resolves the physical feet of himself and his paramour into some semblance of a spiritual reality.

Coed Interviews Edd 'Kookie' Byrnes As Hollywood Leads Festival Parade

TV Star First Off Plane But Loses Part In Parade

By Vicky Aumann

Kookie was the first off the plane.

Hundreds of admirers, ranging in age from teen-age bobby soxers to elderly women, hurling combs at our hero, set up a roar of welcome. So this is the great idol, I said to myself, the jive-talking hero of the jive set.

Next came Marshal Wyatt Earp, Sergeant Preston of the Yukon, Texas John Slaughter, Zorro's Sergeant Garcia and Yancy Derringer. But they never had a chance. All the crowd wanted was Kookie, Kookie and more of Kookie.

Thanks to the amazing efforts of our honorable editor, who was responsible for promoting a large number of our own college students, including myself and other members of The Guardsman staff, into various leading positions on this year's Pacific Festival Committee, I found myself a part of the welcoming party.

This gave me an opportunity to introduce myself and exchange a few words with each of the stars, who all seemed very pleasant and polite. All, that is, except Mr. Byrnes.

My impression of him was that of a young boy and a big star, a bit too sure of himself and in dire need of a haircut.

How wrong can first impressions be?

Driving back from the airport was a big thrill for everyone — a dozen new Cadillacs with a full motorcycle escort. Our destination was the Pacific Festival headquarters in the Ferry Building where the stars were to rest before appearing in the big parade later that afternoon.

Everything was in utter confusion. Reporters, photographers, broadcasters plus hundreds of shouting fans outside led me to seek a quiet corner furthest away from everything and everyone. And this was where I rediscovered Kookie Byrnes, sitting all alone, and looking somewhat overwhelmed at all the fuss and commotion.

Still under the impression of our first meeting at the airport, I muttered that I supposed I should get a few words from the great teenage idol.

"Why, thank you very much," he answered in a surprisingly shy and humble voice.

We talked for nearly an hour. It was quiet and normal. There was no need for show and pretense, and there was none because none existed. There was no jive talk either.

We discussed everything—his first break into show business in New York many years ago, his next record with the Mary Kaye Trio to be released early this month and the October 16 show which will mark Edd's debut as a singer on TV. I told him about Australia and the best places to visit when he is there in a few months time.

I felt as though I were talking to the boy-next-door, a boy who needed a good haircut, and not to Kookie Byrnes, the same Kookie who was later withdrawn from the parade for fear of being mobbed.

Later he confessed to me rather sadly, "This is the first time I was to be in a parade. Before I used to just watch them and wish. And now . . ."

Well, that's the way the cookie crumbles!

Guatemalan Style Dance Rocks Pacific Festival

Displaying a spirit of participation and a sense of civic responsibility, members of the International Relations Club and other students performed in various capacities during San Francisco's Pacific Festival held September 18 through 27.

International in scope, the Festival encompassed the 44 free nations on or bordering the Pacific Ocean and consisted of events, displays, exhibits and shows in a co-operative effort to bring about better understanding and good will among the peoples of these countries.

One of the most important and colorful events of the holiday fair was the huge Market Street parade held September 26, to which the IRC contributed a car and student representatives from different parts of the world.

An estimated 100,000 relaxed and gay persons watched the open car driven by Mario Gutierrez and occupied by Vicky Aumann, Margarita Aparicio, Masako Hirose and Imelda Seva representing Australia, Guatemala, Japan and the Philippines, respectively, as the 7½-mile parade wended its way from the foot of Market Street and up McAllister to the Civic Center.

Other popular parade entries were majorettes, bands, floats, horsemen, representing various associations, costumed children from other lands, and Edd "Kookie" Byrnes, the current hero of "77 Sunset Strip" with whom Miss Aumann had an hour interview. (See above.)

This interview was captured on film and tape and will be a part of a special 25th anniversary showing for which two and a half reels of tape and 100 reels of 16 millimeter color film of interviews and other events have been recorded.

Four escorts, Frank Dunne, Bill Forshay, Bill Ideker and Don Seratti, and seven drivers from the college acted in the Festival procession as hosts to the entertainers and celebrities there for the festivities. They later attended the Mayor's reception.

Earlier in the Festival, Miss Aparicio and Fernando Bonifax of the IRC were a hit when they danced a Guatemalan style fandango for the September 23 Brooks Hall talent show held at 8 p.m.

Seek And Find

Reservoir Turns Oasis, Provides Refuge For Cars

By Bob Pacini

"Seek and ye shall find" — (maybe) might very well be the warning posted at the entrance to the reservoir parking lot to greet students of the college as they hasten in, searching for parking spaces during this haphazard period of construction—or destruction, depending on your point of view.

Standing forlorn and practically empty—last semester—the reservoir this semester has become something of a haven to hundreds of homeless autos that have been evicted from what was once a parking lot below Cloud Hall.

That area, now being deepened, widened, molded and shaped into what will eventually be the college's football stadium, was an ideal location for student parking, having convenient access to both Cloud Hall and the gymnasiums.

Since the construction period began, however, driving students have had to search for greener pastures for their cars. Thus the great exodus began, and a multitude of autos prowled about seeking parking places with deft and cunning that would have delighted Machiavelli.

Once empty, forsaken and scorned, the reservoir has recently come into its own. Now students eagerly—and desperately—flock to its wide, flat, vast expanses, intently in search of an oasis in a multi-colored desert of cars, domestic and foreign, big and little, paid for or still in the clutches of the finance company.

It is interesting and frightening to contemplate what will happen when the seasonal rains commence, deluging the steep-sided reservoir. Will students swim out to their cars, or will they bob for them Halloween apple style?

What about the speed, or the lack of it, that students now enter the reservoir? No longer is it possible to fly into the area as if one were competing with an intercontinental missile, for no longer does any student have an almost barren reservoir to conduct speed trials and test brakes. There just isn't any room!

It may not be round, but it's certainly firm and fully packed.

Are you, and who isn't, having troubles finding a parking space? Seek, seek, and seek again and ye shall find, but as things stand now it's pretty unlikely.

Perhaps, then, a more appropriate warning at the reservoir entrance might be, to quote a noted Florentine mystery writer named Dante, "Abandon all hope, ye who enter here!"

Winless Rams Face Comets In Richmond Plant; Injured Hickey Sole Threat To Squad

Searching for the light of victory, the City College Rams grope their way to San Pablo to face the Contra Costa Comets at 8 p.m. this Friday, October 9, in the league opener of the Big Eight Conference. The locals take on a very green Comet team, coached by Vince Maiirana. Contra Costa has only one returning letterman, and the team is mainly composed of first-year men with only seven sophomores on the squad. In their last two outings the Comets triumphed over Yuba by a score of 34-7 and edged past Menlo, 16-6.

Contra Costa features a straight T-formation offense. Maiorana stressed the fact that they have a well balanced team this year but admits they will pass more than they will run. The Comets feature a 190-pound line with a 185-pound backfield.

Led by Horace Hopkins, freshman quarterback, Contra Costa will be out for its third straight victory. John Scruggs, the only veteran, who played at the fullback spot last year, will carry the mail from the right half position this year.

With the chips down as the league begins, the Klemmermen have to give their all to break the jinx which has put them in the loss column for the past two games.

The coaches have been working on the weakened center spot this week, because of the leg injury of regular Jack Hickey. They have been trying to patch up the hole by trying various players at this position. Except for this weakness the squad should go into this tilt with a healthy team.

The Rams, composing the invading force, will come into the game with most of their battle proved veterans.

The Ram starting lineup:

No.		Pos.	Wt.
50	Jack Hickey	C	210
69	Carl Mitchell	LG	219
68	Al Kent	RG	208
75	Walt O'Connor	LT	220
76	Andy Citizen	RT	212
84	Bill Lambert	LE	190
86	Mel Oliver	RE	188
14	Dennis Bates	Q	175
33	Bob Taylor	LH	172
32	Charlie Smith	RH	165
35	Wayne Stribling	FB	190

Ram Soccer Squad Seen To Improve Over Last Season

Ram booters open their 1959 season Saturday at Balboa Park against USF at 11 a.m. Last year the soccer team finished in fourth place. However, with stronger defense the squad should improve over last year. The league should end with USF as the champs, and the University of California in second place. California Aggies should round out the first three places with City College barking at their heels.

The probable starting lineup shapes up like this: guard, Art Fisher; right forward, Giovanni Halstead; left forward, Yacob Dudum; right half, Flavid Vallente; center half, Dave Kingsley; left half, Emil Ruiz; right wing, Ken Wright; inside right, Mike Joseph; center forward, Jim Lynch; inside left, Emil Dergan, and left wing, Lu Ymant.

The Rams will be led by center forward Jim Lynch, who is the team's outstanding scorer with a pre-season average of 2½ goals per game.

Returning veterans include Halstead, Fisher, Ruiz and John Fouidaidi. Men who have played in town are Dudum of Balboa, with Kingsley and Wright, Mission All-City. Others who will be seeing action this season are Barry Clark, Ed Zumot, Ronald Castellon, Paul Poniachick, Bill Moalem, Allen Palmer, Guy Marra, Bob Salazar, Julio Insua and Jose Guerra.

Red And White Forces Picked To Rule Roost

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

FOOLS RUSH IN — Seasonal prognostications on the part of sportswriters have ever proved themselves perilous deeds. Fully realizing this, positive forecasts concerning the outcome of various conference final standings are generally foregone in this department, except when it is definitely felt that the proverbial bird is encased within the hand of the hunter.

This is one of those rarities.

Grover Klemmer's Red and White grid delegation will run rampant through the Big Eight loop this time around and dine on the golden pheasant at the close of the conference slate.

True enough, the locals are definitely quite far away from hitting the stride of their real potential, but from here, the handwriting is definitely on the wall.

Carl Mitchell, Al Kent and Andy Citizen have already demonstrated themselves as packing the All-Conference gear in a forward wall capacity. These are the boys who, along with hard-running ends Mel Oliver, Bill Lambert and Bob Simi, will prove to be the real difference throughout the campaign.

Quarterback Dennis "Onionhead" Bates is definitely the finest Ram passer since Les Barros did his wheeling and dealing in 1954, and in Klemmer's own words, "Threaded the needle like a field general of the NFL school of trade against LA City."

Charlie Smith and Bobby Taylor are both nearly akin to Santa Rosa's Tom Harper in the categories of speed, moxie, and versatility; Wayne Stribling barrels through tight holes like a third wheel of hades; you take it from there.

• • •

A slice off the Ram's horn to faculty members Johnny Dunne and Meyer Cahn for their personal interest in the LA City affair at Kezar two weeks back. Dunne was in his usual, "let's boot 'em home" humor in directing the Rally Committee and Cahn's Basin Street Boogiemen never sounded better.

Among His Souvenirs—Unlike the situation concerning the local prep forces here, in Fogville, there is no newspaper in all of Van Nuys thoughtful enough to award the game ball to the outstanding competitor performing his artistry in the LA Valley home games.

True enough, the Phelan Avenue boys blew their season opener down there on a last second fluke, with Mitchell diving off side with the clock on the wall having run out of time, but that has nothing to do with this little gem.

Mitch puts it this way: "Nobody can say that I wasn't the hardest-charging, smartest, most aggressive, and modest fella on the field that night. I should have been awarded the game ball; the clock ran out, Al Kent hollered, 'Now, Carl,' and I dove on it."

Rams Win Grade Conscious Farber Over Big Leagues

Bob Farber, one of the area's hottest major league baseball prospects, who closed out last season with all-loop honors, will be starting his second year with the Ram baseball squad this coming spring.

He got his start on the San Francisco sandlots, when at the age of 9, he played midget league ball.

Later, at George Washington High School as a centerfielder, he gained city-wide acclaim in his junior and senior years, when he batted at torrid clips of .390 and .375, respectively.

In those two years, he captured All-City honors. It was in his senior year that he was selected the All-City Player of the Year in prep baseball. He also starred in the annual Hearst sandlot games in the summers of '57 and '58.

In 1958, his first year at the college, he continued his hot hitting under Coach Lee Eisan, batting .330, and as a result, was selected to the All-Conference nine.

It was during the Northern California semi-pro baseball session this summer that he was approached by Eddie Lake, West Coast scout for the Washington Senators, to sign for his organization. But, though no amount of salary was discussed, Farber turned down the contract to continue his college education.

Upon completion of his work here, he plans to transfer to Fresno State. A second year man here, Farber is majoring in physical education, later he hopes to play pro baseball, and someday become a baseball coach.

Women Approach Staff To Form Hoop League

In light of the upcoming Associated Men Student sponsored intramural basketball season, a group of athletically inclined young ladies approached The Guardsman regarding the possibilities of the formation of an Associated Women Student sponsored league for the women.

Interested parties are advised to consult AWS President Dawnita Campbell or The Guardsman for further information.

If formed, the league would be open to clubs, sororities and independent teams.

Boxing Mentor Sees Marciano As Master Of Ingemar In Dream Go

By Doug Cathcart

"Come on, ya bum, get up," is a phrase that is familiar to everyone with even a passing interest in boxing and equally as familiar is the question as to who is the greatest boxer of today, yesteryear, and all time.

For the answers to the latter questions the most likely source of information here at the college is Coach Roy Diederichsen, boxing team mentor.

Diederichsen chose Johansson as his present day favorite. He qualified his selection by saying, "Johansson has the most potent right I've ever seen."

The question also has been posed many times as to who would come out on top if Rocky Marciano and Ingemar were to meet today with Marciano at his prime. Diederichsen seems to feel that Marciano would take the Swede because Johansson just couldn't hold up under Rocky's style of fighting.

He intimated that Johansson could knock out Marciano with his vicious right in one punch, but wouldn't get the chance because he would be overwhelmed by the maulling style of his opponent.

When the question was posed to him as to who he thought was the greatest heavyweight fighter of all time, Diederichsen unhesitatingly came up with the name of that immortal great, Joe Louis. He feels that Louis was the cleverest of them all, adding that he had never seen a man as sharp with his footwork and with such lightning punches as Louis.

However, he attributes a great deal of the success of Joe Louis to sheer determination.

When asked how he thought Marciano or Johansson would stack up against Louis he favored The Bomber to defeat either one of them. He tabs Louis a clever combination puncher, Marciano a mauler, and classifies Johansson as the knockout puncher.

As to the question of whether he felt that we had any Louis potential today his answer was a flat no. He, however, does feel that generally, boxing has improved tremendously over the past 20 years.

Diederichsen himself has performed in 26 intercollegiate bouts in 1941 and 1942. He was senior welterweight champion while attending San Jose State College.

He has even produced some pretty great fighters here. One of these is Lou Gage, who was the 145-pound champion at the Olympics in the same year that Floyd Patterson was the 160-pound champion.

After his term in the Olympics Gage turned pro and fought in main events all across the country and made a fine record of wins for himself. Of all the fighters Diederichsen has coached about 13 have turned pro.

In 1948 a man by the name of Frank Sueuga fought here. He was from Samoa and Diederichsen feels that this boy could have really gone places but that he started too old, that being at the ripe age of 27.

Mitchell Proves Tough Even With Ineffective Ankle

By Jim Clifford

Hard-hitting fullbacks, elusive halfs and passing combinations tend to possess a monopoly on football glory, but once in a great while some tough, hard-nosed lineman who's been terrorizing the enemy backfield starts to garnish the attention of the spectators.

One lineman who'll undoubtedly have the eyes of Ram grid fans cast his way this season is guard Carl Mitchell, bulwark of the college's '59 forward wall.

The solidly-built Mitchell, a compact 225 pounds on a 5-foot 10-inch frame, is the ideal type for low, driving line play. Broad-shouldered with massive forearms and strong legs, he seldom finds difficulty in obtaining leverage over opposing linemen.

Lineplay sounds like a mean pastime, but he revels in it. "I don't mind getting knocked down once, as long as I get up and knock him down three times," Mitchell says.

The fireplug shaped guard exhibited plenty of talent when the Rams lost a close one to Los Angeles City College, 7-6. Mitchell, hampered by an ankle injury, spent most of the contest in LA backfield.

Pulled to the sidelines momentarily in the third stanza, to give the ankle a rest, the crowd almost burst out with a standing ovation.

Mitchell, who gained All-City honors with the Washington High Eagles, received nothing but praise from Head Coach Grover Klemmer and Line Coach Alex Schwarz. The coaches lauded Mitchell for his aggressiveness and heads-up play. Coach Klemmer pointed out that his key asset is team leadership. Klemmer feels he's one of those sparkplugs who can really make a defense hold. The mentor thinks that Mitchell still hasn't reached his full capabilities. "As the season progresses," Klemmer said "he may prove to be the top guard in the league."

Mitchell thinks that his running mates have the power to capture this season's Big Eight crown.

"We're a little green," he says, "but plenty tough. These guys really like to sock. The only element missing for a great season is backing. If the student body turned out en masse for the games it would have a tremendous effect. Heck, I remember one Homecoming game a while back . . . The Homecoming Queen didn't even show up."

Kent, Disterheft Named To Carry Out Commissioner Positions In Block SF

Al Kent and Paul Disterheft will fill the two open positions of the Block SF Society this semester, according to Alex Schwarz, sponsor of the Block club.

Kent will take over the job as athletic commissioner. His duty is to attend Student Council meetings and relay proceedings from counell to the Block club.

Kent, starting guard on the Ram football squad, was graduated from St. Ignatius in 1957. Last year he played for the University of California Frosh.

Disterheft was picked as the awards commissioner. He will set up the semi-annual awards banquet which will be held December 7, pick the guest speakers and check the blocks that will be received by this semester's athletes.

Disterheft, a returning letterman, was graduated from Lowell in 1957. He is one of the top guards on the Ram team.

Thespians Present Subtle Humor In Coming Offerings

Sophisticated humor for the discriminating theater-goer will be the Little Theater's chief commodity this semester, when the players present Noel Coward's Blithe Spirit and Jean Giraudoux's, Enchanted.

Coward's comedy, highlighted with his trademark of subtle humor, will open Friday, October 16, and have a four-weekend run. The plot centers around a widower who has remarried. The harrassed male forgets how possessive some women can be—the spirit of his first wife returns to plague the marriage.

The main characters in the Coward comedy are Charles, the husband, played by Jim Robinson and Phil Osborne, who will alternate in the role; Ruth, the second wife, will be portrayed by Carla Vooches; the role of Elvira, the haunting first wife, is done by Leah Pasholan and Maureen Rogers, who will also alternate.

Enchanted is scheduled for January 10 and will also play for four weekends. Giraudoux's comedy, set in turn-of-the-century France, centers in a small village that finds itself in a calumitous situation, wherein fate bestows her favors justly; when someone dies it's not the young man with a life ahead of him—it's the old one who's lived a full life. Lottery winners aren't the richest people in the community; they're the ones who need the money most.

The players have few returning veterans, so approximately six experienced Little Theater performers will form the cadre of this year's contingent. Miss Rodgers, Miss Pasholan and Robinson are among the names most familiar to Little Theater audiences.

Most of the college's more prominent players departed last semester, and one, John Rose, has started an early climb to the top. Some local financiers, including Barnaby Conrad, author of The Matador, have joined to form an independent motion picture company which is currently filming John Steinbeck's Flight at Big Sur.

Rose, who starred in the college's production of Inherit The Wind, and other Little Theater offerings, is an assistant director with the concern.

Virginia Rae, remembered for her role as the woman of the home in You Can't Take It With You, is currently starring in an amateur production of Annie Get Your Gun in Sausalito.

June Graduate Secures Post At UC Laboratory

Esther Lisama, a 1959 graduate of the college and Guardsman photographer, has been hired by the University of California Radiation Laboratory as a sensitometric analysis technician, Charles Lamp, photography instructor here, announced recently.

Miss Lisama will be working with the physics and research departments conducting tests on the sensitivity of photographic materials and will be operating one of science's newest types of cameras, a device which is capable of taking 3500 frames per second.

She is the first woman in her field to be hired by the radiation laboratory, Lamp said.

Homecoming Fete Set For El Portal

Following the Homecoming football game, scheduled for the night of November 13, there will be an invitational, informal cocktail party for the college Alumni Association and students past the age of 21 at the El Portal Cafe, located at Fulton Street and Eighth Avenue.

Douglas Smith, president of the Alumni Association, announced that two weeks before the Homecoming game 500 formal invitations will be mailed to the members of the Alumni Association and eligible college students.

The cocktail party is primarily a reunion for the alumni members and promises to round off an enjoyable evening, he declared.

Activities of the association are directed by an executive committee of which Smith is chairman and Pat Smith, secretary.

Gifted Japanese Art Student Wins Scholarship To School Of Design In New York City

Saiko Suzuki, a pretty Japanese miss and graduate of the college, challenged the world of art with her unique talents last summer and won a scholarship in this field at one of New York City's schools of design, according to William Eckert of the advertising art department here.

Because Miss Suzuki was born and reared in Japan, she encountered a handicap with the English language, but followed directions closely and carried out all of her assignments to perfection, Eckert declared.

During her last semester here, she decided to continue her education on the east coast, but in order to do so, felt it necessary to obtain a scholarship.

First Miss Suzuki made two portfolios of her 12 most important assignments here and submitted them on her own to two art schools in New York City.

The first portfolio was returned with constructive analysis of her work and a letter stating that the school had given out all of its scholarships for the year.

Upon submitting her second portfolio, Miss Suzuki was notified that she was accepted and would receive a scholarship.

Last summer her father gave her a trip to Japan; after which she went to New York City to start on her new conquest.

Besides being gifted as an artist and being an "A" student in her field, Miss Suzuki was an active member in the International Relations Club, where in the Fall semester of 1958, she also won the outstanding award in the International Fair for her performance in the Japanese group.

"She wanted this and worked for it," Eckert said. "It takes an individual with some creative imagination, initiative, drive and personal interest to find the outlets for their talents," he commented.

Miss Suzuki is in the United States on a student visa and worked her way to the United States from Japan.

Soph Class Officer Nomination Leads To Council Controversy

By Bob Pacini

Trouble occurred when Lopez presented for approval by the council the names of his fellow class officers. Miss Alvaro, it was brought out, was also a freshman member of council, and thus should not be allowed to hold the soph class vice-presidency too.

Ted Keller, campus affairs co-ordinator, declared that freshman and sophomore affairs should be kept separate and should not intermix. Answering Keller, Club Activities Board Chairman Ben Northrup stated that the Sophomore Class President was perfectly capable of taking care of his own affairs and that the council should okay Lopez's choices.

At last Thursday's council meeting, however, Lopez announced to the group that Miss Alvaro had decided it best to resign her position, and in her place he proposed Beverly Moore.

The council accepted the nomination of Miss Moore along with the other sophomore class officers, who are Don Peters, treasurer; Becky Reese and Mary Dedenko, secretaries. Miss Alvaro, it was disclosed, would still continue to work with Lopez.

In other matters, budgets still continued to dominate council affairs. Three budgets submitted to the council for approval by Finance Chairman Judy Day were passed. The first of these was the budget for The Guardsman which totaled $3981.26, somewhat less than last semester's budget which reached $4204.88.

A budget of $5117.34 for the football team was also reviewed. Northrup asked Miss Day if any money had been alloted to the football team last semester. Miss Day acknowledged that $1226.93 had been given to the football team for practice equipment in the Spring.

Differences of opinion came to light when the Rally Committee's budget of $1172.54 was presented. Bill Ideker, publicity chairman, demanded to know why $570 of the budget was designated as entertainment at the rallies. Susan Shawl, rally commissioner, replied that this money would be used to attract name personalities to the rallies.

A motion by Wally Hayes to table the motion failed, and the budget was approved. Miss Shawl informed the council that the budget for the Spring semester, which usually runs less than the Fall semester, was actually more and totaled $1300.88.

New Pilot Dental Course Added

In view of the demand for dental technicians, a new, 15-student pilot course in dental laboratory technology has been added to the semi-professional department here, according to Frank C. Szehner, Jr.

Szehner, who is the new instructor, came here from a tour of duty as senior instructor in the dental prostetic training division of the U. S. Naval Training Center in San Diego, California.

Dental laboratory technology appeals mostly to students with an artistic flair and mechanical ability. It is a creative course, made to order for people who like to work with their hands, the instructor said.

Szehner added that the course should bring personal satisfaction to those who follow it as a vocation, the kind of satisfaction that comes from helping others.

"New dentures can do wonders for the outlook of young and old who need them," he said.

There is such demand in this field that students who show exceptional aptitude are likely to secure jobs during their second year in the course, thereby gaining additional and practical experience, he declared.

Rally Committee Posts Fall Semester Schedule

Plans by the Rally Committee this semester include a series of five to six rallies, the first of which is slated for Friday, October 16, according to Susan Shawl, Rally Commissioner.

The next rally scheduled is on Friday, October 23; November 13 is the date of the Homecoming rally and dance, and a double College Hour rally will be presented on December 4.

Anniversary Card Sales Trail Goal Set By Only 378

Short of the 2500 Silver Anniversary goal by only 378, a total of 2122 Associated Student cards was sold by noon last Thursday, according to Deanna Gutierrez, card sales chairman.

The goal was set to represent 100 cards for each year of the college's existence, and Miss Gutierrez emphasized that she expects the goal to be reached this week.

(The goal when reached amounts to $12,500, which, with the expected $10,000 usually transferred each semester from the Rampodium, will place the Associated Student budget at $22,500 before income from sports, drama and vending machines.)

Jack Verga leads the card sales contest at present, with 449 to his credit, Miss Gutierrez said, and Bill Keane, Judy Day and Greg Girth are following closely.

Discounts for AS members again include one of 50 per cent for corsages at the Podesto Baldocchi florist shops in the St. Francis, Fairmont and Sheraton-Palace Hotels. Warren's Candy, Legg's Ice Skating School and the Sports Center Bowl are permitting a 10 per cent discount to AS members. A list of firms offering discounts is on the back of AS cards.

Miss Gutierrez added that students who have not as yet purchased AS cards can still do so in S-116 or at the finance office in Smith Hall.

Winners in the card sales contest will be announced at the Frosh Ball.

College Band Concert Faces Cancellation

A scheduled band concert, listed to take place in the library on Friday, November 20, during College Hour may be cancelled, Meyer M. Cahn, college band director, announced today. Because of a lack of student interest, this and other college activities may also be cancelled, he warned.

Newly elected band officers are Henry Guttman, Bryon MacDonald and Evan Gittleshon.

Despite its limited membership, the organization expressed a hope of performing in this year's Christmas Concert on December 10 and 11, as well as appearing at some football and basketball games.

Campus Police Issue 205 Parking Citations In First Two Weeks

Students cited for illegal parking in the first two weeks of this semester number 205, according to Mike Bonnie, assistant chief of Campus Police.

Permits for motor scooters will be issued in C-120 from 8 a.m. to 12 noon through this Friday, he added.

Not enough students are using the reservoir parking area, Bonnie said, and although it is used much more than last year, one-third of the area remains unused. If students would avail themselves of the reservoir area the job of the Campus Police would be minimized, he emphasized.

Another duty of the Campus Police is to enforce order at the athletic events. In addition they are available for on-campus activities such as dances, smokers and drama productions.

Fourteen Students Gain Recognition Through H&R Scholarship Awards

Fourteen students here were recently selected by the Hotel and Restaurant Scholarship Committee to receive scholarships provided by various organizations and individuals.

Winners included Frank Quadrelli, who won the $250 International Minerals Corporation (Accent International) Scholarship.

Three Harvey M. Toy $250 Class Scholarships were won by Alvis Hasler, second semester; Robson Allen, third semester, and Yoshiko Mizutani, fourth semester. Another $250 Toy Scholarship went to Verlin Coontz.

Jim Wheeler won the $250 Duncan Hines Scholarship, while Gennaro Dispa took the Executive Stewards and Caterers Association, San Francisco Branch, Scholarship.

Other winners were Marvin Elfman, $250, E. D. Degolia Scholarship; Paul Lorda, Western Hotel Scholarship, $150; Richard Smith, $150, Spreckels Russell Dairy Company Scholarship, and Palle Thomsen and Thomas Johnson, the Hotel Service Union and Borden's, respectively.

Members of the scholarship committee are Louis F. Batmale, dean of instruction, chairman; Lawrence B. Wong, secretary; Wendell Muntz and Carl Rutledge, H&R faculty members.

Applicants were judged on the amount of their scholastic achievement, student leadership, performance in industry, performance in college and personal need.

Other scholarships are also available to students in the Hotel and Restaurant Division. The H. Y. Watson scholarship of $200 is given to deserving students who go on to do third and fourth year college work. Also the Statler Foundation awards a $2500 scholarship for students who go on to a third and fourth year of college or university work.

Teas, Luncheons, Smokers Listed For Near Future

By Pat Perkins

NOW that the Fall semester is in full swing, the various on-campus clubs and organizations are busily planning future activities.

The Christian Science Organization will have a reception on October 15 at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. L. Prendergast, 124 Eastwood Drive, Westwood Park. All interested students are invited to attend. Anyone wishing more information may consult Nina Tucker in the Hotel & Restaurant department.

Zeta Phi Sigma, fraternity, under the leadership of Vern Simister, president, is working to make this semester a successful one. The Zetas have a fraternity party and several joint meetings scheduled.

A luncheon is being planned by the new sisters of Gamma Kappa Beta sorority for the older members.

Last week the Inter-Fraternity Council held its semi-annual smoker. All prospective pledges attended this get-together.

A very successful tea was held last Sunday for all sorority rushees at Laurel Hall.

KCSF Broadcasting Club meetings are held Fridays during College Hour, and everyone is welcome to attend. This organization has recently recorded interviews of the various celebrities who were in town for the Pacific Festival Youth Parade. KCSF broadcasts a morning and noon music program for the cafeteria as well as the daily campus carrier.

Saturday night at the Frosh Ball the winners of the Associated Student card sales contest will be announced. The ball will be held at the Surf Club and admission is free with an AS card.

The new officers of Tau Chi Sigma fraternity are as follows: Ted Keller, president; Will Waller and Carl Kenner, vice-presidents; Bruce Littman, secretary; Ken Geoliner, treasurer, and Dick Fontaine, steward. The office of steward has been added to take charge of all technical arrangements of fraternity affairs. The fraternity will be sponsoring the United Crusade at the college in the near future.

Deadline Set For AMS Intramural Cage Loop

Deadline for entering basketball teams in the Associated Men Student intramural basketball league is this Friday, October 9.

Teams entering the league can be sponsored by campus organizations or may enter as independents. At the end of the semester trophies will be presented to the winning teams from the Inter-Fraternity Council, the Club Activities Board and from the independent teams.

Anyone wishing to enter a team can consult AMS President Mike Haskell in S-140.

Haskell presented trophies to the Alpha Phi Epsilon basketball team for winning the Spring intramural basketball championship at the Inter-Fraternity Council smoker, held last week.

The AMS will sponsor Homecoming, which will be held Friday, November 13, the highlight being the selection of a Homecoming Queen.

Blithe Spirit Makes Debut In Little Theater Friday Night With Carla Voorhees In Lead

With Carla Voorhees starring as the lady hard to ditch, Blithe Spirit, the latest Little Theater offering, bows to the public this Saturday at 8 p.m., following a special "first nighter" performance Friday for faculty, administrative personnel and guests.

The Noel Coward play is almost sold out for the first regular performance on Saturday night. Michael Griffin, drama director, envisions many SRO signs during the play's run of October 17, 23, 24, 30, 31 and November 6 and 7.

This Friday's presentation will host, among others, Oscar Anderson, co-ordinator, division of educational management; Joseph Amori, director of placement; John Brady, co-ordinator, division of student welfare, and Mary Jean Learnard, registrar.

Blithe Spirit has the markings of being one of the most subtle comedies ever seen across the college's footlights.

Deft handling of Coward's humor is no easy task, Griffin declared, and the play will be aimed solely at the more mature spectator.

The production, which starred Clifton Webb and Peggy Wood during its Broadway run, centers around a middle-aged widower who is remarried and finds himself in a laugh-filled situation when the ghost of his first wife returns in an attempt to doom the second marriage.

Jim Robinson and Phil Osborne will alternate as the frustrated Charles, while Maureen Rogers and Leah Pasholan switch as Elvira, the second wife.

At 10 a.m. a crowd had formed on the front steps of the state capitol building. Men who fit the description of rabble rousers, among them a Baptist minister, were engaged in arousing the group.

"You folks might like to know," said one, "that our Chief Justice, Earl Warren, and his wife are traveling in the Soviet Union right now."

From the audience came the inevitable reply, "Why don't they stay over there!"

"And Nixon, too!" yelled another.

"And did you know," asked another leader, "that Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is a member of the NAACP?"

As the mob grew to about 1000 while anticipating an appearance by the governor, they seemed lethargic and in need of prompting. Sensing this, a man demonstrating undeniable leadership qualities said to some teenage boys, "This crowd isn't exciting enough; go down and start yelling for Faubus."

This tactic proved highly successful, for soon after the mob was shouting,

Mob Violence, Hysteria, Hate In Little Rock

By Don Seratti

(Editor's note: Don Seratti was in Little Rock on August 12, and the following is his on-the-spot account of the school opening crisis.)

HYSTERIA, violence, and a flagrant absence of rationality reigned in once-peaceful Little Rock, Arkansas, last August 12 as a mob of diehard segregationists demonstrated against integration in that city's high schools.

When Arkansas Governor Orval Faubus' attempts to circumvent federal court rulings failed, and with the possibility of Negroes entering Little Rock's public high schools looming more and more ominously each day, local segregationists called for a rally on the morning of the school opening and thus left the door wide open for any deeds that might further lower Little Rock's nationwide reputation.

At 10 a.m. a crowd had formed on the front steps of the state capitol building. Men who fit the description of rabble rousers, among them a Baptist minister, were engaged in arousing the group.

"You folks might like to know," said one, "that our Chief Justice, Earl Warren, and his wife are traveling in the Soviet Union right now."

From the audience came the inevitable reply, "Why don't they stay over there!"

"And Nixon, too!" yelled another.

"And did you know," asked another leader, "that Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is a member of the NAACP?"

As the mob grew to about 1000 while anticipating an appearance by the governor, they seemed lethargic and in need of prompting. Sensing this, a man demonstrating undeniable leadership qualities said to some teenage boys, "This crowd isn't excited enough; go down and start yelling for Faubus."

This tactic proved highly successful, for soon after the mob was shouting,

New 'Cold War' Bill Enters House

Recently passed by the Senate was the "Cold War" G.I. bill, which would allow post-Korean veterans educational and job training benefits amounting to one and one-half days for each day in military service.

Informed sources believe that the House of Representatives will not pass the bill in the next session of Congress because of strong disapproval of the measure on the grounds that it will stimulate inflation. There are approximately 700 veterans here who have applied for the benefits this semester, a lower number than in previous semesters.

In order to apply for the benefits, the veteran must complete the form which is sent to him by the veterans affairs office. Following this he is enrolled under the bill on an enrollment certification. Korean veterans then report to the veterans affairs office on the first of each month to fill out monthly forms for their payments.

400 Delegates Visit Campus Saturday In Semi-Annual Regional Conference

Workshop Meetings To Survey Ten Phases Of Student Activity; Eight Departments Take Part In Program

Ten separate workshop sessions, one for each phase of student life, will inaugurate proceedings of the semi-annual California Junior College Student Government Association Conference, Northern Region, to be held here this Saturday, with this college acting as host to approximately 400 delegates from 26 colleges.

The purpose of the conference is to provide an opportunity for student government leaders to meet, exchange ideas, compare difficulties and attempt to solve various problems of their respective campuses.

Results of past conferences have sometimes snowballed into larger issues and have had far-reaching importance, Conference President Fred Muller stated.

A notable example, Muller said, is a student income tax exemption bill which was introduced as a resolution at such a conference and later approved at a state meeting. This bill was passed by the California Legislature and now awaits enactment by the Federal Government.

Six students from the college were elected as conference officers for this semester. In addition to Muller, they are Den Northrup, vice-president; Judy Day, treasurer; Donna DeFount, secretary; Pat Patton, assistant secretary; and Jerry Herrmann, co-ordinator.

The college's delegation, headed by Associated Student President Tony Bartmann, will consist of 20 student officials.

Alpha Phi Omega, the college's national service fraternity, and Gamma Sigma Sigma, its sorority counterpart, will take active parts in serving breakfast and lunch and guiding the visitors around the campus.

The Associated Men Students, Associated Women Students, Ornamental Horticulture Department, Inter-Fraternity Council, Inter-Sorority Council and Hotel and Restaurant department will assist the two service fraternities.

BUD ANDRESS, State Information Service Chairman.

Delegations from all participating two-year colleges will assemble in Smith Hall at 9 a.m. that morning to register and eat breakfast, Dr. Louis F. Batmale, dean of instruction here, will welcome the visiting students at the first general assembly, scheduled for 9:45 a.m.

Assembly proceedings will start with the pledge of allegiance led by an Air Force ROTC color guard, after which the minutes and agenda will be approved.

Election of a parliamentarian will immediately follow to assure that parliamentary procedures are carried out.

Breakfast and lunch are reserved for the participants, but students are welcome to attend the general assembly discussions. Appropriate dress for men is suit and tie, Muller said.

Discussion Group Chairmen Chosen From 10 Colleges

Various phases of student life will be discussed in 10 workshops which will form a major part of the California Junior College Student Government Association, Northern Region's conference here this Saturday.

The chairmen for each workshop represent 10 of the 26 colleges attending but the secretaries are all from City College. The conferences and their leaders are as follows:

Athletics: Bill Riddle, Hartnell College, and Gale Bonda and Josephine Sylvester, secretaries.

Campus Activities: Gerard Glancy, Sacramento College, and Joan Hillman and Gail Gary, secretaries; Current Problems: Lynne Murphy, Diablo Valley College, and Pat Patton, secretary.

Finance: Richard Campbell, Oakland City College, and Barbara Lerman, secretary.

Student Government: Alan Jones, American River College, and Kathryn Anderson, secretary; Publications: Kandella Wells, Stockton College, and Freida Clements, secretary; Publicity: Dane Ailado, Napa College; Veterans: Gene Luttrell, Santa Rosa College, and Ike Sawvaid and Helen Emerson, secretaries.

In addition to City College, the following two-year colleges are scheduled to attend: American River, Armstrong, Cabrillo, Marin, San Mateo, Contra Costa, Diablo Valley, Foothill, Hartnell, Lassen, Menlo, Modesto, Monterey Peninsula, Napa, Oakland (Laney), Oakland (Merritt), Sacramento, San Benito, San Jose, Santa Rosa, Shasta, Stockton, Sierra, Vallejo and Yuba.

Tropical Theme Highlights Dance

Phi Beta Delta will hold its annual Shipwreck dance from 9 p.m. until 12 midnight, according to Gary Schonwasser, fraternity president.

Every member of the student body is invited to this costume affair, which was first held in the Fall semester of 1947. A fee of $1.50 will be charged for each couple attending the danee, Schonwasser said.

Appropriate costumes for the dance, he added, should blend in with the theme of "shipwreck." Adding to the theme will be tropical decorations.

Steve Paul and his orchestra will provide an evening of musical entertainment for those who attend the dance, Schonwasser said.

Other officers of Phi Beta Delta are Dick Jenkins, vice-president, and Don Covello, treasurer.

Associated Collegiate Press Awards Spring Guardsman First Class Rating

A rating of First Class for its Spring 1959 volume was awarded to The Guardsman this week by the Associated Collegiate Press, whose headquarters are at the University of Minnesota.

This marks the eighth First Class Award for The Guardsman, which has also earned 28 All-American ratings in its 36 semesters of membership in the ACP since Fall 1939. Other ACP ratings are Second Class, Third Class and Fourth Class.

Categories in which last semester's Guardsman excelled, according to the ACP's newspaper guidebook, included creativeness, feature and sports writing, inside page makeup, headline structure and typography. Among the weaknesses were wordiness, long paragraphs, and overemphasis on past game coverage.

The awards, presented each semester to college and university newspapers entered in ACP competition, are based on general content, style, writing and coverage. The ACP's board of judges is comprised of journalistic authorities from various newspapers and academic staffs.

Lost-And-Found: Even Lunches Turn Up Here

College life requires many accessories other than textbooks but are babydoll pajamas really necessary? Evidently so, according to Ruth M. Hoburg, secretary to Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator, division of educational management here, who has the unusual position of being in charge of the college's lost and found department.

Nor are babydoll pajamas the only unusual items to be turned in at the lost and found. Any number of odd personal belongings ranging from a complete chess set to bedroom slippers has found its way to the shelves in C-303.

"It is amazing what objects students can lose," Mrs. Hoburg commented: "one might expect to find pens, pencils and textbooks on the campus lawns, but one would hardly expect to find bathing suits, coats, sweaters and jackets.

"Let me show you my wardrobe collection," she said as she opened a door to a wall-size type of locker. Inside were men's jackets, girls' coats and sweaters, shoes, umbrellas and raincoats. One raincoat in excellent condition attracted this reporter's attention, but he was promptly told that it belonged to Mrs. Hoburg herself.

She laughed and said, "Of all the garments in the locker that is one whose owner I know."

Moving from the locker, she walked to the shelves filled with various unclaimed personal objects.

"It is a pity," she said while looking at wristwatches, prescription-ground eyeglasses, and slide rules, "that students don't label their belongings or at least check with one of the lost and found departments when they lose something. Some of these objects represent a sizable monetary investment."

Unfortunately, many persons jump to the conclusion that an object lost has been stolen; consequently, students do not bother to check with the lost and found department.

Mrs. Hoburg believes it is foolish for students to feel that way because "from the number of articles turned in, it is obvious that honesty rather than dishonesty is the policy."

For student convenience the three lost and found departments are located in the dean's office S-149, the finance office at Smith Hall, and Dr. Anderson's office C-303.

If an object is lost the student can report to C-303 and fill in a lost and found blank. If the article is turned in, a card will be mailed to the student by Mrs. Hoburg notifying him that his lost item has been found.

"Most articles, except, of course, lunches," Mrs. Hoburg explained, "are kept in the lost and found for one year. After that year they are disposed of. Naturally," she continued, "we would much rather return than be forced to dispose of them."

Lost a pair of pajamas or a chess set? See Mrs. Hoburg.

Important Tasks Face Delegates In Problem-Solving Workshops

SATURDAY marks an important event on campus as delegates from 26 two-year colleges meet here to iron out problems common to such institutions.

The event is noteworthy in several respects. It is an honor to the college hosting such an affair to have such a fine array of talented spokesmen on the campus.

There is a genuine contribution made to the administrations and faculties by the results of these free discussions. A pruning process trims debatable matters of the dead weight of mere verbiage and makes them pertinent and practical.

Students make valuable friendships and gain understanding of problems formerly thought to be peculiar to their own areas. Arrangements are made for entertainment and work which proves of benefit to program chairmen and also aids future student association representatives in understanding the scope of their responsibilities as well as training them in a procedure which will add to their future effectiveness.

From the opening gavel to the close of the meeting there is a maturity displayed which does credit to all concerned. Discussions arise, answers are found, problems fall into proper relationship and new problems arise to meet the same adult handling and ultimate disposal.

However, the event is also noteworthy for the failure of the average student to know or care that such a meeting is occurring despite the fact that many of those attending are directly concerned with the affairs of the student and have a bearing on his finances and his scholastic situation.

Recommendations passed by the conference will be sent on to the statewide meeting which then enacts or fails to pass them. The effect is thus statewide, and all students of colleges in the conference are directly affected as the measures become effective.

We are sure all delegates are aware of the size of the task before them, and we congratulate them in advance for doing well a job that is vital to the best interests of their college.

Public Apathy Cited Main Enemy Of Freedom At Pan-American Press Meet

WHILE attending the banquet of Sigma Delta Chi, men's honorary journalism fraternity, which honored the Inter American Press Association in San Francisco, October 4, we were treated to two fine symbols of the newspaper world in its search for freedom.

The first was a standing ovation given by all present when Dr. Alberto Gainza Paz, the editor of La Prensa, the only newspaper which dared to stand up to dictator Peron, was introduced.

The second was "Red" Newton, crusader for the "right to know" of the American public, who delivered a fiery speech on this topic.

Lashing out at public apathy and lack of awareness as causes of the loss of this vital freedom, Newton pointed out that our government is being overwhelmed by bureaucrats who subvert or divert the law to suit their purposes and who, under camouflage of the insidious "administration privilege" manage to hide their activities even from congressional committees.

This is a problem that demands the serious attention of every voter and it ties in directly with college students who are generally more aware of what is going on and yet who often fail to vote or participate even in their own student government. Graduating into the non-academic world with the same attitudes they held without thought in their course of instruction, they still fail to work for their freedoms.

We cannot overstress the importance of students not only knowing but doing. There is a hard core of apathy in the college body politic which unknowingly contributes greatly to the loss of freedom and preserves senseless restrictions in the name of the status quo.

Unless active measures are taken, there may be no status quo of freedom left to maintain. Part of these measures, according to Newton, include voting, writing to congressmen, and discussing the issues of the day at all levels of our society. Here, all students can help whether they are of voting age or not.

Foresight

IN THE DAYS when everything went a little slower, the cable car was a simple beast that banged its burden up and down the hills of San Francisco, irritating citizens then as now with the noises of its clanging bell and the cable incessantly clacking beneath its streets.

Still, it was considered a major engineering feat that fulfilled the growing need of transporting passengers over the peaks of the city. Nobody thought at the time that the cataccoustic little cable car would become a major civic issue a few generations later.

In this year of 1959, with civilization on the verge of outer space exploration and with its supply of wilderness dwindling, the yearly fight for the salvation of the decaying anachronisms of Queen Victoria has a social significance that is hard to overlook.

Each time a town landmark is torn down, an old mansion erased or one more trolley or cable line dismantled, most people in a town like San Francisco feel a curious moment of regret upon hearing that such and such a building no longer exists or that such and such a street has been rerouted for a freeway.

That anyone should feel nostalgic at the passing of a decadent age is questionable in itself.

However, the real reason lies not in sentimental self-indulgence for the past but in the gradual awakening of a people to psycho-green corridors and industrially designed artifacts that have taken on the ludicrously impersonal touch of the machines that made them.

Although jets travel at speeds surpassing the speed of sound and rocket missiles go faster than the ordinary man can comprehend, the cable car, a left-over from an era long dead, still goes only nine miles per hour and in doing so creates a convivial atmosphere which, in the green electro trolley has been completely designed out to make room for a greater number of less traumatic people.

They still smoke, spit and sit in the fresh air on the cable. No matter how crowded a cable becomes, there is always room for one more, schizos accepted.

Eliminated from the modern transportation system is that wonderful sensation of running freely over the lip of Powell Street at California to grip the spinning strand only a few scant yards from a long fast ride into oblivion.

What happened to unfrozen foods and uncanned organ grinder music? Let us ask ourselves before it is too late where went the Hispano-Suiza automobile, the unpainted Christmas tree and the open two-decker Fifth Avenue bus. And let us ask also why there are no longer any adolescent adolescents or child-like children.

We, for one, mourn the passing symbols of perhaps the last vestiges of a race of men in which the dignity of the individual was respected as self-designed and look forward with trepidation to a society humanized by IBM numbers.

Broadcasters Send News, Music To Students From Cramped Studio

By Bob Pacini

Resembling the inside of a space ship, with the vast array of electronic equipment it houses in its cramped quarters, the KCSF Broadcaster's studio in S-147 is a fascinating little corner of the college, a laboratory for students interested in broadcasting.

Upon entering S-147 one is first confronted with a pitch black little alcove that leads to the studio itself.

Contrasted with the drab, black entrance, the studio is a virtual rainbow of colors. Pale yellow sound-proofing covers the walls and ceiling. A well-worn green carpet hugs the floor, and on one wall below the big window of the control room hangs a vivid red banner that brightly proclaims: KCSF Broadcasters:

Even smaller is the control room. Here, in a space about the size of a jail cell, members of the Broadcasters Club relate news, important announcements and music to all parts of the college. One wall is completely covered by a maze of dials, switches, nobs and buttons. Also present are an AM-FM radio and two tape recorders.

Next to this complex mechanism is the intriguing master control panel, flanked on each side by two mammoth record turntables. From this important post they can send music to the cafeteria, and messages to classrooms with the flick of a switch and the turn of a knob.

Each member of the Broadcasters' Club has his own show and individual theme music, and access from the control panel is a small but thorough record library that contains selections ranging from the great symphonic masterpieces to the latest jazz and show albums.

In the KCSF studio students interested in broadcasting will get a chance to try their hand at announcing, as the red light above S-147 blinks on, and over the control room there appear those three magic and exciting words: ON THE AIR.

Shots At Ramdom

By Vicky Aumann

A MUSIC CLASS was studying the opera Don Giovanni with great emphasis upon several of the arias. One of these is sung by the Don's servant Leporello, who tries to console one of his master's old loves. He does this, however, in the oddest of manners.

"Look," he says, "you haven't been the first he has deserted and you won't be the last." He then takes out a little black book from which a long stretch of paper coils across the stage as he reads her the list of the Don's conquests.

There were 40 in Italy, in Germany 231, 100 in France, 91 in Turkey, but in Spain—here comes the grand climax—1003! (The total, which Leporello does not bother to tote up, is 2065—quite a substantial figure.) Furthermore, the list includes women of every rank, shape and complexion—countesses, servant girls, city ladies, baronesses and princesses.

The technique used by the Don continues Leporello, is to praise blondes for their gentleness and sweetness, brunettes for their constancy. In the winter he likes them a bit on the plump side, in the summer rather thinner.

The class began writing furiously as these details were given until given full assurance by the lecturer that the number of Don Giovanni's conquests in Germany or Spain would not be asked on the midterm.

According to several serious scholars of Shakespeare this is the name given to the heavenly turmoil which occurred at Glendower's birth.

Well, if you study the word closely, it does look like it could have some connection with planets, or something . . .

Rams Top Comets In Big 8 Opener

Smith, Lempe Unstoppable As Bates Shows Way To 20-14 Grid Triumph

By Frauk Dunne

Contra Costa's Comets flared, faded and flopped as the City College Rams humbled them in the loop opener, 20-14, at Richmond Friday night.

The win not only got the locals off to a good start in the conference but it also proved a morale booster after two luckless pre-season defeats.

The Comets came into the game on the crest of two non-conference wins over Yuba and Menlo colleges. They roared onto the field and scored a quick touchdown early in the first quarter on a 50-yard run by fullback Ron McEachern. John Scruggs crossed the goal to add the two extra points.

Then the Comets received the shock of their lives after they made a bad punt. The Rams were on the Contra Costa 30-yard line and then in one play the locals scored.

Dennis Bates dropped back, waited for the defense to clear and then passed a bullet to Mel Oliver, who caught it on the one-yard line and dove to pay dirt while the Comets were still wondering who had the ball.

The Rams then tried to pass for the added points but the toss went astray.

Later in the first quarter bullet Bob Taylor scooted up the middle, cut to the outside and danced his way for 65 yards. A Comet finally caught up with him on the 25. After a few unsuccessful plays the Rams elected to try a field goal. Wayne Stribling's boot was wide of the mark.

The second quarter was uneventful as both sides exchanged punts.

In the third period the Comets scored on a long drive which ended as John Scruggs rammed the ball across for the score. The p.a.t. failed.

Then the Rams drove back behind the passing of Dennis Bates and the running of Charlie Smith and Bernie Lemp.

Bates passed to Smith for 45 yards. Then Smith and Lempe ran the ball on a series of plays down to the four-yard line. From there Bates rammed in on a quarterback sneak.

Then Charlie Smith ran around end for the two extra points. The score then stood at 14 points each. The quarter then ran out with the Rams in command of the ball, but the worst was yet to come for the Comets as the Rams were about to show a display of ball control that would completely ruin the Comets.

After the gun had sounded to end the third period the Rams were on the Comets' 32-yard line. Then a pass from Bates to Bob Simi netted 20 yards. Bernie Lemp carried across for the final 12 yards to cap the score for the Rams, and the p.a.t. was no good.

The Comets then took over and held the ball for a total of seven plays. But then center Ky Stehn got in the way of Comet quarterback Horace Hopkins' pass. Stehn intercepted it on the Rams' 23-yard line. This halted a possible Comet counter and iced the win for the Rams.

THE BIG AND LITTLE OF IT—Danny Elson, 4-year-old, 70-pound son of Lee Elson, of UC grid fame, lines up with Daddy and Ram guard Carl Mitchell before snapping the ball to signal-caller Donno DeFount. Since Daddy was coach of the first Ram team in 1935, Danny is set to play on the 25th, or 1959, version. —Guardsman photo by Gar Trawbridge.

Red And White Linemen Play Heavy Role In Ram Bid For Big Eight Football Crown

Two hundred and six pounds of sheer determination and hard-nosed football is the hallmark of the Ram forward wall.

The Rams this year have an outstanding line. They compose one of the roughest groups of football players ever assembled at City College. This year the squad's front line men have played an important part in all the pigskin battles. They have made the opposition feel their might and power by stopping them when they needed that extra yard for a first down.

In the Los Angeles City College game, the Ram wall uever let the Cubs iuside the Klemmermen 30 during the entire first half, and held the rivals to only 130 yards net rushing for the whole show.

Jack Hickey holds down the center spot. A 210-pound freshman from Riordan High, he shows great promise for the future.

At guards the squad has Al Kent and Carl Mitchell, two All-Conference prospects. Kent weighs in at 208, and Mitchell tips the scales at 220. Both of these men are lettermen and prove their worth by the added experience they have gained in Big Eight play.

The tackles are Walt O'Connor and Andy Citizen. Citizen stands at 212 and O'Connor at 221. Both have done yeoman service by opening up holes for the backs and stopping the enemy rushes.

At ends the Rams have two glue-finger catchers in the persons of Bill Lambert and Mel Oliver. The ends have made their presence felt by fine grabs, which help get that big gain or needed downs.

All the line needs this year is the necessary desire to become one of the best if not the finest lines in the college's history.

TWIXT THE DEVIL AND THE DEEP, BLUE SHE"—What's all this junk about the fair sex taking over the show on the intramural basketball scene?

The hand that rocks the cradle may well rule the world, but the local voice of masculinity points out that the feminine form has no more business in a cage loop than Zsa Zsa Gabor has in a pro ring with Ingemar Johansson.

Associated Men Student kingpin, Mike Haskell, and his gang may laugh the matter off as not even good humor, but first a word of advice from the foresight of Athletic Director Jack Gaddy: "From some of the hassles I've seen down there, it wouldn't surprise me at all if those gals'd move in and tear the league wide open."

A word to the wise is sufficient.

Local pro grid backers latched on to what will probably go down as one of their greatest thrills of all time a couple of weeks ago when the Hickey-dickies pulled a 20th Century Jerlcho on Sid Gilman's LA machinery by a 34-0 count.

What happens now, but that dugout philosophers from here to Monterey come out with all this "the Morabitos are in" talk.

Golf is always classified as a minor sport in most collegiate institutions and consequently given very little play in the campus dailies. This classic tale, however, is one which could be omitted under no circumstances.

Cage Coach Sid Phelan relays the yarn depicting how he and Coach Grover Klemmer had just teed-off on the 14th hole of the Olympic Club links, moving into the stretch run of a medal play match for an undisclosed stake.

"I rapped a line shot 260 yards right, smack-dab down the middle of the chute with about a 150 lie to the green. Grove stepped into the box and followed with one of his usual pickle pot slices nine miles into the woods."

For at least three-quarters of an hour the two local advisers to the now-defunct Union 76 Sports Club searched in vain for the grid mentor's ball.

At last, weary and down-hearted from the futility of the hunt, Phelan advised his colleague that the strain was becoming too much for him.

"Keep your eyes open, Grove. I'll shoot to the green and then come back and help you look for the foolish thing."

The versatile direetor of the Ram cage forces then proceeded to tap out a nothing-short-of-marvelous approach shot which died 30 feet from the can. But what should happen, but comes a scream from the boondocks. "I fouud it, Sid. Gonna fire on in."

An impossible "drive," four feet from the pin, on the part of the grid skipper, a choked blow from the Sid Phelan putter, and an ice water push-and-pray stroke from Klemmer all added up to the undoing of the foxy hoop mentor.

The jewel, however, lies not so much in the story as in the moral behind it—what would you do if your name was John Sidney Phelan and you had Grover Klemmer's ball in your hip pocket?

Bob Ross Elected Block Society Head

New officers recently elected to carry out Block SF Club plans are Bob Ross, president; Carl Mitchell, vice-president, and Al Kent, secretary-treasurer. This is Ross' second term in office.

Major college activities by the group this semester will include a Block SF rally, a dance, sponsorship of a Block SF dinner, and aid in the organization of other college functions, as well as athletic endeavors, according to Alex Schwarz, moderator.

Harriers Open Season With Three Top Men

The cross-country season having opened last Saturday with the Ram squad's first meet at Sacramento State, Coach Lou Vasquez feels that the opening match seems to put the greatest indication of potential in the feet of three men.

These three are Frank Jennings, former Berkeley High runner; Bill Hotchkiss, also of Berkeley High, and Frank James of Balboa High School.

Even with last Saturday's meet under his belt, Vasquez still feels that it is too early in the season to give an intelligent opinion as to the chances of the Rams for the rest of the year.

AWS Head Seeks Help In Organizing Coed League

Dawnita Campbell, president of the Associated Women Students here, said last week she is anxious to assign one of the AWS members to head a group for the organization of a women's basketball league.

Since this is a new and recent idea it may take a little more time in its formation, she observed.

"The combined interest of the clubs would be helpful in determining the value of such a league," Miss Campbell said.

Santa Rosa Hit Hard By Loss Of All-Big Eight Quarterback

Santa Rosa grid skipper Bill Archer will have no problems to deal with in the department of injured first string returnees when his Bear Cubs invade Kezar this Friday afternoon to tangle with the Ram delegation. To be blunt about it, Archer has nary a veteran on the squad. If greenness is any indication of a losing outfit, the Bear Cubs will not only find their hands full in Friday's outing, but should be a heavy-hearted piece of grid machinery throughout the season.

Although the Santa Rosa gang closed out one of their most successful efforts last year via a three-way tie for the conference crown, the majority of this happy wind-up, however, can be directly attributed to the outstanding performances of three men.

Tommy Harper, a three-letter artist who closed out his first season aboard the Bear Cub campus with All-Big Eight recognition in football, basketball and baseball, has completely disappeared from the scene. Archer has seen neither hide nor hair of him since last spring.

Harper was far and away the finest signal caller the 'Cub forces had fielded over the past 10 years.

Although neither was selected to the first string all-loop bandwagon, hard-hitting guard Mike York and flashy halfback Norm Hansen were two cogs in the Archer timepiece who proved themselves time and again to be that necessary element of victory.

To put it short and sweet, the Bear Cub boss is already in a bad way—before post time he should find himself up the proverbial stream with no visible means of locomotion.

As things stand now, the northerners will have to coast on the sea of untried talent. The majority of their hopes will be tossed aboard the shoulders of rookie quarterback Norm Dean, a fair-to-middling signal caller who served his apprenticeship at Analy High.

Bates Leads Ram QB's; 'Finest Field General Since '54'

Dennis Bates, one of the finest passers and field generals since Les Barros in 1954, is leading the Ram herd in the key quarterback position this year.

"Onionhead," as he is called, is a mild-mannered individual off the field, but a shrewd and talented leader on the gridiron.

At Balboa, Bates played basketball as well as football, thus demonstrating his ability as an all-around athlete. Bates stands almost six-foot fourinches, and it is understandable why he was such a standout in the city prep basketball loop during his high school days.

He now shows how he uses this height to advantage in his passing.

When Bates stands behind the center and barks out the signals, opponents know he means business. As the ball is snapped to him he goes into a ballet of perfection, faking to one man while handing off to another, or dropping back for one of his patented passes.

Booters Kick USF From Unbeaten List In 3-0 Win

History was made last Saturday morning at Balboa Soccer Stadium as Coach Roy Diederichsen's City College booters broke a USF 38 game winning streak and set the Dons on their heels, 3-0, to take a first round lead in the Northern California Collegiate soccer loop.

This entirely unforeseen whitewashing has to go down as much more than a mere upset; aside from being the Green and Gold's first loss in over three years, it must be noted that Coach Augie Donahue's boys have not been shut once since 1947.

The Rams picked up their first tally four minutes and 12 seconds into the first quarter when John Fouladi, who had just entered the affair, took a pass from Emil Durgan and rooted it into the meshing from about nine feet out.

Center forward Jim Lynch accounted for the other pair of Ram scores on a third quarter steal and a final period pass from Durgan.

In spite of the tremendous play of Fouladi, Durgan and Lynch, and the fact that the locals missed but one shot at the Don goal in four attempts, the real heroes of the show were the hard-charging "peiudos" of the Red and White backfield.

Fullbacks Giovanni Halstead, Yacob Dudum, and halfbacks Flavio Valiente and Dave Kingsley were thorns in the Dons' sides throughout the contest. Veteran goaltender Art Fischer has to be singled out as the real difference between the clubs, as it was his eight saves that broke the Dons' backs.

Mid-Terms Stall Rushing; Events Start Next Week

By Pat Perkins

RUSHING affairs for the various sororities and fraternities on campus are very limited this week because of the first mid-term period of the semester. Next week the pace will pick up since many sororities have dinners and luncheons scheduled at this time.

Last Sunday afternoon the brothers of Gamma Phi Ypsilon held their first rushing affair at the home of President Joe Welch.

Now that its fireside is over, Gamma Kappa Beta sorority is planning its rushing luncheon to be held on October 25.

At a recent meeting of the California Student Teachers Association, Dr. Sanborn, Director of the Bureau of Instructional Material for the San Francisco Unified School District, spoke on the topic, Audio-Visual Aids And The Teacher. James Billwiller, English department chairman here, will speak on ethics at the October 16 meeting. This meeting is open to everyone interested.

All news should be turned in at The Guardsman office, S-304, on Wednesdays at 12 o'clock.

New Deadline Set For Clubs Seeking On-Campus Status

Organizations, excepting fraternities and sororities, wishing on-campus status must have petitions of acceptance filed by Monday, October 26, Ben Northrup, Club Activities Board president, warned today.

Non-compliance with this stipulation will outlaw the organization via the stigma of an "off-campus" declaration.

The term "off-campus" means that an organization may not hold any activities on campus at any time, including the College Hour meetings.

Northrup stated that the purpose of the CAB is to act as a governing board and co-ordinator for all campus clubs.

"Every club should have a majority of Associated Student members in its ranks, and have a representative on the CAB, who will be entitled to vote on any CAB decision," Northrup said.

Students who wish to form a new club or organization and have it introduced on campus must meet all CAB requirements and, in addition, have its petition and constitution approved by both the CAB and the Student Council.

If passed, it will be granted a temporary charter giving it all the rights of an on-campus organization, and will receive its permanent charter the following semester.

Last Tuesday at a general meeting Jo Ann Maloney of the Recreation Association was elected Vice-President of CAB, a position that had not been occupied since the beginning of this semester because of several reasons and procedures.

Other officers who were elected are Roberta Beber, corresponding secretary, and Irene Sherry, recording secretary.

An upcoming project of CAB will be a series of Christmas benefit shows, the first show to commence on December 4 during a double College Hour. Donations received at these affairs will go to underprivileged families.

One of the biggest projects of the organization is CAB Day, which was held on October 2 during College Hour, and climaxed with "the Big 25" semi-formal dance in Smith Hall that evening.

Rivera Mural's 'Home' Under Construction

THIS UPPER SECTION of the Diego Rivera mural, which was painted at the San Francisco World's Fair in 1939, will eventually find its permanent home in the college's art building, now under construction. The swimmer executing the back swan is the late Helen Crlenkovich, a member of the Rom Holl of Fame because of her outstanding performance in the 1939 AAU swimming meets.

College Arts Building Plans Call For Spring '61 Opening

Construction of the new college arts building, future home of the Diego Rivera mural, is on schedule and rolling along at a favorable pace, according to Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator, division of educational management.

Anderson declared that a target date for completion of the $2,000,000 project has been set for Christmas 1960 and the building should be ready for occupancy by the Spring semester 1961.

A theater that will seat 350 persons and facilities for closed circuit television are among the main features of the new building. In addition there will be special rooms for the music department and regular classrooms.

The new classrooms in the arts building, Anderson said, will make it possible to combine adjoining rooms in both Science and Cloud Hall into large lecture rooms and study halls.

Anderson also brought forth the idea of converting several large rooms on the third floor of Science Hall into biology lecture rooms, like those on the first floor that are used for physics conferences.

Additions to Smith Hall, which include enlargement of the faculty dining room and extension of the snack bar, should, Anderson stated, be complete by next summer.

Work on the cafeteria was progressing satisfactorily and was expected to be completed earlier, but the steel and trucking strikes have set the date back considerably, Anderson added.

Also in the realm of possibilities, Anderson disclosed, is the construction of a student union, which could be used for social activities in addition to serving as a study hall.

Anderson stressed, however, that it was still in the "future" category.

Another major project here is the construction of an athletic stadium. Louis Vasquez, track coach, said the part of the stadium to be used for track and field events will be covered with crushed brick.

This process, Vasquez said, was first used at the Olympic Games in Helsinki, Finland. It is supposed to provide greater speed and drain water rapidly.

Naval Team Conducts Interviews October 23

Three representatives from the U.S. Naval Air Station in Oakland will be at the college on Friday, October 23, to interview any student interested in a navy flying career.

The Naval Aviation Information Team, composed of Lieutenant Commanders Walt McGreevy, Bob Adams and Don Camburn, will conduct interviews to answer questions concerning the two training opportunities available to students, the Aviation Officer Candidate program and the Naval Aviation Cadet program.

Aviation displays and models of the latest naval aircraft will appear aboard the recently remodeled Naval Aviation Information van, which will be parked in front of the Ramporium bookstore for the day.

Nob Hill Trio To Highlight Rally

Vocal entertainment provided by the Nob Hill Trio, popular recording artists, will highlight this Friday's rally, slated for College Hour from 10 to 10:40 a.m., near the Redwood Ram.

Rally Commissioner Susan Shawl announced that Master of Ceremonies Galen Cole will be on hand along with the trio and other entertainment to build up spirit for the Ram-Bear Cub game.

Also on tap for Friday's rally will be Head Song Girl Rose Thomas, and Song Girls Bobbie Keen, Jayne Watson, Kay Curry, Carol Thompson, Lenora Smith, Vera Roberts, Marilyn Cooper, Joanne Pomeranz, Pat Patten and Gail McCall.

Head Cheer Leader Dave Drohlich and Cheer Leaders Ken Cooke, Larry Feldman, Deanna Fulgoni, Allan Mason, Honey Fast, Susan Polio, Marilyn Santos, John Rosenberg, Carol Smith, Pauline Williams and Rich Allen will also be on hand.

Talented groups or individuals interested in performing at rallies can inform Miss Shawl, Mondays or Wednesdays at 2 p.m. in the cafeteria.

Volunteers Needed In Coaching Program; Honor Society Lists Over 200 Potential Members

Students proficient in any subject are needed to carry on the yearly Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society service of providing extra instruction at reasonable rates to those students desiring it, sponsor William G. Richardson recently announced.

Especially needed is anyone willing to coach in beginning algebra, geometry, high school chemistry, English grammar or arithmetic. Jobs are available coaching high school students at a running rate of $1.50 an hour, Richardson said.

Anyone wishing information about the honor society can consult Richardson in S-143G or attend the College Hour meetings in C-232 on November 3 or January 8.

Qualifications for members include the maintenance of a "B" average with no grade lower than "C" except in exceptional cases when a "D" grade is made by a student with an overall average of 3.5.

Members are under no obligation to attend meetings, social functions or any other time-consuming activities, Richardson emphasized. Dues are $1 per semester and members are strongly urged to buy Associated Student cards, as 51 per cent of the membership are required to have them.

Officers elected at the September 18 meeting of the society are business administration major, Thomas Murphy, president; Mary Didenko, secretarial major, vice-president, and education major Jean Toso, secretary-treasurer.

Present members are Gerald Almie, Arthur Bejarno, James J. Brown, William Campbell, Frances Carlson, May W. Chun, Eugene Clare, Catherine Dakalakis, Judith Day, Clinton Derry, David Dickie, James W. Dickie, Mary Didenko, Willlam Forshay, Mary Louise Foster, Jahan Fouladi,

Thomas Murphy, Sallie Nagase, Sharon Nicholas, Stanley A. Nielson, Martin Novitshi, Peter Panagotacos, Ronald Pavellas, Peter Pedrotti, Don Rainman, Robert W. Ramstad, Lourdes Ravara, Barbara Robinson, Leroy Robinson, Anne Schaefek, Tillie Smith, Nelson Soo Hoo, Harry Suzuki, Calvin Taam, David Tatro, Jean Toso, William F. Wehrly, Richard Willetts, Theodore Wise, Beatrice Wong, Daisy Wong, Shirley Young and Bryan T. Zimmerman.

Delta Psi Hits Highest Gradepoint By Sorority

According to last semester's final record, Delta Psi sorority averaged a 2.752, which is almost a B average. This is the highest gradepoint average ever held by a sorority.

The sororities compete against each other for the Margaret Dougherty trophy given at the end of each second midterm. This semester, pledges' grades will be included in the average.

Ideker Supports Publicity Budget In Council Issue

Expressing disappointment over Student Council's opinion that his budget was too high, Publicity Chairman Bill Ideker said, after last Thursday's meeting, that in view of all the AS-supported organizations aided by the Publicity Committee, it was "an extremely fair and appropriate budget."

Immediate controversy broke out when Finance Chairman Judy Day brought before the council for approval the Publicity Committee's budget which totaled $1375.

Club Activities Board President Ben Northrup disclosed that last semester's budget was only $1000, and that $500 had already been allotted to the Publicity Committee which would bring the total amount to $1875.

Northrup made a plea to the council members to think before they voted on a budget and to make sure that they were fully aware of what they were voting for.

A motion to table the budget until more information about it could be gathered was passed by the council. Ideker asserted that there was a good reason for every penny spent by the Publicity Committee, and was called out of order by AS President Tony Bartmann because the motion had already been tabled.

When the council adjourned, Ideker stated that he was angry after Bartmann failed to recognize him in order to defend his budget.

Another budget proposed by Miss Day, and one which caused less discussion, was the Campus Police budget. A total of $1582.50 was asked, and the council passed the requested sum unanimously.

Councilman Wally Hays asked Miss Day if it was entirely necessary to pass judgment on only one or two subjects at the council meeting, and proposed considering all budgets at once.

Replying, Miss Day told Hayes that, as he knew, it took almost an entire council meeting to get through just one budget, and said it would be impossible to go through all of the budgets at once.

In other matters, Alumni Liaison Lou Cooper told the council that the college Alumni Association has an active membership of about 500 persons.

Cooper proposed that the council as a courteous gesture allow alumni who have alumni cards to attend the college's athletic events for the cut rate price of 50 cents. Council passed the motion.

Counterpoint: '2-4-6-8, We Don't Want To Integrate'

"We want Faubus!" and looking as though they meant it.

The mob's shouts were finally acknowledged as the governor, who had been getting a haircut and shampoo in the capitol barber shop, appeared at the top of the steps holding a speech he had just written in his office.

Faubus told the people to solve the integration problems not by violent methods but at the polls, in a brief speech not at all like his previous ones that had virtually condoned violence.

After the governor's speech, a Negro was brought to the microphone, where he proceeded to tell the audience that "We Negroes of Arkansas don't want our children to go to school with whites. We know that Governor Faubus is on our side and we are supporting him."

Striking while the iron was red hot, a man seized the mike and said, "Now we're all going to march to Central High School for a peaceful demonstration against integration. Everybody follow the boys carrying the American flags!"

About a third of the crowd responded, and within ten minutes made a military-type formation and began a march that was to have a most unfortunate culmination, a march that was to make Little Rock live in infamy for the second time in three years.

During the mile-long trek through both white and Negro neighborhoods, the marchers, about 300 strong, called, "2, 4, 6, 8, we don't want to integrate," and sang "God Bless America" and "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

One block from Central High the mob met with a cordon of police and was firmly ordered to halt and disperse by Little Rock Police Chief Gene Smith. Shouting mobsters faced steadfast policemen during a moment of mounting tension. The mob then moved forward in defiance of the police orders, and the battle was on.

An elderly woman struck a lawman and was clubbed to the ground. A young man took on three police officers, and was overpowered and carried away, blood streaming from gashes on his head. Twelve-year-old children refused to move and were arrested for loitering.

The unruly rioters proved no match for the cool, determined men in blue, and finally they were subdued after a series of bloody skirmishes.

Overcome by the policemen's billy clubs and drenched by water from a fire engine hose, the crowd withdrew to the sidewalks and engaged in verbal exchanges with the police and firemen.

Hysterical high school girls refused to move from the street, were hosed down, and shouted unrepeatable obscenities at their antagonists until they were dragged into a nearby police van that carried off a total of 24 persons that day.

When the men who had formed the nucleus of the marchers had been carted away and the force of the water had dimmed the spirit of the mob, all who remained were reduced to sullen onlookers. By 12:30 p.m., the army of reporters and photographers outnumbered the rioters.

At approximately 12:45, the sole subject of the mob's action, a 16-year-old Negro boy, entered Central High School and took his place in a classroom with his fellow students. Classes started as scheduled at 1 o'clock, and the educational process had begun anew in Little Rock.

Penal System Hits Snag In Chessman Case

By Don Seratti

THE EYES of California citizens turned on San Quentin this week as Caryl Chessman appeared to be running out of legal ammunition.

In 1948 Chessman was charged with being the "red light bandit" who robbed couples parked in Los Angeles lovers' lanes, molested young women and violated the Little Lindbergh law during one such episode. He was found guilty of these charges and the death penalty was imposed.

For the last 11 years, Chessman has made numerous appeals for his life from his cell on San Quentin's Death Row, all of which have been overruled by various legal authorities.

As of this week, Chessman seemed to have momentarily exhausted his legal resources, and his execution date, October 23, loomed larger every day.

NOT OVERLOOKED

That Governor Brown was contacted and agreed to lend an ear to pleas in Chessman's behalf was an indication that the senior member of Death Row was not completely overlooked by Californians during recent weeks.

Some people have defended him on the grounds that "a criminal is not responsible for his crimes," while others stand on the "debt to society" soap box in condemning him.

Regarding the "debt to society" concept—is it not possible that Chessman, if executed, will be sacrificed merely to please society?

This thought springs from the "island theory" which holds that if criminals were all transported to a distant island to live, instead of being sent to prison, society, being told these convicts were either behind bars or executed, would be pacified.

If Chessman were flown to a faraway isle on Friday and the public informed that he had been executed, his antagonists would very likely settle back and feel gratified that justice had been done.

LYNCHING RECALLED

Viewed historically, capital punishment is little more than a refined version of lynching old Western horse thieves. Just as violence and emotion overrule rationality at these lynchings, a less noticeable violence and thirst for blood underlies the actions of those who promote the electric chair, the scaffold, and the gas chamber.

The trend of penology has definitely been in the direction of humaneness and consideration for criminals during recent years. But the continuation of the "eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" philosophy in the form of capital punishment indicates that penological progress has hit a formidable snag.

Abolition of the death penalty and strides toward rehabilitation should logically follow other modern concepts in the treatment of criminals, but are conspicuously absent in this country.

LEGAL PLEAS FAIL

In the case of Chessman particularly, we find a talented individual who has used his 11 years of borrowed time to make outstanding contributions to the literary field and law with his books and legal discoveries.

Anyone who possesses faith in the individual and who regards man as a rational and creative animal, must find it difficult to snuff out the life and potential contributions to society of a man like Chessman.

As all legal pleas seem to have failed, we join such individuals as Aldous Huxley and Eleanor Roosevelt in a moral appeal for the preservation of Caryl Chessman's life by commutation of his sentence to life imprisonment.

Frosh Ball Cutest Couple

Their appearance together won them a vote of 7 to 2, the crown, and trophies donated by Beta Phi Beta. The royal couple was also decorated with orchid leis donated by Alpha Phi Epsilon.

Winners in the Associated Student card sales contest were announced after the coronation by Deanne Gutierrez, card sales chairman.

Freshman Jack Verga topped the sales with 475 cards sold while Bill Keane, Freshman Class president, captured second in selling 265.

Money orders of $20 and $10 were given to each winner respectively.

Student-Faculty Committee Plans Coffee Hour October 30

Closer social relations between instructors and students will be the main goal of the forthcoming Student-Faculty Coffee Hour, Friday, October 30, during College Hour, according to Clem S. Skrabak, chairman of the Student-Faculty Relations Committee.

Large institutions, such as this college, with no on-campus living facilities, Skrabak explained, offer few opportunities for students and faculty to form relationships on a social level.

Hence, Skrabak said, this Coffee Hour, which will be held in the open court between Science Hall and Cloud Hall, will provide students of the college with "an opportunity to exchange pleasantries with the faculty."

Aiding the flow of conversation, coffee and other refreshments prepared by the Hotel and Restaurant department will be available.

Margaret Alvaro and Dan Durst, student co-chairmen of the coffee clache, will supervise serving of the refreshments and also direct the placement of tables in the court.

Plans for entertainment at the affair have not developed to date, although Skrabak is hopeful that arrangements for some kind of entertainment, most likely a skit by the faculty, will be made.

Students assisting Skrabak on the Student-Faculty Relations Committee are Miss Alvaro, Durst, Stevie Tissiere, Sergey Cherney and all Student Council members.

Speech, Football Rally Top College Hour This Friday

Major activities slated for this Friday's College Hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., include a speech entitled Observations on Little Rock by Guardsman Staff Writer Donald Seratti, and a Ram-Stockton Mustang football rally.

Seratti, who worked as a court reporter in Little Rock during his two-month summer stay, will give an on-the-spot report of the race riots and forced school integration that occurred.

Participants in the football rally, which is sponsored to boost spirit for the game at Kezar Stadium that night, will be Galen Cole, emcee, and the college's song girls led by Rose Thomas.

The speech will be delivered in S-100 and the rally will take place outside near the Redwood Ram.

Newman Club Holds Dance At Smith Hall

Newman Club members will present a dance this Friday night in Smith Hall from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight. The theme is Swinging Affair and admission is 75 cents stag or $1.25 drag, according to Art Sullivan, dance committee chairman.

Dance tickets will be sold at the door and a registration card will be required. Music during the evening will be provided by The Fore.

"The organization has worked hard on the presentation of the dance and we hope to have a real swinging affair," Sullivan stated.

Unauthorized Posters To Face Confiscation

Sudden removal will be the inevitable fate of all unapproved posters embellishing the walls in or about the college, William Forshay, Publications Board chairman, announced recently.

Organizations, clubs and committees should bring their works of art to the chairman's desk in The Guardsman office, S-304, well ahead of the time of desired display.

Certain confiscated placards, which formerly hung boldly and unlawfully around the college, are now lying undisplayed and ineffective in the office, awaiting the possibly never-to-be-awarded signatures of approval.

Student Council Adviser Calls For Tighter Controls At College Functions, Cites AS Card Abuse

By Bob Pacini

Disorderly conduct and a complete disregard for authority by a few individuals at the recent Frosh Ball clearly indicate the need for tighter controls at college social functions, Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities, stated at last week's Student Council meeting.

Referring to unpleasant events that occurred at the Frosh Ball, Hillsman told the council that more co-operation between students and faculty is imperative to control difficulties arising mainly, Hillsman said, from abuse of Associated Student cards.

Faculty members are not guardians at college dances, Hillsman emphasized, and added that the disturbing incidents that erupted at the Frosh Ball brought to the surface three objectives that council should endeavor to achieve:

1. End abuse of AS cards.

2. Recognition of the authority of the Campus Police.

3. Better door control at all college social functions.

Bud Andress, State Information Service Chairman, asked if the Campus Police attending the dance in an official capacity were in uniform and recognizable to students.

Hillsman replied that they were not because of a rule that forbids Campus Police to wear their uniforms off campus.

A Campus Police representative disclosed that five Campus Police officers involved in the disorder were wearing their street clothes which had, in the performance of their duties, become soiled.

It was then moved that each of these campus policemen be reimbursed for the expense of having his clothes cleaned, and council went on record as favoring such a motion.

Summing up, Hillsman explicitly stated that the college "is not in business to provide public dances," referring to the large number of non-students who attended the dance through misuse, by some of the college's students, of their AS cards.

State Convention Chairman Fred Muller suggested that each student's picture be printed on his AS card to prevent any fraudulent use of it by persons who are not students here.

Hillsman said that the obstacle there is one of expense but added that the idea was a good one. He asked council to explore all possible methods of relieving the problem.

In other matters the controversial budget for the Publicity Committee was finally passed by council after thorough, quiet discussion.

Two Resolutions Pass, Two Fail In CJCSGA Meeting

Two resolutions passed and two failed during the Regional California Junior College Student Government Association Conference held here last Saturday.

Acrimonious and futile debate did mar one portion of the program as, according to one delegate, "cumbrous and superfluous" argument raged over the passage of a new "cost of membership" resolution.

After over an hour of awkward discussion and general disorder, delegates representing 23 Northern Region two-year colleges voted to defeat the resolution that the Ways and Means Committee of the Finance Workshop recommend to lower the CJCSGA fee from $10 to $7.50.

However, one pressing problem of many former conferences was solved by the adoption of the resolution brought up by the Current Problems Workshop.

This resolution stated in brief that a school which leaves the Regional Conference before the time stated on the agenda will be penalized by having their voting privileges revoked for the State Conference of the current semester, unless an excuse be presented to the hosting school.

Previously, many college delegates to the Northern Region Conferences had asked and been granted permission to leave early. The remaining delegates then felt that because such a large number of representatives was being excused, caucuses no longer existed, and that voting on any resolution was out of order.

Also passed by the body was the resolution from the Athletics Workshop, although the one brought up by the Campus Activities Workshop was overwhelmingly defeated.

Little Theater Schedules Six More Performances Of Coward Comedy

Ghosts walked and objects flew during the opening performances of Noel Coward's Blithe Spirit here last weekend. Faculty and guests attended a special performance on Friday night, but the doors of the Little Theater opened to the public Saturday night.

(Additional performances are to be held this Friday and Saturday, on October 30 and 31, and on November 6 and 7. Curtain time is 8 p.m. and admission is $1 or an Associated Student card.)

The weird incidents occur as a result of Charles' tampering with the supernatural in search of material for a novel. Charles is played alternately by James Robinson and Phil Osborne.

Charles and his second wife, played by Carla Voorhees, are haunted by the ghost of his first wife when a seance, conducted by Marilyn Milani as Madame Arcati produces unusual results.

The ghost of Elvira, who attempts to bring her ex-husband to "the other side" to join her is played alternately by Leah Pashoian and Maureen Rogers. Elvira apparently isn't too adept in planning the murder, so the comedy takes an unexpected turn when her plan backfires.

The doctor in the house is played by Jordy Cooney with Lois Haurat as his wife Mrs. Bradman. Erika Andre and Diane Flores alternate as the nervous maid with a clipped British accent.

TRADING monkey business for ghost business, Maureen Rogers alternates as Elvira in the Little Theater production of Blithe Spirit.

Come-Back Teams Demonstrate Proper Attitude Toward Sports

WE ARE NOT rabid sports fans, but it is with pride that we salute the auspicious opening of the football team in Big Eight competition. Even greater pleasure is afforded by the news that our soccer team defeated the justly famous squad of the University of San Francisco.

In this 25th year of a recreational and physical reputation equivalent to the academic, these two occurrences seem favorable as omens of what we may hope for and reasonably expect from our athletic representatives.

Further comment is in order regarding the football team since the men had the misfortune to lose their first two games (both of which were luckily non-conference) by heartbreaking scores. It is a rare phenomenon to find a team faced by such setbacks still hopeful, alert and game. Exemplifying the old saw about "the way you play the game," this team knows how and seems to be getting ready to teach that lesson to some of the rest of the conference members.

Differing Opinions Welcomed

CONTRARY to popular expectation, the heart of any newspaper is gladdened when irate readers take pens in hand to debate what the paper has published concerning a controversial subject.

Two immediate reasons for this gladness are immediately forthcoming. The paper is being read and the paper is causing creative thought.

We are not great believers in conformity and togetherness. If a reader does not agree with our stand, he is free to tell us and the rest of the student body about it.

Therefore, we welcome letters and will attempt to run a short column if enough of them are sent in and their discussion is pertinent to the problems of the college.

Letters to the editor may be deposited on his desk in S-304. All letters must be signed although students requesting it may have their names withheld from publication. Letters should be submitted at least one week prior to the week desired for publication.

Shots At Ramdom

By Vicky Aumann

WE ALWAYS thought student leaders were odd.

Now at last we have definite proof. Just released by the University of Minnesota are the results of a personality test given to fraternity and sorority officers, student religious and political leaders and members of student publication staffs and governing boards.

Measured against the average freshman, student leaders all show higher social and intellectual motivation. They do, however, also show higher hysteria symptoms.

But the male student political leaders are the most unusual of group leaders.

They are more abnormal in their concern of bodily functions, and show a greater lack of deep emotional response.

Their feelings of suspicion, oversensibility and persecution are more marked. They are more inclined to excessive seclusion, shyness, bizarre thought and behavior.

A Tradition And How It Grew

Peripatetic Ram Statue Recalls Treasure Island Fair, West, East Campus

By Jo Ann Griffin

Although ways of life and sets of values may change with the decades, such variation does not separate the minds and hearts of succeeding generations of students here.

For, linking students from the past to the present, numerous traditions have been followed throughout the years by all students, which promise to be continued in the future.

Some of these traditions are neither seen nor heard; they come from knowledge of things past and hopes of things to come. Others are concrete symbols and ideas, passed to newcomers from year to year.

One of the best known of the tangible symbols is the giant Redwood Ram, which proudly towers over even the tallest basketball star to pass its domain near Smith Hall.

Among students, the Ram is famous for the granting of wishes for only a small price. It likes to be called a friend and enjoys company.

Says one scholar, "When I was on the verge of flunking all of my finals, I gave him a kiss and rubbed his nose a little and he said he would see what he could do. To my surprise, I received passing grades in everything."

Although no one can guarantee the truth of this testimonial, many agree that there would be no harm in trying this method. Of course, the more crafty saker of favors needs as much information as possible so as to arrange better plans.

Created in 1939 by muralist and sculptor Dudley C. Carter, the Ram made its debut under the admiring glances of the crowds visiting the California Handicraft Exhibit of the San Francisco World's Fair on Treasure Island, where it was carved.

Following the fair, the Ram was formally presented in 1940 to the late Archibald J. Cloud, then president of the college, by the late architect Timothy Pfleuger as Carter's gift to a new and expanding institution.

After an unfortunate five-year stay in the men's gymnasium, forced by lack of a suitable place to display its beauty, the Ram was moved from place to place as new buildings came and old ones went. With the west campus abandoned to become reservoirs, it was decided that the present spot was best.

There, on January 3, 1956, at about 10 a.m., the Ram was permanently mounted on a specifically designed pedestal provided by the engineering department.

Professional draymen, with the assistance of a truck and a crane, lowered the massive statue onto the pedestal which itself weighs about five tons.

Made of a redwood stump, the figure took about 16 eight-hour days of work to complete, and it was carved with only a double bladed axe, some chisels and lots of skill. The complete statue, which was painted red and white in 1947, weighs about a ton.

The Ram is not to be confused with less-known Sammie the Ram. Sammie is an anonymous person who dresses up in a colorful crepe papier mask in the likeness of a Ram and appears at all the ball games and various other campus functions during the year.

His identity is kept secret until the end of the year. Then another Sammie takes his place, thus keeping alive the custom which has been followed faithfully.

Instigated in 1948 by Phi Beta Delta fraternity, Sammie is the product of the ingenuity of Jim Fernhoff, a former member of that fraternity.

Carter, who is famous for murals and other statues carved from the native California tree, spent his childhood on the frontier of Alaska, but originally hailed from British Columbia.

Educated in Seattle, Washington, Carter first learned to carve from the Alaskan Indians and then became known for his carvings in the Bay Area. As the spirit of the Redwood Ram lives on, so will the genius of Dudley C. Carter and others who have helped to build valuable tradition for the college.

Foresight

WRITING for a deadline is like misplacing the black tie to your tails ten minutes before the wedding. Sometimes you make it with the black tie and sometimes you don't and have to improvise.

Such are the strange ways of journalistic endeavor in which the omnipotent master of a never static situation is a dictatorial abstraction.

On a weekly sheet, for example, reporters run laughing through the halls for the entire week without having the somewhat troublesome chore of writing anything down on paper. Comes the moment of truth an hour before deadline and there is a frantic, scuffling activity to get it straight, get it down or get turfed out in disgrace.

There is much shouting over the pounding of typewriters, smoking of cigarettes, drinking of black coffee, soft swearing and gnashing of teeth before the final gun when everything is again orderly and there is again a whole beautiful week in which to ferment more ideas without having to write them down anywhere.

The stock in trade of the deadline is news, information and entertainment on a catch as catch can basis with yesterday's paper serving a multitude of purposes in the fish markets and garbage cans of any city that puts out a paper in quantity.

In a world that has become callous, almost indifferent to the glut of vulgarity which, because of its enormous quantity is accepted without question by all but a few diehard pedants as a standard of excellence, the deadline has produced much that, were the texture of newspapers a bit softer, most editions could be put to a dual and therefore more utilitarian use.

It has also produced some of the most vibrant ideas of a swiftly moving century and communicated them to the people with understandable simplicity.

Through the gales of cynical laughter which greet the idealist believing in the efficacy of truth, it is also true that truth is the essential ingredient to freedom.

One grain of pure truth is without a price and cannot be bought. For a dime you may buy the medium, read it and line the wastebasket the next day.

By the time yesterday's printed word has been wrapped around today's mackerel, the essence of that word in print, assuming that the word is truth, has been released into the minds of its rightful heirs—the free men.

Men Of Stone Keep Silent, Daily Vigil

Hundreds pass by the two stone busts each day. The heads are huge and commanding. The sculptured eyes gaze out upon scenes different from the scenes familiar to the two living men the busts represent, yet there does exist a similarity.

Customs and clothing may radically change, but the basic desire for knowledge continues in its natural form.

It was with this basic idea of knowledge and education in mind that Fred Olmsted, in 1940, chose Leonardo da Vinci and Thomas Edison to represent his theme of Theory and Science.

The heads were completed in 1941 and were placed upon their pedestals to begin their silent 24-hour watch over the campus.

Early Birds Suffer

Registrants Endure Winds, Rain At Dawn

No, that wasn't a conga line, as some uninformed passers-by might have hastily concluded, forming around the college shortly after dawn October 9.

As ludicrous at it may seem, however, that is exactly what the seemingly endless registration line resembled as thousands of students waited patiently in line to make arrangements for counseling appointments for next semester programming.

A few of the more daring students of the college arrived at the north end of the library almost at the crack of dawn, but most of the sudents arrived about 7 a.m. and in a short time had swelled the registration line to monumental proportions.

It was a long line, a very long line. In fact, it ended almost where it began, for students could be seen circling the inner court, and overflowing down the hill that leads to Smith Hall.

Scores of students completely encompassed Science Hall, and the line finally culminated at the north end of Cloud Hall, just below the point where students were entering the library, which by this time must have seemed like a distant Shangri-la to students still in the far reaches of the line.

Cold winds and muggy drizzles greeted students and kept them company as they trudged slowly along in the arduous line, which most of the time seemed to be standing completely still.

Students of the college, though, stalwart and staunch group that they are, endured the cold, fought off the winds and withstood the depressing boredom of the time they spent in the line, and for some it was hours.

For what?

For that brief moment of glory when at last the pre-program planners addressed a postcard to themselves and received a proposed program blank so they could return next semester and perhaps experience the whole maddening process all over again.

Two Lynch Goals In 2nd Half Pace 2-1 Dumping Of Injuns

It may have taken a striar of alleluias and bows to Mecca, but Roy Diederichsen's galloping wonders pulled the horse out of the fire in the final period to squeak by the Stanford soccer forces by a 2-1 count last Saturday morning on the Farm.

As was the case in the local's undoing of Augie Donahue's heralded USF booters two weeks ago, the outstanding defensive work of the Ram backfield, combined with the torrid marksmanship of outside sharpshooter Jimmy Lyneh, spelled out the path to the crematorium for the Indian warhoop.

The Redskins moved out in front early in the first period on a fluke as Ram goalie Art Fisher lost his footing on a routine save, whereon Mike Tippet bombed in to root the leather into the meshing for the Big Red Machine.

Diederichsen's gang fought hard throughout the remainder of the first half, but an immovable Stanford defensive front was not to be outdone, and the southerners left the field with an uneasy 1-0 advantage at the break.

It was with six minutes remaining to play in the third stanza that Jim Lynch came into his own and drilled through a 20-foot blast to bring the Phelan Avenue herd abreast of their adversaries.

Barreling through the final stanza like a colony of tigers, it seemed likely that the hard-pressing Stanford unit would eventually come up with the win.

Goalie Art Fisher had other ideas, though, and his trio of sparkling saves paved the way for the game-winning shot by Lynch with less than ten minutes remaining to play.

The Rams are now tied with California for the loop lead.

College Harriers 'Green But Good'

Considering the fact that the entire City College cross-country team is composed of new men, it is justifiable to say that the squad has, in its first two meets this season, made a pretty good showing for itself.

Only Sierra College from Shasta, and Bakersfield led the team in points in its first meet on October 10, and on October 13, the date of the Rams' second test of skill and training, only Diablo Valley was good enough to beat this determined team of newcomers.

Ram Coach Lou Vasquez picks potential individual point leaders of the team in Bill Hotchkiss, Tom Jennings and Jim Gallon.

This year, Vasquez believes, "We have a stronger balanced team but we lack in individual ability at this time."

Vasquez pointed out that since the loss of Paul Patton, a Ram star of yesteryear, the team will have a big gap to fill. Given time, he feels this aim can be accomplished.

Volleyball League Proposed By Coeds

Since the reaction of women students here regarding a basketball league has not been overwhelming, formation of a volleyball league has been suggested, according to Laurine K. Bergin, head of the women's physical education department.

Mrs. Bergin stated that the women's gymnasium would be available if a league is formed. She feels that such a league should be sponsored by the Associated Women Students since the men are sponsored by the Associated Men Students.

Several students have already expressed the opinion that a league in volleyball would be well worth the effort.

Dodger Victory Climaxes '59 Season, Grabs First Pennant For West Coast

Baseball has finally come to its seasonal end. It climaxed, as usual, with the greatest classic of all, the World Series.

This year the tension mounted as the series drew near. The San Freiseco Giants were in a position to become the first West Coast team to hold the National League championship. However, the high hopes of their many fans died when the Los Angeles Dodgers came from behind to carry away the laurels.

Ram baseball coach Lee Eisan, who believes that the Giants had the personnel to win this year but lacked the right technique, declared, "Giant manager Bill Rigney depended too much on the long ball hitters. For as often as a heavy hitter hits a home run he also hits into a double play.

"Rigney should have used the bunt more often so that the Giants could win the close games," Eisan said, stating that a bunt, at the right time, can put a man in scoring position.

Eisan believes that "the Giants had a good pitching staff but, particularly in the last few games, were unable to get the insurance runs they needed. A pitcher cannot shoulder the whole load," he adds.

Rigney played a rookie, Andre Rodgers, for the last few games. These games were the most important of the season and Rodgers being a "greenhorn" couldn't possibly come up with the plays a veteran would be able to handle.

Since the Giants lost and the Dodgers played in the series against the White Sox, it is interesting to see how Eisan feels about the Dodgers' victory.

Eisan stated, "After the first game the Dodgers really played ball. They had a better hitting team than the Go-Sox and the pitchers started to use their talents as the series progressed.

"The White Sox had a weak home run output. In the last game Early Wynn was chosen to carry Sox hopes but he was not ready for another game," Eisan said, declaring that a younger pitcher would have given them the boost that they needed.

The series ended in six games, and the Dodgers became the first California team to win the classic.

Looking back on the baseball season of 1959, many players will be remembered for their clutch plays and their timely hits. As in every sport, however, there are one or two who rank as the most outstanding.

Coach Eisan chose Willie Mays as the National League's most valuable player this season, because of his fielding and batting ability.

Over in the American League his choice is "Littie" Nellie Fox. Fox is that perennial good ball player who will be a threat against any team for as long as he is able to play, said Eisan.

Klemmer Forces Return To Kezar For Circuit Crucial

Big 8 Halo Up For Grabs Friday; Rams Need Win Over Red-Hot Mustangs

Grid Forces Clear Second Hurdle Via Scuttling Of Hard-Hitting Bear Cubs

By Frank Dunne

The City College Rams take on one of the most formidable gridiron powers in the Big Eight Conference in the person of the Stockton Mustangs at Kezar this Friday night at 8 p.m.

If the home squad can get by the Mustangs it will have little to worry about for the rest of the games of the conference.

Coach Larry Kentera of the Mustangs is very high on his club and he feels even with the loss of the Simpson brothers from last year's wonder squad that his men have the material to do big things this time around.

With a one win and one loss preseason record, the Mustangs edged out a very strong Sacramento team, 14-13, in the league opener. In the non-league tilts they lost to Bakersfield 20-0 and beat Oakland College 34-18.

In the Sacramento game, second string halfback Ken Schell was the outstanding player on the field, scoring the go ahead touchdown to give Stockton the bacon.

At quarterback the valley-boys feature a second-year man, talented Mike Flock. In the right half spot they have another veteran in Wayne Hall.

The Mustangs run a multiple T-formation offense. They will split the ends or run flankers inside or outside the ends. By this system they hope to upend the Ram defense with combinations of passing and speedy running plays.

Stockton has a line that averages 190 pounds with a backfield of about 175. In the line they have two veteran guards whose experience has proved invaluable to the Mustangs' flag drive.

In the rest of the key positions on the team the Stockton club has all freshmen. They are still a big question mark as to whether they will come through as expected. If they do the boys from the valley could prove to be the team to beat.

The Rams are up for his game; they have been all season. They realize that a win his Friday would put them in good position to take the loop crown. With most of their big threats ready to go, they will be in the game from whistle to gun.

In the role of adviser to the Stockton team is the "grand old man" of football, Amos Alonzo Stagg. With his presence on the coaching roster it can only be assumed that they possess one of the most inspirational men in the game today. It can be said with all respect to the staff that he is the guiding force behind the team.

Paddled and pounded by a pugnacious Ram team the Santa Rosa Bear Cubs went down to defeat 36-20 in Friday's tilt at Kezar.

The Rams pounded every score out on the ground. From the opening kickoff the locals battered the Cubs' line into total dismay. By the time the final gun had sounded the Rams had rolled up a total of 381 yards on the ground.

Scooter Lemp was the workhorse of the home town boys. He carried the ball 23 times for a total of 185 yards or 8.1 yards per carry. Charlie "Choo-Choo" Smith amassed 123 yards for a 7.5 yard average.

Lionel Vaughn rolled up the biggest average with an amazing 17.2 yards per carry but the total was added to by a 65-yard touchdown jaunt in the fourth quarter.

In the first quarter the Rams displayed a running game that foretold of things to come. The first time they got the ball they chewed up the yardage all the way to paydirt with Scooter Lemp diving across from the one-yard line. The p.a.t. failed.

Later in the same period the Rams scored again. This time Charlie Smith romped in from the 19-yard line. This was a 71-yard drive but the Rams ate up the distance in eight plays. Again the point after failed.

In the second quarter the Bear Cubs found the range and exploited a vulnerable Ram pass defense for their first score. The tally came on a seven-yard pass from Norman Dean to Bud Freeborn. The p.a.t. was no good.

Santa Rosa's quarterback Norman Dean had a good afternoon as he passed for a total of 216 yards.

The Rams bounced right back after the Santa Rosa counter with a 75-yard drive ending with Charlie Smith crossing the goal for the third Ram score. Smith ran the p.a.t. for the two added points.

Then the quarter ran out with no more scoring. The half-time score stood a 20-6 in favor of the Rams.

In the third quarter the Rams moved the ball down to the Bear Cub seven-yard line. But the Santa Rosa line stiffened and held the locals at that point and took over on downs. The Cubs were unable to score either and the quarter ended with no points being added.

The fourth quarter saw both sides score a pair of touchdowns. Bill Baker rammed one across for the Rams from the one-yard line. Llonel Vaughn added the extra point, giving the Rams a 28-6 edge.

Vaughn later broke loose from the Ram 35 and ran 65 yards to a touchdown. Rex Childs added the extra point.

The Bear Cubs then seored two quick touchdowns. Dean passed to Russel Reed for 80 yards to score. Dean passed for the extra point. Later Bud Freeborn caught a Dean pass for a seven-yard seore. The p.a.t. failed.

RAMBLINGS

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

THE OLD SAYING that it takes at least six points to upend Augie Donahue's USF soccer contingent was washed down the proverbial drain a couple of weeks ago as the local forces came through with a completely ineffable performance in dumping the Hilltoppers, 3-0.

Despite the fact that the Green and Gold offensive attack was forever knocking at the door of the Ram meshing, the Phelan Avenue backfield, never to be outdone under any circumstances, showed itself to be the back-breaking element in bringing home the bacon of victory.

Goalie Art Fischer, whose eight saves gassed up the funeral wagon for the Don gang, should go down as one of the finest Ram paw men of recent years. Should backs Giovanni Halstead, Yacob Dudum and Flavio Valiente continue along in their potent ways, the locals could come up with the loop crown.

• • •

My Kingdom for a Horse—In recent years the Ram grid forces have always managed to come up with at least a fair-to-middling string of hard-running backs. This time around the horn, though, it seems as though they've come up with a real winner.

Wayne Stribling has not only proved himself a lower of power on do-or-die slams up the middle, but demonstrates the versatility which puffs the pot of a real contender by way of his well better-than-average kicking and greyhound speed in packing the mail around the outside of the enemy front line.

Barring an unforeseen . . . let's not talk about injuries at a time like this.

SO-CALLED "informed" sources around town pop with the word that Rocky Marciano has climbed back into sweat togs in the Ocala, Florida, area. The supposedly secret blubber dumping sessions are said to be the outset of the Brockton Blockbuster's golden comeback trail.

Granted, it's a known fact that the Rock dropped quite a few shillings via bad agricultural investments in the resort state, but if he has any plans of recouping his glue by becoming the first ex-heavy king to get his crown out of hock, he'd be better off tossing together an edition of his memoirs.

From here, he's one of the greatest champs of all time, but 40 miles too far over the hill to tangle with the likes of a youthful brawler with the powerful attack of Ingemar Johansson.

• • •

IN ALL PROBABILITY, the Big Eight grid crown will be on the line this Friday night in Kezar Stadium when Grover Klemmer unlocks the stable door to turn his horses loose against Larry Kentera's potent Stockton crew in a "must" outing for both forces.

Although the Stockton gang is still bemoaning the fact that graduation tapped them for everything but Stagg Field, it must be remembered that this sort of nonsense has characterized the Mustang type of play since long before the hour when Frank Hall stepped up to the Red and Blue masthead seven years ago.

Despite the loss of seatman Willie Simpson, the Mustangs will go into the affair about five point favorites. Could be. You take the Mustangs; we'll take vanilla.

Mural Cage Loop Ready For Action

After all the last minute entries and delays, the City College intramural basketball league has finally started rolling. With some 20 teams participating, a season filled with fun and entertainment for all is anticipated by Mike Haskell, president of the Associated Men Students, who, by the way, sponsor the league.

The league is composed of three separate groups: the Inter-Fraternity Counell, Club Activities Board, and the Independent League. Each of the three groups plays teams in their respective groups until, at the end of the regular season, a championship team from each group is established.

The players on each of the separate winning teams receive small gold basketballs in honor of their achievement.

After the champion team of each group has been realized the squads play off for the grand championship. The winner of this clash receives a trophy, which will be presented at the AMS Smoker on January 6 of next year.

'Small Business' First New Movie Scheduled For College Hour Series; 29 Film Libraries Provide Pictures

A new series of general interest films is scheduled to be shown in S-136 during College Hours, 10 to 10:40 a.m., Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor, announced last week.

The first film, which will be presented this Friday, is titled Small Business and deals with the problems of starting a small business, the amount of capital required, its pitfalls and advantages.

Selection of these films will be made from 29 film libraries located in the Bay Area which distribute films for such producers as the Ford Motor Company, Goodrich Tire Co., Shell Oil Co., United States Steel Corp., and the Curtis Publishing Co. The films are chosen on the merit of their human interest matter and general quality, Devlin said.

On hand at the audio-visual department, to aid Devlin with his film presentations, are a new crew of potential movie-projectionists including Anthony Bruno, Vince Breedlove, Bruce Halldorson, Donald Stearns, Larry Wong and Donald Stern.

Devlin, who is in his 13th year with the audio-visual department, states that this semester's presentations will be especially outstanding not only for the entertainment but for their educational value.

Other films scheduled for presentation include Between The Tides and World Of Little Things, October 30; City Of Gold, November 6; Texas Championship Rodeo, November 13; About Dogs And Hunting, With Dog And Gun, or Early Days and Exploring By Satellite, November 20; Westward The Flame and Winter Olympic Playground, December 4, and Alaskan Adventure and Can Trailer Trek, December 11.

Luau, Luncheons, Dinners Climax Sorority Rushing

By Pat Perkins

CLIMAXING the first midterm examination week was the annual Shipwreck dance, sponsored by Phi Beta Delta fraternity last Friday. Many of the students around the college are now forging ahead and planning activities for the various campus clubs and organizations.

Theta Tau sorority met for their semi-annual luau at the Golden Gate Yacht Club last Sunday.

Di Maggio's restaurant on Fisherman's Wharf is the location for Gamma Kappa Beta sorority's rushing luncheon scheduled for this Sunday.

The International Relations Club fair is rapidly approaching, the date being November 6. The members of this club are working hard to make this fair a successful event.

All students interested in radio broadcasting and techniques are invited to attend the College Hour meetings of the KCSF Broadcasters Club.

Associated Women Student President Dawnita Campbell is working on the idea of starting a woman's intramural basketball league. This league will be similar to the one sponsored by the Associated Men Students with the women in the various organizations around the college competing for the championship. Maybe the winning AWS team can play the winning AMS team at the end of the semester—just for fun, of course!

All club news should be turned in to The Guardsman office in S-304 by 12 noon on Wednesdays.

Faculty Wives Assn. Holds Anniversary Tea

In honor of the Silver Anniversary of the college, the Faculty Wives Association heid their annual tea last Thursday at the home of Mrs. Madison Devlin.

Pouring for the tea were Mrs. Lloyd D. Luckmann and Mrs. John Brady. Mary Golding, dean of women here, was the guest of honor.

Maintenance of the Margaret Dougherty Loan Fund is one of the many functions of the Faculty Wives Association. Women students may receive financial assistance through this fund.

KCSF Scores Beat At Pacific Festival

An important list of guest speakers and new ideas in contemporary collegiate broadcasting will highlight the KCSF format this semester, according to Carl Mayo, president of the KCSF Broadcasters Club.

Speakers to be heard this semester are Bob Hanson of KSFO and Jerry Jensen, owner of KIBE in Palo Alto.

Raymond Burr, of Perry Mason fame, along with other notables, was interviewed by the college broadcasters at the Pacific Festival, which was held last month.

The station was the only one on hand to interview the stars at the festival. As a result of the scoop offers to buy tapes of these conversations have come from commercial stations, Mayo said.

Coverage of the festival was made possible with new portable equipment, and in the future more of such on-the-spot coverage of events is planned.

Operating KCSF with Mayo, station manager, are Tom Summerville, vice-president and property director; Shean O'Hara, assistant property director; Tessa McGee, treasurer and correspondence secretary, and Phil Rogers, recording secretary.

Biochemist To Speak On 'Creation Vs Evolution'

A Biochemist's View Of Creation Versus Evolution will be the subject of a lecture here Friday by Dr. Duane T. Gish, research biochemist at the University of California virus laboratory.

He will address the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship Club in a meeting in C-232 during College Hour. Students and faculty members are invited to attend the lecture.

50,000 Books On Library Shelves

Approximately 50,000 books ranging from anatomy to zoology are available in the Cloud Hall library five days a week.

From 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., the library is open to students browsing in the open stack shelves, located behind the circulation desk. The card catalogue is located to the right of the main entrance.

The reserve reading room includes bound volumes of magazines arranged alphabetically by title and are for in-the-library use only. The periodical room features newspapers and also contains approximately 450 unbound current magazines.

Encyclopedias, bibliographies, dictionaries and rare technical books are in the reference reading room.

Fines are five cents a day for overdue books and five cents an hour or 50 cents a day for overdue overnight books.

Gamma Sigma Sigma and Delta Psi are two sororities whose members work in the library. Students who work three hours a week earn one unit of credit.

Transfers To State Colleges Face Higher Grade, Unit Requirements

Proposed changes in the California Administrative Code concerning the transfer of students to state colleges have met the approval of the California Junior College Association, according to Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction here.

The new rules will apply to students who are ineligible for state college admission, on the basis of their high school record.

These students will be required to complete 60 units of college work with an average of C, or 24 units with a B average before transferring to a state college.

Exceptions may be made for persons not meeting these standards if 60 units of work in their particular major are not offered by the college from which they wish to transfer, according to Luckmann.

These changes are a result of a two-year study conducted by the state colleges on the success of transfer students in relation to their eligibility from high school. An effective date of September 1961 has been requested for these changes.

IRC Float Wins Trophy For First Place In Pacific Festival Parade

BEAMING TO AN APPRECIATIVE CROWD, members of the International Relations Club rode to victory in the recent Pacific Festival parade. The coveted trophy is seen in the foreground. The college's participants in the parade were (left to right): Marguerita Aparicio, of Guatemala; Maly Seva, representing the Philippine Islands, and Masako Hirose, of Japan. National Dances, Songs Highlight Club Fair Nov. 6

Foreign foods, fashions and fancy dancing will round out the agenda for the sixth annual International Relations Club's fair, to be held at the Marina Auditorium, Fillmore and Bay Streets, on Friday, November 6, at 8 p.m., according to Joseph M. Jacobsen, foreign student adviser here.

Chairmen from each native land are responsible for the exhibits and entertainment identifying their country. They must stage, produce and direct the shows themselves, under the direction of Sarwan Gill, IRC president, Jacobsen said.

The chairmen are: Emileo Zalles for Latin America; Amir Darebian, Persia; Hilda Choy, China; Diana Botto, Jordan; Ira Glasser, Russia; Jarnail Thiara, India; Masako Hariose for Japan; Felicity Beard, Europe; Anna Ching-Tahiti, and Ben Cruz, the Philippines.

Working on committees and subcommittees are more than 100 students who aid the chairmen in selecting the type of food, fashion and entertainment each country will have. Gill says the fair will have more countries participating than did last year's event.

Ten to 15 minutes will be allotted each country for singing songs in their native tongue and performing their national dances which they know by nature and instinct. "There won't be acting in the entertainment; these students were brought up with the dance they'll be doing," Jacobsen stated. The Stick Dance will highlight the entertainment from the Philippines, and a native Hawaiian number is also scheduled.

Serapes from Mexico, brass from India, and dolls from Japan are among the international items to be exhibited in the various arts and crafts displays.

An Associated Student card buys a ticket for 75 cents, and general admission is $1. Tickets are now on sale at the student bank in S-186, or may be purchased at the door that evening.
